That went well until one day when that spark of deviltry also present in boyish chests fanned into flame. The gang decided to instil some life into Jumbo even if strange means had to be resorted to. One of the gang had an idea which not only worked to perfection but put enough life into Jumbo as to cause him to remain away for nearly a week. The cure for his lethargy was simple but effective. The gang merely spilled a lot of turpentine on top of an old barrel and forced the unwilling Jumbo to sit in it for a short time. That was all.

• • •

He leaped from the barrel his long bushy tail switching. Then a ferocious "Yeow" rent the summer breeze. He leaped high in the air, and the next moment was the spearhead of a grey streak that flashed thru the barnyarl gates emitting weird noises. A stream of dust followed his path down the road till he was lost in sight over a knoll.

• • •

While we dare not suggest that any such treatment was given the Toronto Maple-o's on Saturday, some strange power had apparently gone to work on the hitherto winless wonders of the Queen City. It may have been a fiery dissertation on the part of Hap Day, or a few parting shots of "or else" left in the wake of Connie Smythe, or mayhap the genie of luck who has turned her smiling countenance in every direction but that of Syl Apps and his hapless performers, but something strange happened. True the flying Canadiens took the brawl by a one-nothing score but it was one of those things that decided the game. The Leafs played like a team that had done a Ponce de Leon or imbibed some strange elixir that flushed their hitherto sluggust veins with a fiery life-giving nectar. McCool stood out like an ash blond at a sepia convention only a mere shade less brilliant that M'Sieu Durnan in the opposite. It was a new team the Leaf supporters saw and perhaps the change in life has started.

The Juniors

Lou Yanover, diminutive manager of the Prince Edward Combines hockey squad with headquarters at Picton, is having his troubles. In conjunction with co-manager Walt Fraser, the fiery lil fella has been training some thirty potential hockey stars over in Spain for the last few weeks with the hopes that they get in a few solid brawls of the ice pastime this winter.

• • •

Lou has entered his squad in Junior "C" O.H.A. competition, but a grouping doesn't appear to be in the offing. Belleville has entered junior "B" while it is expected that Trenton will be seen in a "C" lot. The Picton officials are of the opinion that a merger of the old Bay of Quinte and Trent Valley Junior loops would answer the hockey question for all concerned. They suggest, if Belleville is willing, that a group formed of Tweed, Madoc, Marmora and possibly Campbellford, Trenton and Belleville would supply a remedy.

• • •

If Belleville entered the proposed loop, with its "B" rating it would have to win its group in order to participate in the "B" playdowns, according to OHA rulings. The two runners-up would then play off for the right to go on in the "C" playdowns.

"We have invested quite a bit of money in the team thus far, and we would like to get some hockey this winter," stated Yanover. "We have made arrangements to play all our games in the Wellington Arena and the fans in the village are taking their hockey seriously. They haven't seen any here since the war started."

"It doesn't look at all promising, and a two or three-team loop would be no good for us. If we can't get anything better then we'll withdraw and play in the county league," he said.

• • •

Yanover and Fraser deserve a pat on the back for their hockey efforts this winter over in the southern county. They have financed the squad themselves and have arranged for conditioning workouts for the boys for the past five weeks. They paid all expenses for a hockey practice in Kingston the other evening. In addition they have an up-and-coming juvenile team that looks exceptionally good on paper. It will be too bad if the kids can't get a chance to get in some hockey during the coming winter.

REDMEN TONIGHT

Redmen Intermediates face a gruelling test when they hook up with the Barriefield Bears. The Reds pulled a surprise win over the Bruins last week by a 2-1 score and the soldiers will be in no mood tonight to be trifled with. They have a smart fast, clever team and the Reds will have to be on their hockey toes if they expect to win their second straight over the opposition. To date the local team has won four and lost one and at the time of writing are leading the loop. However they are improving all the time with Tim Williams, Don Baldwin, Gene Le Bonne, and other veterans showing vast improvement. The kids too are travelling fast and with Goyer behind them are going great guns. It should be a neat pastime tonight. The bus leaves the Arena at 6:30 p.m.

BREACH BETWEEN CHANDLER AND LEAGUES WIDEN

Argument at Minor League Meeting Last Week Nearly Reached Open Warfare

By JIMMY GORDON

Chicago, Dec. 10—(CP)—Major league baseball moguls who last spring elected Kentucky's A. B. (Happy) Chandler to the commissionership of baseball expect some sort of debate here this week over just what powers the late K. M. Landis' successor will wield.

A breach between the men who pay the bills and the new "Czar" slowly has been developing, and at last week's minor league meeting in Columbus, O., the argument virtually reached a stage of open warfare.

That argument is being carried over into the three-day meeting of the majors' meeting here today. It is expected to be the highlight of the annual mid-winter gathering.

Already the major club owners seem on the way to eliminating the clause which gives Chandler the power to overrule any legislation deemed "detrimental to baseball." the minors eliminated that clause last week. The majors don't want it either. This authority was Landis' biggest stick.

However, talk around the hotel lobbies indicated Chandler and the club representatives would reach a "middle-road" agreement on the scope of his authority.

Such questions as to whether the Pacific coast league is to be accepted as a third big league circuit, and the number of night games to be played in the majors also are up for consideration. It appeared doubtful there would be much swapping in the ivory market.

Larry Macphail, who is installing lights in Yankee Stadium, has proposed the number of night games be cut to seven for each team in the league—one night game with each visiting club. Clark Griffith of Washington, who played 41 night games last season, has agreed to cut to 33.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

Chicago, Dec. 10 (AP)—The Chicago chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association is threatening to award its "rookie of the year" trophy to Commissioner Happy Chandler...He rates it on publicity, at least...When attendance at last night's hockey game dropped under 18,000, Black Hawks' publicitor Joe Farrell moaned that the Black Hawks' Kansas City farm was making more money than the parent club because the rent at Kansas City was only $300.

Grimm Consequences.

Charley Grimm, the Cubs manager, tells about his "best performance" hitting against Dutch Reuther...Charley hoisted a pop fly so easy that every man in the infield hollered for it.. The next time Grimm came to the plate, Reuther called time, walked up to the plate and warned: "Get ready to hit the dirt."...."Why?" asked Cholly... "You're beginning to hit me," Dutch replied.

Swinging a Wide Loop.

The Pacific Coast League, which recently signed Ziggy Sears as umpire, likely will take on Lonnie Wareneke in the same role. He'll have to be good to uphold the league's "Major League" rating with fans who condemned the umpiring all last season.

Cleaning the Cuff.

When Bruno Betzel, who got only about $3,000 take home pay out of his $7,000 salary at Montreal last year, was offered a $6,000 job last week, he said he'd think it over. The next day he signed to pilot Jersey City at $10,000....That would be profitable thinking even for an Einstein.

Hockey's Big Seven

(By The Canadian Press)

Chicago Black Hawks dominate the National Hockey League scoring race by having five players entered as among the highest scorers. Max Bentley earned an assist to increase his lead to 24 points made up of 15 goals and nine assists while another Black Hawk, Bill Mosienko, rattled home two goals as Chicago defeated Boston Bruins 8-3 to move within two points of the leader with 22 points made up of nine goals and 13 assists. Toe Blake of Montreal was held scoreless during the weekend and remained in third place with 16 points, 11 goals and five assists, a single point ahead of two more Chicagoans, Clint Smith and Max Kaleta who are tied for fourth place with 15 points apiece. Smith chalks up a pair of goals and an assist to bring his total to eight goals and seven assists while Kaleta also scored two goals and earned an assist to bring his bag to seven and eight. Bill Cowley of Boston notched one goal and is in a three-way tie for sixth place with Doug Bentley of Chicago and Gaye Stewart of Toronto, all with 14 points. D. Bentley picked up two assists to enter the race as Stewart was held scoreless during the weekend.

Toronto, Dec. 10 (CP)—Sports Editor Bill Brennan of the Sarnia Canadian Observer was sure St. Pat's would defeat Sarnia Collegiate for the city football championship and "salad bowl" trophy last Saturday. He was so sure he offered to stand in front of the city hall dressed as Santa Claus if St. Pat's didn't win.

They didn't. Collegiate won 6-1 and Bill, equipped with 10 yards of sleigh bells and a good-sized school gong, paid off last Tuesday afternoon. He stood in front of the city hall for half an hour. By that time he'd collected $1.04, three washers, one slug, a piece of bent wire and a Toronto street car ticket.

Never again, says Bill.

The letter disclosed Owen Sound will definitely be a newcomer in the senior lacrosse field next year and that Hildebrand's services would be welcome.

Hildebrand isn't jumping at the opportunity. "By next spring I'll probably be so homesick I would walk to B. C. if necessary," he told Alf (Vancouver Sun) Cottrell.

University of Detroit basketball fans beam broadly whenever Gino Sovran is mentioned. He's the tall Canadian who compiled 1,000 points with Windsor's Assumption College before transferring to Detroit's school of engineering last September.

Sovran missed almost the one-grand mark. With three games to go and his three-year total at 998, he sprained an ankle. Two games passed. In the third and final contest, Souvran, still limping, raced to the floor. He had only one shot—but made good on it for the two points.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

LESSON NO. 381

By SAM GORDON

The Kibitzer

Perhaps the oldest bridge joke is the one where a palooka says: "If I get a bust hand, can I ask for a new deal?" The answer is: "Sure, you can. But only chumps would give it to you."

When the dealing ends, very few excuses can be found for legally demanding a new deal. The dealing ends as soon as the last card has been given by the dealer to himself.

Is sometimes happens that a player picks up another player's hand by mistake. If he sees a card in it, there must be a new deal.

It sometimes happens that a dealt pack contained a surperfluous card. Or that from a correct pack, one of the players has been dealt too many cards. In such cases, there must be a new deal.

The laws say: After the last card has been dealt, there must be a new deal if (1) a player picks up another player's hand and sees a card in it, (2) the pack contains an improper number of cards or a duplication, (3) one player has too many cards, another too few.

The bidding had already started when a player said he had only 12 cards. A search located the missing card on the floor several feet away. His partner demanded a new deal when he held this hand:

♠ Q 6 4 3
♥ J 8 4 2
♦ 10 9 7
♣ 9 6

The kind of hand he held had no bearing on the right or wrong of his demand. The question is: Are they entitled to a new deal in view of the fact that his partner's 13th card was on the floor.

If a hand has too few cards, the laws say, careful search must be made for the missing card. If not in another player's hand and it is not found at all, there must be a new deal.

But if it is found elsewhere, the laws say, it must be placed in the deficient hand. Unless it was determined that the found card was not in the pack when dealer started, there must not be a new deal.

When a player drops a ducat, morons holler "get a bucket."

In Manhattan

By MICHAEL O'MARA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, Dec. 8 (CP)—Adept ballyhoo of the fact that her novel, "Strange Fruit," had run foul of Boston morality authorities because it contained a few Anglo-Saxon monosyllables of which even Bostonians must know the meaning enabled Lilian Smith and her publishers to parley a third-rate book into a best-seller.

But not even moral disapproval—for which there is little reason—would save Miss Smith's dramatization of her novel from the theatrical junk-heap. What was a moderately poor book — even with the best of intentions —has become an exceedingly poor play.

To translate the sprawling story of the love of a white man for a Negro girl against a background of Georgia bigotry from book to stage would be difficult for even an accomplished dramatist. For Miss Smith's inexpert hands the task apparently was impossible. Almost every technical fault that could be found with the play's construction is glaringly present.

First, it is really two playlets: One revolving about the abortive love affair, the other concerning the lynching of an innocent Negro. There is hardly any attempt made to link the two through means of any dramatic continuum.

The climax of the first half of the play—as the white man decides to forsake his Negro sweetheart—takes place both off stage and between scenes; an offence not condonable by any set of rules of writing for the theatre.

Some of the play's 12 scenes do nothing to advance its action; they are cluttered with too many characters and too much repetitive talk.

Finally "Strange Fruit" contravenes a major critical tenet governing the judgment of any drama which seeks to instruct: It lopsidedly allows its argument to outweigh its entertainment content.

The stage is not the pulpit—and however much one may agree with the argument advanced by a playwright, if he fails to make it appear to support—rather than to dominate—his dramatic work, he places a burden on the play which inevitably crushes it beneath the level of successful theatre.

BUFFALO BISONS WITHIN POINT OF LOOP LEAD

Indianapolis Leads Western Division of Same League by Five Points

(By The Canadian Press)

Buffalo Bisons earned three points in their two weekend games to move within one point of the American Hockey League Eastern Division leaders, Hershey Bears, who split in their two fixtures. Indianapolis Capitals, top club in the western section, remained five points in front of their nearest rivals, Pittsburgh Hornets, as they won their only game while the Hornets won and drew.

Buffalo drubbed New Haven Eagles 6-3 last night after being held to a 4-4 draw by Pittsburgh Saturday. Hershey whipped Providence Reds 5-2 Saturday but were nosed out 3-2 by the powerful Indianapolis Caps last night. Providence suffered their second straight setback last night bowing 4-1 to the Hornets while other games saw Cleveland Barons drop a close 2-1 decision to the improved St. Louis Flyers after chalking up an 8-6 Saturday victory over Eagles.

McMahon Big Factor

Big Mike McMahon, recently acquired by Buffalo from Montreal Canadiens, was a big factor in the Bisons' victory over New Haven, collecting one goal and three assists in his debut on Buffalo ice. Sharing honors with the hard-hitting defenceman was Paul Mundrick who clicked for three markers, giving him a five-goal total for the weekend. Murdo McKay and Doug Lewis earned the other Bison tallies and Joe Bell, Norm Larson and Bob Dawes scored for Eagles.

Vic Lynn equalled Mundrick's two-goal effort when Buffalo tied Pittsburgh 4-4, getting the other two Bison counters.

Pittsburgh gained the draw on Howard Mackie's long shot that tied the game up in the final minute. Other Hornet scorers were Don Metz, Doug McMurdy and Wally Wilson.

Build up Big Lead

Providence Reds built up a 2-0 lead on first period goals by Bill McComb and Roger Bedard Saturday, but Hershey Bears replied with five straight in the second session to win out 5-2 as the final game was scoreless. Hy Buller, Jack Shewchuck, Armand Gaudreault, Gino Rozzini and Bill Jennings were the Bears marksmen.

The Bears were unable to fathom a stubborn Indianapolis defence as they dropped the 3-2 verdict to Caps last night. Pete Leswick got the winning tally in the third period when his shot caromed into the net off a Hershey player's skate. Johnny Holota and Les Douglas fired the other Cap counters while Ken Smith and Armand Gaudreault connected for Hershey.

Pittsburgh coasted to their 4-1 victory over Providence outclassing the Reds all the way. Marcel Brodeur, Peanuts O'Flaherty, Doug McMurdy and Bobby Walton gave Hornets a commanding lead before Lloyd Roubell scored Reds' lone marker.

All Scoring in Second

Mogey Rimstad paced St. Louis to their close 2-1 decision over Cleveland, coming through with the winning goal and feeding defenceman Bill Allum for the other. All scoring took place in the second period with Allum sending Flyers ahead and Bus Brayshaw tying it up on an unassisted goal that set the stage for Rimstad's clincher two minutes before the stanza ended.

Cleveland had an easy time whipping the lowly New Haven Eagles Saturday as defenceman Alex Milne filled in as goalie for the regular Eagle netminder, Yves Nadon, who was taken sick before the contest. The victory was the Barons' eighth straight on home ice and their offensive was led by Tommy Burlington and Ants Atanas who scored two goals each. Norm Larson fired three for New Haven.

STEWART BRUISES SHOULDER

Toronto, Dec. 10 — (CP)—Gaye Stewart, brilliant forward for Toronto Maple Leafs, suffered a severely bruised shoulder in Saturday's National Hockey League game between Toronto and Montreal Canadiens, Leaf spokesmen said last night.

Stewart was jammed into the boards in a third-period pileup. Club doctors described the injury as "more painful than serious" and said the Fort William flash would play against New York Rangers Sunday. Canadiens won the game 1-0.

SPLENDID HORSE SHOW

Oakville, Dec. 10—(CP)—Spectators from all parts of Ontario yesterday attended a horse show staged by an Oakville service club (Lions) and the Bayview Riding and Driving Club. Officials said the show was conducted on a lavish pre-war scale.

A special award from Charles Loveless of Toronto for the horse taking most points in the show went to the hunter Regalaire owned by O. D. Robinson of Toronto.

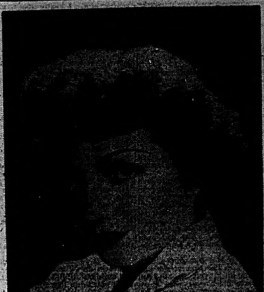
AT THE BELLE — A good influence on George Raft is child star Peggy Ann Garner in the dazzling Technicolor film triumph "Nob Hill," featuring Joan Bennett and Vivian Blaine. "Nob Hill" is romantic Frisco set to lilting melodies of love.



AT THE CAPITOL — Claudette Colbert co-stars with Fred MacMurray in "Practically Yours," comedy hit currently at the Capitol Theatre. A rousing laugh riot, this Paramount picture features polished actors like Marshall Rasumny, Robert Benchley and Gil Lamb. On the same program "Scotland Yard Investigator," a first run attraction starring Sir Aubrey Smith and Eric Von Stroheim.

AT THE McCARTHY — Romance in Universal's "This Love of Ours," now at the McCarthy Theatre, is gloriously presented by Merle Oberon and Charles Korvin who are co-starred with Claude Rains.

THREE LEADING TEAMS OF O.H.A. SCORE VICTORIES

St. Michael's, Oshawa Generals and Galt Easily Win Their Fixtures

(By The Canadian Press.)

The three leading teams of the O.H.A. Junior "A" series maintained their position in the standing as a result of Saturday's fixtures. St. Michael's blanked Toronto Young Rangers 6-0 to take their eighth straight game without loss while Galt Red Wings and Oshawa Generals remained deadlocked for second place four points below the students

At Galt the Red Wings took Marlboros into camp 11-3 to ring up their sixth win in eight games. Jim Uniac paced the grand offensive with three goals while Mousseau and Mayer took two as their share, singles going to Frank Curik, Pete Adamo, Jim Davis and Dean McBride. The Toronto notches were registered by Robert Hazard, Ralph Hosking and Fryday. Galt scored five in a row in the initial period.

Oshawa Generals were unkind in their hospitality to St. Catharines Falcons, turning back the visitors 14-2. Generals reeled off a count of eight in the first frame alone while the Garden City boys managed a single score. "Gens" widened their advantage to 10-2 in the centre chapter and did all the twine-bulging in the final session. Ross Lowe was in there for four tallies while Leo Curik, I. Hildebrand and Phil Samis each bagged a brace. Smelle and Dawdy were Falcon scorers.

In the Saturday matinee piece at Toronto, T. Sloan of the Collegians was in the limelight through snaring three goals, the balance being distributed among Harrison, MacKell and Paul.

MENTAL PATIENTS TRANSFERRED

St. Thomas, Dec. 10 (CP) — Some 250 mental patients, all women, have been transferred to the Ontario Hospital south of here which recently was taken over from the R.C.A.F. Last week 60 women arrived from the Ontario Hospital at Hamilton. The hospital is designed to accommodate about 1,850 patients.

Canadian Rides Long-shot Winner Of Handicap

(By The Canadian Press)

With the Canadian Bob Summers in the saddle, No Wrinkles proved the long-shot winner of the 12th renewal of the $25,000 Bay Meadows handicap at San Mateo, Calif., Saturday, the result, giving owner K. Marley of Arizona $20,930 in prize cash. The winner paid $19.10 for first. Wise Eagle and Sammy Angott were second and third.

Whirlabout, winner of the $10,000 San Mateo handicap last month, was a 4-to-5 favorite for this event but finished outside the money after twice leading the field.

The veteran Don Budge of Eagle Rock, Calif., was beaten by Bobby Riggs of Los Angeles, in four sets yesterday in the final at Los Angeles for the professional hard court tennis championship before a crowd of 3,200. Budge finished with difficulty after reveloping a forearm cramp.

Washington Redskins defeated New York Giants 17-0 yesterday at Washington to clinch the Eastern Division race in the National Football League. The Redskins will face the Rams in Cleveland, Dec. 16, to decide the pro loop championship.

With a seven-under-par final round yesterday to produce a 267 aggregate, Henry Picard, 37, Cleveland, won the Miami $10,000 Open Golf tourney, five strokes better than Harold (Jug) McSpaden who has finished 13 times in second spot this year.

Defenceman Muzz Patrick of New York Rangers broke a bone in his left hand in the exhibition hockey game at Ste. Hyacinthe, Que., Thursday night, it was found on examination in New York.

Porcupine Combines of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association's Junior A Series blanked Kirkland Lake Collegiate of the Junior B branch 7-0 Saturday in an exhibition game at Kirkland Lake.

Richard Brayley of Montreal, was elected president of the Quebec Lacrosse Association at the Association's 20th annual meeting in Montreal yesterday. He replaced Art Walker, of Montreal, who declined renomination. Luger Desbiens was elected first vice-president and William Burns, of Cornwall, second vice-president.

The 1945 batting champion of the American Association was announced Saturday as outfielder Lewis Flick of Milwaukee Brewers, who produced a .374 average in 142 games. Nearest aspirants were Byron (Ty) La Forest of Louisville, with .353 in 91 games and Walter Nowak, Kansas City, .334 average in 116 games.

The Owen Sound, Ont., Junior Hockey team travelled to Ann Arbor, Mich., where they were defeated 8-3 by University of Michigan in an exhibition contest Saturday night.

With a record of 10 victories in 13 starts, the three-year-old Busher, owned by L. B. Mayer, of Los Angeles, was voted the horse of the year, it was announced at New York Saturday. Her earnings totalled $334,035. Twilight Tear won the honor in 1944.

Cleveland Indians of the American League yesterday announced the sale of Pitcher Jack Salveson and Infielder Eddie Wheeler to Portland of the Pacific Coast League. Wheeler was obtained in the draft from San Diego last season.

Although the number of racing days was reduced, turf fans wagered $1,306,514,314 in 18 States where the mutuels are used during 1945, according to The Associated Press annual survey for an all-time high. Betting in New York alone totalled benefited by State treasuries benefitted by $65,484,121 in tax revenue.

Textile Workers Resume Work

Montreal, Dec. 10 —(CP)— Three Montreal mills of Dominion Textile Company, Ltd., strike-bound since Tuesday morning, resumed operations today as the result of an announcement by union heads Saturday that they had accepted a Provincial Government proposal for settlement.

Antonio Barrette, Quebec Minister of Labor, wired officials of the United Textile Workers of America, Local 102, Friday that the department would assist in further negotiations between company and employees, but only on condition that the 2,300 employees at the Merchants, Mount Royal and Hochelaga mills return to work. Acceptance of the proposal was recommended by union leaders at two meetings of workers Saturday afternoon.

Starting point of the trouble was a new plan of work distribution, involving a new wage scale, put into force by the company last Monday, which a Dominion textile spokesman said was completely in accordance with a recent decision of the Regional War Labor Board. Some 1,500 workers at Merchants and Mount Royal mills staged a sitdown strike Tuesday noon in protest against "extra work loads," and Thursday Hochelaga's 800 employees walked out in sympathy. The strike was declared general and pickets were placed at all three mills.

The U.T.W.A. announcement declaring the strike over stated that the Labor Relations Board had promised an investigation into the dismissal Wednesday of seven union members whom the company charged with "interfering with other workers and winch machinery." The work load changes would be looked into and a report would be made to the Dec. 18 meeting of the Regional War Labor Board. Labor Minister Barrette said he would, without delay, call together representatives of the company and the union to discuss grievances of the workers.

Farm Income Shows 62,000,000 Drop

Ottawa, Dec. 10 (CP)—Canadian farmers took a $62,000,000 reduction in income for the first six months of this year compared with the same period of 1944 and predictions were that farm income for the whole year would be "moderately below" that of last year's record $764,000,000.

The quarterly bulletin of agricultural statistics issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics today said cash income from the sale of farm products in Canada for the first six months of 1945 was $702,000,000 compared with approximately $764,000,000 in the same period last year. And except for a small amount in Nova Scotia, the three Prairie Provinces accounted for all the decrease.

The bulletin said these declines were offset in part by increases in other provinces. The increase in farm income in Ontario for the first six months of 1945 approximated $23,000,000 with other provinces showing minor increases.

The increase in income in Ontario was due chiefly to an increase in marketings of cattle and calves, field crops and sale of dairy products.

The World is Like That

By Kathleen Norris

CHAPTER 11

Jocelyn, who was sitting near Philip's mother, and who had watched her quietly through this long speech, said amiably. "There won't be any awkwardness as far as I'm concerned. But Mr. Fordyce said that his daughter disliked Miss Sanderson. And it does seem to me that even if she was the right person for Norma's mother, twenty years ago, she really isn't—it would be very trying for Norma—I can't see that she'd feel enough sympathy there to like it at all."

"Well, of course there's that to consider," the grandmother said on a long sigh. "But then what to say to poor Sandy?" she continued pensively. "She did pack up and get on a steamer, and it was quite pathetic to hear her saying that she'd get Norma out of smoking and all that. She evidently hasn't the slightest idea—! But then I was telling Mr. Verrinder and Mrs. Kenworthy about it today," she went on, returning to her anxious tone, "and they said that she'd had the Foster girls and the Griscom girls and the little Yolander girl and been perfectly marvellous; she simply kept them in strait jackets! She's just been passed around from family to family—languages, you know, and all that. She speaks wonderful French. You speak French, I suppose?"

"Well, no, I don't," Jocelyn admitted.

"You see, there we are," Mrs. Fordyce said plaintively and helplessly; "we have to think of that. Sandy's wonderful at French and at German, too. She lived in Paris for eight years, and then afterward she had Janet there. Well! I wish Phil would get home, because I do feel that with all I have to do, and not having seen Norma for almost two years—"

"When they get here," Jocelyn said soothingly in the pause, "we can settle everything.

"Well, they're due tomorrow, sometime after breakfast."

"You had only the son, Mrs. Fordyce?"

"I had only Phil. I never wanted him to marry all that money, although I knew Janet's family, Knew her from the hour she was born, and I was terribly fond of the little wretch. I am still. She treated him abominably; she used to hurt his feelings and then laugh at him, but I don't think anyone's ever meant to her what Phil does. I believe she'd come back to him like a shot, but he'd never hear of it. She's been married twice anyway, and now there's some count —French or Italian—haven't you noticed that all the newspapers are hinting about it? I hope she doesn't. It doesn't sound any too good. I married again myself, but afterward I took my old name back; I never loved anyone but Phillip's father. Married when I was seventeen, and of course a perfect little fool, and when he died I thought all men were like him—My heavens, here she is!"

The last ejaculation was in reference to a rush of feet suddenly audible in the hall, a voice calling, "Granny!" and the violent entry of a running girl, who stopped herself just short of collapse against Mrs. Fordyce, planted a kiss with gingerly care upon the very top of the carefully arranged curls and, wedging herself closely against the older woman on the bench of the dressing table, burst into speech.

"Granny, you darling, you're too divoon—the hair-do—it's perfect —I met a beau of yours on the 'Forty-nine,' I'll tell you all about him later! Are you glad to see me? Do you realize how much trouble I'm going to make for you?"

She had been eying herself in the mirror as she spoke, and hurriedly applying lip rouge and powder, and catching up a loose strand of her rich black hair; now she reached for a cigarette, lighted it expertly, and observing that it was "divoon" to be home, subsided into a chair.

"No; but I mean it really is divoon," she said. "Phil asked if I remembered Miss Britton in the office, and I said of course I did; I remembered the hair. You'll soon find out I'm a perfect angel, Miss Britton, if I'm not shut up in some Italian or German place where every meal starts with macaroni or potato soup. I grew gross, positively gross. I really did, Gran. Where's the Sanderson? Have we killed her and stuck her body down a drain somewhere, or what?"

She was laughing; she was a little out of breath. But not perhaps as breathless as Jocelyn, who remembered this girl as a clumsy, big, already beautiful young thing of perhaps fourteen, on her first visit to San Francisco more than two years ago. She had been spoiled then, but in a simpler fashion.

This girl was like that earlier girl only in her beauty; she had the same thick, ivory-smooth skin, the same black eyes, with black silky lashes shadowing them, the same rich, smoky black hair and stain of pure apricot on the cheeks. But she was slender now, her hands looked actually delicate and thin, her movements had lost all their old heaviness and had the swift grace of a bird's flight.

There was too much artifice in evidence for her sixteen years, or for any years; her hair hung in soft heraldic locks on either side of her face; it was curled slightly at the tips, and formed into tiny waves and feathers about her forehead. There was rouge on the cheeks whose natural color made it look thick and superfluous; her eyebrows were picked to a thread; her soft baby mouth was stiff with shining vermilion paste. Even her hands, that were still so childishly young, had been scraped and chalked and painted until they had an appearance of ivory claws tipped with wet blood.

And her clothes! Jocelyn had never seen such exquisiteness of dress. It lay in no special thing; it was the sum total of a hundred details that brought Jocelyn suddenly to the realization that here was actually one of the little princesses of the world, born to the purple, and wearing it with careless royal ease.

That painted little talon of a hand could write a check today that would mean comfort for some workingman and his family for all time; write another tomorrow; write a third, a fourth, a fifth, and go on writing them for a month, and her great fortune would not be touched or her bank balance seriously disturbed.

Unexpectedly, Jocelyn found herself desirous of being a part of Norma Fordyce's scheme. There was a fearful fascination in the mere contemplation of a life so unlike her own, so unlike that of most girls. Instinctively she smiled at Norma, the tolerant amused smile of an older woman who finds a mischievous child engaging, and Norma was quick to respond to it.

"Miss Britton thinks I'm terrible, don't you, Miss Britton?"

"I think you're all completely crazy," Jocelyn said simply. The girl laughed delightedly, and her grandmother said drily, "Crazy is quite right. Any girl who climbs over a glass-topped wall and gets herself into an Italian hospital——"

"Darling, the hospital was perfectly beautiful," Norma interrupted negligently, "and the nuns were so sweet I almost became a Catholic. And long before I was on my feet Mademoiselle showed up—she'd come from Paris — and then Count Coudeau showed up, and then the Drapers decided that they had to return unexpectedly to America, and Mrs. Draper was sure Marie Louise would be a wonderful companion for me, and so we came home in a brigade. And once again, Miss Britton, I was saved from a fate worse than death!"

"Your mother met you?"

"Mother met me, and took me to Mattie Marchand's that very hour to get clothes, and her new beau—did you meet him, Granny? Count Spazzolari, nine years older than I am. I don't think she'll marry him, I really don't, although it's practically announced and all that. He's revolting."

"Well, I'm glad you're safely here," Mrs. Fordyce said, now fully clad and ready to depart. "and I hope we'll be able to keep you happy and give you a good time. I've got to go to May von Bahren's luncheon. Now do you think you'll be safe in Miss Britton's charge, and will you let her know what you want to do, and if Miss Sanderson telephones tell her to get in touch with your father at the office? D'you happen to know if he's coming home to dinner?"

"I believe he is," Norma had gotten no further in her answer when a handsome woman walked into the room and said laughingly, "I know he is. And so am I. I telephoned the office to see if he was back, and had a chat with him, and Ned Randall and I are coming over to dinner, and to take you on at bridge afterward, Bert."

"Nita, you nice child," Mrs. Fordyce said cordially. "It's so good to see you!

"This is Norma, of course, but so grown-up I'd never know her, and quite beautiful, too. Like Phil. Don't you think like Phil?"

"And Miss Britton, who's going to help us keep an eye on Norma," Mrs. Fordyce said, with a jerk of her beautiful hat toward Jocelyn.

"Yes; Phil told me that, too. We'd all have taken on Norma and run her without any trouble at all, but perhaps it's better this way."

She fell into a gossipy review of a great many personalities almost entirely unknown to Jocelyn. Divorces, love affairs, scandals, deaths, the qualifications of this girl and the unattractiveness of that other, stories of bridge games and polo games and dinner and opera nights were all jumbled together in Mrs. Royce's fascinating talk. "Meggy Brice is giving a big dance, and there's the Parkers' baby party," Nita said to Norma. "You should have had cards to about ten things."

"I imagine they're all upstairs," Norma said indifferently.

"Remember, you're not out, Norma, and don't accept things that will put you into the debutante class," said her grandmother. "Just the school-vacation things. There's nothing so bad for a girl as to force parties too early."

"I'll remember," Norma shot a long-suffering glance at Jocelyn, and Jocelyn percieved, with rising pleasure in her heart, that they were conspirators already.

"It's impossible to think the child is only sixteen," Nita murmured. "She has all the manner of a grown woman!"

"Perhaps I've had a good many of the experiences of a grown woman," Norma said proudly. Jocelyn thought for the first time that she was very young, after all.

"There's no reason why you shouldn't go on with your studies, settle down here, and have your coming-out party winter after next," said Mrs. Fordyce definitely. "It's a lovely group here, and you'll get nowhere running around the world meeting new people."

"Nowhere at all," Norma agreed blandly. She turned to Jocelyn. "I'm going up for a bath; will you come with me, Miss Britton?"

"Leave Miss Britton here for a minute; I want to ask her to be kind enough to send a few telegrams," Mrs. Fordyce said. But when Norma had trailed away, leaving her furs and other impedimenta just where they had fallen, she turned to Jocelyn with a hurried air of warning. "Will you keep a very sharp eye on the telegrams she sends?" she said. "I don't want her to feel she's being watched. But at the same time we can't have her inviting strange French counts to the place. Do the best you can with her. Phil may have some ideas."

"She's destined to make a complete little ass of herself just as soon as she possibly can!" said Mrs. Royce with a rueful laugh.

Helps Check Colds Quickly

You can often check a cold quickly if you follow these instructions.

Just as soon as you feel the cold coming on and experience headache, pains in the back or limbs, soreness through the body, take a Paradol tablet, a good big drink of hot lemonade or ginger tea and go to bed.

The Paradol affords almost immediate relief from the pains and aches and helps you to get off to sleep. The dose may be repeated, if necessary, according to the directions. If there is soreness of the throat, gargle with two Paradol tablets dissolved in water. Just try Paradol the next time you have a cold and we believe that you will be well pleased. Paradol does not disappoint.

Stores Taxed to Capacity To Serve Large Crowds Of Shoppers on Saturday

With masses of shopping humanity that caused pedestrian traffic jams on several occasions on Front Street, opening their purses in a buying orgy that equalled anything in the war years, counter sales of shops in the city reached a near record on Saturday, meachants reported today.

Crowds of shoppers milled in out and around stores and shops from shortly after noon until closing time at night. At four o'clock a manager of a Front Street department store stated there were at least five hundred shoppers in his place of business. This morning he stated that the day's sale receipts on Saturday were the second highest since he took over management of the store ten years ago.

All classes of shops did a rush business. Hardware stores, women's shops, department stores, drug stores (in fact every type of store open for business proved a mecca for crowds intend upon getting their Christmas merchandise on Saturday.

One of the main factors given for the unprecedented rush of business was the fact that the war is over, and a large number of returned men and women will be spending the first Christmas at home in years. The shopping public, it seems is intent upon celebrating the 1945 Yule as a true Victory Christmas and as such is loosening its purse strings in a manner that is taxing cash registers to the limit.

Thhen again the weather had something to do with it. Farmers from the surrounding districts were in the city in large numbers and with their wives and families took advantage of ideal shopping conditions.

On a number of occasions, the crowds were so dense on Front Street that it was impossible to move either one way or the other for a few minutes.

Stocks of merchandise were depleted in many cases. There appeared to be plenty of ready money available with little credit being asked for. And Mr. and Mrs. Shopper demanded the best merchandise available.

Freak Accidents

Chicago, Dec. 10 (CP)— For most Canadians and Americans, 1945 will be remembered as a year of triumph and the end of history's greatest and most terrible war. Scientists may hail it as the birth of the Atomic Age.

For Stanley J. Bonner of Houston, Texas, it will always be recalled as the year he was shot by a duck.

For the National Safety Council's annual roundup of odd accidents showed Mr. Bonner was one of a handful of hapless citizens—and dogs—to whom things happened that shouldn't happen to man nor beast.

Bonner went hunting in his backyard for a couple of domestic ducks. He dropped the first one, as planned, with a shot from his automatic pistol. The second duck, having different ideas, backed into his gun and the slug struck the hunter in the knee. The duck? Still alive and quacking.

Fate was a shade more gentle with Mrs. Margaret Cook of Toledo, Ohio. Her car blew a tire at a railroad crossing and careened down the tracks to greet an approaching freight. However, her car snagged a signal switch and threw a red block against the train, automatically stopping it.

Taxi Driver Ethel Sheffield's car also crossed her up and then tried to right things. Her cab skidded into a lamp-post in Regina, in 16-degree-below-zero weather last January. She was knocked unconscious by the impact, but the crash set off a fire alarm box on the post and firemen rescued her from possible death by freezing.

It might have been an accident or suicide pact, but a couple of Marinette, Wis., dogs almost did themselves in with cooking gas. Miss Bette Boren came home last March and found a gas jet open and both animals unconscious. They haven't tried it since.

Jesse Spitzer of Denver got run over by a train the hard way and lived to tell about it. His automobile was involved in a collision that shot him through the roof of his car and onto the tracks in front of an approaching freight train. He lay quietly between the rails brooding over his broken leg and bruises while the train sped over him.

A milk-tippling 15-month-old baby put Mrs. Edward Comfort of Brooklyn, N.Y., in a Virginia ditch. She was driving along peacefully when her baby, secure in its basket beside her, swung its nursing bottle like a bludgeon, scoring between the eyes. The dazed mother let go the wheel and the car overturned. Neither was injured.

The mother of Frank Chlan of Baltimore, Md., a returning soldier, was as glad to see her son as he was to see her — until he gave her a great big hug. It snapped several of her ribs.

Seventeen-month-old Larry Lingle of Harrisburg, Pa., ended the year in the red. He swallowed a nickel and coughed up a penny.

Negotiations Regarding Strikes Enter New Phase

New York, Dec. 10 — (AP) — C.I.O. United Auto Workers' top officials planned conversations with Labor Secretary Schwellenbach today as the union's negotiations with the Ford Motor Company entered a new phase and the General Motors dispute remained deadlocked.

Secretary Schwellenbach's visit to Detroit to make a speech tonight was arranged before the 20-day old G.M. strike started, but union leaders planned to confer with him informally.

Union negotiators with Ford hoped to end an impasse that had developed over the company's demand for protection against unauthorized work stoppages and slow downs.

The U.A.W.-C.I.O. says it has the answer in a plan for penalizing "wild cat" strikes. It expressed confidence the company will accept the union's company security guarantee to be presented later today. No details of the plan were made public.

Having rejected G.M.'s offer of a 10-per-cent wage rate increase, U.A.W. vice president Walter P. Reuther still insisted upon "30-per-cent unless the arithmetic proves us wrong" as negotiations were resumed. Rank and file approval of the union leadership's rejection of President Truman's recent back-to-work plea is considered certain.

Across the United States labor troubles affected approximately 400,000 workers, with the General Motors strike alone keeping 213,000 idle. Other continuing strikes involved 30,000 A.F.L. lumber, and sawmill workers in the Pacific Northwest; 10,000 to 50,000 over-the-road A.F.L. truckers in the Midwest; 10,200 C. I. O. glass workers in seven states; and 6,000 A.F.L. employees of the Greyhound Bus Lines.

LIBEL ACTION IS WITHDRAWN IN BRITISH COURT

Prosecution Satisfied That Defendants Not Actuated by Malice

London, Dec. 10 (CP)—Counsel in the libel action brought against officials of the Canadian Legion War Services by Mrs. Violet Austin of London reached a settlement out of court, and counsel for Mrs. Austin informed the presiding judge his client was satisfied the defendants were not actuated by malice in writing the letter of which she complained.

The case record was withdrawn, and at conclusion of proceedings the judge stated that if the matter had gone to a conclusion, he would have been bound to give judgment for all the defendants, both on the law and on the facts.

Mrs. Austin in bringing action had claimed that a letter written by Col. D. E. MacIntyre, general manager of the Canadian Legion War Services, in September, 1943, to a C.L.W.S. official in London, had maliciously reflected on her moral character. The Legion, Alex Walker, its Dominion president, and the C.L.W.S. were joint defendants.

In announcing the settlement, defence counsel said Mrs. Austin had rendered valuable service to the C.L.W.S. The defendants had never placed any credence in rumors affecting her morality and honesty and never made any such imputations.

Counsel for the plaintiff, Mrs. Austin, then told the judge his client had brought the action to clear her character because she felt bitterly that totally unjustified aspersions had been made against her character.

"Having heard the evidence of Col. MacIntyre, it becomes obvious that—and she accepts the position—Col. MacIntyre in writing the letter complained of was not actuated by malice in any way nor was Mr. Walker in the part he took in it," Mrs. Austin's counsel said. "That being the position, it is possible for this litigation to come to an end."

Mr. Justice Hilbery, approving the settlement, said the parties had acted wisely. Mrs. Austin had been a highly efficient and exceptionally hard worker at London headquarters of the C.L.W.S. She had become, the judge commented, the subject of "utterly unfounded wicked gossip among dissatisfied and dismissed members of the staff on their return to Canada."

Rumors False And Untraceable

The judge said these rumors were false and untraceable to their source, but officials in Canada considered the good name of the Canadian Legion and the C. L. W. S. was being impaired, and Col. MacIntyre in good faith wrote a letter in the belief it would end the rumors.

"There never was a word of truth in any of the rumors, defendants never believed there was never said there was, and I am sure the plaintiff will be well satisfied with the result," the judge said.

Mrs. Austin's counsel said his client had accepted an offer by the defendants to make a not ungenerous payment toward her costs.

ADOPTS RESOLUTION

London, Dec. 10 — (CP) — A group of 120 members of parliament adopted a resolution Saturday calling for immediate severance by Great Britain of diplomatic, commercial and economic relations with the Franco government of Spain.

Molester Taken Into Custody After Manhunt

Shelburne, Ont., Dec. 10. (CP)—Some 500 residents and rural shoppers in Shelburne engaged Saturday night in a two-hour manhunt which reached its crescendo in shouts of "lynch him!"—"Hang him to the nearest post!"—as local and Ontario Provincial police dispersed the mob which formed as they took 63-year-old Robert Jones of Simcoe, into custody.

Later Jones was transferred, on a charge of car theft, from Shelburne fire hall to county jail at nearby Orangeville.

He was overtaken by Walter Little who, in company with several others in his truck, offered a lift and, when Jones refused to get in, jumped to the road and grabbed him.

The arrest came in the wake of reports that several young women had been waylaid in Shelburne's darkened side streets by a man dressed in army coat, dark trousers and rolled rubber boots.

"First I knew of the trouble was when a young girl ran screaming down the street past my home," T. H. Gilchrist, Shelburne bank manager said. He added he investigated with two young ex-servicemen and found a car parked up the street. From it a man ran into the darkness.

Further investigation brought information that two girls had been stopped by the driver of a car and offered money to ride with him to Owen Sound, 25 miles northwest of here. When they refused, according to the reports, the man jumped for one of the girls while the other ran screaming for help.

There were reports too that other young women had been molested by an automobile driver and the car Gilchrist discovered had been stolen from a line of parked shoppers' cars on the lighted business street.

The bank manager, armed with a shotgun stood guard over the car while Chief Constable William Madiall sent posses to cover all road exists and smaller groups of volunteer vigilantes patrolled streets and lanes. Among them was reeve-elect T. J. O'Flynne who armed himself with a heavy club.

Painless Birth Suggested To Raise British Birthrate

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London (CP) — Tall red-haired Dr. Edith Summerskill, parliamentary secretary to the food ministry, seethes with irritation when she talks of Britain's falling birthrate and suggests as a remedy painless childbirth.

Too many men expect an anaesthetic when they have a boil lanced but show little active sympathy toward women who suffer hours of agony in labor without drugs which can bring them relief, she told The Canadian Press.

"If the decline in the birthrate continues we will be a middle-aged nation in 20 years," said Dr. Summerskill, who has been a doctor for 20 years and a wife for 19. The mother of a son and daughter, she thinks it is time for the woman's view on the birthrate to be heard and appreciated.

"There are plans for the extension of social services but these services will become harder to finance when the load falls heavily on the able-bodies who have the burden of a large proportion of the population in the old-age category," she said. "It's a grim outlook for our grandchildren."

More children were wanted but men too often took the attitude that women always have suffered in childbirth, so why change? Chloroform was used for the relief of pain 100 years ago, "but in this atomic age women still have to agitate for the provision of modern foolproof apparatus which is available for the relief of pain in childbirth and which can be used by a trained nurse or midwife."

Apathy Blocks Progress.

"Apathy stands in the way—that's all," Dr. Summerskill said. "A baby is born every minute in this country—at least 70 per cent of them without the benefit of an anaesthetic. Local authorities have permissive power to provide the necessary nurses and apparatus. Too often they don't use their power. But the campaigns backed by women everywhere are having results."

Hospital accommodation for every mother, with efficient nursing, and moderate charges, is also urged by Dr. Summerskill, who has argued the case of mothers in the House of Commons since she first won a seat in 1924. She has spoken at hundreds of meetings on the subject and says she finds all women behind her.

"We won't get a real increase in the birthrate until the status of motherhood is raised," she continued. "I'm looked on as more important because I am a member of parliament and a doctor than if I were the mother of six children, and yet a mother of six would be making a vital contribution to the welfare of the community.

"Remember, women want babies. But as things stand, every additional child makes a woman more dependent. It means more drudgery. Do you think women who have enjoyed the independence of life in the services and in war work want that?"

Dr. Summerskill, always a Labor supporter, as parliamentary secretary to the food ministry, is concerned with the nation's diet, the welfare of children, the cares of the housewife. She speaks for the government when she outlines policy in the Commons. She went to Spain during the Civil War, saw the suffering of women and children and reported on what she saw in public addresses, some of which were given in Canada.

TOO MUCH REDUCING

Detroit, Dec. 10 (AP)—Her attempt to shed 15 pounds in a hurry sent Virginia McCormick, 29, to a hospital yesterday. She told police she had been taking reducing tablets for several days in an attempt to achieve a slimmer figure. She finally became impatient, she said, and took a "handfull."

DE-CHARGED MINES SOLD AS BUOYS

Wexford, Eire, Dec. 10 (Reuters)—Mines drifting ashore on the coast of Eire are being sold by the Eire government department of defence after explosive charges have been removed. Wexford harbor commissioners have bought a number of the casings cheaply. They will be painted and used as buoys.

ZOO SELLS SURPLUS 'GATORS'

Chicago, Dec. 10 (AP)—Brookfield zoo is selling its surplus alligators. Although the prospectus says other zoos probably will be most interested, it mentions that each "gator will make a dozen alligator bags." They are three to eight feet long. The price: $5 a foot.

BEST WAR MEMORIAL

Nairobi, Kenya ((CP) — Nairobi's municipal council has stated that in their view the best war memorial for Kenya would be a fund for the provision of bursaries for children of all races. The bursaries would enable children to obtain higher education outside Kenya if necessary.

FIVE KILLED

Chicago, Dec. 10 — (AP)—Five persons were killed and eight injured when the Chicago-bound Erie Railroad's Pacific Express sheared off the end of a bus at a multiple track crossing in suburban Burnham early yesterday.

Witness Describes Bestial Slaying Of Two Canadians

French Mason Testifies At Trial of Maj.-Gen. Meyer

By ROSS MUNRO
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aurich, Germany, Dec. 11 —(CP Cable)— A description of how a Canadian soldier approaching with his arms raised was machine-gunned by a German in the village of Authie, France, during savage fighting June 7, 1944, was given at the war crimes trial of S.S. Maj.-Gen. Kurt Meyer here today.

Albert Guilbert, Authie mason, told the Canadian military court sitting here of watching from his first-floor windows an engagement between German and Canadian troops. The Germans were attempting to break the Canadian beachhead in Normandy on the second day of the invasion.

Guilbert said the Canadian was shot down within three yards of the German to whom he was surrendering. The French mason also testified he saw a wounded Canadian bayonetted by the Germans.

At this afternoon's session, Guilbert told how the Germans pulled out of Authie toward Carpiquet, near Caen, June 7, and how Canadian tanks entered the village. Guilbert and his neighbors chatted with the Dominion troops but they were warned indoors at about five p.m., when the Germans counter-attacked. It was then he saw the Canadian cross a neighboring garden with his hands raised—only to be shot down.

Guilbert was the first civilian witness called at the trial which started yesterday under the presidency of Maj.-Gen. Harry W. Foster of Picton, Ont., and Halifax.

He said that a few minutes after the first Canadian soldier was shot down, he saw another wounded Canadian lying unconscious in a wooded patch. His slight movement revealed his presence to the Germans and one of them, apparently in charge, approached with fixed bayonet and gouged the Canadian's head.

The same German then jabbed his bayonet into the Canadian's body while another fired a burst from his carbine into the body. Guilbert said he could not say how seriously the Canadian was wounded, but he recalled blood stains on his uniform near the abdomen before the attack. The Canadian was unarmed.

Buried Canadians

The Frenchman said he buried both Canadians but not until seven days later because the Germans forbade civilians to touch the bodies and special authority had to be obtained from Caen.

During that time, 37 bodies lay on Authie Streets, crushed and mutilated by foot and vehicular traffic. Guilbert said that when the French tried to draw the bodies clear they were not permitted to do so and German soldiers replaced the corpses in the path of the traffic. He added that at least 30 Authie citizens saw all or some of the events he described.

Lt.-Col. Clarence Campbell, assistant prosecution read statements from other residents of the village. Maurice Hilkert described the same two slayings as Guilbert and said six Canadian prisoners later were shot with their hands up.

The evidence was corroborated by statements taken from other Authie residents including Louis Alparine, who added that he saw a wounded Canadian shot through the head by a German officer and also six or seven Canadian bodies lying behind a wall, all with the hands above the heads.

During the morning session, the prosecution concentrated on an alleged order from Meyer to his S.S. troops ordering them to take no prisoners during the Normandy phase of the Allied invasion.

The 33-year-old S. S. commander is charged with being directly or indirectly, responsible for the shooting of 48 Canadian soldiers from the north Nova Scotia Highlanders of Amherst and Truro, the 1st Hussars of London, Ont., the Queen's Own Rifles of Toronto, and the Cameron Highlanders of Ottawa, while they were prisoners of war.

The second day of the trial opened with Lt.-Col. Bruce MacDonald of Windsor, Ont., prosecutor, saying that Alfred Helzel, German S. S. soldier who is appearing as a prosecution witness, told a court interpreter after yesterday's session that he had heard Meyer and the commander of the 15th S. S. reconnaissance company say: "You are not to take prisoners."

Col. MacDonald said Helzel indicated he misunderstood some of yesterday's questions. The gangling, 19-year-old soldier electrified the court yesterday when he reversed testimony given in a prisoner of war camp in Canada and said Meyer had not given orders not to take prisoners.

The prosecutor's statement today caused a 10-minute argument with defence counsel over the admissability of information obtained outside of the witness box. After a brief adjournment, the court ruled against Col. MacDonald's intention to recall Helzel.

The prosecution's second witness was a 19-year-old former corporal in the 25th S. S. Panzer regiment commanded at Caen by Meyer. The corporal testified that his lieutenant had said in effect in a pep talk to the platoon when it was on its way into battle at Caen: "We shall not take any prisoners."

Did Not Think of Order

He was questioned by Lt.-Col. M. W. Andrew of Stratford, Ont., defence counsel, who suggested the Meyer statement did not mean much, the witness said that as far as he was concerned: "During the action we did not think about it."

He said his unit received an order in mid-June offering leave for taking prisoners and later he said he saw prisoners taken.

The bloody fighting which raged in the Caen area on June 7, 1944 — one day after D-Day — was described in evidence from Lt.-Col. Charles Petch of Montreal, commander of the North Nova Scotia Highlanders at that time.

Following Col. Petch's evidence, the prosecution read a statement by Meyer in which the S.S. general said he ordered his 25th Panzer Grenadier Regiment of the 12th S. S. Division to strike ferociously at the 3rd Canadian Division northwest of Caen the day after the Allied invasion.

The enemy troops were ordered to reach the coast without regard to loss, the statement said.

It went on to state: "The situ-

Canadian Christmas For Six Thousand Who Reach Halifax

Halifax, Dec. 11—(CP)—A Canadian Christmas came nearer reality today as clattering troop trains sped across the Dominion with nearly 6,000 Canadian veterans that landed here early this morning on the 35,677-ton Mauretania.

Few of the 6,011 passengers aboard were asleep as the big Cunard liner felt her way to the quayside shortly after midnight. The crossing was particularly fast and was described by a ship's officer as the smoothest he had experienced in 20 years. However, the liner was many hours from the record Atlantic crossing established by the Queen Mary in 1938 when the ocean giant took over Blue Ribbon honors by crossing in 3 days, 21 hours, and 45 minutes.

INDONESIANS TO RESIST DUTCH SOVEREIGNTY

Leaders Threaten To Use Poison, Arms To Oppose Dutch In Java

By VERN HAUGLAND

Batavia, Dec. 11 — (AP) —Indonesian leaders threatened today to use both poison and arms to resist military restoration of Dutch sovereignty in strife-torn Java.

Premier Sutan Sjahrir of the unrecognized Indonesian republic said Indonesian forces would fight if the British command attempted to land more troops to back up the rule of the Netherlands.

From a radio station near Soerabaja, the native leader Soetomo spoke of a campaign of poisoning against the Dutch, saying:

"The Dutch are boasting that they soon will bring in thousands of soldiers. What of it? We are even if we have to poison them even if we have t opoison them to death.

"We have 70,000,000 behind us. It is an easy task for us to get rid of 100,000 or 200,000 enemies by poison."

Simultaneously, the Netherlands East Indies government announced that acting Governor-General H. J. Van Mook left by plane Thursday for The Hague. N. S. Blon, director of the Department of Justice, will act in his stead during his absence.

Reuters and the Dutch news agency Aneta said that Lt.-Gen. Sir Miles C. Dempsey, commander of ground forces under the South-East Asia Command, arrived here today.

Premier Sjahrir again asked world recognition of his regime.

His statement came as the British command clamped wartime secrecy on troop movements and communications as a prelude to full-scale operations against armed Indonesians who were reported planning a major uprising by the week's end.

"We tell the whole world we have won independence and ask recognition," the youthful premier told a press conference.

Referring to a reported British offer to discuss the dispute after the elimination of so-called extremist elements, Premier Sjahrin said the Indonesians would be ready to negotiate "after international recognition."

"If, however, the independence is attacked," he added, "we are compelled to resist. There can hardly be such a thing as war against extremists alone. We never have understood who were termed extremists."

Gen. G. S. Patton Has Good Night

Frankfurt, Dec. 11. (AP)—Gen George S. Patton, partially paralyzed as a result of spinal injuries suffered in an automobile accident Sunday, had a good night and showed slight improvement, an army medical bulletin from Heidelberg said today.

The text of the bulletin:

"Gen. Patton has had a good night. His general condition has been maintained at a satisfactory level. His neurological condition showed a slight improvement, but prognosis remains guarded."

MADE FALSE STATEMENTS

Iserlohn, Germany, Dec. 11 —AP)—Helmut Stumbech, 22-year-old butcher's son who insisted he knew where Adolf Hitler and Eva Braun were hiding, was sentenced yesterday to five years' imprisonment by a military government for making false statements to Allied forces.

Taxation of Low Incomes, Overtime 'Ball and Chain on Production'

Sen. N. McLean

Ottawa, Dec. 11 —(CP)— Taxation of low incomes and overtime is a "ball and chain on production," Senator Neil McLean (L-New Brunswick) today told the Senate Income Tax Committee.

He argued that exemptions on low incomes should be raised, that overtime pay should be exempt and that inequalities in tax treatment of Canadian and foreign shareholders in Canadian companies should be removed.

Incomes under $2,000 constituted two-thirds of all incomes taxed, produced $200,000,000 in taxes out of total collections of more than $700,000,000. Removing the tax from these incomes would greatly ease the volume of work of handling tax returns in the Income Tax Department.

In seasonal industries people often worked 60 hours a week when the work had to be done. The effect of the present tax system was to put these seasonal industries on a 40-hour week basis, regardless of the volume of work at different times.

Germany had succeeded in getting great production and had obtained it by not taxing overtime.

"Our taxing methods are discouraging production all over the country in our seasonal industries," said Senator McLean. "I know we are losing hundreds of thousands of man hours through absenteeism and lack of interest in overtime."

Activities of Underground Railway Which Carried 5,000 Airmen to Freedom Revealed

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

Paris, Dec. 11 (AP)—Activities of the "underground railway" which during the war carried some 5,000 fallen Allied airmen to freedom, many to fly and fight again, were revealed today for the first time.

Although much concerning this secret war organization was not disclosed, the doors were opened sufficiently for the two chief beneficiaries, Britain and the United States, to express their gratitude through awards and decorations. Both countries will present thousands of medals to underground workers.

The "underground" route was operated by Europeans across various German-occupied countries.

A spokesman for the United States army's "bureau of research in bringing back Allied aviators" estimated that in France alone an underground army of princes and paupers, peasants and landowners totalling 40 000 voluntarily collaborated in the dangerous job. British and United States soldiers were spirited along two main routes to the Spanish Pyrenees and freedom.

Before the invasion of France, the bureau had in its files the names of 8,000 French men and women who had assisted aviators in escaping to Britain. Since that time the file has grown to 28,000.

The bureau said that "for every aviator that reached England safely at least one Frenchman, Belgian, Dutchman or Czech was shot somewhere along the line by the Germans for helping him."

The underground railway out of Brittany "grew up by necessity" among French families.

"If they passed the boy along and he got out of their neighborhood safely, they would do the same thing the next time," an official said.

The bureau still will not reveal names of either the rescuers or rescued, and code names of the principal routes to freedom are still secrets. But due to train schedules, a great majority of those escaping were forced to pass through the most dangerous part of France: Paris.

"We have never found a case where a flier was betrayed by anyone in the resistance movement, although sometimes French people would turn men into the Germans when they were badly in need of medical care." the officer said.

MORE THAN 7,000 IDLE AT WINDSOR RECEIVE BENEFITS

These Do Not Include 4,800 Refused by Reason of Strike

Windsor, Dec. 11 — (CP) — More than 7,000 unemployed persons here are receiving unemployment insurance benefits and another 4,800 were refused benefits because of their association with the Ford Motor Company strike, it was revealed today by B. G. Sullivan of Toronto, Ontario regional superintendent of the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

Of the 7,000 recipients, an estimated 1,200 are Ford workers who either were laid off before the strike was called Sept. 12 or are of a category such as foremen excluded from the collective bargaining agreement between the company and the United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.)

Strikers are not eligible for unemployment insurance benefits under a clause applying to those who have "voluntarily left their work." The Act also misqualifies a whole class or grade of workers if one is a member of the organization promoting the work stoppage.

Of the unemployed receiving benefits 500 receive only part of the monies. Their unemployment insurance books are in the offices of the Ford Company and the offices have been closed for months because of the picket line outside. The balance will be paid when re-entry is gained to the offices and the books examined.

A maximum of $12.24 is paid a single person under the Act and a maximum of $14.40 to a married person with a dependant.

Two Jap Carriers Sunk June 18, '44

Tokyo, Dec. 11—(AP)—Japan's largest and newest aircraft carrier in its first engagement was torpedoed and sunk by a United States submarine in the Philippines Sea in 1944.

The 40-000-ton Taisho, launched as Japan's answer to ever-increasing Allied air supremacy, exploded and sank six hours after it was punctured by a single torpedo June 18, its senior staff officer disclosed today.

Another carrier, the 30,000-ton Chokaku, also was sunk by an American submarine on the first day of that engagement.

Capt. Toshikazu Ohmae, staff officer aboard the Taisho, told the story of its end to the Associated Press in describing the first battle of the Philippine Sea —which Japanese officers consider one of the most decisive engagements in Pacific naval warfare.

"Japan lost its sea power in the Pacific after that and was unable to protect the homeland," he said.

3 KILLED IN CRASH

Paris, Dec. 11. (Reuters) — Three dead and three injured today were taken from the wreckage of a United States military plane which crashed near St. Andre La Cote in the Rhone department.

CHINESE TROOPS ALLOWED TO FLY INTO MANCHURIA

Russia Agrees to This Action and Troops Will Take Over Strategic Cities

By SPENCER MOOSA

Chungking, Dec. 11. (AP)—Russia agreed today to permit Chinese government troops to fly into Manchuria and take over its most strategic cities, Central News Agency reported.

After weeks of tense negotiations, during which Chinese Communists sought to take over ports and cities, the Agency said the Chungking government has won permission to plant itself firmly in this territory held vital for the recovery of war-ravaged China.

It is reported that Central government troops would be permitted by the Russians to fly into Changchun, the Manchurian capital, Mukden, largest city in the territory, and Harbin, most important in Northern Manchuria.

Chinese Communists previously had been reported concentrating about both Changchun and Harbin and ready to take over Mukden if Central government troops on the outskirts tried to move in.

Ordered Out of Mukden

A Chinese dispatch yesterday said Communists headquarters at Yenan ordered its troops to clear out of Mukden "to conserve the strength of Communist forces".

The reported agreement covering Mukden, Changchun and Harbin embraces the most important cities in Manchuria with the exception of the southern port of Airen.

Mukden is the first objective of Central Government troops, who recently broke into Manchuria across the southern border after outflanking the frontier fortress of Shanhaikwan.

It lies between the free port of Dairen, at the southern tip of Manchuria, and Changchun, about 400 miles to the north. The northern industrial city of Harbin is 150 miles north of Changchun.

Previously it has been reported that the Russians also agreed to permit Chungking troops to enter Dairen, which under the Sino-Russian agreement will be occupied by both powers.

A Chinese Press dispatch said the government's 94th army would be flown from North China to Changchun.

The 92nd army, it added, would be air lifted to Chinhsien, advanced Central Government army headquarters, 110 miles northeast of Shanhaikwan.

SOCIAL CREDIT FILIBUSTER IN ITS FIFTH DAY

Monetary Proposals Of Bretton Woods Are Strongly Opposed By Solon Low's Group

By GEORGE KITCHEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Ottawa, Dec. 11 (CP)—A full-blown Social Credit filibuster against the Bretton Woods monetary proposals today whirled into its fifth day in a restless House of Commons despite an appeal by Prime Minister Mackenzie King that the 13-man party be "good enough" to help get the agreements to committee.

Mr. King, who has held aloof from the marathon debate since it began last Thursday, entered the discussion Monday night to ask the Social Crediters to cooperate in getting the agreements before the Commons Banking and Commerce Committee for detailed examination.

Mr. King then warned of possible government action to end the debate with this statement:-

"I hope I shall never have to suggest to the House that we take advantage of certain rules to shorten unnecessary debate. That is the last thing in the world the government wants to do.

"But, if debate does get to the point where it ceases to be debate and is rather discussion in a repetitious way and becomes obstruction, the rules are there to protect the House and will have to be observed."

Solon Low, Social Credit leader, said he would attempt to facilitate the work of the House, then added:-

"But as I have around me men of undoubted integrity and deep convictions I cannot bludgeon them, and I do not intend to try to bludgeon them in this matter."

Says Unnecessary Secrecy Delayed Bomb 18 Months

Washington, Dec. 11 —(AP)— Unnecessary military secrecy delayed production of the atomic bomb at least 18 months, Dr. Leo Szilard, Chicago University physicist, testified yesterday before the special Senate Committee investigating atomic energy.

Senator Edwin C. Johnson (Dem.-Colo.), asked Dr. Szilard about delays after the latter had criticized the "system of compartmentilization" evolved by army officers when they took over the atomic project in 1942.

Dr. Szilard explained that army officers asked the scientists to work only on parts of the project and not discuss results with other scientists on other parts. He added this was "unnecessary."

Senator Johnson asked: how much delay this caused in production for use of the first atomic bomb?"

Dr. Szilard said the bomb could have been produced "about the spring of 1944 according to my best guess."

CABOOSE ON RAMPAGE

Wickford, R.I., Dec. 11 —(AP) —A railroad caboose, "parked" on a grade by a freight crew, took off on a solo run Sunday night, and: travelled a three-mile branch line, clearing three level crossings without incident; collided at a fourth crossing with an automobile, slightly injuring three persons; crashed through a pile of ties at the end of the line; crossed a highway and ended up in a farmer's fence. The freight crew pursuing in a Diesel engine ran a poor second.

Nazis Developed Deadliest Poison Gas in the World

Tested on Concentration Camp Inmates in Auschwitz

Washington, Dec. 11 — (AP)— A United States government official today revealed that Germany "developed the deadliest poison gas in the world" by testing it on concentration camp inmates.

Col. Bernard Bernstein, Director of the Division of Cartels and External Assets, United States military government in Germany, submitted the statement to a Senate Military Sub-committee.

Col. Bernstein also offered what he said was a German denial of a contention by Standard Oil Company of New Jersey that the United States benefited, rather than suffered, through Standard's pre-war relations with the big German dye trust, I. G. Farbenindustrie.

On the subject of poison gas, he said that many plants and all stocks of poison gas were destroyed by order of the German government before occupation by the Russians.

"But at least one of the terrible secrets which the Germans hoped to save for the next war was uncovered," Col. Bernstein said.

"Our investigation has disclosed that an I. G. Farben official at Wuppertal-Elberfeld developed the deadliest poison gas in the world. This gas, unknown to the military authorities of the Allied nations, could have penetrated any gas mask in existence.

"I. G. originally carried out its poison gas experiments on monkeys; later on human beings . . . these gases were not only used on helpless people during the stages of experimentation, but were later used with full knowledge and acquiescence on the part of Farben to exterminate whole groups in concentration camps such as Auschwitz."

The Senate hearing is directed at the question of cartels, or international agreements among companies as to the division, of world markets and the exchange of technical information. In this connection, Col. Bernstein said:

"In addition to its numerous foreign subsidiaries, I.G.'s world-wide affiliations included hundreds of separate non - German concerns and ranged over a score of industries.

"Its cartel agreements numbered over 2,000 and included agreements with such major industrial concerns as Standard Oil (New Jersey), the Aluminum Company of America, E. I. Dupont of Nemours, Ethyl Export Corporation, Imperial Chemical Industries (Britain), the Dow Chemical Company, Rohm and Haas, establishments Kuhlman (France) and the Mitsui interests of Japan . . .

"In an article . . . which appeared in the Petroleum Times for Dec. 25, 1945, Mr. R. T. Haslam of Standard Oil Company of New Jersey defended Standard Oil's relationships with I. G. Farben..

"He stated that the 'secrets brought to America from Germany 15 years ago by American scientists have been turned into mighty weapons against Germany.' "

Col. Bernstein then cited a reply he said was prepared by "three of Farben's leading scientists" to the effect that Farben "gained technical information from America far more important to Germany's war effort than Standard Oil was able to obtain for the American war effort from Germany."

Farben's reply, Col. Bernstein said, described "many valuable contributions" which were received "as a consequence of our contracts with the Americans . . . above and beyond the agreement . . . which just now in the war are useful to us."

Plans Under Way for Joint Test Of A-Bombs Against Naval Ships

Washington, Dec. 11—(AP)— The United States intends to find out what the atomic bomb will do to warships as well as to cities and people. Plans are under way for a joint test of atomic bombs against naval vessels.

Similarly the results of a detailed, scientific study of the destructive power of nuclear explosion on buildings and humans will be forthcoming in a report of the United States strategic bombing survey in Japan. The first phase of this report is expected within the next three months.

The survey by a group of civilian and military experts appointed a year ago made its second report on a European study available today—a blood-chilling account of the horrors modern war visits on civilians. Members of the survey now are making a similar study in Japan, where the aerial bombardment of that country ended with the dropping of two atomic bombs.

The announcement on the forthcoming tests against warships was cryptic. It said only that plans for the operation involve assembling "many naval vessels," extensive use of recording instruments and the gathering of necessary personnel.

Although there has been speculation that captured Japanese naval ships might be used as targets, United States Navy officials say that because they lack such factors as extensive compartmentation, they are not fully comparable to American warships.

Youth Gets Prison Term for Slaying Vancouver Girl

Victoria, Dec. 11 —(CP)— Charles Kinney, who will be 18 years old this month, was sentenced yesterday to 12 years in penitentiary for the slaying of 18-year-old Phyllis Stroud, a school class-mate.

The girl, partially clad, was found dead in the house jointly occupied by the Kinney and Stroud families. She had been suffocated by pushing her face against a pillow. The girl's body was found in a sawdust bin 12 days after she was murdered on V-J Night.

On the witness stand, Kinney admitted the killing, but pleaded he did not intend to do any harm. He said he and the girl had an argument. He slapped her face. Hearing her father, sister and uncle entering the house, he pushed her face-down on the pillow to smother her screams, the boy said.

When he released her, he saw she was dead and in a panic he buried the body in the sawdust, Kinney testified.

Set Up Rehabilitation Training Institute

Brockville, Dec. 11 — (CP) — Establishment of a rehabilitation training institute in part of the former Officers Training Centre here was confirmed yesterday by Dr. G. V. Vantausk, who will be director of projects here and at Prescott, Ont.

Dr. Vantausk said plans called for opening of the centre as soon as possible after Jan. 7 and 350 students would be accommodated here.

Former service personnel would be given matriculation courses and classes would be conducted in various trades, including motor mechanics, bricklaying, plumbing and construction trades. Furniture upholstering and welding may be added later. Courses for women include home-making and dress-making.

The institute is being sponsored jointly by the Federal Labor Department and the Ontario Education Department.

Sommerville Given 42-Day Jail Term

Forty-two days' jail term dating from the time of his arrest on November 5th was the sentence handed out by Magistrate T. Y. Wills in city police court Tuesday morning after finding Glenn R. Sommerville of Toronto guilty on four charges of obtaining money under false pretences with intent to defraud.

The four charges concerned the passing of worthless cheques on as many local merchants, the evidence in the cases being heard more than one week ago with the magistrate reserving judgment.

Originally arraigned on five local charges, Sommerville was acquitted on a charge of fraudulently obtaining lodging at the Queens hotel with judgment being reserved on the cases involving the passing of the worthless cheques.

Defense counsel Malcolm Robb of this city at Sommerville's hearing brought out that the accused had received approximately $18,000 from his late father's estate but this money had been mostly spent by 1943. In finding the accused guilty Magistrate Wills offered the opinion that Sommerville had possibly not intended to permanently deprive local merchants of money by pasing the cheques but stated the accused could not have been certain that the cheques would be honored through his father's estate.

The four cheques passed in Belleville by Sommerville had all been for amounts of ten dollars and all had been honored prior to the hearing of the charges in court.

Maj. G.M. Davison Named Clerk Division Court

Succeeding Harold R. Wilson, local real estate agent, who for the past ten years had acted in the position, Major G. Milton Davison, of Davison and Davison, Bridge Street insurance brokers, has received the appointment as clerk of the Division Court. It is expected Mr. Davison will assume his new duties within the next few days.

Formerly on the personal staff at General Crerar's headquarters, Major Davison was associated with the local Argylls for 15 years prior to the war and after enlisting in the active force went overseas in 1940 as reinforcement for the H. and P. E. Regiment. He served on various staffs including Corps Headquarters and in 1942 returned to Canada to take a staff course at Kingston.

Completing his course he was posted to the Pacific Command for a period of four months and then was returned to the European war theatre to serve at General Crerar's headquarters and also at Field Marshal Gen. Montgomery's headquarters. Going to France shortly after D-Day he served at tactical headquarters in that country and in Belgium, Holland and Germany.

Among his cherished possessions are maps of tactical headquarters positions in the four previously mentioned countries The maps were a presentation from General Crerar's headquarters unit. Major Davison returned to Canada in September on the Empress of Scotland.

Although he expects in the near future to assume his new duties as clerk of the Division Court, Mr. Davison will still continue his association with the firm of Davison and Davison, it was stated.

Kinsmen Stage Veterans' Night At Quinte Hotel

Overseas companionships welded by years of service in the European war theatres were renewed for approximately 80 returned veterans at the Quinte Hotel Monday evening as members of the local Kinsmen Club played hosts at a "veterans' Night" program during their regular bi-monthly dinner meeting.

Recently returned veterans renewed acquaintances with others who months ago had returned to their native city and many hearty handclasps and much backthumping was seen as the boys reminisced of their experiences overseas.

"This is the best meeting the Kinsmen club has had since I became president," stated President Harry Rollins as he extended a cordial welcome to the returned veterans. "I want to extend a hearty welcome home to a bunch of grand fellows—not because you have fought and won a great battle—but because of your service to the fellowship of nations. It is for this I welcome you here tonight."

Heroes of the Belleville district to whom also a welcome might have been extended, were not forgotten as returned veterans and members of the Kinsmen club stood in silent tribute to those who paid the supreme sacrifice on Europe's battlefields.

Each of the veterans was introduced to the club members by his Kinsmen host while the boys were collectively welcomed as the club members sang "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows."

Varied Program.

A well-rounded and varied program of entertainment was offered for the enjoyment of the veterans with two of Belleville's ranking tap dance artists, Miss Madeline Walden and Miss Barbara Diment being seen and heard in solo song and dance numbers. Miss Walden was seen first in a difficult acrobatic dance and later in a catchy tap dance number, being called back for several encores, while Miss Diment sang "When Irish Eyes are Smiling" and also did several tap dance numbers. William Navin acted as piano accompanist.

One of Belleville's ranking tenor soloists, Mr. Jimmy Bankier sang an especially appropriate number, "The Laddies Who Fought and Won" and also lent a Yuletide air with a special Christmas number. Reg Wardle rendered several trombone solos with Kin Phil Huddleston as accompanist.

Special entertainer for the evening was Barry Stafford, story teller deluxe, who kept veterans and club members in a continuous round of laughter as amusing army and civilian jokes were related with the art of a professional. Kin "Boiler" Lloyd introduced the guest artist, while appreciation was expressed by Kin Don Thomas.

Fred Symons New Issuer Motor Licences

Appointment of Capt. Fred Symons, local tobacconist and news stand proprietor as motor vehicle licence issuer for the Belleville district, has been made by the Provincial Highways Department with duties already having been taken over by the new issuer.

A veteran of World War II, Mr. Symons served for approximately four years overseas as an artillery officer. He enlisted as a lieutenant with the local 24th Battery in 1940 and went overseas in 1941 being promoted to the rank of captain while serving in the field. He returned to Canada a few months ago and received his discharge.

Recently taking over the tobacco and news stand store now operated by him, Mr. Symons announced today that motor licences would be issued at his place of business, 279½ Front Street.

Obituary

MRS. MARGARET JANE WRIGHT

(West Huntingdon - Vancouver)
(Contributed)

West Vancouver lost one of its most revered citizens on November 13th, when Mrs. Margaret Jane Wright, wife of Rev. Hillis Wright, passed away suddenly at the family home 2916 Park Lane.

Mrs. Wright was born at West Huntingdon, Ontario, 67 years ago and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kingston. One sister, Mrs. S. Patterson and three brothers, Geo. A. Kingston of Toronto, John W. of Tweed and Paul, San Diego, predeceased her.

Surviving are Harry of Toronto and Dr. E. N. of Grand Forks, B.C.

Rev. Wright and Mrs. Wright spent six years in West Vancouver where he was minister of the United Church, after which they spent a number of years at Bella Coola. For the last three years they were living retired in West Vancouver.

Funeral service was held on Friday from the United Church, Rev. Wm. Stott and Rev. Francis Stevens officiating, followed by interment in Capilano View Cemetery.

LATE HENRY SMART
(Mohawk Reserve)

Mohawk Reserve, Dec. 11 — (Special)—The funeral of Henry Smart, who passed away at his home after a six years' illness, Monday, Dec. 3rd., was held at All Saints' Church Thursday afternoon, many sympathizing friends of the family in attendance. Mr. Smart was born on the Reserve, was well known and highly esteemed. He was seventy-five years of age. He is survived by one son, George Smart, of Toronto; four daughters, Mrs. David Brant, Buffalo, N.Y.; Mrs. John Hill, Belleville; Mrs. Gordon Zachariah and Mrs. Clementine Maracle of the Reserve. One son, Harry, was killed in the first Great War. Twenty grandchildren and seven great grandchildren, one brother, Robert, and one sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Sero, also survive.

Interment took place in All Saints' cemetery; the bearers being Messrs. Gordon Zachariah, John Maracle, Elliott Brant, Reginald, Robert and Harrison Sero.

POLICE BLOTTER

Robbers Find Cash Registers Empty After Break-ins

Two gasoline service stations on Dundas Street East were entered during the night with only a handful of coppers being taken following rifling of cash registers, it was reported to local police this morning. Stations entered were the Supertest station and the Shell station.

Entry into the Supertest station was gained by breaking of the west window, while the grease pit doors of both stations were found unlocked by proprietors when places of business were opened this morning.

Held by Police.

Harry C. Schneider of this city is being held by Kingston police and will be returned to Belleville pending laying of theft charges. Schneider stayed at a local hotel Saturday night and part of Sunday and then hired a local taxi to take him to Kingston where he was apprehended with a large sum of money on his person.

Attempted Purse Snatch.

A Church Street woman reported to police that while returning to her home shortly before nine o'clock Monday evening a young man described as being "tall and dark" attempted to snatch her purse. Failing in his attempt the man ran off down the street when the woman raised an alarm. The man was stated to be wearing no hat or overcoat.

C. Frost Re-elected President Sidney P.-C. Association

Well-known Sidney township farmer, Mr. Carman Frost was re-elected president of the Sidney Progressive Conservative Association at their annual meeting held at Wallbridge last week. Alex Tanner was named as vice president with F. J. Woods, as secretary-treasurer.

Both men's and women's associations held separate meeting with the election of the women's officers resulting as follows: President, Mrs. W. E. Tummon; Vice President, Mrs. Alex Tanner, and Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. Kenneth Kingston.

A good attendance of members was seen at the meeting which was presided over by Carman Frost. Heard during the course of the evening were, Fred J. Wilson, M.P.P., Hastings West; Geo. H. Stokes, M.P., Hastings South; Major R. E. Drope, M.P., Northumberland; Roscoe Robson, M.P.P., Hastings East; Councillors: Fred Campbell and Harry Morrow and Clem H. Ketcheson.

High Taxation of Property Owners And Govt. Policy Targets of Criticism

Interspersing his talk with terse witticisms and typical Bonian humor, Ex-mayor Jamieson Bone gave his personal impressions to Rotarians at their weekly luncheon on Monday as to what present taxation will mean "to our grandchildren."

In his opening remarks Mr. Bone reviewed his own life in Belleville and his activities for the community during his term of business and municipal life here.

"I was a bank manager in Swift Current when I was 25," he said, "and people wondered if the banks knew what they were doing by opening branches in the wooly west. I found out afterwards they didn't know what it was all about."

He was responsible for the opening of the Country Club and the Chamber of Commerce here, he claimed. "I, along with others, bought the Corby building, and after a while the shareholders decided they wanted their money back, so I gave it to them."

(Voice from the Rotary ranks—"What is this, Jimmy, a biography or an obituary?")

Claims Credit.

Unperturbed, Mr. Bone went on to say that despite the fact that credit had been given other people for bringing present industries here, he, in conjunction with Mr. Herity, was mainly responsible for the locating in the city of the Mead-Johnson Co.; the Stephens-Adamson Company; the American Optical Company; the J. J. Cash Company and the Stewart - Warner - Alemite Corporation.

"R. J. Graham had $35,000 invested in the latter named company, and when he sold, he had $300,000. Let the enemies of Mr. Graham put that in their pipes and smoke it."

Referring to the platform of Utilities Commissioner Russell Wotten, "who received an acclamation and who believed the surplus profits should be returned to the consumer," Mr. Bone stated, "Mr. Wotten is a good friend of mine but his platform is not his own. It belongs to the Hydro Electric and all Hydros are alike."

Since the blitz there have been thousands of homes built in Britain under a municipal system," he said. "There is no hope for such a program here due to stupid political governing bodies. There is, I repeat, no hope for the future unless things are changed."

Tenants Pay Half of Tax

In Scotland, he stated, the tenants pay half the taxes and the landlord the other half. Thus the tenant is tax conscious. Here the landlord pays all the taxes, while the tenant claims he is paying taxes in his rent. He is right to a certain extent."

"That will never happen here by the looks of things," Mr. Bone said. "The Conservatives won't do it. The Liberals can't do it and the C.C.F. won't get the chance to do it."

If the tenant-owner payment of taxation was in vogue in Canada, he would be in full accord with the policy of returning utilities profits to the consumers, but at the present, he charged, "it is dishonest to charge the loss of the gas utility to the property owner."

Quotes Own Experience.

He quoted an instance in his own business career where a tenant was paying $20 a month rent and he was paying $25 taxes.

"Once in a while the tenant would come across with a hundred dollars rent, but I was paying out taxes steadily. Then I decided to quit paying taxes and pocketed the rentals. Along came the city to acquire the property for taxes and I said 'take it, it's yours'."

High taxation of property owners he charged, and the stupidity of governments, were the main reasons for the housing shortage in Canada today. He also attacked the city system of selling lots for $25. "The city thinks it is the smart thing to do, but it is a disgrace to have affairs of the municipality sink to such a level. When the houses are built on these lots, they are not worth anything."

He quoted the "miserable housing conditions in Montreal where the city is building 428 houses for which it has 1495 applicants."

Mr. Bone then turned his verbal guns on the Wartime Prices and Trade Board charging that "it was so gummed up with priorities for building materials that a contractor has not a chance.

Bonuses for Hogs Why Not Houses?

The result of the freezing of rents is that no one wants to build houses any more. "The government is giving bonuses to those who raise pigs and other things. Why doesn't it bonus the people who want to build homes?

"Building," he said, "should be the leading business in any city, employing 60 per cent of the population. "There is no chance of building here now or ever. A man with some money to invest does not want to sink it in an apartment building for it would take the rest of his life to pay off the mortgage. Any one who builds property today is nutty."

"I ran for the office of mayor, not just because I wanted to be the mayor, but for the opportunity of shooting off my face about several problems I had in mind." Mr. Bone said amid laughter.

"My sturdy friends, the Conservatives worked against me; the Canadian Legion would have no part of me; the City Council voted against me because I opposed everything it did, and will do so again; Foster Ward worked against me because I spoke my mind too freely. Add this all up and you can see that I didn't have a chance," he concluded.

Club appreciation was expressed by Rotarian Geo. H. Carver. Past President John Deacon was in the chair in the absence of President Mac McLean.

Nicky Sero, Former Baseball Star in District, is Home

Nicky Sero, Point Anne, "one of the best shortstops to pull on a glove in diamond sports in this district" and a member of the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps, arrived home from Europe the other day after three and one-half years spent in various theatres of war overseas.

Army training and service and plenty of participation in sport in his "spare time" over there has made Nicky, to quote himself, "lean, hard and tough". He is in the pink of condition and ready to tackle the problems of rehabilitation in order to fit himself into the cycle of civilian things.

He enlisted four and one half years ago and was sent overseas a year later. He was attached to the RSASC and for a long period assisted in maintaining the lifelines of the British and Canadian armies from depot to the front line.

Nicky starred on softball and baseball teams in Belleville and Point Anne prior to enlistment and was rated as one of the best diamond performers in these parts for a number of years.

His sports ability stood him in good stead and he was selected to play on teams overseas that made proud names for themselves in sports annals of the Canadian Army.

Last winter he was chosen a member of the championship hockey team of the 2nd Canadian Division and performed in the huge sports arena in Amsterdam in a titular game that attracted high ranking officers of the Canadian and British armies.

At present he is on thirty days' leave and expects to be back on "Civvy Street" at the expiration of his furlough.

Presto Music Club Concert Much Enjoyed

That "music hath charms" was ably proved by the Presto Music Club in a concert presented Monday night under the auspices of the Holloway St. Y.P.U. Assisted by Jessie B. Tuite, elocutionist, the members of the club sang and played their way into the hearts of their listeners with skill and ease. S. Alec Gordon and William Connor opened the program with a spirited rendition of Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsodie No. 2 on the piano, followed by two beautiful solos by Anne Davidson. Leona Riggs, Doris Burgoyne, and Evelyn Bird sang two numbers, the first a gentle lullaby, "The Virgin Slumber Song" and the second a sprightly little tune, "Marie Antoinette's Song." Vocal solos by Helen Cook and Phyllis Barclay were greatly enjoyed. The former sang, "O Dry Those Tears" and "A Birthday" and the latter, "Fires" and "Coming Home." Jessie B. Tuite presented a one act play entitled "The Flower Shop" in which she took the parts of many different characters with a great deal of skill. Tears and humor were cleverly blended together by the single medium of the artist's voice. Dr. Locke played two violin solos, "Romance From 2nd Concerto" and "Chanson" by Friml.

The second part of the concert consisted of a cantata "Bethlehem," directed by S. Alec Gordon. The Christmas story was beautifully told by song and story with Jessie B. Tuite as narrator and the Presto Ladies' Chorus singing carols. Soloists were Doris Burgoyne, Evelyn Bird and Myrtle Houston. The high point of the presentation was reached with a piano and organ arrangement of Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus" by Elizabeth Hubbs and William Connor.

Grain Freighter Last to Clear

Port Arthur, Dec. 11—(CP)—Marine men predicted last night that the grain freighter Capt. C. D. Secord, which several times has won the silk hat for opening navigation at the lakehead, would be the last vessel to clear the head of the lakes this year.

The Secord was due in late last night for a cargo of grain. Only boat loading grain yesterday was the Renvoyle, as all vessels not wintering here had left for the east.

As colder weather struck northwestern Ontario, close of 1945 shipping season here appeared certain within the next two days. Navigation insurance rates terminate Dec. 12.

Capt. F. J. Dyer, harbormaster and port warden, said that, weather permitting, the tugs "James Whalen" and "Strathmore" will set out Wednesday to pick up lighthouse keepers in western Lake Superior.

Congregational Meeting Held

West Huntingdon — The annual congregational meeting of Fuller United Church was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Brough on Tuesday evening. After all present had partaken of a delicious supper at which Mrs. Robert Gay acted as hostess Mr. Kenneth Stewart conducted a fine inspiring service and the general business of the congregation was undertaken. Mr. Arthur Brough was appointed to assist Mr. Stewart in the Sunday School service. Mr. Sylvanus Mitts and Mr. Herb Burke were added to the property committee. Mr. Ben Brough was appointed to the Church session. The W. A. will present an Honor Roll and a Union Jack to the Church. Regret was expressed at the removal of two of the church officials, Mr. John Geen, who now resides in Thomasburgh and Mr. Clayton Rutter now employed in Toronto.

Annual Meeting of L.O.L. No. 300

Members of Loyal Orange Lodge No. 300 held their annual meeting on Monday evening with a large attendance of members present. A pleasing feature of the evening's program was an address on "Orangism" by Mr. Kenneth Stewart.

Past Master Philip Carr conducted the election and installation of officers for 1946:—

W.M.—Harold Wright; Deputy M.—Elwin Carr; Chaplain—Kenneth Stewart; Rec. Secy. — Alex McCurdy; Finance Secy.—Lindsay Sills; Treasurer—David Fargey; Marshal — James Mitts; 1st Lecturer—Arthur Hassall; 2nd Lecturer—William Emerson; Tyler—John Moorcroft.

In the business period Mr. Kenneth Stewart was made an honorary member; at the close a fine lunch was enjoyed.

Marmora

Marmora, Dec. 10 (Special) — Despite the fact that there was a matinee for children in the afternoon, Marmora Town Hall was well packed on Friday evening for the annual commencement exercises of Marmora high school.

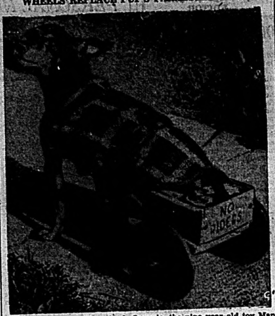
After a welcome extended to the gathering by principal Wesley Hamilton B.A., H. W. Sabine as chairman of the evening dealt with the general progress of the school and outlined the possibilities created by the better government grants. The Boys' Glee Club which with the Girls' Glee Club is under the tuition of Miss P. Wright, B.A., of the staff sang "Old Black Joe" and "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot." A gymnastic display by a group of boys was followed by "Glow Worm" and an encore number rendered by the Girls' Glee Club.

Presentation of certificates and athletic crests followed. Intermediate certificates went to Sydney Brooks, Arthur Brownson, Marjorie Brownlie, Lucille Green, Robert Nayler, Leo Forestell, Joyce Potts, Virginia Robertson, James Walker, Blanche Young, Teresa Doyle, Donald McNutt, Mary Meljregor and Edna Nicholson.

Graduation diplomas were received by William Ethler, Thomas Hulsmans, Fred Hulsmans, Earl Cousins, Betty Grant, Anne Reid, and Annie Dostanko. Two students awarded honor graduation diplomas were Jane McNally and Lawrence Meljregor. Mrs. John Reynolds at this juncture presented the I.O.D.E. scholarship to Thomas Hulsmans. Athletic crests were presented to the following, Junior boys, Wayne Brown, Ronald Smith, Don Shannon. Junior girls, Helen Lummiss, Joan Nash. Senior boys, Robert Brooks, Ray Black, Earl Cousins. Senior girls, Mary Meljregor, Jacqueline Leal. A cornet duet by Anne Reid and Jack Cadigan was next on the program.

The three act comedy "You Said It" was then well put on by the following cast, Audrey Lummiss, Paula Nicholson, Verna Black, Jack Cadigan, Dianne Quinn, Leo Forestell, Joyce Potts, Lois Grant, Ray Black, Shirley Quinn, Bill Koski and Anne Reid. During the first intermission the Boys' Glee Club sang "La Cucaracha" and during the second intermission the Girls' Glee Club sang "Beautiful Ohio." The program ended with the National Anthem.

WHEELS REPLACE PUP'S PARALYZED LEGS



Half-a-leg and half-a-wheel, Queenie, the nine-year-old toy Manchester terrier shown here, gets around very nicely, thanks. Her owner, Miss Rose Andree, of Baltimore, Md., loved her pet so much she wouldn't let her be destroyed when her back legs were paralyzed. She evolved this cigar-box and toy-wagon-wheel canine crutch for her little pet. And Queenie gets around.

Belleville Will Share in Program Of Construction by Bell Telephone In Two Years Says G.W. Proctor

Belleville will share in the $50,000,000 gross construction program being undertaken by the Bell Telephone Company of Canada during the next two years, G. W. Proctor, telephone manager here, announced today.

Extension of facilities in Belleville will provide for several hundred additional telephones during this period, Mr. Proctor said. A good part of the work involves the erection of additional cable facilities from the exchange building to new and growing residential areas throughout the city.

Telephone Applications on File

At the present time, the Belleville office has on file over 330 applications for service which have had to be deferred.

For various reasons, a good proportion of these may not want service when it becomes available. To date, these cancellations have amounted to 40 per cent of all applications reviewed.

The remainder can be given service as facilities are released through existing subscribers moving away or giving up their lines for some other reason, and through small extensions to lines and equipment made by advance planning this year.

The Outlook

Since orders are being filled strictly on the basis of proper turn, those who have applied only recently may not receive service for more than a year.

By early 1946, it is expected that service can be provided to all those whose applications were deferred because of the lack of equipment, and by the end of 1946 to those deferred because of a shortage of cable facilities from their neighborhood to the exchange building.

Ordinarily, it takes up to 18 months to engineer, manufacture, and install new exchange equipment. Because of foresight and planning, small quantities of this equipment are being made available in Belleville this year, but the need for reconverting manufacturing plants and retraining employees returning from war service will restrict quantity production until 1947.

GORE

Farm Forum Holds Meeting

Gore—(Special)—Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Green opened their home on Monday evening to entertain the members of Centre and Victoria Farm Forum with thirty being present.

All listened to the weekly broadcast on radio which was followed by group discussion. Mr. Arza Pulver, Secretary for 1945-46 was chairman for the evening.

Euchre was enjoyed for part of the evening with five tables playing.

The hostes served delicious refreshments assisted by some of the ladies. Following a social time, all departed for home thanking Mr. and Mrs. Green for the very delightful evening.

Sunday School and Church were postponed on Sunday owing to the clocked condition of roads following the recent blizzard the latter part of last week.

A number of the members of the Women's Missionary Society met at the home of Mrs. Douglas Redner on Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. D.K. Spencer, leader of the Baby Band was present as well as a number of the little folk.

Mrs. Melvin Pulver called on Mrs. W. Fox and Mrs. Julia Fox Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Fox, Mrs. Jennie Fox, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Green and family were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Black of Belleville, it being an occasion of a birthday dinner in honor of Mrs. Jennie Fox and son Mr. Ray Fox whose birthday fell on the same day.

The pot luck supper and church meeting which was to be held at Centre Hall on Thursday evening was postponed until Wednesday, Dec. 12 owing to the dangerous condition of roads after the heavy sleet storm.

Madoc Junction

Madoc Junction—Mr. and Mrs. Warren Harlow and Miss June White were guests at Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Thompson's at Bethel recently.

Pte. Dale Young of the East Coast spent a few days with his friend Pte. Harold Stapley.

Friends were sorry to learn that C.S.M. James G. Stapley had the misfortune to break his left leg on Saturday.

Miss Marion Gallwan was able to return home from Belleville hospital on Sunday.

A number from here attended Stirling high school commencement on Tuesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold West, of Stirling, were guests at Mr. and Mrs. Forde Stapley's for Sunday dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Reid of Ivanhoe, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Milton Reid.

The sympathy of friends here is extended to Mrs. Roy Welbourn and family in their recent bereavement. Roy spent many years in this community before his marriage. Several from here attended the funeral which was held on Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Wannamaker of Campbellford were recent guests at Mr. and Mrs. N. Wannamaker's.

TINY FROG

A quarter-inch frog, the smallest in the world, is found in Cuba, which also boasts the world's smallest bird.

HAS ATOMIC CAR

Dr. John Wilson, of Harrow, Eng., holds a small heavy metal cylinder with a valve at both ends, which he calls the "atomic power generator." Dr. Wilson claims to have invented the "atomic car" which can be driven at three times normal speed with the use of the generator. The inventor failed to produce his car at a promised demonstration recently, when the British Minister of Fuel was to have a ride with him. Wilson claimed his car had been "sabotaged, taken 500 yards and vital parts damaged." He hopes to make his car ready again within a month.

West Huntingdon

West Huntingdon — Rev. A.M. Laverty of Stirling was the guest preacher at services in West Huntingdon and Moira United Churches on Sunday where he administered the Sacraments of infant baptism and the Lord's Supper.

Mr. Philip Carr attended the Belleville Presbytery meeting in Napanee on Thursday.

Mrs. Floyd Shefield, Jean and Margaret of Zion's were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Foster Wilson.

Mr. Kenneth Stewart was a supper guest of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Stapley and Grant of Stirling.

A number of citizens here have visited the wood lot and cut their year's supply of wood. Remembering the experience of last year when the deep snow prevented much work being done has caused the early rush this year.

Reeve Elmer Post is attending county council meetings this week in Belleville.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Sine on arrival of a fine baby girl on Dec. 4 at Belleville General Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Gavin Scott and Mrs. Ethel Danford of Belleville, Mr. and Mrs. Adam Brummell and Dina of Massassaga were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Carr.

Mr. Kenneth Stewart spent Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. James Elliott of Moira.

Wednesday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fargey were Mr. and Mrs. Foster Wilson, Sarah and Arthur Wilson.

Bonarlaw

Bonarlaw, Ont.—A progressive euchre party was held in St. Mark's Parish Hall on Wednesday evening last sponsored by the Young People's Society. The prize winners were Mrs. Harper Knox and Bob Anderson. The proceedings were in charge of Y.P.S. President Ronald Brown assisted by the secretary Nelson Wilder and W. J Barlow. A lunch was served after the game.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas (CP)—Cpl. William (Curly) Hayes of Lynn Valley, B.C., wants to know how he rates as a candidate for "Believe it or Not."

At the R.C.A.F. Repatriation Depot at Torquay, England, Hayes, an aero engine mechanic, told how he worked for three months with a broken neck and did not know it.

While in Burma with the "Canucks Unlimited" squadron Hayes found he couldn't hold up his head for long periods and his arm kept "twitching and shaking." He thought he must have sprained his neck while swimming.

Finally they sent him to Calcutta for an X-ray examination. The doctors gasped, told Hayes his neck was broken, and kept him in hospital 17 weeks.

For 30 hours WO. Clarence (Red) Fisher of Aurora, Ont., paddled around in the Indian Ocean and beat off sharks after his Liberator bomber had ditched.

On the last mission of a tour of operations from Ceylon, Fisher's aircraft was crippled over Singapore. Four men were killed and Fisher was wounded in the leg and shoulder.

The 4 remaining airmen swam in the sea in their "Mae Wests" and clung to the sides of the single dinghy.

"The water was quite warm," Fisher said at R.C.A.F. Repatriation Depot, Torquay, "but our big trouble was in beating off the sharks. It's a miracle we were not bitten." The boys were finally picked up by a British destroyer.

Probably the only R. C. A. F. padre to get into a fight with a German plane, Sqdn. Ldr. A. I. Higgins of Halifax has returned to Canada.

While serving with a Canadian fighter squadron near London the Padre went up for a ride on an instrument calibration flight. They sighted a German fighter and chased it half way across the English Cannel before it escaped.

Before joining the air force Sqdn. Ldr. Higgins was minister of Wesley Memorial Church. Moncton, N.B. He is to be pastor of McKay United Church, Ottawa.

One air force type who was very happy to be around the crowded R.C.A.F. Repat Depot in England was LAC Harold Baldwin of South London, Ont. In 3½ years overseas, most of it with a South Rhodesian squadron, Baldwin never worked with more than 10 Canadians in his radar section.

"Those Rhodesians are a lot like ourselves," he said.

"They used to beef about the R.A.F. fellows on the squadron, just the same as Canadians do. They beefed about us, too, and we all get along quite well.

Baldwin will take back to his farm at South London a girl from Leeds, England, whom he married a short time ago.

2nd Thurlow

2nd Thurlow—Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Kierl, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Mitchell and girls were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. Gray, Massassaga.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Leeming and boys, Mr. and Mrs. E. Leeming and Donald Jackson were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Tucker, Sidney.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Greatrix, Mrs. Snider and Mrs. F. Buskard, Shannonville, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Treverton, 6th Thurlow.

Mrs. Douglas Atkins was a delegate to the Progressive Conservative Convention held in the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, on Dec. 3rd.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hall spent the tea hour and evening on Tuesday night with Mr. and Mrs. W. Toms, Front Road.

Miss Margaret Donaldson, Hillier, spent the weekend at her home here.

Mr. Dave Johnston, Belleville, had dinner on Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. D. Atkins.

Friends and neighbors of Gnr. Reg Terry and Cpl. J. Howe are pleased to welcome them home, the former having served 6 years overseas, the latter serving about 2 years overseas. They sailed on the Queen Elizabeth and arrived in Belleville on Saturday night when their families met them at the station.

Miss Lorena Haight spent a couple of days with Mrs. F. Parrott, Front Road.

Messrs. Fred Mitchell and Douglas Atkins accompanied Mr. R. H. Macklem to a school area meeting held in No. 16 Thurlow on Thursday night.

Mrs. H. Thomson and baby Jane, Belleville, spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Donaldson.

Miss Lorena Haight attended the commencement exercises at Stirling High School and called on her aunt and uncle Mr. and Mrs. R. Chambers on Tuesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Atkins and Harry had dinner on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Russell Boldrick, Belleville.

Coventry

Coventry, famous Old Country city, which drew the assault of Hitler's airmen who wrecked the centre of the city and destroyed the lives of many civilians, is to rise a greater city than before. So with all Hitler's plans which were cast into the rubble heap by the Allied triumphs on the field.

Coventry suffered in her buildings and her population suffered. But a new Coventry is to spring up.

The human spirit cannot be downed by the enmity and savagery of Hitlers. When Hitlers have gone, such a city as suffered from his barbarism, aspires to a greater future in the England that was saved from Nazi aggression and moves on to a greater future of influence and prestige among British cities. The evil heart of Hitler is cursed, the spirit of freedom of Coventry continues to exert its influence for Coventry was on the side of the angels.

A Fitting Birthday Cake

Former Prime Minister Churchill was presented on his 71st birthday with a birthday cake in the form of the British Isles and bearing the inscription, "This Blessed Plot, This Earth, This Realm, This England," fitting for the man who led the nation and the world to destroy the Nazi menace and to save Britain, the foundation of liberty. Just as in the sixteenth century Britain had her Shakespeare to express this spirit of patriotism and liberty, so in the twentieth century she had her leader Churchill to lead the free nations. No words were more natural in the mouth of the poet and more apt in the tribute to Winston Churchill, "This Blessed Plot, This Earth, This Realm, This England." This was a gift that the great Churchill could appreciate.

His devotion to freedom has brought him this honor. How different that with which sadist warlike Germany paid off Hitler, Himmler and Goebbels! ruin and suicide at the end of the road for them.

Thinking of Home and Christmas

Those 12,000 Canadians, being borne across the broad Atlantic which for years divided them from home and then being borne onward by train through the friendly United States to their homes in Canada at the weekend, had one thought in their minds, home and Christmas associated with the cold and snow without and the warmth of family life and hospitality within the walls of home. And they sang "White Christmas." That's all the boys and girls sang all the way over from Southhampton, England, press officers said. The music of the song carried their thoughts to the waiting firesides in the northern clime in the New World.

That mood of love and affection and devotion to native land is what Canada and home inspired in the hearts of the men and women of the services abroad. That is what helped them through the years of separation. It is natural that they should break into song and that a song should express their swelling emotions as they dreamed of home.

That land is blessed that can so impress itself upon its sons and daughters and this season is hallowed which joins its rich emotions with the spirit of the returning patriots. They love their country, its seasons, its festivals and its home life. Those returning men and women had with them abroad that same thought of home which like an anchor held them true to their ideals and to the spirit of victory.

How true are the words of Bayard Taylor:

> "The bravest are the tenderest,—
> The loving are the daring."

Condemned Naz's Lose Appeals

Those who had no mercy on the unfortunates who came into their hands at Belsen camp cannot escape their retribution, eleven are to be hanged and nineteen others have been sentenced to varying terms of imprisonment. Under Nazism they committed deeds that shocked the world. But evil in the form of Hitler and his gang and their henchmen and henchwomen could not go on forever. The spirit of the world of humanity smashed Hitlerism and Nazism and those who killed and tortured innocent prisoners came to the end of their ways.

Then offenders against the laws of humanity and of Heaven were brought face to face with the reality of justice in the world which the Hitlers thought trusted only in force and brutality. These offenders faced grim reality — they were to face trial and if found guilty to undergo the penalty for their crimes. The Belsen camp horrors brought thirty to trial. Of these, Kramer, called "the beast of Belsen," blonde Irma Grese, 22-year-old, and nine others were condemned by a British military court to die. Eight of the condemned appealed. The appeals have been turned odwn. Two women and Hoeszler did not appeal.

The eleven now face the inevitable — they must pay with their lives on the gallows for their crimes against human beings. These Nazis are unfit to live and being so judged must die.

Human Interest in Army Statistics

(Woodstock Sentinel Review)

The Ministry of National Defence issued a staggering list of statistics about the Canadian army. In cold type, they look impressive but stern and factual. Through them, however, breathes deeply the breath of human interest, with significant social implications.

It is important to know that enlistments in the army totalled 705,000 and that the greatest strength in the European theatre was 280,000. But here are some figures which show the tenacity which made the Canadian army overseas a model for fighting men everywhere: Soldiers twice reported as casualties — 6,071; soldiers reported three times as casualties — 492; reported as casualties four times — 27; and there were two who were reported as casualties on five separate occasions. These few figures show the toughness of the Canadian soldier — his "stick-to-itiveness." Perhaps they also suggest that men kept in the country should have been sent over earlier as reinforcements. At one time there were 265,000 soldiers in Canada.

Socially, there is considerable interest in the fact that 32,000 Canadian soldiers were married overseas. Most of the brides were English and Scottish. Who, at this point, does not think of political relations between Canada and the Old Country? The report also says that there are 16,500 children from these marriages. These children cannot bring back the dead but they remind of the 22,553 Canadian soldiers who are listed as dead.

Wounded soldiers numbered 51,435. Many of these must be cared for, for a long time. They will be among those to benefit from the success of the Ninth Victory Loan.

One of Six Colenso V.C.'s

(Montreal Herald)

Death a few days ago of G. E. Nurse in England recalls the saving of the guns at Colenso in the South African War. Mr. Nurse, who was a corporal at the time, was one of six minners of the Victoria Cross for saving the guns.

The other five V.C. winners were: Captain W. N. Congreve, later General Sir Walter Congreve, V.C., K.C.B., M.V.O.; Lieutenant the Honorable Frederick H. S. Roberts, son of Field-Marshal Earl Roberts, V.C., who was mortally wounded; Captain H. L. Reed; Captain H. N. Schofield; and Major W. Babtie, Royal Army Medical Corps.

At the Battle of Colenso on December 15, 1899, the guns of the 14th and 66th Batteries were left unattended when their crews were all either killed or wounded by infantry fire at close range. A party of volunteers rode 500 yards across fire-swept ground, got the guns and brought them to safety.

The Colenso guns were one of the thrilling stories that used to be told in the schoolrooms some 40 years ago.

BOASTFUL GRANDPA

My grandpa says that he could grow
A set of whiskers white as snow
And do, if need for him there wuz,
'Bout everything that Santa does.

My grandpa, who is very proud,
Insists his laugh is just as loud
As Santa's an' his stummick shakes
Just like the jelly grandma makes.

My grandpa, as his nose he blows,
Says he knows all that Santa knows,
And are the children being good,
And do they eat the things they should?

But when we ask him how it's done,
How Santa knows us every one,
And what we want, he says: "Well! Well!
I promised Santa not to tell."

Australian Letter

By J. E. HOLDSWORTH
Canadian Press Correspondent

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 11 (CP Cable)—Australians during the last month began to feel the pangs of war's hangover. They found that the end of the war still meant hardships, rationing, high taxes and long working hours. They found, too, that the hangover involved an increase in crime and a decrease in industrial stability.

Many had thought that the end of the war would mean a new era of prosperity. When few signs of prosperity and more signs of continued hardship appeared, some took exception to it in violent form.

Crimes of violence rose to record heights throughout the commonwealth. In Sydney, Australia's biggest city with a population of 1,250,000, nearly 40 violent crimes were reported during November.

Sydney police said they were short-staffed and called for 1,000 men to join the force. The New South Wales Justice Department said it was considering stiffer legal penalties for violent crimes and for carrying of arms.

Industrially the scene also was uneasy. Every state and every capital city saw instances of what some newspapers termed "industrial lawlessness." In Sydney, Brisbane and Adelaide workers had to walk or hitch-hike their way to work because of periodic strikes affecting bus and street car services. In New South Wales there were strikes of metal-workers, coal miners and printers, tieing up not only their own industries but associated industries in other states.

When Canadians first come to Australia, they are always surprised by the extent of gambling here, both on race horses and on racing greyhounds. They are even more astonished by the big lotteries run by the state governments in four of Australia's six states.

Taxation of both the lotteries and the bookmakers, who are state-licensed, brings in large sums of money. A report for New South Wales, the largest Australian state where 2,750,000 of Australia's total population of 7,000,000 live, shows that state revenue from racing and state lotteries brought in the record sum of £621,000 ($2,763,450) for the year ending last June.

ONTARIO JUDGE DIES

Hon. Hugh Thomas Kelly, 87, who presided at more than 40 murder trials in Ontario before his retirement in 1937, after 26 years on the Supreme Court bench, has died at his Toronto home. On one occasion he declared: "I consider the automobile, while a great benefit in many ways, the greatest curse in the country." A native of Simcoe County, he was called to the bar in 1886, and was active in law, educational and Roman Catholic church work.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Offers Services Free

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

Belleville Hospital and Belleville Home for the Aged are institutions owned by the Women's Christian Association of Belleville incorporated by the Legislature of Ontario, and represent an expenditure upon real and personal property including equipment, during the last 60 years, of about one million dollars. They provide about one thousand meals a day and employ a large number of persons, have rendered treatment and care to thousands of persons, and have trained hundreds of nurses. Before many years both institutions will have to be enlarged. To help defray the cost of enlarging, I will prepare Wills free of charge for all persons who make provision in their Wills for a bequest to the Women's Christian Association of Belleville, for the benefit of the above institutions.

The hospital furnishes a lot of personal service, as well as bed and board and night and day nursing attention and the price is less than the price charged at a hotel, where nothing but bed and board are furnished.

Extract From "Forsythe's History of Lawyers"

From the very earliest times in every country where advocacy has been known it has been the custom to look upon the exertions of an advocate as given gratuitiously and the reward which the client bestows as purely honorary and in discharge not of a legal obligation but of a mere debt of gratitude. In England the rule has always been that which is here laid down by Sir John Davy's: A Barrister has no legal right to a fee and he cannot sue for it in a court of law.

The Lawyer's Union is the only union the members of which are permitted to render their services free.

Mackenzie's Column

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

London, Dec. 11 (AP)— Ever since the fateful Munich conference in 1936 this column has repeatedly insisted that Hitler deliberately set about to destroy Christianity in the Fatherland, substituting the pagan creed under which he himself was a messiah. He realized that no Christian would support his plot of murder and enslavement in Europe.

Concrete evidence that this was indeed the Nazi anti-Christ's program has now been placed in my hands here in London in the form of an amazing secret report recently discovered in the files of the Reich Security Department in Berlin.

This document, which was for official guidance, analyzed the operations of the Oxford Group under leadership of Dr. Frank Buchman, and warned that it was dangerous to Nazidom as an instrument of Christianity. The official files in Berlin disclosed that directives for the suppression of the Oxford Group in Germany and occupied countries were issued on the strength of this document.

"The Oxford Group," says the document, "as a whole constitutes an attack upon the nationalism of the state, and demands the utmost watchfulness on the part of the state. It preaches revolution against the national state and has quite evidently become its Christian opponent.

Finally, in one brutally blunt line, it discloses the Fuehrer's purpose to smash christianity in Germany: "They (the Oxford Group) encourage their members to place themselves fully beneath the Christian cross, and to oppose the cross of the swastika with the cross of Christ, as the former (the swastika) seeks to destroy the cross of Christ."

The report reveals that the secret police regarded the Oxford Group as a force working "to bring about new political and ideological conditions in the Reich . . . At the very moment we (Nazi officialdom) are making efforts to suppress Christian conviction of sin, which is regarded as the first step towards the enslavement of the Germans, a movement is emanating from the Anglo-Saxons, who are racially related to us, which regards just this consciousness of sin as a basis for a change in personal and national relationships."

The document stresses the bond between democracy and Christianity, and says that "the Oxford Group supplies the Christian religious argument for world democratic aims." it adds:

"The Group and the democracies supplement each other and render each other's work fruitful. They face the common enemy, that is, all nationalistic concepts of life which democracy opposes and fights because of its political ideology, the Oxford Group opposes because of its primitive Christian arguments. Their common opposition to the modern concept of race and nation has brought them still closer together."

". . . under the slogan of moral rearmament the group has become the pacemaker of Anglo-American diplomacy."

CALCIUM CARBONATE GOOD ANTACID

To neutralize, absorb or counteract excessive acidity in the stomach and relieve pain, burning, "heartburn," "waterbrash", "hunger pain," "empty pain," "gas" or other distress or discomfort due to hyperacidity, the remedy most frequently used is saleratus, otherwise called baking soda or sodium bicarbonate. There is an old saying that "bicarbonate of soda has stopped more pains than morphine," which may be true, but nevertheless the use of it for this purpose day by day is objectionable because in some instances it brings on alkalosis, kidney injury, diminished excretion of nitrogen and even uremia. Such alkalosis is not caused by just occasional use of sodium bicarbonate but may seriously complicate the picture in some cases where sufferers have taken large doses of soda daily.

Magnesium hydroxide (milk of magnesia), magnesium carbonate and light heavy magnesium oxide powder may be ideal for counteracting excessive acid in some circumstances under the physician's instructions, but for habitual use any of these magnesium preparations has two serious objections. First, the by-product of its reaction with acid in purgative. Second, and more important, magnesium, either as an antacid or magnesium sulfate (Epsom salts) used frequently as a purgative, causes calcium shortage in the body and furthermore magnesium actually inhibits or hampers physiological calcium metabolism, and most Americans suffer from calcium deficiency anyway.

Calcium carbonate (prepared chalk) is in my opinion the least objectionable and most satisfactory antacid for everyday use. A few grains of it neutralizes excessive acidity for hours. It has little if any effect on acid-base balance in the blood and hence will not cause alkalosis. And all the calcium one may take in this form is if anything a nutritional advantage. Then if a small quantity of adsorbent magnesium trisilicate is incorporated with the calcium carbonate in discs which are almost tasteless, the adsorbent action of the latter combined with the antacid action of the former gives the most satisfactory preparation for everyday use

In the pamphlet "Yankee Stomach" (for copy send stamped self addressed envelope) you will find suggestions about diet for hyperacidity and the way to prevent malnutrition from following cut and dried diets too strictly. Finally, I am convinced that no harm can come, even if no good is done by the use of this antacid and adsorbent preparation as often as you wish.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Sophomoron

Daughter, aged 17, running around with girls of her own age and older boys who regard it as indicative of sophistication to indulge in all kinds of drinks. (S. W. H.)

Answer—That's what cocktail joints are for, isn't it—to break the youngsters in? Has your daughter broken her pledge to her mother or father, or did you feel that it was not necessary to ask your children to take the pledge? More than ever before the boy or girl today needs such a pledge to enable him or her to hold out against the efforts of such———s to get the young person to take his or her first drink. Once they get the poor sap to have just one little drink, the rest is easy.

There Was a Crooked Salesman

Salesman says stainless steel is healthiest metal for cooking ware, and that a large percentage of appendices removed from people with appendicitis contain particles of glass, enamel, aluminum or steelwool. (J. R. C.)

Answer—The salesman is spoofing. Anyway, when any foreign substance does get into the appendix it is in consequence of disease or trouble there, not as the cause of the disease or trouble.

Croup

Grandson, eight, has periodic attacks of what I suppose is croup but when he was out of school last spring with it they called it asthma. (W. E. R.)

Answer—Who were "they"? From the description I'd say it is more likely asthma. Send stamped self addressed envelope for pamphlet on Asthma. Do not use a clipping. If you would like also a pamphlet on Croup inclose ten cents additional and ask for it in writing. The less people fear 'night air' the rarer "croup" seems to be.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What is meant by the freedom of the seas?

"Freedom of the seas" is merely a popular term without definite meaning in international law.

In a general way, however, it is the converse of "command" or "sovereignty" of the seas, and is applied to the principle that all nations have equal rights on the high seas at all times.

In 1580, when Spain had a stranger navy than England, Queen Elizabeth wrote to the Spanish ambassador: "The use of the sea and air is common to all; neither can a title to the ocean belong to any people or private persons, for as much as neither nature nor public use and custom permit any possession thereof."

In a pamphlet entitled "Mare liberum" (Freedom of the sea), published in 1609, the Dutch jurist and author Hugo Grotius set forth as a principle of international law the doctrine that the ocean is free to all nations.

England had begun to exercise her "sovereignty of the seas" and in 1635 an English scholar named John Selden published and dedicated to King Charles I his "Mare clausum" (Closed sea), a quasi-state paper in which he undertook to refute the doctrine of Grotius.

Complete freedom of the seas would mean that when two nations are at war neutral nations would have the right to carry on unrestricted commerce with either or both of them unless prevented from doing so by a complete and effective blockade of the ports. There would be no contraband of war, all articles of commerce, even weapons and munitions, being exempt from seizure on the high seas by the belligerents.

This principle is at present accepted only in time of peace and nobody has yet seriously proposed to establish complete freedom of the seas in time of war. Nations engaged in war claim the right to curtail the freedom of the seas by paper blockades and by searching vessels on the high seas and seizing vessels that they deem contraband of war. In fact the freedom of the seas in time of war is restricted by numerous treaties and principles of international law.

The second of Woodrow Wilson's "fourteen points" dealt with the freedom of the seas. As stated in President Wilson's address to Congress January 8, 1918, the point was: "Absolute freedom of navigation upon the seas, outside territorial waters, alike in peace and in war, except as the seas may be closed in whole or in part by international action for the enforcement of international covenants."

Survey as Key To Success Of Moscow Talks

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, Dec. 11 (AP)— A special investigation made for State Secretary Byrnes of political conditions in Romania and Bulgaria may hold one of the keys to success of the approaching Big Three foreign ministers meeting in Moscow.

Results of the survey, made by Mark Ethridge, Louisville, Ky., publisher, are due to be released before Mr. Byrnes leaves for the Russian capital Wednesday.

Reports of diplomatic officials indicate Mr. Ethridge's findings make two main points:

1. That democracy and political freedom do not at the moment exist in Russia-dominated Romania and Bulgaria;

2. That there are no insurmountable blocks in the way of a settlement with Russia of the Balkans issue.

This latter point particularly is tied in directly with the plans for the Big Three Moscow gathering. It was Russian disagreement with the United States and Britain over Romania and Bulgaria and how to write peace treaties for them which blasted the London Foreign Ministers Council into failure last September.

If it now proves possible to come to some agreement on how Russia can have "friendly" governments in the Balkans without making them into puppet regimes, a solution will be at hand for one of the most critical issues involving the Big Three Powers.

There is apparently well founded speculation here that the three foreign ministers may move on from Moscow to London to participate in the United Nations launching in January. There, if results are good at Moscow, they may seek to revive the five-power foreign ministers' council to consider such difficult questions as the organization of peace in Asia and the improvement of Allied controls in Germany.

A considerable improvement in the atmosphere of Anglo-American dealings with Russia is hoped for as a result of the announced intention to seek Russia's views on atomic energy control and to solicit Soviet support for the Anglo-American-Canadian plan to turn over the whole problem to a special United Nations Commission.

Amsterdam Leave Centre Godsend To 'Time-Servers'

By WILLIAM BOSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Amsterdam, Dec. 11 (CP) — Scheduled to be among the last Canadian military installations to disband in northwest Europe, the Amsterdam leave centre has been a godsend to "time-servers" awaiting repatriation.

Organized by Lt.-Col. George Weir of Calgary, now home, and at present commanded by Lt.-Col. T. P. Gilday of Montreal, it has catered to hundreds of thousands of Canadian officers and other ranks on short leaves and off-duty passes since its opening last June. Present deadline for its closing down is Jan. 15 but increased shipping allocations may move it forward.

Among those behind the centre are senior supervisors Ralph Walden, Y.M.C.A., London, Ont., and Pat Shea, Knights of Columbus, Pembroke, Ont.

Sports equipment supplied includes bathing suits, softball bats, 16 tennis racquets, balls and presses, magazines and playing cards. There are dances, cinemas, barber shops, canteens, lounges, games rooms, check-rooms and information booths, and in his biggest week Mr. Walden has provided various services for 56,326 men. Top number of men served one way or another in a single day was 8,500, when the centre was functioning at its peak last August.

The "Canada Club" in the Krasnapolsky hotel building is Walden's main concern. Y.M.C.A. hostess Joyce Booth of Toronto is his chief lieutenant with C.W.A.C. Pte. Marie Pilon of Lancaster, Ont., and others, helping her in the club information booth. Club N.C.O. is Sgt. Malcolm McLeod, Sarnia, Ont., who heads Canadian other ranks and regimental police staffing it.

The "Apolo" rink, managed by C.S.M. Don Pecore, South Porcupine, Ont., provided hockey facilities for unit teams in daytime, recreational skating for leave personnel, and their civilian friends in the evening. L. Cpl. Mel Fiske, Niagara Falls, Ont., handles the equipment room.

Another "Walden enterprise" is the swimming pool in the Amsterdam Y.M.C.A. building. Sgt. Joe Villeneuve, Hamilton and Ottawa, is chief instructor.

Find Eczema Cure On Kitchen Shelf

Nanaimo, B. C. CP)—J. Galloway, prominent dog breeder discovered by accident not long ago that ordinary liquid blueing is a cure for eczema.

It all happened when his favorite dog, suffering from the malady and doomed to be shot, changed her fate when she bumped into her mistress in the family laundry and caused a bottle of blueing to crack and spill over her.

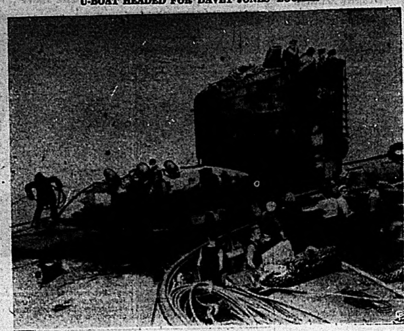
A week later tufts of hair grew where the liquid had discolored the inflamed skin. It was then Mr. Galloway began applying the blueing daily until the animal's coat was restored.

Other dogs here are taking the cure and making fine progress. The ones with eczema like the blueing because it stops itching and burning.

MARRIAGE ANNULLED

Montreal, Dec. 11 — (CP) — A marriage performed in Scotland between Jean Montpetit of Montreal, a member of the Royal Canadian Navy, and Helen Cairns, a Scottish girl, was annulled in Superior Court yesterday by Chief Justice W. L. Bond. Both are minors. The action for annulment was taken by Leo Montpetit, father of the husband, who said parental consent was not given to the match.

U-BOAT HEADED FOR DAVEY JONES' LOCKER



No longer a menace to Allied ships, this German U-boat is headed for its last voyage. The German crew is bringing the former underseas raider to a British assembly point, from which it was towed to a point 10 miles northwest of Donegal, where it was destroyed by gunfire and charges. Like a funeral procession, ships of the British and Polish navies are escorting the U-boats to the destruction point where the "Operation Deadlight" is carried out.

MADOC JUNCTION

CSM. J. Stapley Welcomed Home

Madoc Jct.—On Fri. evening a large number of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Stapley to spend a social evening with their son, C.S.M. James G. Stapley, who was home on leave from the Military Hospital, Kingston. C.S.M. J. G. Stapley has served overseas for the last four years and in May of last year had been wounded while serving on the western front in Germany.

Mrs. C. Lansing, Mrs. Harold Chambers, and Mrs. Raymond Chambers of the local Red Cross had arranged the program for the evening.

Mr. Milton Reid filled the duties as chairman over the following program:

Community singing with Mrs. Russell Stapley at the organ, brief address by Mr. Phillip Carr, a reading "Our Queen," by Miss Mary Chambers, duet by Misses Helen and Joan Stapley reading "It Takes a Heap of Living," by Miss Helen McMullen, also a humorous reading by Mrs. Alfred Lake, Miss Hilda Stapley contributed a musical number, reading by Miss Gladys Clarke, a solo by Mrs. Forde Stapley with guitar accompaniment.

Mrs. Warren Harlow was then called on to make a few remarks. She spoke of the service Jim had given to King and country, and how in answer to prayers he had been spared to return home.

Pte. Harold Stapley then made the presentatian of a leather billfold, from the Red Cross, which had been well filled from friends in the community.

James in his usual capable manner thanked his friends for the gift.

Mrs. Milton Reid put on a contest. Refreshments were served and a social time was enjoyed by all.

Marmora

Marmora—Mr. and Mrs. William R. Bonter were called to Toronto on Tuesday owing to the sudden death of Mrs. Bonter's brother, Ralph Vernon Mower, who passed away in St. Michael's Hospital on Tuesday, December 4th. The late Mr. Mower is survived by his wife, two daughters and two sons. The funeral was held on Thursday afternoon from Myers-Elliott Funeral Home, Yonge Street. Interment took place in Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

A miscellaneous shower was held in the Town Hall on Wednesday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Barnum (nee Kathleen Kerr. Music for dancing was furnished by Doug Jones and his Oltimers and Carl McMillen acted as floor manager. The bride and groom were the recipients of many attractive and useful gifts. Refreshments were served.

Reeve J. A. Bell of Marmora and Lake Township and Reeve C. H. Buskard attended County Council sessions in Belleville this week.

West Huntingdon Royal Black Preceptory degree team attended the meeting of Golden Star Preceptory in the Orange Hall, Marmora, on Tuesday evening and conferred degrees on a number of candidates.

Mr. Murtagh MacPherson who has recently returned from overseas with the Cameron Highlanders of Ottawa is visiting Mr. and Mrs. M. O'Connor.

Mr. Charles Gray is in Belleville General Hospital undergoing treatment to his eyes.

Mr. and Mrs. Milford Steenburgh of Peterborough were weekend guests of relatives here.

Misses Susie Benson and Betty Cann and Mr. and Mrs. Ed Clark of Toronto visited Mr. and Mrs. James Woodcock over the week-end.

Homing Pigeon's Urgent Message From Unknown Sender is Mystery

Mindemoya, Ont., Dec. 11 — (CP) — The urgent words—"we are very hungry"—in a message water-soaked and frayed and brought here by a homing pigeon worn by its struggle against the wind and snow created mystery in this northern Ontario town today.

So badly damaged it gave up only a portion of its apparent appeal for aid, the tiny scrap of paper reached H. R. Fraser, principal of Mindemoya public school, when the pigeon bearing it landed among his flock of homing pigeons.

But there was no clue to the sender, to the point of origin or the length of time thepigeon had been in flight after the message was strapped to its leg.

Tw theories appeared possible —the bird might have been set loose with its message by some hunter in the general area of this Manitoulin Island town who had me with misfortune or the pigeon might be absent without leave from the R.C.A.F.

But this bird bore only the band marking CU—4416 16416 and pigeon fanciers said if it ewre A.W.L. from the R.C.A.F. it should have another symbol indicating its station.

Its ownership was traced first to a man named Snowball in Oakville, Ont., and then to Snowball's brother-in-law, Norman Michie of Oshawa, Ont., but Michie said he had disposed of this bird some time ago and that it might be a bird he had sent sent to Canada's east coast for R.C.A.F. service. He could offer no help on its arrival in Mindemoya carrying the message.

The pigeon had little strength left when it landed in this area where strong winds from the east and south have swept for three days, accompanied sometimes by driving rain and sleet squalls.

A hot iron helped dry and flatten out the message to make these words decipherable: "Require your. . . . . pigeon in . . . . dar. . . ." other words could not be made out but in one corner was the urgent note "we are very hungry." It appeared the message had been signed but that part of the paper had been so torn as to be indecipherable.

FULL ECLIPSE OF MOON

Ottawa, Dec. 11 (CP)—All Canada—all North America in fact—will be able to look upon an 80-minutes full eclipse of the moon the night of Dec. 18, government astronomy officials say. The full eclipse will begin at 8:40 p.m. E.S.T. and will end at 10 o'clock. The partial eclipse will begin at 7:37 and end at 11:03.

CHARGED WITH THEFT

Brockville, Dec. 11 (CP)—J. H. Brown, 24, driver for a transport company ,was arrested by provincial police and charged with stealing a quantity of cigarets from an overturned transport near Kingston, last week. Police said Brown was taken to Napanee for hearing on the charge.

PARATROOPER AND HIS 36 POINTS

Richard O'Brien, a former paratrooper, herds his two-months-old triplets in his arms, in Atlanta, Ga., before taking off with the babies and their mother in a plane bound for their home in Dufur, Oregon. The 36 points of triplets were born in Fort Benning Regional Hospital on Oct. 10, two months before the New Guinea jump veteran received his discharge. The young O'Briens took up 27 pounds of space on the airliner, and were the youngest set of triplets ever to fly.

WEDDINGS

TAPSCOTT—FORSTER

A wedding of interest took place recently in London, England, when Leading Wren Kathryn Mary (R.C.N.V.R.), eldest daughter of Mrs. G. J. Forster, and the late Dr. Forster, Belleville, became the bride of Chief Petty Officer Carl H. Tapscott, elder son of Prof. H. B. Tapscott and the late Mrs. Tapscott, of Oriole Road, Toronto.

The groom, before he joined the navy, was a well-known musician and radio artist of Toronto, and both are members of the Royal Canadian Navy show, "Meet the Navy", which has completed a successful tour of the British Isles and the continent.

OTT—McCABE

A pretty double ring ceremony was solemnized at St. Aiden's Presbyterian United Church, New Westminster, B.C., on Dec. 3rd., at four p.m., before an altar banked with white chrysanthemums and ferns, when Rev. J. C. McLean-Bell, Ph.D., B.D.A., D.D., united in marriage Margaret Jean, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert McCabe, 102 Chatham Street, Belleville, Ont., and Clifford George Ott, son of Mrs. J. D. Thomas, 1216 Edinburgh Street, New Westminster, B.C., and the late Mr. Herbert Ott. During the signing of the register Miss Freda Lidster sang "I Love You Truly".

Given in marriage by Mr. J. D. Thomas, the bride entered the church to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March, wearing a street-length dress of Queen's blue triple sheer with matching feather hat and waist-length veil. She wore a pearl necklace and matching earrings and a corsage of American Beauty roses centred with a white orchid. She was attended by the groom's sister, Miss Gertrude Thomas, who wore pink sheer trimmed with gold sequins with matching hat and corsage of shattered pink and white carnations.

The groom was attended by Mr. William A. Hodgson.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold watch and the bride's gift to the groom was a leather travelling case.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the groom's mother, who received wearing gold crepe with a corsage of bronze baby 'mums. The rooms were beautifully decorated with bronze and yellow chrysanthemums. The lace-covered table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake.

For the wedding trip by car to California and Mexico, the bride wore an ensemble of gold wool with a black seal coat. After visiting at the home of the bride's parents for the Christmas season, they will take up residence in Los Angeles, Cal., returning in the summer to their summer home at Waterton Lakes, National Park, Alta.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were present from Washington State, California, Alberta and Victoria, B.C.

LOTT—WAY

Mountain View United Church with its altar arranged with ferns and white and yellow chrysanthemums made the setting for a pretty wedding at Saturday noon, Dec. 8, when Laura Kathleen, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Way, of Hillier, Ontario, became the bride of Edwin Max, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Lott, of Carrying Place, Ontario. Rev. G. A. Adamson, of Ameliasburg, officiating.

Mrs. Ben Anderson, organist of the church, played the wedding music. Mr. Ronald Elmy, of Belleville, Ont., was soloist, singing, "I Love You Truly", and "Because", during the signing of the register.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in her Elizabeth Anne gown of white satin and net with full skirt. Her fingertip veil was arranged in a halo with silver beads. She carried a bouquet of red Bettertime roses and fern.

Miss Edith Boyle was maid of honor, wearing a gown of pale blue satin with shoulder-length veil and bouquet of pink roses and fern.

Miss Eleanor Sprague, niece of the bride, was junior bridesmaid, wearing a gown of dusty pink chiffon with shoulder-length veil and carrying pink roses and fern.

Mr. Elvin Lott, of Carrying Place, Ontario, brother of the groom, was best man. Mr. Donald Jones and Mr. Grant Minaker acted as ushers.

A reception was held at the Hotel Quinte, Belleville, for the wedding party consisting of thirty-five guests, the bride's mother, wearing a dress of blue crepe with black accessories and corsage of pink roses and fern; the groom's mother wearing a dress of gold wool with brown accessories and corsage of pink roses and fern.

For travelling to New York state the bride wore a rose wool dress, black coat and accessories of black, and upon their return will take up residence at Carrying Place, Ont.

The groom's gift to the bride was a strand of pearls, to the maid of honor a glamor pin, to the bridesmaid a gold locket, the best man a pen and pencil set, to the ushers, tie bar and clip sets, the pianist, a cup and saucer and the soloist, money.

Following the ceremony Mrs. P. B. Hamilton on behalf of Mountain View Church and Sunday School, spoke a few words and Miss Yvonne Poste presented the bride with a leather Bible.

Women's Activities

ST. PETER'S Y. W. CLUB

Madoc.— The monthly meeting of the Young Women's Club of St. Peter's Church was held on Dec. 4th at the home of Mrs. K. West.

The President, Mrs. K. Nicol, presided.

Miss L. Connor was in charge of the program, the theme of which was Emblems of Christmas. Brief authoritative accounts, and some legendary, were read of the early introductions of the Christmas Tree for Christian usage, the Holly, the Mistletoe and the Ponsettia.

The President then outlined the year's eventful endeavors and fittingly thanked all members for past co-operation after which the club moved a vote of thanks to her.

The slate of new officers was presented by the convener of the nominating committee, Mrs. W. Hill, who also moved the adoption of same and it was carried.

The new officers are:

Honorary President, Mrs. Wm. MacIntosh

President, Mrs. Norman Whytock

1st Vice President, Mrs. J. W. Symon

2nd Vice President, Mrs. J. A. Watson

Secretary, Miss L. Connor

Press Secretary, Mrs. Mabel Clark

Treasurer, Mrs. E. McCracken

Devotional Convener, Mrs. Eric Larsen.

Final plans for the Sunday School Christmas Tree were made and Mrs. K. Nicol read "Good Intentions" as an enjoyable conclusion. The hostess, assisted by Miss L. Connor, served tea when a social half hour was enjoyed by all.

BRIDGE STREET CHURCH W.M.S.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Bridge Street United Church was held in the ladies' parlors, Friday, Dec. 7, at three p.m., Mrs. Davidson presided. Christmas carols were sung.

Announcement was made of a C.G.I.T. Vesper service to be held at Holloway Street Church.

Miss Lazelle Brown took the chair for the election of officers for the coming year.

Mrs. Houston, chairman of the nominating committee, brought in the slate of officers and moved the adoption of her report.

Miss Brown welcomed Mrs. Davidson to the chair again this coming year and thanked her for her excellent work of last year. Mrs. Davidson thanked the ladies for their help in the past and expressed the hope and conviction that all would start out the New Year with great enthusiasm.

Announcement was made that a meeting of all members of the new executive and group leaders and assistants would be held in the Ladies' parlors.

Mrs. Pearsall, Mrs. Farnsworth and their group took charge of the program for the afternoon, which took the form of a "Candlelight Service". Those taking part in the service, were Mrs. Boite, Mrs. Shanks, Mrs. Gilroy, Mrs. Fisher and Mrs. Foster.

Mrs. Bird sang "Once in Royal David's City", and also a Christmas Carol, "O Little One Holy", which was composed by an African Missionary. Miss Leona Riggs was the accompanist.

Mrs. Bennett gave a reading, "Christmas in Africa". Mrs. Farnsworth also gave a reading "A Gift", and led in prayer.

The list of officers for the coming year are as follows:

CANNIFTON W.M.S.

The Christmas meeting of the Cannifton W.M.S., was held at the home of Mrs. Alex. Maguire. Belleville. The rooms were decorated with a lighted Christmas tree.

PAPA DEVISES WAY TO GET SOME SLEEP

Because he got tired of getting out of bed early every morning at 2 o'clock, A. D. "Bud" Bloom, Los Angeles, 21-year-old ex-marine sergeant, invented the "Baby Feeder-ette," shown in the bassinette with his daughter, Nancy Lee. The gadget, made of aluminum and weighing ten ounces, is suspended from top of frame, free moving and unweighted. It can be placed in any conventional crib, buggy or bassinette, and will not tip, collapse or rust, its inventor claims.

The Worship service was conducted by the President, Mrs. Williams, with Mrs. Empson at the piano and Mrs. Brenton sang, "Silent Night Holy Night!" Mrs. Mills gave a reading on the "Origin of Christmas Customs".

Mrs. Williams spoke on the Crusade for Christ and His Kingdom and said that prayer is the greatest power in the world and least used, but urged all to pray earnestly and attend church regularly.

Mrs. Maguire introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. M. B. Weese of Belleville, who gave a very interesting message on "The Star of Bethlehem". She said among the many symbols associated with the Birth of Christ, none seem more appropriate or beautiful than the Star. The five points of the Star suggest to us first, Love, second, Repentance, third, Charity, fourth, Forgiveness, fifth, Service and how important these are in our lives.

Mrs. Maguire served delicious refreshments assisted by her daughter, Mrs. Howie.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Weese for her inspiring Christmas message, and to the hostess.

BAYSIDE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY

White's District.—The annual meeting of the Bayside Woman's Missionary Society was held at the home of the President, Mrs. Glenn Meyers on Wednesday afternoon, December 5, with a good attendance. It was decided to have a combined Christmas service at Wesley Church on Sunday evening, December 23, with the Bayside W.M.S. taking the service. It was also decided that all members should donate white gifts to be handed in at their respective churches on Sunday, December 9. It was moved that the members of the Bayside Mission Band and The Sunbeam Mission Band also give white gifts at their December meetings. These gifts are to be sent for distribution to Miss Elsie Hunt, Reg.N., who is stationed in Manitoba.

The election of officers followed the regular meeting with the Rev. A. C. McCallum in charge.

The officers for 1946 are:

President—Mrs. Glenn Meyers

1st Vice President— Mrs. George Clapp

2nd Vice President—Mrs. H. Rutter

Secretary—Mrs. Walter Jones

Treasurer and Supply Secretary —Mrs. L. Hunt

Temperance Secretary— Mrs. D. Gunn

Finance Secretary—Mrs. T. Irwin

Mission Band Leaders—Mrs. C. Wilson and Mrs. Leonard Young.

Baby Band Secretary—Mrs. C. Rush.

Mrs. Meyers and Mrs. Rush served refreshments and a social time was enjoyed.

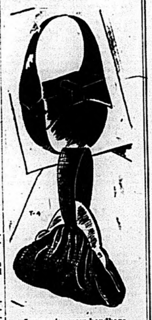
Northport Couple Presented With Gifts

Northport, —Many friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Collier, Northport, on evening of December 7th, to honor Mr. and Mrs. John W. Thompson, (nee Evelyn Collier), with a miscellaneous shower. A very enjoyable time was spent in contests and music, after which the guests were called to order by the Rev. G. Graham, and the bride and groom, were seated in two prettily decorated chairs. An address, read by Evelyn Lindsay, and signed by Betty Barker and Evelyn Lindsay, on behalf of the community friends, paid tribute to the bride for her work in the Sunday School, choir, and social life of the community, and wished the couple every happiness in their new home.

Well filled baskets of lovely and useful gifts were then brought in by Betty Barker and Evelyn Lindsay, which were unwrapped and admired. John and Evelyn each thanked all for the gifts.

A lunch was served by the 'teen age girls of the community after which the guests departed wishing the young couple many years of happiness.

A Bag Of Smartness



Impressive new handbags.

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

HERE ARE two of the more popular bag types as evidenced by store orders and re-orders. First the ubiquitous box bag takes on curves. This one is of shiny black rayon satin with a wing-like flap that is caught by a satin-covered clasp. It has a curved self satin handle. A mirror is on the inside of the flap. Chalk up continued popularity for the bag of reptile skin combined with shell frame and accents. This one is an alligator-lizard in a beautiful shade of butterscotch brown. It has a mock shell frame and a pannier handle.

APPLICATION TURNED DOWN

Smiths Falls, Dec. 11 —(CP)— An application by Ottawa Petch Panthers for inclusion in the Rideau intermediate hockey league was turned down at a league meeting here yesterday. Inability of the Ottawa club to obtain a rink for home games was a factor in the rejection, officials said.

A schedule for the loop, which includes Smiths Falls, Perth, Carleton Place, Westport and Gananoque will be announced later.

Satisfactory Living Standards Depend on Foreign Trade

Underlying Basis is Mutual Advantage

A. E. Arscott, C.B.E., President, The Canadian Bank of Commerce, Says Balanced Export-Import Trade Necessary When Foreign Credit Needs Ended.

Inflationary Dangers Still Great

Private Capital Investments Possibly over $3 Billion in Next Few Years. General Manager, S. M. Wedd, Shows Bank's Strong Position.

At the Annual Meeting of the Shareholders of The Canadian Bank of Commerce, held in the Head Office of the Bank in the City of Toronto December 11th, Mr. Allan E. Arscott, C.B.E., President, and Mr. Stanley M. Wedd, General Manager, presented the Annual Statement of the Bank's operations in the past year, together with a review of Business Conditions. Mr. Arscott's address to the meeting follows:

ALLAN E. ARSCOTT, C.B.E.,
President

BUSINESS CONDITIONS

With the abrupt change this year in an economic system geared over a five-year period to unprecedented war demands and with crop yields relatively lower, due in a large measure to unfavourable weather, our gross national production has declined. According to the Bank's analysis of data from all parts of Canada, industrial production has dropped about one-third during the year owing to termination of most of the war contracts. On the other hand, with preparations for the resumption of full-scale production of civilian goods well advanced in many units it is reasonable to assume that the downward trend is tapering off and an upturn is in prospect.

Looking at the longer term range of the national economy, from information the Bank has been able to gather, possible capital investments during the next four or five years, apart from public works, are conservatively estimated in excess of three billion dollars. These capital investments which cover diversified fields, including home building, farm improvement, manufacturing industry, mining, transportation, utilities, new buildings, furnishings and machinery, will contribute to a high level of employment and a relatively high national income.

The spirit of enterprise is high; business men are ready and anxious to get ahead with post-war trade and production. Money and credit are available for a large investment such as this but obstacles which retard capital from being put to work will have to be removed. A positive step in this direction would be a further substantial modification of the Excess Profits Tax, which would serve to stimulate investment of capital with relative expansion of employment. Also, there are two other vital requirements: stability in labour conditions and relative stability in prices. The speed with which such investment will be made depends, to a large extent, upon how the situation develops in the above respects. We shall need correlation of all factors as well as favourable international conditions, to realize in full the opportunities for our people which could be derived from this program.

SAVINGS AND INFLATION

With heavy taxes, price controls and rationing, and with the public generally co-operating by investing their savings mainly in Victory Bonds, Canada has prevented the substantial rise in prices which would otherwise have occurred. If we are to avoid undoing all the good that has been done we must move carefully and judiciously in adjusting our present position to peacetime. Also I may say in this connection that it is necessary that constructive legislation and regulations by public administration shall continue to have support of the people; otherwise failure may lie in the path we travel to bring this country through the immediate post-war period in a healthy economic condition.

There has been a great deal of discussion on inflation but since it has been materially held in check during the war there is the feeling in some quarters that the threat has been exaggerated and that "it can't happen here". On the contrary, with the large amount of savings accumulated and the shortages that presently exist in supplies, the position as regards inflation is more dangerous than at any time during the war.

Until reconversion to civilian production can get well under way in the next year or eighteen months the public generally cannot expect to spend wisely more than their currently available income. It would, of course, be a satisfaction to everyone to be able to obtain at once all the things they have had to do without during the war period but since the savings which have been set aside with that purpose in mind are not immediately expendable because of short supplies, it augurs well for a long period of increased production and employment.

PRODUCTION, CONSUMPTION AND EMPLOYMENT

To move from a war economy to full peacetime production undoubtedly will cause dislocations. We have been operating to a large degree through necessity in an era of "cost plus". In many instances this has not been conducive to the achievement of competitive efficiency. Our industrial development was sponsored under a set of conditions that in the main disappeared with the close of hostilities. We now move in the direction of internal and external competition and sooner or later it will need to be realized that it is pricing that is important. In the final analysis this in effect means productive efficiency.

Labour has been suggesting two commendable objectives: jobs and sustained employment. In an industrial economy employment is the result of the demand for goods and services; in other words consumption is the necessary complement of production and steady employment suggests continuity of consumption. If it is conceded that the selling price of services enters directly into the costs and on into consumer prices, then it is obvious that the volume of consumer purchases in the main will be affected by what the dollar will buy. This of course will have a governing influence on production and continuous employment.

FOREIGN TRADE

The Canadian economy, to a great degree, has been and will be dependent on export trade. Because of the war all our resources were in demand and the swelling of our exports to unprecedented levels resulted in high domestic prosperity. Now it is our post-war task to seek outlets for our productive capacity so as to maintain a satisfactory standard of living.

MEETING WORLD NEEDS

The discontinuance of lend-lease and mutual aid does not bring us back to where trading by an exchange of exports and imports on balance can be realized in a normal way. It is clear that, in the first few years of reconstruction, world needs will be very great and assistance in one form or another will be necessary until those countries which suffered so greatly can re-establish themselves to the point where they can carry on under their own momentum. At the same time it must be recognized that in helping these countries to rehabilitate themselves there are counter benefits inasmuch as it enables industry in the countries affording such assistance to operate at high production levels and thereby sustain employment. This arrangement, however, if carried on after the economic justification for it has disappeared, would be an unsound device.

As I have indicated, our foreign trade for a while will be largely a one-way affair but the time will come for a restoration of mutual exchange and when this occurs it will doubtless in some cases require readjustments for labour and management. To minimize the effect of such changeover it is appropriate to suggest that an all-out effort should be made now to supply the demands of the importing countries so that Canadian products may become known and established in the world markets. If export outlets are neglected now by directing full attention to meeting domestic demands it may well be that we shall find later on that the requirements of our potential customers abroad have been largely taken care of by other nations.

TAXATION AND FISCAL POLICY

Over the past few years we have moved into an era of "fiscal control."

During the first part of the present century the ideal of a small and balanced budget became modified. Increasingly heavy tax structures became common, partly because of the exigencies of war and partly as a result of a widespread acceptance of expenditures on objects deemed to be of social benefit. In 1939, for example, with an estimated national income of about $4.5 billion, the Dominion budget was in the neighbourhood of half a billion dollars, or slightly over ten per cent. of the national income. However, during the war years the estimated national income has about doubled and even if that level could be maintained a conservative estimate of Dominion Government requirements would seem to be in the neighbourhood of twenty-five per cent. of the national income.

The aggregate of Government tax revenues has increased to the point where it has become a substantial factor in costs, and public disbursements at the same time have become a factor in the level of employment. At such levels taxes can hardly be devised which will not exert an influence upon both the amount and direction of private spending and investment.

It is therefore being advocated in some quarters, that in place of attempting to achieve a rigidly balanced budget on an annual basis, the appropriate policy for governments would be to aim for balance over some longer term than a fiscal year. This viewpoint contemplates that deficits would be incurred in depressed years while surpluses would be budgeted for in years of relative prosperity.

The whole subject is one which demands much thought and study not only by governments but by all business groups, including both labour and management, who are affected by the impact of taxation.

STAFF REHABILITATION

I should not wish to conclude these remarks without particular reference to the rehabilitation of our returning men and women from the armed forces, who have served this country and the cause of freedom so nobly. Each member of the Staff on his return finds awaiting him a position at a salary commensurate with that which he would have received in the course of uninterrupted service and promotion and is afforded every assistance to enable him adequately to readjust himself to banking activities. Each one also receives the Bank's cheque for all bonuses declared to the active members of the Staff during his absence. As well, the Bank made contributions to the Pension Fund for all members of the Fund who served in the armed forces so that when they return they have full credit for the time they were away.

GENERAL MANAGER'S ADDRESS

STANLEY M. WEDD
Vice-President and General Manager

The Bank is in a most favourable condition to take a major part in facilitating Canadian trade and enterprise in this period of post-war reconstruction.

Deposits are highest in our history and the number of our individual customers is at an all-time peak. Unquestionably the citizens of Canada who stood so firmly behind the Dominion's greatest war effort will, with equal determination, apply their large accumulation of financial resources towards the building of a sound peace-time economy. In this effort the Bank will assuredly do its part as the servant of a very substantial section of the Canadian public.

In this connection particularly I wish to express my appreciation of the steadfast support of the staff of the Bank throughout the long and trying years of war.

Government departments alone have in their requirements added an almost unbelievable amount of day-to-day routine to every employee, and as an example of this I would mention that this year the Family Allowance cheques have increased by about 1,300,000 each month the number of Government items which the banking system has to cash for individuals and forward to central points for redemption.

I wish also at this time to refer again with gratitude to these splendid young men and women of our staff who answered the country's call. In all there were 1,695 of them. We are very proud of them and are seeing to it that as they come back they are being reabsorbed into the staff of the Bank to the best advantage possible. Our deepest sympathy is extended to the relatives of those who will not return.

The total assets of the Bank now aggregate $1,284,000,000, an increase of $105,000,000 over those of a year ago. Quick assets total $1,022,000,000 or about 83% of the Bank's liabilities to the public.

Our balance on deposit with the Bank of Canada and our notes of that Bank amount to $125,342,000. This is an increase of $10,277,000 as compared with last year. Notes of and cheques on other banks amount to $36,252,000.

Our holdings of Dominion and Provincial Government securities have reached a total of $713,237,000. Of this amount over 50% matures within two years and includes Certificates of Deposit of the Dominion Government amounting to $278,720,000.

Our Current Loans in Canada show a decrease of $14,321,000. This is substantially more than accounted for by the lessened requirements of the grain trade.

Deposits by the public have again been increased and stand at $1,139,550,000, made up of demand deposits of $512,945,000 and $626,605,000 bearing interest.

The Bank through its many branches is continuing to extend a great variety of worthwhile services and every consideration is given to the requirements of borrowers and depositors alike.

In the past year earnings have been satisfactory and, as will be noticed from the Directors' Report, are some $355,000 more than last year. The amount carried forward into the Profit and Loss Account is $395,000 which is $148,000 greater than in the previous year.

The number of shareholders has been increased by 254 since the reduction in the par value of Bank shares and now stands at a total of 12,471. We are glad to welcome these new shareholders and also to express our appreciation to all of the shareholders for the many evidences of their continued co-operation in building up the business of the Bank.

Danger of Inflation Greater Than Ever Says President of Bank

A. E. Arscott of Canadian Bank of Commerce Addresses Annual Meeting

Toronto, Dec. 11—The importance of foreign trade in Canadian economy was stressed by A. E. Arscott, O.B.E., in his presidential address to the shareholders at the Annual Meeting of The Canadian Bank of Commerce in Toronto today. He pointed out that both exports and imports had been maintained at a high level, about 50 per cent above the prewar average, despite the contraction in war supplies. The cessation of lend-lease and mutual aid did not, however, mean the restoration of normal trading, in which there was an exchange of exports and imports on balance.

The import requirements of countries which had suffered the worst physical effects of war would be very great during the early reconstruction period, and assistance in one form or another would be necessary until their economy was again functioning. While any assistance thus given would have compensatory benefits in maintaining a high rate of employment, Mr. Arscott considered that such arrangements should not be continued after their economic justification had ceased since it evaded the necessity for taking imports in exchange and was in effect an attempt to export unemployment.

Capital Investment to be Great

In a survey of present economic conditions, Mr. Arscott pointed out that the abrupt change from a productive system which for five years had been devoted primarily to the demands of war, together with relatively poor crop yields attributable largely to unfavorable weather, had resulted in a lowering of the gross national production. While industrial production had dropped a third during the year, following the termination of war contracts, preparations for the resumption of full-scale production of civilian goods were well advanced in many directions and it might reasonably be assumed that the decline was tapering off and that some improvement was in prospect. Information made available to the Bank indicated that capital investment over, say, the next four or five years could be conservatively estimated at more than $3 billion, to be expended in a great diversity of fields including housing and repairs, farm improvements, manufacturing, mining, transportation, public utilities, etc., all of which would contribute to a high level of employment and a relatively high national income.

Should Restrict Spending

The substantial rise in prices which might have occurred during the war years had been prevented by heavy taxes, price controls, rationing and the public's heavy investment in Victory Bonds. The success with which inflation had been held in check had prompted the feeling in certain quarters that the threat had been exaggerated and that "it can't happen here." On the contrary, the coincidence of large accumulated savings and short supplies of goods rendered the danger of inflation greater than ever, and during the time required to enable industry to convert to production of civilian goods in adequate quantities, Canadians should restrict their spending to almost the extent practised during the war.

In discussing Government finance Mr. Arscott pointed out the modification which has occurred during the first part of the present century in the previous ideal conception of a small, balanced budget. The exigencies of war and a new concept involving social benefits had resulted in an increasingly imposing tax structure. Up to the beginning of the second world war the Dominion budget was based on a relatively small part of the national income, in 1939 about 10 per cent.

However, during the war the national income had about doubled, and even if that level could be maintained a conservative estimate of Federal Government requirements would be roughly 25 per cent.

The whole subject of the balancing of budgets was one demanding much study, not only by Governments but by all those, including labor and management, affected by the impact of taxation. In connection with fiscal planning. Mr. Arscott advocated the most careful consideration of the role and timing of public works projects. Apart from essential undertakings, he thought it prudent to defer such expenditure so that in the event of conditions arising which might disturb the course of business there would be a backlog of work to take up the slack.

F.B.I., Mounties Spearhead Fight Against Crime

Miami Beach, Fla., Dec. 10—(CP)—The rising tide of crime "will test the determination and spirit of every police organization in every land," Police Chief D. C. Draper of Toronto said today in a speech prepared for delivery to the 51st annual meeting of the International Association of Chiefs of Police here.

Gen. Draper, in his presidential address to the association, said crime of every description—"particularly major crime"—was an aftermath of the Second Great War.

"On this continent," the retiring association president said, "we are most fortunate in having such organizations as the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Royal Can dian Mounted Police, to spearhead the fight against lawbreakers of every type and description."

"Every and any police organization can count on the guiding counsel and whole-hearted support of these organizations."

Hold-up Men Flee As Police Called

Kingston, Dec. 11—(CP)—Three men who attempted to hold up F. W. Cunningham's general store at nearby Odessa, Ont., Monday fled when Cunningham called to his wife to phone police. One of the men was armed, Cunningham said.

As the trio ran out of the store Cunningham chased them and hurled a can of syrup at the coupe into which the men jumped and made their getaway. He said the syrup can opened and splattered the back of the car.

The storekeeper said the armed man threatened to shoot him cash-drawer in which the store's if he did not open the safe and Saturday's receipts were kept.

WILL ABANDON GALT

London, Ont., Dec. 11—(CP)—Jack Adams, manager of the Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League told a London Free Press reporter in a telephone interview last night the Red Wings may abandon their junior farm club at Galt at the close of the present season in favor of a senior club in the Michigan-Ontario League.

Adams said the Galt club, currently tied for second place in the Ontario Hockey Association's junior "A" group, would remain intact this season.

The Michigan-Ontario League, inactive during the war, will be revived in January with a four-team circuit and hopes to have an eight-team group next season.

CLUBHOUSE DESTROYED

Kirklind Lake, Dec. 11—(CP)—Fire of unknown origin last night totally destroyed premises of the Kirkland Lake Golf Club four miles southwest of here. Loss is estimated at $7,000.

Passenger Says Many Were Lucky To be Alive

Toronto, Dec. 11 (CP)—Harry Fisher, a passenger aboard one of two Canadian National Railways trains in the wreck near Armstrong, Ont., said Monday in an eye-witness account in the Toronto Daily Star that many others "were lucky" to be alive after the accident that claimed two lives and injured 33 persons.

"Everything was a mess," Fisher said. "A wooden car, third from the rear end, was sheared in two right up to its washroom at the front end. When the engine had hit us, it catapulted the car ahead and it sheared into the wooden coach. It had leaped up 30 feet and landed on its side."

Fisher said he was in the rear observation car of the train, stopped in a siding early Saturday when a following eastbound train on the C.N.R.'s main transcontinental line piled into it.

"It's a terrible feeling to lie helpless on a train car floor and watch an engine smash and grind its way toward you," he said.

"All I could think of was: 'My God, will that enginer ever stop.' Then it did. I was safe.

"Eleven people who were in the observation car were very lucky. I recall now that everyone walked or crawled out, comparatively uninjured, with one exception."

Fisher said the crash came at 7:30 a.m. after the first train had been stopped for about an hour at Jacobs, about 10 miles west of Armstrong, where it was taking on water.

"It had been snowing all night. A blinding storm that cut down visibility to just about nothing, and a high wind made matters worse," he said.

"I couldn't see for a moment when I picked myself up from the floor. My face was wet with blood. I tried to blink it out of my eyes. The air was filled with dust and bits of flying wreckage. I must say I was surprised at the way everyone around me took it all. They were calm."

After climbing out a broken window, Fisher said he saw the body of Arthur W. Hall, sleeping car conductor who with Porter O. Mayes was killed.

LET'S SEE THEY HAVE Fun!

Literally hundreds of enthusiastic skiers come from the States every year. Expert or novice, they really can have fun on Ontario's ski trails! And we certainly want to make sure they do!

WHAT CAN I DO?

Well, everybody has his own way of saying welcome. Ontario hotelmen are famous for their hospitality: here is a set of tips suggested by one of them.

1. Find out all about what your neighbourhood offers, and become a booster.
2. Write your friends in the States about Ontario ... show them when they come you're really proud of it.
3. Try to make any visitor glad he came.
4. Take time to give requested information fully and graciously.
5. In business, remember Canada's reputation for courtesy and fairness depends on you.
6. To sum it up, follow the "Golden Rule."

IT'S EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS ... it's good business!

Worth his weight in gold! The Province of Ontario profited to almost the same extent from tourist business as it did from the gold mining industry. It is up to each of us to see that it goes on growing.

We All Share! Yes, everyone benefits from Ontario's tourist business. This diagram shows it clearly. Aside from hospitality, it's good business to make all our visitors from the United States feel at home.

It works both ways! They treat us royally when we visit them ... we can't do less than return the compliment. Remember that it costs money to take a holiday ... so let's see they get a good return for every penny they spend.

"Let's make sure they always come back!"

O.H.A. WILL HAVE 150 TEAMS IN FOUR DIVISIONS

Status of Three Players Decided and Groupings Are Made at Meeting

Toronto, Dec. 11 — (CP) — Status of three players was decided and other matters concerning the 1945-6 season were ruled on at a special executive meeting of the Ontario Hockey Association during the weekend, it was announced today.

The committee ruled that Robert Porter of Paris must remain with Galt Red Wings in the junior "A" division, and that Mickey Roth of New Hamburg must play for the New Hamburg junior "B" club.

Emerson Hicks, a resident of Kitchener who is claimed by both Kitchener and Guelph juniors, must remain with Kitchener unless necessary waivers are obtained from all clubs concerned, it was decided.

The Brantford Industrial League, operating in the intermediate "A" division, was granted permission of their league champion to add four players from the league when it moves into O. H. A. playdowns.

Toronto Staffords of the senior "A" league was given permission to sign a replacement for Alex Davidson, released by Staffords before appearing in any scheduled matches.

The committee said the Toronto Hockey League was advised that terms of affiliation with the O.H.A., as set up by a joint committee, must be accepted or rejected by Jan. 1.

Groupings and conveners in the intermediate "A" and "B" and junior "B" and "C" series were completed at the meeting and were announced last night. Nearly 150 teams will compete in the four divisions.

Intermediate "A" groups are to declare their winners by March 8 and the groups in the other three divisions by March 1.

32 RINKS ENTER SARNIA BONSPIEL

Sarnia, Dec. 11. (CP)—Of 32 rinks in action in the opening day of the three-day Imperial Bonspiel, the most keenly contested game of the first round was between two veteran skips, W. A. Watson of Sarnia, and Martin Lindsay, of Toronto. The local rink nosed out the visitors in the Imperial spiel running 10-8.

Major upset of the day came when W. P. Macdonald skipped his Petrolia rink to a 8-7 win over Peter Gilbert of Chatham. Second upset gave R. Fleming of Forest a 14-11 win over R. (Smokey) Reynolds of Chatham.

Chatham had four rinks entered and all met defeat. Skip McKay was eliminated by P. D. McCallum's London entry and C. Aitken lost to A. Diesbourg's Kitchener foursome.

The first round of the Mueller Trophy event was played with four teams participating, all being knocked out of the Imperial play. W. R. Spero led his Wallaceburg entry to a victory over the Sault Ste. Marie rink piloted by Roy Chisholm. Final score was 12-11.

The Sarnia teams tangled in the second half of the four-game round with H. J. Lockhart's rink trouncing Frank Spiece and the Sault Ste. Marie and Sarnia rink will drop back into Vendome Cup play.

Greatest Golf Of Year Played By Byron Nelson

Miami, Fla., Dec. 11 — (AP) —Freddie Corcoran, Professional Golf Association Tournament manager, has come up with his annual golf "superlatives" — with Byron Nelson performing in the "greatest" match, and Harold (Jug) McSpaden as the year's "unluckiest" golfer.

Nelson played the last four holes in four under par to beat Mike Turnesa, one up, for the P. G.A. championship at Dayton, O., after being two down.

McSpaden has been runner-up in 13 tournaments so far in 1945.

Corcoran said the "lowest nine" for the season was the sizzling 26 shot by Stan Horne of Montreal in practice for the Orlando, Fla., Open.

His other nominations included:

Biggest upset — amateur Fred Haas, Jr., of New Orleans, winning the Memphis Open with 270 against Nelson, Sam Snead and other top pros. It was the first amateur victory in the last nine years of big time competition.

Lowest 18 — Nelson's 62 at Seattle.

Best performance by one of the old guard — Gene Sarazen finishing in a second-place tie with Ben Hogan at 280 in Tam O'Shanter Open.

Widest margin of victory—made by Hogan who finished 14 strokes ahead of Nelson in Portland Open.

Most tournaments won — Nelson, 18.

Most prize money — Nelson, $64,528 in war bond value.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By GEORGE H. CARVER

WHAT PRICE GLORY

The Maple Leaf Gardens program carries a squib about Vern Goyer. It says, "Vern Goyer, big inside wing with the Grey Cup winning Argonauts is a pretty fair hockey player and more than one Toronto junior club sought the 18 year old Belleville lad. His 248 pounds would look mighty impressive in front of any goalie. Goyer, however, decided to return to Belleville where he's playing with the seniors of that city"....

MAYBE

Perhaps this is one of the reasons why the Montreal Canadiens shut out the Toronto Maple Leafs last Saturday night. Bill Moore, one of the Deacon Shirt Company's execs here, who, as is generally not known around these parts, a pal of a lot of big-time players and officials in both baseball and hockey, is a particular friend of Dick Irvin, the Canadien coach.

Bill dropped in to see his friend in Toronto last Saturday morning and Irvin handed him three ducats to the game, one for himself and two for a couple of vets.... In the Canadien dressing room that night previous to the game, one of the boys in humorous vein offered to bet big Bill Durnan, Canadien net minder the sum of twenty-five cents that Gaye Stewart, top goal scorer of the Leafs would score two goals on him in the next two games played between the two teams. One was played on Saturday and the next is to be played Thursday night.

Durnan smiled and good naturedly accepted the bet. He shut out Stewart and the Leafs on Saturday, but there is still a slim chance of the soldier lad winning the bet, on Thursday night.

HOCKEY STUFF

Groupings of the Ontario Hockey Association classes were released today and will be published tomorrow according to an authoritative source. Or that may appear in tonight's metropolitan editions.

Speaking with the district convener yesterday, it was learned that he was of the opinion that the local Redmen will be grouped in "A" with such squads as Peterborough, Oshawa, Kingston and Omemee. That should be a good set-up and washes out the somewhat fuzzy idea of the Reds going in "B" and sitting on their collective fannies with a bye.

As far as the juniors go, The Belleville kids have applied for a "B" grouping and as Peterborough and Kingston have "B" squads there might be the possibility of them being entered with these squads. However in former years, the Limestone City junior mentors wanted no part of the local kids and the boys here aren't too fussy about kowtowing when the shoe is on the other foot.

Otherwise they can enter a district loop of "C" teams and draw a bye into the "B" playdowns providing they win the loop.

• • •

The convener stated that he was in touch with teams from the part of the district who want to renew the old Trent Valley League with the winner drawing a bye into O.H.A. playdowns. But—the O.H.A. will sanction no such thing. The teams might better throw in their entry fee and play as an official grouping. The same goes for the Trenton crowd who want to sponsor a town league with the winner going into the "B" playdowns. The O.H.A. turns thumbs down on such propositions and requests that all teams in this kind of hockey loop affiliate with their organization.

• • •

WHAT, SO SOON?

Peterborough is not letting any baseball grass grow under its feet. At an enthusiastic meeting the other evening the Petes organized for the summer of 1946 and expect to sponsor four-team series in junior, juvenile and bantam. Teams will be drawn from four city zones. They will affiliate with the O. B. A.

Jack Turner, well-known baseball veteran of the Liftlock City was elected prexy succeeding Bill Prest. Russ Kitchen is the second in command, Ray Pammett, secretary, with a treasurer to be named. Vern Dawson, Hugh Campbell will assist with an executive member from each club. Alex Kaye is honorary president. They expect to hold other meetings during the winter.

• • •

That's an idea for some of the local baseball enthusiasts to ponder over. Why not get together some of these cold wintry evenings and lay the ground work for baseball here next summer? The game got off to a fine start last year and prospects look good for a better season in 1946. A little work done now and then would save a lot of valuable time come spring. Think it over, mates.

WISHFU LTHINKING

It has been pointed out to this pillar that Peterborough Curling Club is planning to instal an artificial ice plant next winter. Possibilities are considered quite good and the club expects the work to be completed in the year. And this, apart from the Memorial Centre Artificial Rink to be built next year.

Ho Hum, far away pastures are taking on a new shade of green for local curling enthusiasts. It looks as though the only curling to be done here for many a year will take place in the beauty parlor.

Harry Lumley Leads in Race For Vezina Trophy

Montreal, Dec. 11. (CP)—Harry Lumley, ace goaltender of Detroit Red Wings, is continuing to lead the race among National Hockey League goalies, league statistics show today. Lumley with 28 goals against in 13 games has an average of 2.154, and seems to be heading straight for the Vezina trophy which is awarded annally to the goalkeeper with the lowest goals against record.

Bill Durnan of Montreal Canadiens, who has won the trophy for the last two years, is a close second with 38 goals scored on him in 15 games, an average of 2.533. Durnan leads the league in shutouts, with two to his credit.

Max Bentley of Chicago Hawks continued to lead the individual scoring race, although he collected only one assist during the week. With 15 goals and nine assists for 24 points, he is two ahead of teammate Bill Mosienko who has nine goals and 13 assists. Bentley's 15 goals and Mosienko's 13 assists are tops in those columns.

Toe Blake of Montreal, who hasn't scored since Nov. 24, continued with 16 points—11 goals and five assists—but has slipped from the top spot to a third-place tie with Alex Kaleta of Chicago who has seven goals and nine assists.

Murph Chamberlain and Emile (Butch) Bouchard lead in penalties with 30 minutes each, including one misconduct to Chamberlain. Together Murphy and Emile account for more than half of the penalties taken by the Habitants, 115 minutes, which leads the league in this department.

THE GREATEST MILEAGE TIRE OF ALL TIME
MADE BY B. F. Goodrich

Here is good news for motorists! A new kind of tire has been developed and tests show that it will outwear prewar passenger car tires.

It is made of a new rubber compound developed by B. F. Goodrich—different from the ordinary synthetic rubber used previously.

In more than 2,000 tests, aggregating over 16,800,000 miles over all kinds of roads, this new B. F. Goodrich Silvertown Tire has shown longer treadwear than prewar tires, outstanding resistance to skids and blowouts . . . and a new degree of quietness in tire performance.

In the near future, these new Silvertowns will be produced for shipment to B. F. Goodrich dealers, but supplies may be limited for quite a while.

Meantime, take good care of the tires you have . . . or if you need new ones immediately, ask dealers for the famous B. F. Goodrich Lifesaver Tread Tires now available . . . the tire that will give prewar mileage right from the start.

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Dec. 11 (CP)— There's at least one American who believes Canadians should be able to comprise 20 per cent of major league baseball personnel within the next five or 10 years.

This somewhat startling statement— considering Canadians, with their handful of players in the big time, today comprise about .00001 per cent of American and National League talent — comes from Rev. Harold Martin of Heuvelton, N.Y., President of the Canadian-American League from 1937 to 1941 and operator of minor professional teams. Says Father Martin:

"If more Canadian cities and towns would afford a better opportunity for their citizens to participate in baseball, there's no reason why...the major league personnel shouldn't be made up of at least 20 per cent Canadians in five to 10 years."

Joe (Cornwall Standard-Freeholder) Miller attended a meeting at which Father Martin outlined plans for a new league to include Cornwall, Kingston, Ottawa in Ontario and Granby, Sherbrooke and Drummondville in Quebec. Miller says Cornwall fans would like to see a team and Pappy Smith, said to have backing of Boston Red Sox and St. Louis Cardinals, would like to coach the club as he did in 1940.

But, Miller adds, it all depends on city council whether Cornwall has baseball.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

LESSON NO 862

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Kiva Tyme has been reading in my column that a good player is apt to squeeze an opponent. Now she wonders if she should bring a chaperone when she goes to play bridge.

Maybe she has heard about a deal like this:

NORTH
♥A K 4
♦A 4 3 2
♣10 4

WEST	EAST
♠Q J 9 3	♠7 6 5 4
♥J 6 5	♥7
♦K 10 8	♦9 5
♣Q J 9	♣8 7 6 5 3 2

SOUTH
♠8
♥Q 10 9 8 3 2
♦Q J 7 6
♣A K

The bidding went like this:

SOUTH	NORTH
1 H	2 S
3 H	4 NT
5 H	7 H

The five heart bid by south was in answer to four no-trump. So, it was the convention signal for showing only one ace and one king.

With a king known to be in the hands of opponents, a small slam might have been advisable. But south was a player of ability. And as a mark of respect, north shoved it into a grand slam.

A squeeze helped to take all 13 tricks. And it could have been made at no-trump as easily as at a heart contract against any opening lead. Let me show you how it was done.

West started out with the lead of the club queen. South won this first trick with the king and led five rounds of hearts. On the last two rounds of this suit, dummy sluffed a small spade and diamond.

With no other means of taking all the diamond tricks, the only hope is a squeeze. To prepare for it, declarer must reduce all hands to the fewest possible cards.

So, dummy ran two top spades and south sluffed a diamond. South took his other top club and left himself with three diamonds and a heart. Dummy kept spade ten and the diamond ace with two small.

Forced to protect both spades and diamonds, west clung for dear life to his spade queen and K 10 8 of sparklers. And in that spot, south shot his last heart to squeeze west out of something.

What can west do about it? Run down to the drug store and get it for him.

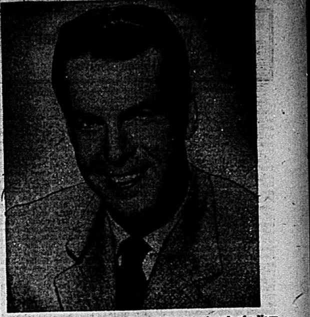
AT THE McCARTHY — Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda are shown above in an idyllic snow scene from Columbia's "You Belong to Me," next at the McCarthy Theatre. The co-stars top a cast which includes Edgar Buchanan, Roger Clark, Ruth Donnelly and Melville Cooper. Companion feature is "49th. Parallel" with Lawrence Olivier.

AT THE BELLE — Alluring gown like this one brings a stream of men to Joan Fontaine's door in "The Affairs of Susan," a gay romantic comedy that co-stars George Brent with Miss Fontaine. Dennis O'Keefe and Don De Fore are featured. "The Affairs of Susan" is worth loads of laughs from beginning to end.



AT THE CAPITOL — Fred MacMurray is cast in the role of a Navy hero in Paramount's "Practically Yours," currently at the Capitol Theatre. He co-stars with lovely Claudette Colbert with a cast including Gil Lamb, Mikhail Rasumny, Robt. Benchley and Cecil Kellaway. On the same program the first run attraction, "Scotland Yard Investigator," starring Sir Aubrey Smith and Eric Von Stroheim.

Belleville Redmen Lose Tough Game to Barriefield Bears 3-2 And Now Repose in Third Place

Locals Carry Play to Winners for Two Frames But Wilt in Third

Before a crowd-packed arena in Kingston Monday night, the Belleville "Redmen" came out on the short end of 3-2 score after a very hard fought tussle with Barriefield "Bears." This leaves the Belleville club resting comfortably in their third slot in the league standing but still within very easy reach of the first two clubs.

It was "strictly" condition that beat the Redmen last night. After carrying the play to the army lads for the first two stanzas, the locals "wilted" in the last canto and as a result the Bears slipped in two "quickies" to put the kibosh on the evening, as far as the Belleville supporters were concerned. With a little more conditioning however, the locals will be the cream of the "Van Horne" series.

The Army lads drew the first blood four minutes after the opening face-off when Durocher slipped the rubber behind Crandall on a pass from Crowe while Moher was watching the proceedings from the penalty bench. The Belleville boys went all out after the equalizer and after many a close one "Leo" Goyer combined with Wardhaugh and "Vern" Goyer to bulge the twine midway through the period to end the scoring for the stanza.

Went Ahead Early.

The "Redmen" forged into the lead after only 25 seconds of play in the second period while Cyr was repenting of his sins, "Leo" Goyer scoring his second tally of the evening with brother "Vern" and Day assisting. At this point, it looked very much as if the locals were going to win in a walk. The "Redmen" were particularly strong in this period when shorthanded. Vern Goyer made two pilgrimages to the penalty bench during the stanza but the locals' defensive play stopped the Bears in their tracks. The period ended with the "Redmen" on the right end of a 2-1 score.

Locals Tired Fast.

The locals tired fast in the third period and after but two minutes of play, Nichols evened the count for the Bears with Wilkinson and Tindale getting the assists. From here in, it was very rugged hockey with both teams skating fast and bumping hard. It looked at times as if the game was going to become a proverbial "Donnybrook."

Then it happened. Clare Williamson was penalized for "something or other" and the "Bears" put on the pressure. What looked like an innocent skirmish behind the goal turned out to be the turning point in the game. During this skirmish, Tindale tried to pass the puck out in front of the cage. This he did but the pass was never completed. It hit Goyer's skate and was deflected into the net for the winning goal.

The locals tried in vain to even the count but the "Bears" put up a sturdy defence and managed to keep the "Redmen" off the score sheet for the remainder of the game.

Locals Outlucked.

It was a tough one to lose but the locals were "outlucked", not "outclassed." For Belleville, Barrett, Al Meagher and of course Leo Goyer with two goals, looked good on the attack while "Vern" Goyer, "Speedy" St. Louis and Clare Williamson played their usual strong game on the defence.

Tindale was easily the pick of the Kingston team, Parsons and Andrewchuck helped carry the mail.

The locals next game will be in Kingston tomorrow night with Vimy supplying the opposition.

The lineups:

Belleville: Goal, Crandall; defence, St. Louis and V. Goyer; centre, LaBonne; wings, Moher and T. Williams; subs A Meagher, Barrett, Day, C. Williamson, Wardhaugh, L. Goyer, B. Meagher.

Barriefield: Goal, Gardiner; defence, Rutchowsky and Parsons; centre, Tindale; wings, Wilkinson and Nichols; subs Crowe, Cyr, Durocher, Abrahams, Rhinehart, Keats, Markle and Andrewchuck.

MARMORA

Franklin Everard Named Manager Of Hockey Team

Marmora, Dec. 11—Marmora Athletic Association came into being on Thursday evening at a meeting in the Council Chamber presided over by William Shannon ex-hockey player and referee. The executive will be President Wesley Hamilton B. A. vice-president, W. M. Regan, secretary treasurer, W. Shannon, assistant secretary treasurer, David Crawford, transportation committee, W. Hamilton, W. Brown and T. Cousins.

Next on the agenda was the election of a hockey team executive, the team to enter the O.H.A. intermediate 'B' grouping.

The following were elected: Manager, Franklin, Everard, coach, William Shannon, Assistant coach, J. W. Naylor, trainer, Costan Paranuik.

Attention was then directed towards a possible reorganization of the old Trent Valley league. Hockey enthusiasts and executives at Campbellford, Madoc, Tweed, Bata, Belleville and Norwood were to be contacted on Friday by the secretary as a result of this, a meeting is being called for on Monday evening in Marmora to go into the whole matter. Hockey for the returned soldiers and sailors is the dominating thought in the minds of the Marmora hockeyists and will be one of the main reasons advocated for the formation of the proposed league.

SIX MINOR LOOPS PROMOTED NOTCH BY BIG LEAGUES

Triple A Classification Will Give Leagues Right to Raise Draft Price

By CHARLES DUNKLEY

Chicago, Dec. 11 — (AP) — Commissioner A. B. Chandler had a paradoxical vote of confidence from his baseball bosses, six minor leagues were promoted a notch and two National League doormats had launched a 1946 rebuilding program as the major leagues moved into the second day of their winter meeting today.

Chandler, rebuffed by the minor leagues at their annual conclave in Columbus last week, was depicted by the majors as a victim of "misunderstanding," but also defined as a commissioner without the dictatorial power of his predecessor, the late Kenesaw Mountain Landis.

The majors approved the amendment to the major-minor agreement adopted by the minors last week which removed from the commissioner authority to rule baseball legislation "detrimental." This was the same rule adopted by the majors a few weeks after Landis' death in November, 1944, and before Chandler became commissioner.

It was not the intent, the majors said after a joint session yesterday, to "take away any of the commissioner's authority to investigate, determine and punish conduct detrimental to baseball." He can still suggest reconsideration by the magnates of legislation he considers "impractical or disadvantageous" to baseball, but the owners can over-ride his veto which they couldn't do to Landis under the old code.

The majors approved the boost of the International League, American Association and Pacific Coast League to "AAA" classification; the Southern Association and Texas League to "AA," and the South Atlantic League to "A". Thus the top minor league clubs have attained their long ambition for higher player draft prices — in the case of the three former class AA, a hike from $7,500 to $10,000 per player.

HAMILTON PATS EARN A SHARE OF SECOND PLACE

Trim Owen Sound Mohawks 7-4 While Young Rangers and Marlboros Win

(By The Canadian Press)

Hamilton Patricias earned a share of second place in the senior O.H.A. standing last night by trimming Owen Sound Mohawks 7-4 on Hamilton ice. After the Pats had gained a two-goal advantage in the first period and held a 3-2 margin going into the third session, Pollock of Mohawks tied the score in 5:30. The visitors faded after that, however, with Hamilton indulging in a four-goal spree.

Grasser of Patricias was top-notch performer with three goals, followed by Barlow with a pair, Gobel and Gluck getting the others. Owen Sound scores were split four ways, the marksmen being Bowen, McCarthy, Pollock and Payne.

In the junior "A" doublet at Toronto, Young Rangers won their first game of the season after eight tries by handing Hamilton Lloyds a 5-3 reverse. In the other half Barrie Fliers, with one goal, led for 25 minutes of scheduled play, then dropped a 6-1 decision to Toronto Marlboros. Barrie and Young Rangers are now tied for the cellar position in the standing.

Harding collected the payoff marker for Marlboros in the second period after Leachman had tied the score. Barrie fell apart and both Sullivan and Fryday ran in a pair of counters for good measure. Wilkes was Barrie's only successful sniper.

Not only are Young Rangers and Barrie tied for last place but they have played the only tie game of the campaign thus far.

The World is Like That

By Kathleen Norris

CHAPTER 12

"Well, she can't marry until she's eighteen," her grandmother said in nervousness and annoyance. "Even then, if she marries without her mother's permission and Phil's permission—the bulk of it all goes to a college library. Her grandfather was devoted to Phil, and I don't suppose he ever suspected that Janet would act the way she has—divorcing Phil and marrying people and running all over the country! She was his only child, and probably he hoped she'd settle down after she married. He died, anyway, before the second divorce. Nice old fellow. He could hardly write his name, but he was goodhearted. However, Norma isn't quite as free as she thinks she is, and for a year or two anyway we can keep a pretty firm hand over her. Phil's never hesitated to let anyone who was interested know that he had the right to say what he thought of her husband, and it makes a considerable difference with these counts and earls. I hope she'll marry a good American, but she won't. Not with the example Janet sets her. That was all, Miss Britton, except that I'd like to have you keep pretty close to her."

Jocelyn went upstairs across the hall to Norma's suite. She had seen the beautiful old-fashioned rooms before; weeks earlier an army of decorators had come down from the city to make everything ready for the daughter of the house, and Jocelyn had thought even the Victorian stateliness and the outdated shape of the apartment had made it all the more attractive.

It consisted of three big rooms with a large dressing room, a bath, an enormous square bathroom that had evidently once been a small bedroom, and a bath and bedroom for the maid.

Confusion reigned everywhere as Jocelyn came in, and Norma reigned over the confusion. Trunks were standing about, and out of them had come spilling enough glory to dazzle any woman alive, as it did Jocelyn, who had never seen or dreamed of such a display before. Frocks of striped linen; frocks of stiff checked taffeta; transparent batiste frocks finished with cunning scalloping of dark blue; evening frocks as frail as tissue and colored like rainbows. Hats broad-trimmed; tiny hats like birds with wings poised for flight; hats made all of velvety French flowers; hats as demure as Quaker calashes with veils and ribbon strings. Gauze stockings in all colors; shining little shoes of every shade and every material from alligator skin to pearls; underwear carelessly heaped and piled in frothy, lacy, fragrant, beribboned whiteness and sweetness.

A slender girl had joined Norma; evidently a neighbor. Norma was trying to find one special garment in the general tangle; she kept tossing fresh miracles of beauty out onto the floor, and muttering "Damn it, where is it?"

Her personal maids and two of the housemaids were hurriedly getting matters into shape; flowers were continually arriving; telegrams; letters; the telephone tingled constantly, and Jocelyn saw her charge get into a rising fever of excitement, almost hysteria, as she was swept upward by the sense of popularity and the rush of welcome.

She presently found what she sought, a bellboy's uniform from a Paris hotel, and explained eagerly to her guest that she could wear it when she gave a cocktail party. She then introduced to Jocelyn the other girl—Jean Kimberley. She and Jean had been at Mis. Abbott's school together two years earlier, and they had much to say to each other and laughed a great deal. Jean was a year older than Norma, and was to have a coming-out party next winter. There were engagements and house parties to discuss, and Jocelyn felt reasonably safe in leaving the two together while she went to telephone several telegrams for Norma. One to her mother; a few to girl friends, one to a dressmaker; and one to Count Rene Coudeau. This last one Jocelyn took the liberty of suppressing. Her heart beat the faster for it, but she did not hesitate.

Half an hour later she returned to Norma's rooms, to find that the girls had planned to go to Jean's house for lunch, and afterward to "have fun somewhere."

"Then you'll have to ask me too Jean," Jocelyn said pleasantly, in a tone that made no betrayal of her inward quaking.

"No, she won't," said Norma. "Because Mama knows Mrs. Kimberley very well, and so does Dad."

"If your father's willing, of course," Jocelyn said. And noting that she had plenty of time, as Norma was in her underwear, and that her maid was only now displaying various gowns for her choice, she went to her own room and telephoned Philip Fordyce in his office.

"Hello!" he said. "Nice to hear from you again. Norma home all right?.... Good. I'm coming down tonight for dinner. Do they expect me?"

"They do. A Mrs. Royce was here with your mother, and she's arranged a bridge game."

"Nita Royce," she heard him say, in a changed tone. And then, still subdued and thoughtful, he said, "Damn."

Jocelyn came straight to her point. Was Norma to go where she liked; was trusting her to go that far?

"Not to the Kimberleys;" he said at once. "The girl's all right, but I don't like that outfit at all. Nope. She stays at home."

"Or I go along?" Jocelyn said.

"Yes, of course," he said in a brighter tone, as if he had not thought of that possibility. "If you'll go along it'll be all right. Tell her I said so."

"I can't very well do that. The daughter's right here."

"Oh, gosh," he muttered, laughing again.

"I must tell her that you're out of your office, if you'll step out for a moment," Jocelyn suggested, inspired. "Then I can say that I must go with her until I hear from you."

"That's the idea!" Relief was in his voice. "What d'you think of her?" he asked; as an afterthought.

"She's fascinating, and she's a beauty, and a few good lickings wouldn't have hurt her." Jocelyn added the last phrase also as an afterthought; she heard him laugh, and was smiling with excitement and pleasure as she went back to the girls.

"Your father isn't in his office," she announced, "so Jean will have to include me. Is that all right, Jean?"

She said it easily, smilingly, but she knew that a great deal of what the future held depended upon what happened right here and now, in these very first hours of her guardianship.

The two girls looked at each other, and Jean said quickly, with a little laugh, "There's nothing to be afraid of, I assure you! Mother and Countess von Sturnberg were in school together."

"I'm not afraid of anything," Jocelyn said amiably, and left it at that.

"You make me laugh," Norma said. But she was not laughing. "It's just for lunch."

"And afterwards maybe we'll go to a movie," Jean added.

"You don't want to go back to boarding school, Norma. I'll not spoil anything," Jocelyn said mildly.

"The only thing is, whether mother expected even me back again," Jean said, starting on another tack. "There's probably oceans of food, but I know mother's at the club, and I'm not sure what we'd get!"

"Stay here then," Jocelyn said cordially.

"That's no fun," Norma said sulkily.

Jocelyn's heart failed her for a moment. There were a great many hours of this day ahead, and a great many days ahead of this day, and she wondered how half of them—one tenth of them—would be filled.

"Why don't we go over to the country club for lunch?" she suggested suddenly. "You'd probably see a lot of your old friends, Norma, and there might be something going on—tennis or golf—that it would be fun to see."

To her intense relief, this plan pleased Norma. Jocelyn could see that she liked the idea of appearing suddenly at the club, having arrived from New York only that morning, stepping instantly into her place as one of the most interesting figures in the Peninsula group.

It was arranged instantly that Jean should take her car home, and Norma and Jocelyn should pick her up at her own gate in fifteen minutes, and Jocelyn telephoned to the club to reserve a table for Miss Fordyce, and by this time was more gratified than surprised at the obsequious attention that this simple request received.

"D'you know the Kimberleys?" Norma demanded, when they were in the big car, rolling smoothly toward Jean's gate.

"Just the name."

"She's divorced, you know, and she's trying to marry my father. She's been trying for years," Norma said serenely, "and Nita Royce is after him too," she added.

The country club was a spacious building set in sloping lawns, with shining cars ranked under the trees all about it. Inside was warm scented air, much pink and green chintz patterned in ropes of flowers, wide doorways and arches opening in every direction, and chairs set in half-circles near the roaring open wood fires and the sun-flooded southern windows. A heartening and delightful atmosphere, Jocelyn thought, and as the girls were at once enveloped in welcomes, her responsibility for their enjoyment was for the moment lessened, and she could relax and enjoy herself, too.

Another girl and a young boy, Johnny Kimberley, joined them for luncheon. The boy, home from Lawrenceville for Christmas holidays, seemed a nice quiet little fellow, but between the three girls, of whom Norma was the youngest, a conversational rivalry began that bored, surprised and amused Jocelyn equally.

Norma was the youngest, but Norma held the cards. Whatever they said she could top with something even more enviable and brilliant; she had not, like Meggy Brice, been presented at St. James's, but Lord Bullhaven had mentioned it to Gran. She had not, naturally, been to any of the Embassy balls in Paris; but she had been the guest while there of the Ambassador. Jocelyn realized that the young innocent boasting was going beyond all bounds, but could think of no effective way of stopping it.

These three pretty girls in their teens were not interested in the food they were eating, or each other, or the sparkle and beauty of the scene around them. They were flushed, eager, almost savage in the race for distinction. They smoked many cigarettes, and indulged in many side conversations with friends who leaned from neighboring tables or sauntered across the room and came up to talk.

The luncheon had begun with a brief passage at arms between Norma and Jocelyn, but Jocelyn had come off victor, and for the moment could feel herself fulfilling her obligations to her charge.

Meggy, who was in the debutante class, and was giving a large party on New Year's Eve, had ordered five cocktails as a beginning of the meal. But when they had arrived, and one had been placed before her, Jocelyn had placed hers and Norma's back on the man's tray and had said firmly, "Take those back, please."

"They were ordered," the waiter had said.

"They will be paid for," Jocelyn had assured him.

"Mother lets me," Norma had muttered. But without conviction. It was one thing to sneak a cocktail into her stateroom while Mademoiselle was asleep, or to quietly appropriate one when a great trayful came up to her mother's suite in her New York hotel; it was another to drink one openly here before her grandmother's—and, what was more serious, her father's—friends. She had hesitated, and in that second been lost, for the man had actually carried away her cocktail, and Jocelyn had assumed a quiet air that seemed to say that everything was going quite as it should.

Jocelyn, to Norma's "Mother lets me," had not returned "But I don't," but she might well have done so. Norma had given a glance full of patience to the other girls, and the moment had passed without further event.

A group of older girls and young married women began to play poker immediately after luncheon, each with her cocktail glass and ash tray beside her beautifully manicured hands. The mild boy with whom Norma and the others had lunched observed that there was a fine movie in town, and it was immediately arranged that they should all go see it. His car would carry the three girls, he said, but it wouldn't be very comfortable for Miss—Miss—

"Britton," said Jocelyn. He must have heard the name fifty times at luncheon, but he was not a very bright boy, she reflected. "Then we will all go in our car," she said. Norma might rebel at any minute; make a scene, run away. She had run away from a good many situations. But until she did there must be no compromise. To let her get the whip hand now would be to lose influence over her forever.

BAIL OF $500 GIVEN

Kingston, Dec. 11 —(CP)— Alexander Moore, 29, charged with common assault after a woman was attacked on a street here during early-morning hours of last Friday, was remanded Monday to Dec. 12 on bail of $500. He was not asked to plead.

Police arrested Moore after loud screams of a woman attracted attention of three district citizens. The man fled on their approach and the woman told police he had choked her and threatened her life if she cried out.

Company Security Clause Paves Way For Wage Talks

Detroit, Dec. 11 — (AP) — A union plan for curbing "wildcat" strikes and slowdowns paved the way today for wage talks with the Ford Motor Company, only member of the automotive "big three" still under union contract.

The Ford Company's favorable reaction to the proposal also raised the possibility that some similar method might be used in solving other car industry labor deadlocks, such as the strike idling 213,000 General Motors employees.

Countering a management demand for "company security," the C.I.O. United Automobile Workers offered to subject instigators of unauthorized work stoppages in Ford plants to discharge any participants in such action to fines.

An unauthorized interruption of work was described as one resulting from a dispute which could be settled by the impartial umpire or, if not in this category, as an issue not approved by the International Union.

Any employee ordered discharged by the umpire could demand an investigation by the Union Local, and on proving his innocence could have a grievance processed. If a settlement then could not be reached the dispute would go back to the umpire for decision.

The fines — $3 a day for the first offence and $5 for the second —would be deducted from the worker's pay.

Permit No Lockouts

The company would agree not to permit any lockouts and could impose "appropriate financial penalties" on any of its representatives it finds guilty of provoking a strike. The umpire, at the union's request, also would have the right to review such penalties and revise them or discharge the company representatives.

John S. Bugas, director of Ford industrial relations, said he was "encouraged to see that the union has given some consideration" to the company's demand for security.

Mr. Bugas repeated that the Ford plan to assess the union $5 a day for each member taking part in an unauthorized work interruption "would accomplish our objective" and withheld comment on the union proposal "until we have had opportunity to study it."

Richard T. Leonard, U.A.W.-C.I.O. Ford director, said the company has agreed to discuss the union's 30-per-cent wage increase demand at the next negotiating session Wednesday. The wage issue previously had not been brought up pending settlement of the "company security" dispute.

As the Ford-U.A.W. relations apparently improved General Motors announced termination of its contract with the union more than four months in advance of its April 28, 1946, expiration date.

But in a vein similar to the Ford demand, G. M. president C. E. Wilson said that in any new agreement which may be worked out the corporation "will insist on provisions requiring union responsibility and assurance of uninterrupted production."

Observers pointed out that the cancellation of the union contract would have little effect on settlement of the 21-day old G. M. strike, but it left only Ford among the "big three" under contract with the U.A.W. Chrysler Corporation's bargaining agreement with the Union expired a week ago after numerous issues remained unsettled.

R. J. Thomas, U.A.W.-C.I.O. president, called the cancellation "another high-handed effort by management to evade the central issue in dispute — 30-per-cent wage increase."

The action came as first-returns indicated local G. M. unions would turn down President Truman's appeal for an immediate resumption of work.

WITNESS

ation was painted to me (Meyer) in blackish colors and I decided to attack right into the enemy. I gave the order to reach the coast without regard to all losses."

Meyer told of how he deployed his troops to attack into the area captured by the 3rd Canadian Division and mentioned that he was shot up by Canadian tanks while he was riding a motorcycle near the front.

Other sections of the Meyer statement — given to war crimes investigators before the trial — was read by Col. Andrew. Dealing with points of dress which the defence counsel said would be important later on, the statement established that Meyer and the officers in the three battalions of his regiment dressed like their men.

Witnesses' Named Not Published

During today's proceedings, Col. Macdonald asked the press to refrain from using the names of German witnesses lest they suffer retaliation in "Kangaroo trials" conducted by fellow prisoners. He said the names were of no interest to the public except those wanting to "get at" witnesses, and he directed that they should not be published.

In his statement to the war crimes investigators, Meyer said that in battle he personally wore a camouflage jacket and trousers especially cut for convenience in a tank. Asked whether officers wearing long black leather coats belonged to his units, he was reported to have replied: "Impossible. They must have been coastal anti-aircraft officers. No one would go into an attack in a long coat."

Continued testimony on the progress of the Caen battle from the Canadian side disclosed that the 12th S.S. Division launched the attack on the Canadians at Authie. When the North Novas captured Authie July 8, Maj. Don Forbes of Sydney, N.S., Second in Command of the regiment at the time, ordered a check of the old battlefield for bodies unburied from June 7, Col. Petch said.

The Colonel added that Maj. Forbes found about 25 to 30 Canadian bodies still unburied.

SISTER OF MEMBER DIES

Toronto, Dec. 1—(CP)—Rebecca Mary Church, O.B.E. sister of Thomas L. Church, Federal Progressive-Conservative member for Toronto Broadview, died today after an illness of more than two years.

Native of Toronto, Miss Church was Past National President of the Imperial Orrder Daughters of the Empire and was a school teacher for 35 years. She formerly was active in Red Cross work and with the Women's Canadian Club.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 11 — (CP) — Gold and western oil stocks gained moderately and other groups were a bit heavy in the early session on Toronto Stock Exchange today. Trading tapered off to 899,000 shares for the first 3 hours.

Giant Yellowknife, after opening at 8.75, weakened to 8.05 for a net loss of 45 cents. Colomac lost 10 and smaller declines appeared for Astoria, Eldona, Donalda, Little Long Lac, Armistice, Bevcourt and Osisko Lake. Frobisher, Wright-Hargreaves and Trans-Resources firmed a few cents.

Uranium, Labrador and Steep Rock were weaker base metals.

Liquor and steel groups posted minor gains and other industrials were steady to lower. Ford A weakened 1/4 and in the foods Weston, Purity Flour and Loblaw B were down 1/2.

WALL STREET

New York, Dec. 11 (AP) — Strength of aircrafts contrasted with generally lower trends in today's stock market although selling was relatively light in virtually all departments.

While Aviations, bolstered by sizable backlogs and earnings potentialities, were in front from the start, most steels, rails, motors and "blue chips" displayed slipping tendencies. Declines of fractions to two or more points predominated near the fourth hour.

Touching highs were Douglas Aircraft, up better than five points; Boeing, United Aircraft, Sperry and Lockheed. Ahead at intervals were American Telephone and General Electric. Down the greater part of the proceedings were U.S. Steel, Chrysler. Standard Oil (N.J.), U.S. Rubber, Loew's, Shamrock Oil, Allied Chemical and Sears Roebuck.

Minus signs predominated among Canadian issues at midday. Hiram Walker led the downward trend with a loss of 1 1-2. McIntyre eased 1-2 and Canadian Pacific and Dome Mines each slipped 1-8. Lake Shore gained 3-8.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Dec. 11. (CP)—Cattle prices were steady at the week's advance in trade on the livestock market up to mid-session today. Lambs were firm and hogs, calves and sheep steady.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 800, Calves 150, Hogs 300, Sheep and Lambs 200. Unsold from yesterday were 1,200 head of cattle, including 500 stockers.

Prices in the trade included:

Cattle: Weighty steers $11-$13.50, butcher steers $10- $12, heifers $11.50 down, butcher cows $7.50 to $9.50, canners and cutters $5.25 to $7.25, bulls $7 to $9, fed yearlings 12 to $13.75. There were no sales of stockers.

Calves: $15 to $16 choice, plain vealers downward to $9, a few grassers $8 to $8.25.

Lambs: $14.50 to $15 good ewes and wethers, bucks $1 cwt discount, culls $9 to $10.

Sheep: $3 to $9.25.

Hogs: Dressed, Grade A $18, Grade B1 $17.60, sows $15.50.

MONTREAL LIVESTOCK

Montreal, Dec. 11 —(CP)— Prices were steady today on the livestock markets. Receipts: Cattle 101, sheep 54, hogs 422, calves 84.

Most cattle offered were cows of common to medium quality and sold from 6.50-8.75. Canners and cutters were 5-6.25. Good butcher bulls brought 8-9. Bologna bulls were 6 up.

Grassers and common drinkers in mixed lots made mostly 7.50-8.50 in the calves section. Sheep went at 3-7. Grade A hogs were disposed of at 18-18.25. Sows were 17 dressed.

HOGS

Toronto, Dec. 11 —(CP)— Grade A, dressed, delivered, were up 25 cents cwt. at $18 at Hull, and unchanged at London $17.40 plus transportation, in bacon-hog markets reporting early today. Barrie later reported prices unchanged at $17.75 delivered.

POLICE COURT

Suspended Sentence Given Two Local Men

Suspended sentences for one year with orders to make restitution and pay costs of the court were given by Magistrate T. Y. Wills to two local youths, Willian Archer, 20, and Roland McGraw, 18, when they appeared in city police court today on charges of theft of money from Roger Mallory.

When arraigned on the charges both youths pleaded guilty of stealing $55 and a cheque from Mallory as they were taking him home in a taxi from a dance. In statements to police McGraw admitted taking the money from Mallory and then later dividing it with Archer. Both the accused were found guilty on their pleas and placed on suspended sentence and were ordered to pay $27.50 restitution and $17 court costs.

Seventeen-year-old James Mole of Hamilton, also appeared for sentence for stealing a shotgun and quantity of ammunition from a Front Street resident and was placed on suspended sentence. Children's Aid Society Superintendent Thomas Ruston was in court and although pointing out Mole was over 16 years of age he agreed to see that he was placed on a farm.

Twenty-four cases involving infractions of parking and traffic by-laws and drunkenness were settled out of court, while Nelson Henry of Prince Edward County, was given ten days "on the hill" when found guilty of a drunk charge.

Several Minor Crashes Reported

Slippery street conditions together with reduced visibility as result of a dense fog resulted in several minor motor crashes inside the city on Saturday night, according to local police.

Douglas Cooke, Strachan Street, was proceeding west on Highland Ave., when after applying his brakes of his car the vehicle went into a skid with result that he crashed into another car driven by Earl Allan, R.R. 3 Belleville. Fender damage was amicably settled between the parties.

Richard Rosetta, Belleville, was driving west on Bridge Street, when he struck another auto being driven east on Bridge by Clarence McBrien, resulting in damaged fender and running board to the McBrien vehicle.

Two other minor crashes occurred in the Station Street area when Fred Ellis, Front Street, in driving his auto south onto Station Street from Memorial Park Drive was in collision with another being driven west on Station St. by H. Green, Railroad Terrace. Raymond Holgate, Cannifton, was driving north on Cannifton Road when he struck another car, also going north, causing fender damage.

Sunday two or three fence posts along Highway 14 leading to the Bay Bridge were broken off as a motor skidded off the road. Driver of the vehicle agreed to pay damages to city property.

GYPSY MOURNING BEGINS FOR QUEEN MOTHER

Wichita, Kas., Dec. 11 — (AP) —A nine-day period of mourning begins today for 5,000 members of five Gypsy tribes in the United States, as funeral services are conducted here for their Queen Mother, Lappy Marks, who died at a camp west of Wichita Sunday. She was the widow of King John Marks, who died in Sacramento, Calif., eight years ago. Gypsies will transact no business during the mourning period. Election of a new king is scheduled tentatively for next June 25.

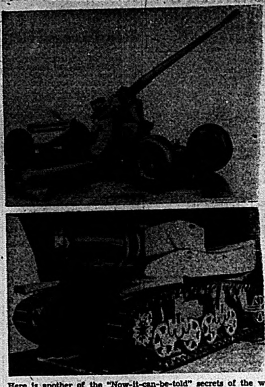
INFLATION FOOLED THE NAZIS



Here is another of the "Now-it-can-be-told" secrets of the war. The tank and gun shown ABOVE are just air and rubber. They were turned out at the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. plant in Akron, Ohio, to fool the enemy. They succeeded very well, too. From the air they could not be distinguished from the real thing, and they succeeded in drawing the fire of the enemy, thus playing their own illusory role in the strategy of victory.

Civilians Advised to Avoid Unnecessary Travel in Holidays

Ottawa, Dec. 11 (CP)—Transport Minister Chevrier in an appeal to civilians to refrain from unnecessary railway travel during the holiday season said on Monday railway congestion might result in some travellers becoming stranded.

The heavy demand for railway equipment to accommodate homecoming troops scheduled to arrive at New York and Halifax in the Christmas-New Year's period and special Christmas and New Year's leaves being given the armed forces in Canada would result in serious congestion.

Some 23,300 troops will have to be moved from ocean ports between Dec. 21 and Jan. 3. Scheduled arrivals include the Queen Elizabeth due at New York Dec. 27 with 13,000 troops, requiring 25 full trains with sleeping cars, diners and day coaches. At Halifax arrivals are: Puncher, Dec. 21, 800 servicemen; Lady Rodney, Dec. 25, 500; Duchess of Bedford, Dec. 29, 3,000 and Mauretania, Jan. 3, 6,000. Equipment to accommodate these troop movements will have to be taken rom regular service.

The army, navy and air force are granting five days leave to 50 per cent of the personnel at Christmas and to 50 per cent at New Year's. The forces are scheduled to move from their camps Dec. 22 and 23 and Dec. 29 and 30, returning Dec. 26 and 28 and Jan. 2 and 4. Railways would be further burdened by a heavy volume of freight traffic including relief supplies for loading on ships at Halifax and Saint John, N.B.

Year-Round Transportation in North Canada May Develop From Exercises

By JACK BRAYLEY

Ottawa, Dec. 11 (CP)—Opening of Canada's great north country for vital year-round civilian transportation is one of the most important possibilities which can result from the 3,200-mile muskox exercise starting from Churchill, Man., Feb. 14 and ending at Edmonton, May 5, it was disclosed here today.

Specially-designed snowmobiles and track-trailers—a Montreal-made adaption of the Weizel which aided Canadians in Holland water battles—navigated by radar will whip through frozen wastes and plow through spring swamp to demonstrate the possibilities of this mode of transport which doesn't depend on highways or seasons.

Supporting the snowmobile train will be radar-directed R. C. A. F. Dakotas and Norsemen transports which will follow a regular "day and hour" schedule dropping supplies "on the nose."

Previously there have been spring break-up and fall freeze-up periods of six weeks when the north is isolated. This has been a serious drawback to exploitation of the great mineral potential of that bleak and vast area.

Hitherto undisclosed details of the exercise were given at a press conference at which questions were answered by Defence Minister Abbott, Lt.-Gen. Charles Foulkes, Chief of the General Staff; Col. J. T. Wilson, Director of Army Research, and Group Capt. D. A. R. Bradshaw, R. C. A. F. operations chief.

Mr. Abbott said the exercise was "merely a continuation of research" gathered in previous cold weather tests which had developed the snowmobile and other equipment to its present state of efficiency.

He said he delieved "an exaggerated importance had been given the exercise." It actually was "only a small show" and engaged only in cleaning up the loose ends of previous exercises.

BACK AT 78

Brantford, Dec. 11 — (CP) — Walter J. Bragg, 78, who decided 21 years ago he'd had enough of municipal politics, is back in Brantford city council today with the promise that city fathers will be hearing from him.

NEW CHIEF OF STAFF

This is the first official portrait of General Dwight D. Eisenhower to be made since he took over as chief of staff of the U. S. army, succeeding General George C. Marshall. Senator Arthur Capper, Kansas, has suggested that the Republican party nominate Eisenhower as G.O.P. presidential candidate for 1948.

1945 Has Been Busy Year For 70-Year-Old Mackenzie King

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Dec. 11. (CP)— For Prime Minister Mackenzie King his 71st year was one of the busiest of his long career.

The ending of the war, the San Francisco conference, a national victory and a personal defeat in a general election, a by-election, two sessions of parliament, cabinet reorganization, a Dominion-Provincial conference and an overseas trip all combined to keep Mr. King on the move.

As the year ended, however, he appeared in the same state of physical and mental vigor he has enjoyed during the last 10 years of office.

Mr. King will be 71 Dec. 17 and is serving what he has indicated his last term as Prime Minister. Sometime before the present parliament runs its five-year course he is expected to move towards retirement but so far he has given no indication of when the move may come.

Along with heavy responsibilities he has had his full share of domestic political troubles during the year. As 1945 opened his government had just survived the conscription crisis which arose out of a shortage of infantry reinforcements for the army in Europe.

The decision was made to apply overseas conscription to the home defence troops, who came to be known as the "Zombies," and about the turn of the year some thousands of these troops responded by going absent without leave.

Called Election

In that atmosphere Mr. King's new minister of national defence, Gen. McNaughton had to seek election to the house in the Grey North by-election. He was defeated but a short session of parliament was held to pass estimates and clear the decks for a general election with the defence minister carrying on from outside parliament.

The United Nations conference on a world security organization at San Francisco opened in April. Mr. King headed a multi-party Canadian delegation in person but left before the finish to conduct the general election campaign.

He travelled across the country from the Pacific to the Atlantic, addressing some 10 public meetings and spending three days in his own constituency of Prince Albert. The country gave him a majority of the seats in the new House of Commons although much smaller than his pre-election majority.

The voters of Prince Albert whom he had represented from 1926 turned against him and he found himself without a seat. He found one in Glengarry in Ontario but had to fight a by-election to get it. He won the contest without making a speech or appearing in the constituency during the campaign but after the election made several visits to get acquainted with the people.

San Francisco was just the start of a round of international discussions for Mr. King. There he led the Canadian group in taking a stand for moderation as between the big powers who wanted control over the international organization vested in their hands and the smaller states who fought for equality. The Canadian position was that an organization was necessary and that no organization which did not have the full support of the major powers could work.

Visited Britain

After the election Mr. King returned to San Francisco to sign the United Nations charter on behalf of Canada and there met President Truman for the first time. During the winter he had travelled to Washington and Hyde Park to attend the funeral of his close personal friend and co-worker the late President Roosevelt.

October found him travelling to Washington again for a meeting with President Truman, one of the same sort of conferences he had been accustomed to hold with Mr. Roosevelt. He was then on his way to England and what he intended to be a visit to western Europe.

From that he returned to join with President Truman and Prime Minister Attlee of Britain in establishing Canadian-American-British policy on atomic energy.

The prime minister launched his dominion-provincial conference during the summer and soon afterwards met parliament for the second time in the year, a belated regular annual session.

His cabinet underwent changes both before and after the general election. New ministers came in to replace those retired or defeated at the polls.

Mr. King was at San Francisco when the European war ended and broadcast a message to the Canadian people from there. The necessary adjustments in policy to shift emphasis from Europe to the Pacific were made by long distance communication between himself and other ministers and he was in Western Canada when he announced plans for sending naval, air and military forces against the Japanese.

The end of the Japanese war in August came on the heels of the dropping of the first atomic bomb and Mr. King was one of the few men in the world in on the secret of their preparation.

His two personal election contests during the year brought the number of his personal elections to 13 of which he won 10 and lost three. The general election was the seventh in which he led the Liberal party and his fifth victory in a national election.

ACCUSED BY HURLEY

Arthur Ringwalt, pictured at his desk in the U. S. State Department, is one of the five "career diplomats" mentioned by Major-General Patrick Hurley, former U. S. ambassador to China, in his testimony before the Senate Pearl Harbor committee. In a turbulent hearing on his sudden resignation as ambassador, Gen. Hurley accused the five State Department officials, who were his aides in China, with sabotaging the foreign policy of the president and secretary of state.

SOCIAL CREDIT

Attempts New Tactic

The Prime Minister then attempted another tactic, moving that the house sit past the 11 p. m. adjournment hour until the debate was finally settled one way or another.

M. J. Coldwell, C. C. F. leader, supported Mr. King's motion but, turning to the Social Credit corner, said he first wanted a clear understanding that the debate would be concluded within a reasonable time.

John Blackmore (SC—Lethbridge), who has been spearheading the Social Credit opposition, rejected any such understanding with this statement:—

"It will do no good to stay here until two o'clock; we will still be here asking questions.

"As long as the House remains here and discusses Bretton Woods we are going to be here asking questions, until all our questions are answered."

Premier Drops Motion

Mr. King dropped his motion but when the adjournment hour struck a few minutes later a good-natured uproar greeted speaker Gaspard Fauteux when he represented Mr. King's substitute motion that the House adjourn.

With the Prime Minister, himself a veteran of many a political skirmish in the House, obviously enjoying himself, cries of "no, no, put the question, put the question." swept the chamber as government and opposition members sought to carry the debate into the night.

It was a friendly, boisterous rebellion of the ranks but speaker Fauteux smilingly sidestepped the question by declaring the motion carried and leaving his throne.

Criticise Britain's Policy

Meanwhile, the Senate heard criticism of Britain's current trade policy from Senator Thomas Vien (L—Quebec) during consideration of a bill to amend the Export Credits Insurance Act to increase for $100,000,000 to $750,000,000 the amount Canada can lend to war-ravished countries.

The Commons debate on the Bretton Woods proposals was being conducted on a government resolution to introduce a bill to ratify the agreements, which would establish an international monetary fund to stimulate trade between nations and an international bank of reconstruction to assist economies wrecked by war.

The main theme of Social Credit opposition to the proposals is that Canadian adherence to them would mean the surrender of Canadian sovereignty to international control and would lead to dissolution of the Empire.

Main Platform

The Social Crediters who base their main platform on monetary reform, claim that Canada, instead of ratifying the agreements, should undertake a program of credit expansion which would increase industrial production to meet the needs of the Canadian people and provide surplus goods for export.

The government has called for ratification of the agreements on the ground that the aims of the proposals are the same as those of all Canadians—full employment, a high standard of living for all peoples and an expanded, unhampered international trade.

To become a party to the agreements, parliament must ratify them by Dec. 31.

The steady debate dampened hopes that the House would be able to prorogue Saturday, the target set when the Commons began sitting three times daily nearly two weeks ago.

FORD REJECTS UNION OFFER OF ARBITRATION

4,000,000 Forced Into Slavery To Build War Machine

Wild, Ruthless Manhunt Carried on Everywhere

By WES GALLAGHER

Nuernberg, Dec. 12—(AP)—More than 4,000,000 conquered laborers were forced into virtual slavery in Germany by murder, starvation, arson and kidnapping, Allied prosecutors disclosed today at the war crimes trial of 21 Nazi war leaders.

The carefully-planned slave system to provide workers for German war plants and farms was described as a "wild and ruthless manhunt carried on everywhere" in a Nazi labor commissioner's own words presented as evidence before the international military tribunal.

Pressing charges of "crimes against humanity" against Adolf Hitler's top aides, disclosed by the Germans own records that 4,000,000 men, women and children of 14 different nationalities had been shipped to the Reich like cattle to bolster the Nazi war machine by January, 1945.

Official German documents filed with the international military tribunal named defendants Alfred Rosenberg, official Nazi "philosopher," and Fritz Sauckel, S. S. general and Reich labor commissioner, as the leaders designated by Adolf Hitler to carry out a ruthless forced labor program to bolster Germany's sagging industrial and agriculture production after the first defeats in Russia.

Hitler ordered forced labor for 2,000,000 Russians and Poles in October, 1942, and an additional 1,000,000 in March, 1943, the evidence disclosed.

Letter Filed

Writing to Rosenberg March 18, 1943, Sauckel ordered the shipment of captive laborers to be speeded up to 10,000 a day.

Sauckel's own representative in the Ukraine warned that "the wild and ruthless manhunt carried on everywhere—in towns and country, in streets, squares, stations, even in churches and at night in houses—had badly shaken the feeling of security everywhere." The comment, sent to Hans Frank, Nazi governor of Poland, was filed in court.

Other documents implicated Albert Speer, German munitions minister, as aiding Rosengerg, Sauckel and Frank in the German slave labor program.

Pudgy, bull-necked Sauckel, who had seldom listened to evidence previously presented in the trial, followed the reading of the documents closely by listening to the German translation through his earphones.

Died of Hunger

A letter from one of Rosenberg's agents was produced in which he protested that "prisoners of war have died of hunger like flies" and said the mass deportation methods "probably have their origin only in the blackest periods of the slave trade."

"A regular manhunt was inaugurated," said the letter written by an official identified only as Braeutigam. "Without consideration of health or age, the people were shipped to Germany where it turned out immediately that far more than 100,000 had to be sent back because of serious illnesses or other incapabilities for work."

Rosenberg apparently foresaw the day when he might be called to account for the inhumane treatment of the forced laborers. In a letter to Sauckel Dec. 21, 1942, he protested against the "unusual and hard measures" and expressed the fear that responsibility "will some day be held against me and my collaborators."

Arson Used

"Arson was used in the Ukraine to enforce conscription," the prosecution said, producing a letter to Rosenberg from a field commissioner telling of burning houses to force their occupants to go to the Reich to work.

"I decided to take the measure to show the increasingly rebellious Ukrainian youth that our orders have to be followed," the agent wrote.

One Russian described the Nazis as "catching humans like dog catchers catch dogs." The comment was in a confiscated letter that Rosenberg sent to Sauckel.

Security police were ordered to kidnap children, the prosecution charged disclosing an order of March 19, 1943, advocating the use of force and adding that "as a rule no more children will be shot."

Cobourg Soldier Found Wounded On Mauretania

Halifax, Dec. 12 — (CP)—Police today were investigating the case of Pte. Richardson, Cobourg, Ont., who was found on the Cunard liner Mauretania last night with deep wounds in his throat. He is now at a military hospital at Halifax, and reported to be in critical condition.

The cuts were inflicted in a manner not immediately determined.

Officials of the Provost Corps said they had not been informed of the wounding. Halifax police were called in, however, and detectives were working on the case last night.

The liner Mauretania docked in Halifax early Tuesday.

A.T. Whitaker Resigns Office

Brantford, Dec. 12 — (CP) — Resignation of A. T. Whitaker of Brantford as secretary-treasurer of the Parks and Recreation Association of Canada was announced today in the mid-December issue of the Recreation Review, the Association Bulletin. The resignation is effective Dec. 31.

The Association, which came into being in 1945 and comprises parks boards and commissions from Quebec to British Columbia, had its beginnings in the Ontario Parks Association which was organized in 1936 at a Brantford meeting called by Mr. Whitaker, then a member of the local parks board and of the Niagara Parks Commission. Mr. Whitaker served as president for four years and later became secretary-treasurer.

He continued as secretary-treasurer when the Parks and Recreation Association of Canada was organized at a Toronto convention in 1945.

Cape Breton Is. Still Isolated

Halifax, Dec. 12 — (CP)—Cut off from communication with the mainland yesterday when telegraph lines snapped under the weight of heavy soft snow, accompanied by a high wind, Cape Breton Island was still isolated today. Heavy damage was reported at all sections east of New Glasgow, N.S., and communication company officials could not say when the lines would be restored. More than a hundred poles are down between New Glasgow and the Strait of Canson but the full extent of the damage is not known.

The gale attained a velocity of 96 miles an hour over Cape Breton Island, then headed north and east.

V.C. Winner Has Permanent Job Cleaning Cuspidors Says Pouliot

Montreal, Dec. 12 (CP)—Jean Francois Pouliot, Liberal member of parliament for Temiscouata, thinks Canada is not doing enough for her Victoria Cross winners.

In an address before the Liberal Club at McGill Union yesterday, the veteran parliamentarian, who has represented his constituency for 21 years, told his story, asking that the name of the person concerned be omitted:

It came to his attention some time ago, he said, that a member of the Canadian army who won the Victoria Cross in the First Great War for having killed 52 Germans single-handed, was working in the House of Commons. His main job was cleaning and polishing cuspidors.

Mr. Pouliot decided to do something about it and brought the matter up before the House Committee which deals with such matters. He had the Victoria Cross winner appear before the committee and asked him to tell his story.

"He did and the members were duly impressed and it was decided to take the matter up with the Civil Service Commission."

After a period, Mr. Pouliot said he decided to find out what, if anything, had been done by the Civil Service Commission.

On inquiry, he learned that the commission had given the Victoria Cross winner "permanent" status.

"Permanent cleaning cuspidors" added Mr. Pouliot.

HOUSE CONTINUES DRIVE TO FINISH SESSION THIS WEEK

Trade Dept. Estimates Passed and Start Is Made on Justice Dept. Expenditures

By JACK WILLIAMS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 12 (CP)—The Commons, over at least one hurdle of a long discussion on the Bretton Woods monetary agreement, today continued a drive intended to end the present session this week.

Yesterday Commons business ran a gamut from veterans affairs to foreign trade and the order paper was cleared of several non-controversial items. The Bretton Woods ratification measure which had held up Commons business since last Thursday was temporarily disposed of by being sent to the banking and Commons committee and there was marked evidence on the part of members to make good time on other topics.

When the House adjourned late last night trade department estimates had been passed and a start made on consideration of justice department expenditures.

The Senate approved the government's bill extending emergency powers, although several speakers showed little enthusiasm for the policy of extending into peacetime some of the controls which had been necessary during the war. The Upper House also passed a bill amending the reconstruction bill, combining the reconstruction and munitions department. The bill had undergone extensive changes at the hands of a Senate committee and now goes back to the Commons.

Armed Robbery Charge Laid After Four Held

Toronto, Dec. 12—(CP)—Police said today they are holding four men, one on a charge of armed robbery and the other three as material witnesses in connection with a robbery in which Louis Raisberg, 51, was shot in his home here Sunday.

Police, who said others are being sought, disclosed that the men were arrested during a raid on a Wilson Avenue house yesterday. They declined to give other details.

Raisberg, manager of the Dover Sports Shops, was shot in the leg by one of the three men who held five occupants of his home at gunpoint while waiting for him to return home. The bandits escaped with some $2,800 in cash and cheques.

Study Cattle to Discover If Suffering From Effects Of Test Blast of A-Bomb

Oak Ridge, Tenn., Dec. 12 — (AP)—Sixty head of cattle apparently suffering from the effects of the blast of a test atomic bomb near Los Alamos, N.M., are bound here for observation, the Knoxville Journal said yesterday. Some of the cattle were described as having turned grey while others lost their hair and when the hair grew out again it was white instead of the natural red.

Evidence of Shooting Canadian POW Told At Gen. Meyer's Trial

By ROSS MUNRO
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aurich, Germany, Dec. 12—(CP Cable) — Further details of murder and brutal treatment of Canadian prisoners by German troops in Normandy were given today at the trial here of S. S. Maj.-Gen. Kurt Meyer by the first Canadian witness, Sgt. Stan Dudka of Stellarton, N.S., who fought with the North Nova Scotia Highlanders of Truro and Amherst at Authie and Buron in the Caen beachhead.

Sgt. Dudka, who was taken prisoner in furious fighting June 7, 1944, in the beachhead battle, described to the Canadian military court the slaying of Pte. J. Metcalfe at Buron where the Canadians' captors searched them, then stood them with their faces to the wall.

"I heard a commotion and as I turned around I saw a guard pulling on Metcalfe's pocket," Sgt. Dudka said. "He then let go of the pocket and Metcalfe stumbled forward and the guard fired approximately four shots at him.

Shot Again After 20 Minutes

"Metcalfe dropped 10 feet away from the guard. He had been hit twice in the right side. The guard let him lie there for 20 minutes and then went over to him. Metcalfe moved. The guard then emptied the remainder of the magazine of his machine-gun — about 15 rounds—into Metcalfe."

Sgt. Dudka, now a civilian, had a long military record. He was wounded three times in action and won the Military Medal with the North Novas after he rejoined the regiment following his escape from prison camp.

Defendant Myer studied a map of the battle area as Sgt. Dudka testified.

Statement on Shooting of Two Men

Principal evidence produced by the prosecution yesterday on the second day of the trial was a statement made last summer by Maj. John Learmont of Truro, N.S., describing how two Canadian prisoners were put to death.

The statement, read by Lt.-Col. Bruce MacDonald of Windsor, Ont., chief prosecutor, detailed how Maj. Learmont and a section of his men of the North Nova Scotia Highlanders of Truro and Amherst were treated after they were taken prisoner near Authie in the Caen beachhead area June 7, 1944, the day after the Allied landings in Normandy.

It said that Pte. John Metcalfe was shot when a grenade was found on Metcalfe's belt by a German. Pte. Jeffrey Hargreaves was shot as he lay wounded and helpless on the ground after being hit by Canadian artillery and mortar fire while being marched with other prisoners of war from Authie to Buron, one mile distant.

In the statement Maj. Learmont also said he saw the bodies of three men, identified as Pte. Aithony Julian, Cpl. Thomas R. Davidson and acting Cpl. John B. Murray, lying in a gutter in the village of Authie.

No Attempt to Escape or Resist

Sgt. Dudka said today he saw no reason for the shooting of any prisoner as none attempted to escape or resist. During cross-examination he said he was positive Metcalfe did not even have a grenade attached to his belt as related yesterday in the statement by Maj. Learmont.

Dudka said treatment of the prisoners at Buron improved with the arrival of a German officer. He then told how Pte. Jeffrey Hargreaves was shot by a guard when wounded and left helpless by an exploding shell while the prisoners were being taken to German headquarters.

Dudka said when he attempted to help Hargreaves, a guard hit or kicked him and made him put down the wounded man. In Authie he saw seven bodies of men of his platoon lying in a row beside the road. He was able to identify some of them. At the Abbaye of Ardennes, the Canadians were searched for the second time and then the Germans, without explanation, asked for ten volunteers. No one moved and the Germans picked ten men at random including "two men of ours from my hometown—Pte. J. A. Moss and Swampy (James) McKinnon.

Dudka said he never saw either of the men again.

Dudka was later taken to Bretteville Sur Odom, southwest of Caen, where the Germans returned paybooks previously taken from the men "but there were some left over".

"I can remember seeing one of Cpl. J. F. McIntyre for sergeant-major and I looked it over," he said.

Dudka told Lt.-Col. M. M. Andrew, of Stratford, Ont., defence counsel, the treatment he received at Ardennes much resembled that accorded German prisoners at his own regimental headquarters—hands were allowed to come down and "we could smoke if we had any cigarets left and move around a bit."

JAPANESE PRINCE AND 58 OTHERS SURRENDER

First Member of the Imperial House Ordered Arrested Drives Alone to Prison

By RUSSELL BRINES

Tokyo, Dec. 12. (AP) —Grim Sugamo prison opened its gates today to a steady procession of Japanese war criminal suspects headed by aged, handlebar-mustachioed Prince Morimasa Nashimoto of the Imperial family.

Foreign Minister Shigeruyoshida meanwhile told the Diet that Japan already has broached to Allied headquarters the question of resuming diplomatic relations with the rest of the world.

A critical questioner in the Diet retorted that Allied suspension of Japan's world diplomacy showed "lack of confidence in the cabinet."

"Is Japan not being recognized as an independent state?" representative Masanosuke Ideka, demanded.

"Japan at present lacks complete sovereignty," Yoshida conceded.

Fifty-nine top-ranking Japanese had been given until midnight to surrender as war-crimes suspects, and, laden with baggage and bedding, were checking in at Sugamo at five-minute intervals through the day.

Diet members criticized the government sharply for permitting the arrest of Prince Nashimoto, first member of the Imperial House to be ordered apprehended. He was the first to reach the prison today.

Two hours earlier, Lt.-Gen. Masaharu Homma and two other Japanese officers were removed from Sugamo for a flight to Manila to face trial on charges growing out of the Bataan march of death and other atrocities.

40 DEFENDANTS IN DACHAU TRIAL ARE CONVICTED

Sentences Will be Given Thursday; Accused Take Verdict Stoically

London, Dec. 12—(Reuters)—The American Press service in Germany reported tonight that all 40 defendants in the Dachau war crimes trial had been sentenced to death.

By DON DOANE

Dachau, Germany Dec. 12—(AP)—A United States military government court today convicted Commandant Martin Weiss and 39 fellow defendants on charges of committing atrocities at the Dachau concentration camp.

They will be sentenced tomorrow. Hanging is the penalty prescribed by United States army headquarters for any sentenced to death for the regime of starvation, torture and murder at the Nazi horror centre overrun April 30.

The eight-officer court, headed by Brig.-Gen. John M. Lentz, received the case at noon. It deliberated only 90 minutes before reaching the verdict.

The defence wound up the 24-day trial with pleas for mercy for several defendants, several of whom were S.S. guards, although five were camp doctors and three were prisoners used in official capacities.

Gen. Lentz first announced that the 40 would be sentenced later. Then the court decided that the sentences would be passed tomorrow morning.

The defendants received the verdict stoically. There was no visible reaction from German

STATE SECRETARY BYRNES WINGING WAY TO MOSCOW

Will Discuss With Molotov and Bevin Atomic Energy And Peace Conference

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, Dec. 12 (AP) — State Secretary Byrnes left by plane today for Moscow where he will tackle half a dozen critical issues on which Big Three co-operation has been stalled—among them atomic energy and an eventual European peace conference.

Mr. Byrnes will arrive in the Russian capital Saturday in time for his first meeting with Foreign Commissar Molotov and Foreign Secretary Bevin.

His top aim at the foreign ministers meeting will be to advise Mr. Molotov fully of Anglo-American-Canadian plans for turning over atomic energy problems to the United Nations in January. He intends to seek Mr. Molotov's reaction to this project and to solicit Russian support for creation of a special United Nations commission at London to work out atomic controls.

A Moscow dispatch last night quoted informed sources as saying that if the United States and Britain arrive at the conference with acceptable propositions on the atomic bomb, more than 50 per cent of the difficulties confronting the Big Three will have been solved.

Mr. Byrnes made it clear at a press conference yesterday that the subjects to be discussed at Moscow will not be agreed on formally until Mr. Molotov, Mr. Bevin and he get together.

However, from comments at his press conference yesterday it was indicated that the subjects will include, beside the atomic bomb, the peace conference, Japan, the Balkans, Iran, and China.

DECLARED PUBLIC PLACE

Toronto, December 12 —(CP) —A room in a downtown hotel, occupied by two men while completing a sale of liquor to a police officer, yesterday was declared in city police court a "public place according to provisions of the Liquor Control Act."

Under the ruling it will be illegal to have liquor in the room during the period, normally one year, "it is public." Anyone who rents the room and brings liquor into it thus could be charged under the act.

RETURNED MAN KNEW WHERE KEY WOULD BE

Topeka, Kas., Dec. 12 — (AP) —Leaving the front door key "in the same old place" accounted for a surprise breakfast reunion yesterday at the Paul Edgar home. Returning home from the service, Thomas Edgar didn't want to awaken his parents at 2 a.m. and found the door key in its old familiar place. He tiptoed through the house, went to bed and appeared at breakfast.

Company States Union's Proposal Is "Impracticable"

Wants Workers to Return While Negotiations Proceed

Windsor, Dec. 12—(CP)—The Ford Motor Company of Canada, Ltd., announced today it had rejected a proposal of the United Automobile Workers of America (C.I.O.) to negotiate and arbitrate all differences in the Union security strike that shut down the huge plant Sept. 12.

The proposal of Local Union 200, submitted to the company last Friday, asked that arbitration to end the strike affecting 10,000 production workers be started on the Union security issue within 24 hours of the opening of negotiations by the company. It also proposed the men remain on strike while the issue was under arbitration.

In rejecting the offer, the company announced it had forwarded its views to Labor Minister Mitchell under date of Dec. 11 to allow time for the minister to receive the communication before a public announcement was made.

The company called the Union proposal "impracticable" and added it prefers to have the strike end while points in dispute are negotiated.

Prefers Previous Plan

Summing up the Union plan, the company declared its preference for a previous plan submitted by Mr. Mitchell jointly with Labor Minister Daley of Ontario Nov. 27. The company argued that the government plan was "more equitable" for all concerned.

That plan, similar to the union offer except it called for a return to work while negotiations proceeded, was rejected by a slim majority at a mass vote of strikers taken Nov. 29.

The union proposals, announced as rejected today, asked that, while strikers remained on the picket lines, negotiation and arbitration proceed on all points in dispute, including union security, vacations with pay, annual wage and severance pay.

The plan also suggested that when the arbitration decision was announced there be "an orderly return to work according to seniority, and resumption of collective bargaining."

The latest union plan followed months of negotiations between the Federal and Ontario governments with company and union heads in Ottawa, Toronto and Windsor. Mr. Mitchell flew to Windsor a month ago in an effort to settle the dispute but left after the union rejected a company proposal substantially the same as that offered by Mr. Mitchell.

Mr. Mitchell's discussions included two conferences with Henry Ford II in the Windsor area.

It was estimated unofficially today that the wage loss involved since start of the strike has been approximately $6,500,000, an average of $500,000 a week.

Ottawa, Dec. 12. (CP)—Labor Minister Mitchell today offered the co-operation of the Dominion and Ontario Labor departments in conducting a referendum among Ford Motor Co., workers on strike at Windsor, Ont., on their willingness to accept a government proposal for settlement of the three-month-old strike.

The proposal was previously turned down by a small margin in a union-conducted vote.

Mr. Mitchell made the offer in the Commons after he had announced that the company had rejected a Union settlement plan which was generally similar to the government's arbitration and negotiation plan but which established a time limit of 24 hours for arbitration of Union security issues about which the dispute centres.

Mr. Mitchell said it was the view of the company that it would be impossible to find an arbitrator who could operate under such a time limit.

Mr. Mitchell said both Hon. Charles Daley, Ontario Labor Minister, and himself believed it would be difficult to conduct arbitration under such conditions.

He urged that the proposals previously made by the government be again put before the membership of the United Automobile workers (C.I.O.) and offered the co-operation of the Ontario and Dominion governments in conducting a referendum.

McIntyre Miner Goes on Trial On Murder Count

Timmins, Dec. 12 —(CP)—Marcel Desserres, 23-year-old McIntyre miner, went on trial on charges of armed robbery and murder Tuesday morning at South Porcupine police court in connection with the holdup of the Bank of Toronto branch in South Porcupine Nov. 23 and the death of John Dubinsky.

"I don't intend to try this case myself. I am going to send it to a higher court," Magistrate Atkinson said as he told Desserres' attorneys it would be necessary for the accused to enter a plea.

Inspector W. Franks, Ontario Provincial Police investigator who was called to assist Chief Constable Charles McInnes of South Porcupine with the case, was the principal witness at the morning's session.

Most of his evidence was confined to answering questions put by Defence Counsel Charles Kerr and Crown Attorney S. A. Caldbick, K.C., regarding the authenticity of statements which will be produced during the trial.

Inspector Franks described a two-hour trip which police officers made with Desserres Nov. 26 and told of an identification parade Nov. 24 in which Desserres appeared with 11 other men brought from Timmins. He did not indicate the result of the parade.

Three doctors took the stand during the morning. Two of them, Drs. D. Johnston and W. H. Atkinson, treated Dubinsky before he died from a bullet wound in the back. The other was Dr. R. P. Smith, who conducted the post mortem.

In his account of the trip through the district with Desserres, Inspector Franks said the police party produced an army balaclava after returning to the police station, cautioned Desserres and asked him if he ever owned one. Desserres said he had never owned one, the Inspector testified, and that he had had no cap or hat of any kind for six or seven years.

Father of Slain Canadian Soldier Says Hanging too Good for Meyer

Toronto, Dec. 12. (CP)—Arthur Willett, of Toronto, whose son was among those taken prisoner and then shot by German troops, said today that "shooting or hanging is too good" for Kurt Meyer, S.S major-general on trial in connection with the deaths of 48 Canadian prisoners.

His son was Rfmn Gerald Leslie Willett, 25, native of Midland, who came to Toronto as a child. The son was a member of the Queen's Own Rifles, as were two other members of the family.

Mrs. Ben Cook of Toronto, whose son, Cpl. Etsel John Cook, was shot as a prisoner of war, said that "I think such beasts as Meyer should be hung up and shot."

"When a man like Kurt Meyer will kill innocent boys, whose only crime is that they are serving their country, then we are apt to forget we are civilized."

Etsel Cook, member of the Queen's Own Rifles, was shot at Mouen, according to an official list of names of 37 of 48 soldiers allegedly murdered. His family were told in October of last year their son had been shot while a prisoner.

Cook was born at Orangeville, and moved to Toronto with his family five years ago.

BANCROFT WOMAN APPOINTED TO BOARD

Mrs. R. W. Robinson, Bancroft, has been appointed a member of the Hastings County Old Age Pension and Mother's Allowance Board, it was announced in county circles yesterday.

Mrs. Robinson replaces Mrs. Lorne Reid, Bancroft, who has served as a member of the board for the past ten years.

At a regular meeting of the Board held yesterday with Mrs. Robinson for the first time in her new capacity, some 24 applications for old age pension and five for mother's allowance were dealt with.

TOTAL ECLIPSE OF MOON NEXT TUES.

A total eclipse of the moon, the first visible in North America since 1942, will occur on the night of December 18th. If the skies are clear residents of this city will see the phenomenon which, it is stated, will cause the moon to resemble a giant red Christmas tree bulb.

The eclipse will start at 7:37 p.m. and will end at 11:03 p.m. The period of totality will last an hour and 20 minutes from 8:40 till 10 o'clock.

COST ACCOUNTANTS HOLD MONTHLY MEET

The Bay of Quinte Chapter of Ontario Society of Industrial and Cost Accountants held its monthly dinner meeting at the Bar-B-Q on the 11th of this month.

Thirty-three members and guests attended one of the best meetings the chapter has held in a long while.

The festive occasion was enlivened by a humorous talk on current events by Mr. Carl Casey, and two good speeches by Mr. Murray Edmunds on Banking Activities, and by Mr. Art Lackley, who gave an interesting talk on the subject of Office Management.

Everybody endeavored to make of this gathering a social success.

The members are earnestly requested to come to the January meeting when an excellent guest speaker has consented to appear.

POLICE BLOTTER

Running of truck transport motors by employees of Direct Winters Transport on Pinnacle Street, apparently to keep them warm for the start of the morning highway run, is bringing complaints from residents who report to police they are disturbed in their sleep by the noise. Attention of police was promised in the matter.

Tuesday afternoon Fred Waite was backing his auto from his driveway on Ponton Street when he failed to see a motor driven by Jack Both coming down the street. The Waite vehicle struck the Both car broadside causing damage to the door and rear fender.

Humane Society Thanks County Council For Grant

Speaking in appreciation of the $100 grant given his society by the Hastings County Council at the recent December session, Police Inspector Clare Hayes, president of the Hastings County branch of the Canadian Humane Society, said today that the organization can now go forward with its work without the bugbear of lack of funds deterring its activities.

"Up to September last," the inspector said, "the local branch had confined its activities to this city and the town of Trenton, with county and district work being administered by the parent body in Toronto."

Recently with new organization, the local branch was given the jurisdiction of the county as a whole. Inspector Hayes was named president to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Charles Payne K.C. Miss Helen Fralick is the secretary treasurer.

Crop Improvement Assoc. Elects W. Forestell Pres.

The annual meeting of the Hastings County Crop Improvement Association was held in the Department of Agriculture Office, Stirling, December 7th.

The Secretary, H. L. Fair, Stirling, gave a detailed report on the year's work of the Association.

During the year tests were carried out on the following projects:

Fertilizer test on potatoes.

Rust Resistance Oat test—using the following varieties: Ajax, Beaver, Roxton and No. 601.

Hybrid corn — husking varieties were used.

Fertilizer test on corn and potatoes — to compare plow sole application vs drill application.

Application of agricultural limestone.

Fertilizer test on natural pasture.

Long Term pasture demonstrations.

Winter wheat tests — to compare Rideau with Dawson's Golden Chaff.

Eighteen farmers co-operated in carrying out these projects and 62 acres were used in making the tests.

Mr. Ken Fallis, Crops, Seeds and Weeds Branch, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, was the guest speaker and addressed the meeting on Long Term Pastures and Pasture Improvement.

PICTON

Robert Whattam Elected Member Boys' Parliament

Picton, Dec. 12—Robert Whattam of Wellington was elected member of the Older Boys' Parliament to represent Prince Edward County. Voting took place Saturday when eligible boys from several parts of the county were entertained in Picton. Donald Campbell of Bloomfield was the defeated candidate and lost by a small majority.

The boys spent the afternoon in Picton Collegiate gymnasium where games were conducted. Supper was served at the United Church. Rev. A. E. McCutcheon gave an inspirational address, and M. B. Brown spoke on gliders. There were several novel features in charge of A. K. Lenard who arranged the event, and also acted as returning officer.

Only One Case T. B.

Only one active case of tuberculosis was discovered as a result of the chest x-ray clinic held here in November, Dr. K. McQueen told the Kinsmen Club last night. There were 2,938 persons examined. However, 57 persons were found to have other chest diseases or abnormalities.

Next year it is hoped to have the clinic cover Prince Edward County, and T. B. seals are being sold to raise funds.

Guest speaker at the club was C. R. Widdifield, K. C., who stressed the importance of everyone making a will, and he gave advice on making wills without legal assistance. He warned that often improperly worded wills led to costly litigation.

Leaves Picton.

Rev. A. W. Motchman, who has been pastor of the Baptist Church here, left yesterday for Toronto where he will act as a supply. He has enjoyed a very successful ministry here. The congregation met Monday night and presented him with a purse of money. Mr. Frank Porter read an address of appreciation. The young people of the church presented him with a bathrobe. A successor has not yet been chosen.

Favor Scheme.

Ninety percent of Prince Edward County hog producers voted on the proposed hog marketing scheme and all were in favor, Agricultural Representative T. J. Webster stated yesterday. There were 1100 voters registered following an extensive campaign led by the Federation of Agriculture here.

Bazaar Raises $276.

That $276.52 was realized from the bazaar and tea held by the Guild of St. Mary Magdalene Church, was reported by the treasurer, Mrs. N. A. Mallett yesterday. The tea realized $89.60, fancy work and aprons $97.33, home cooking $30.59, touch and take table $50. It was the largest event of the kind the Guild has ever held.

Donations Made.

At its December meeting, Sir Thomas Picton Chapter, I.O.D.E., voted $50 to the Christmas Cheer for British Children Fund and $50 to the Mission Church. Boxes valued at $6.50 each are to be sent 15 Prince Edward County servicemen in hospital, and 300 cigarettes will be sent to all Prince Edward County men still overseas. The regent, Mrs. Ray Clapp, presided.

White Gifts.

At Picton United Church Sunday School last Sunday the annual White Gift service was held. There were 150 present and Superintendent A. K. Leonard presided for a Christmas program. The many gifts were received by Mrs. James Branscombe who is in charge of the work at the Mission Church. These will be distributed to less fortunate children at a supper and program in that church Thursday night. The Cavell Class of the church donated a crate of oranges.

Arrive in England.

Mrs. William Winter and Mrs. Reg. Williams arrived in England on the Empress of Scotland last weekend according to word received by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Vincent. They will join their husbands who were formerly members of the R.A.F. here.

Expected Home.

Capt. John V. Graydon is among those who returned to Canada on the Mauretania this week. He wired from Halifax that he would reach Picton Thursday, stopping off at Maitland to see his wife, formerly N/S. Helen Hall, to whom he was married in Bruges, Belgium, in May, 1945. Capt. Graydon has been overseas three years, serving on the Western Front with Headquarters No. 2 C.B.R.D., and latterly as staff captain at C.R.U. at Aldershot. Capt. William Graydon, M.C., now receiving treatment for an injured foot in Christie Street Hospital, is a brother.

Other local men arriving are: Flt. Lt. John Mallory, Bloomfield; Cpl. T. W. Chapman, Carrying Place; L/Sgt. B. A. Graham, Mountain View; Pte. M. C. Spencer and Sgt. E. Pike, Bloomfield.

Of 2,000 women interviewed as they entered a Toronto grocery store, 1,995 said they read the advertising regularly in their daily newspapers.

Charles Gatcum to Live Life Of Ease in His Native England

Charles Gatcum, 68, of this city, one of the few remaining links with the roaring days of the British Navy in the nineties and the turn of the century, is returning to his native Farnham, in Surrey, England, to spend his remaining days with relatives after 35 years spent in this city. Mr. Gatcum, who was the janitor of King George School for 18 years prior to his retirement four years ago, expects to sail for England next week.

A typical salt of the old British naval school, he has had an eventful and colorful career serving under the White Ensign in all parts of the world.

He was a member of the crew of the H.M.S. "Victoria," flagship of the British Mediterannean fleet which was rammed and sunk by H.M.S. "Camperdown" in the Mediterranean in 1893 with a loss of 500 men. Splashing around in the water for a long time, he was eventually picked up by a British cruiser after he had given up hope of rescue.

Joined Navy at 14.

Joining the navy at the age of 14 as a "boy" in 1891, he received his early training aboard the training ship "Vincent" at Portsmouth. He remained there for 18 months and was posted to the "Victoria."

Later he was sent aboard the H.M.S. "St. George", a large cruiser and sailed for the West Coast of Africa, where he remained with the naval squadron for another 18 months. Following this term of service he returned to England and graduated from courses of gunnery and torpedo work.

Following these courses he was posted aboard one of Britain's most famous fighting ships of those days, the H.M.S. "Royal Sovereign," flagship of the Home Fleet.

Fought on Land.

In 1900 he was sent with the Royal Naval Brigade to South Africa. This unit, famous for its outstanding work at the Relief of Ladysmith, fought with their guns on land against the Boer commandos. Gatcum's gun was the one that eventually silenced the Boers' famous piece of artillery, dubbed "Long Tom," because of its extraordinary length of barrel, which wreaked havoc with the British troops and lines of communication.

Returning from the South African campaign he joined the crew of H. M. S. "Glory," and saw two years service on the China Coast.

That campaign over, he returned to England and for the next two years was a gunnery instructor at Portsmouth. Eventually he was discharged from the service after his regulation twelve-year period of enlistment had expired.

Came to City in 1910

Deciding to come to Canada, he arrived in Belleville in 1910 and worked on a farm for a short length of time. After that he worked at odd jobs around the city and district, eventually securing the post of janitor at the King George School.

Of late, Mr. Gatcum specialized in private gardening and for a number of years produced the first potatoes to be grown in the city. His wife died in 1943. He is a member of the Belleville Branch, No. 201, Army and Navy Veterans in Canada.

Don Moncrieff One of Youngest Canadian Soldiers to Win M.M.

Modest to the point where he will not wear his "fruit salad" (army decorations and medals) youthful Don Moncrieff, son of Mr. and Mrs. Reg Moncrieff, formerly of this city and now of Perth, is in the city renewing schoolday acquaintances and visiting friends of his family. The young soldier recently returned from overseas after lengthy service with the artillery in various European theatres of war.

His battle dress is bare of ribbons. The only evidence of overseas service is his divisional flash and the shoulder insignia of the R. C. A.

But in an inside pocket he carries the Military Medal won in a heavy enemy action in Holland.

Don does not care to talk of the exploit that won him the coveted decoration. Incidentally he is one of the youngest soldiers in the Canadian Army entitled to wear the red-white and blue ribbon of the "M.M."

However, a newspaperman, after lengthy probing and questioning aided and abetted by a service pal of the young soldier managed to get some of the facts of the action which brought tangible recognition from the King.

It seems that Don was a signaller with his battery and on this occasion was serving in a wireless capacity with his forward observing officer near Raalte, Holland.

Racing ahead of the infantry in a jeep to establish the forward observation post, Moncrieff, a sergeant and the F.O.O., a lieutenant dashed across a bridge under withering enemy fire. The sergeant was knocked out and shortly after the post was established and communication made with the guns, the lieutenant was badly wounded.

Don, so his pal related, stayed in the position for nearly two days directing fire of his battery and looking after his wounded comrades. Eventually the guns knocked out the enemy positions and Moncrieff was able to return to his unit bringing his wounded with him.

Permit Issued For $20,000 Apt. Building

Construction plans for a two-storey apartment block at 215 Victoria Ave., containing eight complete apartments headed the November building permit list issued from the city engineer's department at the city hall. The apartment block will be constructed by Mr. Paul Haggis at an estimated cost of $20,000.

Permits issued during November totalled 20 with a construction value of $51,750. One other large item on the month's building list was issuing of a permit for the construction of four brooder houses on West College Street by the Swift Canadian Company at an estimated cost of $15,000.

Permits issued during the month included the following:

G. E. Palmer, 164 Catharine St., garage, $150; Arthur Demorest, dwelling at 158 Yeomans St., $2,500; James Lamberton, new roof at 88 East Dundas St., $175; Leonard Hall, garage at 160 Charles St., $200; W. C. Jack, 155 Albert St., enclosed sun porch, $150; Stephens-Adamson, plant addition, $2,000; Harry Firth, 298 Dufferin, new shingles, $100; David Cory, dwelling at 36 Ridley St., $3,500; Andrew Grey, kitchen alteration at 100 Bridge St. W, $300; Mackie Estate, McAnnany St., floor repairs, $150; Mrs. B. Bateman, 165 Victoria Ave., insul brick, $250; Thomas Kelly, 246 Foster, insul brick, $175; J. E. Madill, one-storey warehouse, Harriet St., $1,200; J. McComb, cellar excavation and new floor at 179 Foster, $250; Mrs. John Shaw, 228 W. Moira, garage, $300; Arthur Booth, new rear porch, at 170 George, $150; Mrs. Jack Both, dwelling, Dufferin Ave., $5,000; and Bruce Lattimer, alterations to drug store, $200.

BODY RECOVERED

North Bay, Dec. 12 — (CP) — Body of Everett Bird, 59, believed drowned Dec. 5 when he crashed through the ice at Duck Lake in the Port Loring district 40 miles southwest of here, was recovered yesterday. He had been missing since Nov. 29.

Bandsman Makes Complete Circuit Of the Globe

Globe circling can truly be an enjoyable experience but home is "home sweet home" after all according to Bandsman Douglas Mason, 20 Everett Street, who recently returned to Canada after completing a complete circuit of the globe as a crew member of the cruiser H.M.C.S. "Ontario."

With Jack Diamond of Foster Avenue, another member of Canada's newest cruiser, Doug. is spending furlough with parents in Belleville.

According to Doug. hostilities were practically "all over" when the "Ontario" arrived in the Japanese war theatre, his cruise down through the Mediterranean, the Red Sea and the Indian Ocean being more or less of a pleasure trip. From Ceylon on through the Malacca Straits, the "Ontario" was part of an escort for troopships but while en route atomic bombs put an end to Japanese resistance and his ship put in at Hong Kong shortly after hostilities had ceased. The "Ontario" had left England in June and arrived at Hong Kong early in September.

An original crew member of the "Ontario" Doug. was stationed aboard at her commissioning as a member of the ship's band. He enlisted in the navy three years ago and gained his band experience with the Salvation Army Band in Belleville.

CLAIMS REFUND AFTER WAR

Seattle, Dec. 12 —(AP)— Four years ago, Mrs. Edna M. Sando, secretary for Hong Kong Mines, climbed into a station wagon at the Pan American Airways office in Hong Kong to ride to the airport and board a Manila-bound clipper. The trip ended when the Japanese attacked the city. Yesterday Mrs. Sando, released recently from internment at Hong Kong, walked into the Pan American Airways office here to claim a refund on the round-trip clipper ticket she never used.

STIRLING

Springbrook L.O.L. Installs Officers

Stirling — The annual meeting of Springbrook L.O.L. No. 442 was held in Springbrook Orange Hall on Thursday evening December 6th., with a record crowd in attendance including twelve Past Masters. Past Master Brother Burton Bateman took the chair for the election and installation of officers and was assisted by District Master Brother Hugh Jones of Stirling.

The following slate of officers were duly installed:

W. M., Brother Jack Sharpe; D. M., Brother Elwood Bateman; Chap., Brother Wm. Neal; R. Secretary, Brother Fred Bateman; Financial Secretary, Brother Gordon Webb; Treasurer, Brother Orrie Barton; Marshal, Brother Percy Bateman; Tyler, Brother Thos. Webb; Sentinel, Brother Chris. Bateman.

Each of the newly installed officers and several visiting brethren gave appropriate addresses.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to P.M. Bro. E. Cooke for the efficient manner he had conducted this lodge for the past two years. Bro. Cooke made a suitable reply and thanked the lodge for the honors he had received.

Bountiful refreshments brought this enjoyable evening to a close.

5 Degrees Below Zero Registered At Pump House

Ear-muffs and turned up coat collars were the order of the day this morning when early morning shoppers, business workers and laborers discovered that Old Jack Frost had forced the mercury to five degrees below zero during the night.

And at nine o'clock in the morning the air was still chilly as the thermometer was hovering still near the zero mark and was showing little tendency toward an early rise.

Frosty windows and exhausts of motor vehicles attested to the sharpness of the temperature with motorists leaving their motors running during brief stops in an effort to get some heat into their engines.

But although members of the older generation seemed cognizant of the temperature and dressed accordingly, several high school "bobby-soxers" were seen carrying on with their tradition—bare heads, fur coats and goloshes, but no stockings.

Extra Christmas Holidays Please Factory Workers

Toronto, Dec. 12—Christmas holidays for many office and factory employees this year will be as long as they are merry with some city plants closing from Saturday, Dec. 22, to Wednesday, Dec. 26. Footsore store clerks and civic employees will do only about half as well with Boxing Day added to Christmas Day for time off.

Many large plants have not yet decided on their Christmas plans, but John Inglis and Canadian General Electric plants are closing from Saturday to Wednesday. Massey-Harris will be closed from Monday noon to the morning of the 26th. Canadian Westinghouse workers will get Christmas Day off while at the other extreme Lever Brothers are closing from Friday, Dec. 21, to the following Wednesday. Lever employees, however, do not normally work Saturday and to make up for the Monday holidays before Christmas and New Year's are working two Saturdays in December or January.

No city plants seem to be following Brantford's example where some employees are going to get the longest Christmas holiday on record—Friday to Thursday. Saturday and Sunday are not working days. Boxing Day is a holiday and rather than start up machinery for Monday, employers have decided to throw that in, too.

Most downtown Toronto stores will be closed from Monday after work to Thursday morning, Dec. 27.

Schools, of course, still rank first in length of holidays. The University of Toronto closes Dec. 20, public and secondary schools one day later and they all reopen Jan. 3.

ARGUES JOYCE'S APPEAL

London, Dec. 12—(CP)—Counsel for William (Lord Haw Haw) Joyce, American-born German radio announcer convicted of treason against the King, argued Tuesday that international law would be violated if Britain hanged the scar-faced propagandist.

The case was presented before five Lords of Appeal in the House of Lords. G. O. Slade, defence counsel, said Joyce never had held British citizenship, although he went to Germany with a British passport in 1939.

Obituary

LATE MRS. CATHERINE STARK

MRS. H. M. (FARLEY) JOWETT (Trenton)

The funeral of Mrs. Helen M. (Farley) Jowett, Trenton, who died in the Convalescent Home at Campbellford, on Dec. 6th., after a lengthy illness, took place from the McNair Funeral Home, Trenton, on Saturday, Dec. 8th. The service there and at Smithfield Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. J. Sunter, pastor of the Smithfield United Church.

The bearers were A. Beech, (Brighton), J. Branscombe, L. Branscombe (Bloomfield), J. Farley (Belleville), A. Vermilyea and F. Vermilyea, (Belleville).

The late Mrs. Jowett was born seventy seven years ago in Murray Township, Northumberland County, and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Farley. For some time she lived in Pasadena, California, and of late years she made her home in Trenton. In her early years she attended the Hamilton Ladies' College, and later graduated from the Rochester Nurses' Training School. She was a member of the Baptist Church and fraternally she was a member of the Eastern Star.

During the First Great War, Mrs. Jowett was living in Trenton and was active in Red Cross Work and the activities of the Daughters of the Empire. She was also one of the founders of the Dickens Club in Trenton.

Surviving her are one brother, Worden Farley, Trenton; two sisters, Mrs. E. S. Hendricks, Trenton, and Miss H. Farley, Murray Township; one nephew, Dr. John Farley, Trenton, and one niece, Mrs. J. Baker, Saginaw, Mich.

JOHN THOMAS BROADWORTH (Marmora-Saskatoon) (Contributed)

John Thomas Broadworth, who was born at Marmora eighty-one years ago, died at his home in Saskatoon, Sask., on Wednesday morning, Nov. 28th., after a lengthy illness. He resided in Saskatoon since 1911 and for some years he was in the service of the Canadian National Railways at Saskatoon. In 1938, he and his wife, who survives him, celebrated their golden wedding. Old friends in this district will regret to learn of his death.

Surviving him besides his wife, are three daughters, Mrs. George (Bella) Tweddle, Harris, Sask.; Mrs. Edward (Margaret) Blakely, Stellar, Alberta, and Mrs. Brent (Mabel) Aikin, Saskatoon; two sons, Percy at home and Fred J. of Meadow Lake, Sask.; one sister, Mrs. George (Beatrice) Bassett, Madoc; three brothers, Fred and Isaac of Madoc, and Joseph of Stirling; also twelve grandchildren.

The funeral was held in Saskatoon on Saturday, Dec. 1st., and interment took place in the family plot at Woodlawn cemetery.

550,000 Idle In Australia Due to Strikes

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 12 — (CP) — Australia's most serious industrial tie-up since the general strike of 1917 today was as far as ever from settlement following the breakdown of conferences between Prime Minister Chifley and union leaders. It was estimated that more than 550,000 were idle with the number growing daily.

The series of strikes among New South Wales coal miners, steel workers and coastal seamen developed from a variety of grievances.

The trouble began last September when an employee in the Broken Hill Proprietary Company steel plant at Port Kembla near Sydney refused to accept a change of job. Other steel men struck when a war plant was closed down, demanding seniority rights for employees laid off in cancellation of war contracts.

Meanwhile there was a wave of strikes during the last two months in New South Wales coal mines. Miners' organizations in New South Wales late in November called for a strike of all coal miners in the state because the Federal government had refused to intervene in the steel works disputes.

Nine days ago the miners voted for the state-wide walkout and coastal seamen also quit their jobs in sympathy. The miners also are demanding a 40-hour week, three weeks' vacation with pay and higher wages.

The decision was taken by a show of hands vote with 2,700 of the less than 5,000 miners attending voting in favor of the strike. The New South Wales mines employ a total of about 18,000 men.

The strikers themselves number only 36,000 but the walk-outs have affected thousands of employees in other industries. New South Wales is the biggest coal-producing state in the Commonwealth. The railways and gas companies of all the states except Western Australia and almost all the electricity generating plants in New South Wales and South Australia are dependent on New South Wales.

China Capital Dances Again

Chungking (CP)—This wartime capital of China is dancing again, jamming the halls to the point of suffocation despite a cover charge of 1,400 Chinese dollars.

It was illegal to dance in Chungking during the war, but as concession to American forces authorities decided to allow about a half dozen dance halls to open.

There were built at great cost and were just about ready to open when the war ended and the exodus of the Americans began.

But the halls are prospering anyway, because the eager Chinese seem to be trying to make up for all the fun they missed during the long and sombre war years.

The orchestras on the whole are poor, but they play valiantly from opening to 11 p.m. closing time without rest, and the Chinese patrons do not seem to suffer from the discords. Besides the cover charge, Chungking's much-berated synthetic vodka or gin is on tap at 2,500 Chinese dollars the bottle. Hangover comes for free.

Consequently, most Chinese patrons drink the tea and eat oranges.

INCREASED RATION

Winnipeg, Dec. 12 (CP)—W. R. Clubb, Chairman of the Manitoba Liquor Control Commission announced, effective immediately, that the quota of spirits in Manitoba is raised from two bottles to three per month. The former quota was two 26-ounce bottles a month.

Only one of the three bottles purchased under the new quota may be Scotch and one must be other than scotch or rye.

RED CROSS GIVES HIM NEW HOPE

Unconscious of the fact that Toronto doctors are consulting on a dangerous operation, his only chance for a normal, healthy life, seven-year-old Albert Gagnon jokes with his pretty nurse in Toronto General Hospital where Saskatchewan Red Cross Juniors are maintaining him. His oesphagus badly scarred when he swallowed washing lye five years ago, Albert will have to have a new one made for him. Red Cross Juniors are giving him this chance for a normal life.

HOUSE CONTINUES

Optimistic Review

The House heard from Trade Minister MacKinnon an optimistic review of trade possibilities with Latin America. The minister said there was good prospect that trade with Latin America, which amounted to $24,000,000 in the first nine months of this year, might soon soar to $200,000,000 yearly. Direct ship connections with South America were expected to facilitate trade in that direction.

"We believe that Canada is destined to enjoy a steadily growing trade with these nations" Mr. MacKinnon said. "It may not be too optimistic to believe that our export trade with Latin America can reach $200,000,000 a year in the immediate future, provided Canadian exporters pay the attention to this market which its potential importance warrants. Our export trade with Mexico alone, for example, might rise to $60,000,000 a year."

The minister also sketched his department's plans for expanding the number of trade commissioners to cover every major trading centre in the world. Commissioners were to be stationed almost immediately in Sweden, Greece, Venezuela and the Netherlands East Indies. Other places where Canada would soon establish trade representatives were Italy, Singapore, Shanghai and Hong Kong.

General promotion of trade had a vital place in the government's over-all program for reconstruction.

Discussion on trade covered a wide field with members talking about lumber, wheat, shipping and tourist business.

Veterans Bill Amended

G. H. Castleden (CCF(—Yorkton) suggested that Canadian farmers should get the same price for wheat exported as paid wheat producers in the United States. The selling price of Canadian wheat was lower as part of a government policy to promote goodwill and to aid people in devastated countries but the difference in the selling price should be carried by the Canadian people as a whole and not wheat producers alone.

Mr. MacKinnon said the price was tied up with the government's guarantee of a minimum $1 price over a five-year period.

He told John Diefenbaker (PC—Lake Centre) he had received no information that Empire trade references were affected by the recent financial arrangements made between the United States and the United Kingdom.

Legislation which forms part of Canada's veterans' charter occupied the attention of the Commons for a good part of the day. One bill amended the veterans' land act and the other consolidated into a new rehabilitation act legislation which was previously introduced by order in council.

The two measures had the unanimous endorsation of the 60-member veterans' committee and so were assured of an easy passage in the house. Several members, however, warned that amendments would be proposed at the next session of parliament.

The rehabilitation bill makes provisions for the payment of allowances to veterans and their families if the veteran is unemployed, is taking vocational training or has started a business which is not immediately providing a return.

Instruments Run The Oddity Scale

New York (CP)—Musical instruments that look like skillets, coffee cups, combs and butter churns make up a collection owned by Dr. Frank Black, music director of the National Broadcasting Company.

With a little repairing, Dr. Black says, the 60 instruments are ready to play. A couple are from Africa and Mexico the rest from China, India, Japan, Java or some other South Pacific island.

Guitar-like instruments predominate. One, built on a gourd, has seven strings with frets adjusted for a half-tone scale, each string producing 10 different tones. An Indian guitar with skin resonator, estimated to be 150 years old, has 19 pegs for strings.

VOTE ON GRANTS

Watford, Dec. 12 — (CP) — Brooke township residents vote June 7 on a by-law which would award annual cash grants of $100 for a five-year period to all returning service personnel who resided in the township Sept. 3, 1939. Extra awards would be made under the plan to totally-disabled personnel.

WINS HER DIVORCE

Hollywood, Dec. 11 — (AP) — Permitting a nightclub singer to disrobe before guests constitutes cruelty, says Slapsy Maxie Rosenbloom's wife. The incident occurred at a swimming party, Mrs. Muriel Faeder Rosenbloom testified yesterday, as she won a divorce from the former light heavyweight boxing champion. She was embarrassed, the 26-year-old one-time school teacher added. Rosenbloom, 39, gave up pugilism to act and operate a nightclub.

Heroism of Underground

The Allied underworld during the Second Great War wrote a deathless story and achieved much that can never be brought to light because of the vast compass of the operations and the dangers among which they lived and moved and did their great work. An A.P. story by Cynthia Lowry yesterday referred to "underground railways" which delivered to freedom some five thousand Allied airmen who had come down in German territory.

Indeed so great is the appreciation of the services of the underground that Britain and the United States, it is said, will present thousands of medals to workers in the underground. The story told in inspiring words the deeds of the underground army of princes and paupers, peasants and landowners totalling 40,000 who combined in this extremely dangerous work.

When the full story of the men and women and children of the underground is told, it will be a marvellous record of faith and courage for capture and detection would have meant certain death.

In the words of the underground bureau spokesman who was quoted, "for every aviator that reached England safely, at least one Frenchman, Belgian, Dutchman or Czech was shot somewhere along the line by the Germans for helping him."

The tribute that never has there been a case discovered where a flier was betrayed in the resistance movement is a proof of the staunchness and loyalty of the people of Europe.

Too great honor cannot be done these people whose names are still kept secret as well as the names of the rescued.

Making Shopping Easier

The Christmas season is the most festive season in the year. In general, people cast aside their worries and cares as much as possible to concentrate on the joys and spirit of the season.

With Christmas, however, comes the difficult task of selecting suitable gifts for relatives and friends. This is where the trouble comes. Here are a few practical suggestions to make your shopping easier.

First of all, do your Christmas shopping as early as possible (there isn't much time left.) This will give you a better selection and the stores won't be nearly as crowded. It will also save a lot of last-minute worries and make things easier for the clerks to give better service. Try shopping in the morning for better results.

This is Canada's first peacetime Christmas since 1938 and so the buying is heavier than it has been for many years. This means, of course, that there are even more shoppers than before and the stores will be more rushed than ever.

Show a little consideration for the clerks. They are doing their best to help you. Some of them, remember, are just out out of the services, while others have just been hired for the Christmas rush. There are still merchandise shortages. The clerks can't help it so don't take your disappointment out on them. How would you like to deal with grumbling customers all day long?

Be considerate to fellow-shoppers. They, too, have shopping to do and are meeting the same difficulties as you are.

Travel facilities are crowded and once again it is not the fault of the bus drivers. They put in long tedious hours serving you so try to be appreciative and help where possible. Buses provide limited accommodation and there's nothing that can be done about it. Others have the same right to travel as we have, so show them the same consideration as we expect of them.

If all of us follow these suggestions, the spirit of Christmas will prevail and the shopping problem will be a lot pleasanter.

When Ignorance Was Bliss Indeed

French people are still grinning over the narrow escapes of Resistance workers like that of the leader of the Lyon area who arrived at the station one morning during the occupation to find French police opening every third suitcase. He happened to be carrying a small one — filled with anti-German pamphlets! Then he spotted a 12-year-old urchin lugging a huge valise.

"Hello there," said the Resistance leader, "how about trading suitcases. Yours seems to be very heavy."

"Gladly, sir," replied the youngster.

The man knew that if caught the child could easily clear himself and in the meantime he would make good his escape. However neither was stopped and a second exchange of suitcases was made in the safety of the courtyard.

"Thank you, my lad. You have done me a great favor. Do you know what is in my suitcase? There were anti-German tracts," confessed the Resistance leader.

Looking him straight in the eye the youngster replied artlessly, "Oh that's all right. In mine there were three submachine guns."

Junkers Junked!

(Ottawa Journal)

The Prussian Junkers have been taken in hand by the Russian administration in the Soviet zone of occupied Germany, and the result may be a deep significance in the future of Europe.

It is announced in Berlin that 7,000 large estates belonging to the Junkers class of wealthy landlords, with an aggregate area of some 4,000,000 acres, have been seized and broken up into more than 220,000 small farms. These estates were concentrated in the provinces of Saxony, Brandenburg and Mecklenburg, which they dominated and from which the power of the Junkers spread until it colored the training and the mentality of generations of Germans.

This Junker class for decades has been a bad influence on a Germany singularly capable of being misled. The Junkers thought of themselves as the aristocrats of their Reich. They were haughty and arrogant, dedicated to the cause of special privileges for themselves. They believed in war, and especially in conquest, and gave the German army so many of its higher officers that largely they set its pattern of ruthless efficiency.

The Junkers supported the Kaiser because he was useful to them. They switched to Hindenburg and made him their tool. They took up Hitler, and worked comportably with him in his program of aggression because that suited their ends. Now Hitler is dead, Germany is flattened, the glory of the Junkers is departed and their properties are taken from them. It is a good job to have done.

What happened to the Junkers themselves is not told us — perhaps each was permitted to keep one of these 20-acre holdings.

Yule Log for Museum

A log of wood, representing part of the trunk of an extinct form of elm or honey locust, has recently been placed on exhibit in the provincial museum. The fossil was found in sandy layers of rock at the Don Valley Brickyard in Toronto. These sands were laid down in the bed of an ancient lake which covered the region about a quarter of a million years ago, between the retreat of one great ice sheet and the advance of another. From the general character of the fossil plants and associated shell-fish remains, found in these layers of sand, it is believed that the climate was somewhat milder than at the present time, —possibly similar to that of Ohio or Pennsylvania today.

Newspaper Facts

The amount of newsprint required to publish Canadian daily newspapers for a year would form a continuous strip five feet wide and over one million miles long.

Any young chap who thinks it's "smart" to carry a revolver in his pocket should note what happened in Hull. There a youth of 19, found with a loaded revolver and a box of shells, was convicted by Judge Roland Millar and sent to prison for a year. It was a stern penalty, but just, and should be an example and a warning.—(Ottawa Journal.)

SIGNS

No doubt of it! The day is near—
The gladdest day of all the year,
The day, of all the twelve months' sum,
The children think will never come,
And of the festal days they know,
The one that swiftest is to go.
No doubt of it! The signs are clear,
That Christmas Day is drawing near.

Behold them now! How still they wait
At supper time for cup and plate!
How seldom now such cries as these:
"I don't want carrots, beets or peas!
I don't want spinach! Don't want bread.
I just want chocolate cake instead."
But, hoping Santa Claus will see,
They eat their food, whate'er it be.

Observe them both at close of day
Pick up and put their toys away.
Now hear with what delightful ease
They say the gracious: "If you please."
Not once for days has either tot
To wash both hands and face forgot.
'Tis plain by all we see and hear
They know that Christmas Day is near.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

DEC. 12TH., 1925

At the annual meeting of the Kiwanis Club last evening Charles E. Hanna, ex-M. P., was unanimously elected President for the year 1926. Other officers elected are: Vice President, Jack McIntosh; Secretary-Treasurer, George Griffin; District Trustee, Harry Greenleaf; Directors, F. R. Wotten, Dr. F. E. Mallott, J. L. R. Gorman, A. B. Collins, Dr. G. S. Cronk, George K. Lee, George Cole and Fred S. Deacon.

Mr. Walter E. Wiggins, Warden of Hastings County, who retires this year, entertained the members of the council and many friends at a banquet in the dining room at Hotel Quinte last evening. The affair was most enjoyable. During the evening Mr. Charles S. Rollins, ex Warden, presented a gold headed cane to Mr. Wiggins on behalf of the members of the county council. For twenty five years Mr. Wiggins has served well in municipal affairs in this county.

DEC. 12TH, 1915

The first of the final games in carpet bowling between the Sons of England team and the Alpha Club team was played in the Tabernacle hall. The final score was 41 to 39 in favor of the Alpha team. It was a snappy game from start to finish and all present enjoyed the sport. The following composed the teams: Sons of England—P. Fisher, E. A. Ridley, H. Lennox, J. Bly, G. Barlow and H. Yorke. Alpha Club—W. F. Peake, B. Kelly, R. Goose, B. Frederick, W. Robinson and W. Ashley.

The Rev. F. S. Dowling of Deseronto has been called to the pastorate of St. Andrew's Church in St. John, N.B.

Mr. L. W. Buller, C.N.R. agent here has left for Ottawa to which city he has been promoted. He was a resident of Belleville for four years. Prior to his departure his staff presented him with a handsome club bag and a leather cigar case.

40 YEARS AGO

DEC. 12TH, 1905

Judge Dean of Lindsay, a former well known and much respected resident of Belleville died in Lindsay yesterday. He was a brother-in-law of ex.-Mayor Curtis Bogart of this city. He was a prominent member of Bridge Street Methodist Church when living here and taught a large class of ladies in the Sunday School. Interment will be in Belleville Cemetery.

At a regular meeting of Lydford Lodge Sons of England the following officers were elected: President, N. Cousins; Vice President, J. Peck; Secretary, G. R. Brown; Treasurer, John Newton; Chaplain, John B. Harker; Physician Dr. W. W. Boyce; Committeemen, W. Hutchinson and C. Hardwick; Inside Guard, G. Hale; Outside Guard, T. Soal; Auditors, H. F. Ketcheson, S. K. Wedden and R. H. Ketcheson; Trustees, J. L. Tickell and W. Rodbourne; Representative to Grand Lodge, John Newton.

50 YEARS AGO

DEC. 12TH, 1895

A year ago Sir John Thompson, Prime Minister of Canada, died at Windsor Castle. He was in England on government business.

The curling rink and the skating rink have been flooded and we should soon have good ice.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Prime Minister of Canada, is home on a short visit.

The whistle at the G.T.R. shops was frozen this morning and consequently could not send forth the call to work at seven o'clock. About nine o'clock it was thawed out and blew to its full extent. Residents in the neighborhood of the station thought a fire was in progress and rushed to the shops and discovered that the whistle was determined to do its job, even if a few hours late.

The Rev. C. J. H. Hutton, Rector of Christ Church, spent yesterday in Kingston.

Mr. James Walker is now the oldest native of Belleville residing in the city. He is 83 years old and is as healthy and vigorous as a man of his age could expect to be.

London Letter

By STUART UNDERHILL

(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, Dec. 12 (CP)—Sightseers whose sixpences tinkle merrily into the cash-box of the leading show on London's new "amusement row" — Epstein's "Jacob and the Angel"—come out minutes later looking uncertain as to whether they've had their money's worth.

The giant statue plays to a steady crowd of curious lured in from the pavements of Oxford Street, where a score of sideshows are opening up among the stores of that busy shopping thoroughfare.

"Jacob" is regarded as the top attraction. Billed as "4 1-2 tons of thrills" and on view only to those over 16, it vies with such attractions as the "Horrors of Belsen" and "Wonders of the World" which occupy adjacent arcades.

A recording repeats an endless vocal invitation to enter and inspect the alabaster figures which represent the Biblical Jacob wrestling with an angel. Most of the observers seem a little disappointed as they circle critically about the stand.

Proprietors of the Oxford Street establishments are said to take in between them more than £1,000 a day. They have no licences to pay unless they install gambling machines since in the words of George Honiball, manager of Wonders of the World, "these are cultural shows."

Sideshow proprietors insist their exhibitions are "here to stay," along with the innumerable shooting galleries and pin-ball machine establishments which flourish in London. The latter exist in nearly every district, drawing soldiers on leave and idlers of all ages. As earnestly as any Canadian logger on a spree they bang away at moving plaster ducks and drop endless pennies into complicated pinball games.

Probably many of them are there simply because they couldn't get into a movie, all of which—in the downtown area at any rate—require patient queueing to obtain a seat.

Canadians at home would probably find the substitute pretty dreary, but wanderers in search of entertainment can't be choosy in the London of today.

SICK RETIRED DETECTIVE GETS HIS MAN

Detroit, Dec. 11 — (AP)—Otto Dieball, 54, is a pretty good detective, even in bed. Retired from the force and bedridden in hospital, he became suspicious when he saw a man prowling around a car outside his window. He ordered his nurse to call police who arrested Clarence Strickland, 27, and charged him with attempted larceny.

28 CANADIANS INVESTED

London, Dec. 12 (CP Cable) — Twenty-eight Canadians received awards from the King at a Buckingham Palace investiture Tuesday.

The decorations included nine Distinguished Service Orders. Maj. Vilhelm Roger Schjelderup of Courtenay, B.C., received the D.S.O., Military Cross and Bar.

Mackenzie's Column

By DE WITT MACKENZIE

London, Dec. 12 (AP)— War has brought Britain a heavy increase in divorces, most of which have been based on infidelity, and in addition to those that actually have reached the courts there has been a flood of matrimonial upsets which have been adjusted through the kindly offices of welfare societies.

This seems so contrary to the ultra-conservative character of the Briton, who always has been averse to washing family linen in public, that in searching for the reasons one naturally comes up against the question whether there has been any change in moral standards.

I have been delving into this highly important subject in many places, including the crowded tenement district of South London, and have talked with three British experts —one military and two civilian — who are engaged in handling thousands of so-called "poor person's cases," that is, the cases of people who have not enough money to finance litigation without aid.

Moral Standards The Same

This widely experienced trio agrees that a slump in moral standards is not among the reasons for the increase in divorce. There obviously has been a slump in conduct, due to the extreme circumstances created by the world conflict but the moral outlook is held to remain about the same.

If this seems paradoxical in view of the fact that most of the divorce cases are based on adultery, it may be explained by the fact that atomic age society reveals what it used to conceal. When I first came to Britain during the First Great War, Britain as a whole regarded divorce as a disgrace, quite apart from the religious condemnation of it. Then, too, there was the code which held that Caesar's wife must be above reproach, but that Caesar himself could raise a fair amount of devil without rebuke.

There was one divorce law for men and another for women. These were based on the theory that the man was lord and master of the family by divine right, and that by the same token he could do no wrong through infidelity.

Were Fewer Rights For Women

A husband could divorce his wife for misconduct, but she could not divorce him on that ground. She had to prove some other matrimonial offense in addition to infidelity.

This freedom of the male was well illustrated in a conversation which I had with an Englishman, of good education and considerable wealth, on one of my early voyages across the Atlantic. After several days of acquaintance he said to me:

"I have a profitable business, a good home, a charming wife to grace my table, two lovely children—and I have a mistress. What more could a man need?"

Conduct which in those days was widely condoned might easily land him in the divorce court today, although his moral attitude would be the same in both periods. This is a circumstance which is not peculiar to Britain, for we see it in many other countries, including the United States.

In 1938 parliament altered the divorce law so that a woman could get a divorce for adultery, desertion for three years or more, physical—not mental—cruelty and incurable insanity. The result was an immediate heavy increase in the number of suits filed. This slumped temporarily after the outbreak of war, but the present year has seen all previous figures exceeded. This may represent a piling up of war time matrimonial grievances, although the general trend is said to be towards more divorces.

Bretton Woods Agreement Given Second Reading

Ottawa, Dec. 12 —(CP)— Social Credit opposition to passage of Canadian ratification of the Bretton Woods international monetary agreement ended temporarily Tuesday when the Commons voted 177-12 to give the ratification bill second reading.

The legislation now goes to the banking and commerce committee where Solon Low, Social Credit leader, said his party will resume its fight against the measure.

The vote came after the most consistent one-party opposition to any measure presented in recent sessions. A resolution to the Bretton Woods bill was introduced last Thursday and members of the 13-man Social Credit party held the floor practically during the whole debate.

FORMER MEMBER DIES

Toronto, Dec. 12 (CP) —Thomas L. Foster, one-time butcher boy who rose to become one of Toronto's wealthiest property owners and a member of parliament, died last night. He was 93 and nine years ago built his own tomb as a memorial to a successful life.

NON-SURGICAL DRAINAGE OF GALL BLADDER

So-called "non-surgical" drainage of the gall-sac—the little one-ounce capacity bulb or bladder that holds bile and squirts or ejects some into the duodenum (upper part of small intestine) at intervals during digestion; the gall-bladder is not to be confused with the urinary bladder in the pelvis—as devised by Dr. Lyon some thirty-five years ago, involves introduction of the necessary medicinal solutions through a tube directly into the duodenum, and is of course employed only in hospital.

Another method of inducing more thorough emptying or "drainage" of the gall-bladder in cases of chronic cholecystitis (inflammation of gall-bladder), cholelithiasis (gallstones) and the like, was devised by Dr. Knight twenty years ago and is comparatively simple.

The patient goes without food or water for four hours He then takes one tablespoonful of the medicine (to be described below), lies on the right side and does not change position for two hours, taking another tablespoonful of the medicine every fifteen minutes for six times in all. No liquid or food other than the medicine during the two hours the patient lies on the right side. Half an hour after the last dose of the medicine the patient should eat a slice of well buttered toast, or toast, with the yolk of egg.

The medicine for non-surgical drainage of the gall-bladder is prepared by putting 4 ounces (quarter of a pound) of Epsom salts (magnesium sulfate) in a pint bottle, adding one fluidounce (two tablespoonfuls) of glycerin and three fluidounces (six tablespoonfuls) of elixir of lactated pepsin. Shake the mixture up well until nearly all the salts is dissolved—a little may remain undissolved in the bottom of the bottle. The clear upper portion is then ready for use.

Effect of this procedure is (1) to lessen edema or dropsical swelling in gall-bladder area, (2) bring about ejection of contents of gall-bladder into duodenum, (3) relieve distress, (4) produce several bowel discharges of black or greenish color.

Sometimes reduction of edematous swelling of the lining of duct from gall-bladder permits very small gallstones to pass from gall-bladder into duodenum and appear in the bowel discharges. Stones may be found by washing the discharges through a sieve.

If the drainage is successful the patient experiences no pain upon eating oil or fat (butter, egg yolk). If the drainage is not successful fat of any kind taken as food will cause vigorous contractions of gall-bladder and considerable pain.

When the non-surgical biliary drainage proves successful the procedure may be repeated every two or three months. Some patients with chronic gall-bladder trouble keep fairly comfortable and free from distress in this way. It is of no avail if gallstones larger than rice grains are present—only surgery can bring relief in such cases.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Dysmenorrhea

Kindly mail your booklet or pamphlet on exercises one does to correct dysmenorrhea. (M.W.).

Answer—Dysmenorrhea means painful menstruation. The function should be painless. I have a pamphlet "Hygiene for Girls and Health for Women." For a copy send stamped self addressed envelope and ask for it. I wouldn't mind so much paying the freight for you, but we have much better ways to use our time than addressing envelopes for you.

Class A

I'm glad you can take criticism so well and I owe you this report. It was only upon reading your description of Class A Neurotics (in the "green book") that I bestirred myself to get a thorough examination, and, sure enough, the physician found I had pulmonary tuberculosis, so here I am, getting on wonderfully in the ———san. I hope you will continue to impress upon people who drift along with the notion that they have "weak nerves" the importance of undergoing proper medical examination. (M. K. T.)

Answer—I have been trying to do that for many years. Only exceptionally does the misguided "neurasthenic" individual take it as possibly applying to him or her. Any reader who asks for it in writing and sends twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope may have a copy of the green book "Nerves and Nutrition." In it the distinction between Class A and Class B neurotics is described—and remember, neurasthenics, this is a free country.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

How did "sirloin" originate?

The derivation of "sirloin," meaning the upper and choicest part of a loin of beef, is interesting chiefly because of a popular story told in connection with it.

"Sirloin," according to this story, arose from the fact that James 1 of England, while in a merry mood, knighted a choice cut of loin of beef and dubbed it "Sir Loin."

In 1617 James returned from a visit to Scotland and passed through Lancashire. Three days were spent in dining and making merry at Houghton Tower, near Blackburn, where, says John Roby in "Traditions of Lancashire," the knight-making monarch "was more witty in his speech than usual."

"Whilst he sat at meat," to quote Roby further, "casting his eyes upon a noble sirloin at the lower end of the table, he called out, 'Bring hither that surloin, sirrah, for 'tis worthy of a more honorable post, being, as I may say, not 'sur'-loin, but 'sir'-loin, the noblest joint of all,' which ridiculous and desperate pun raised the wisdom and reputation of England's Solomon to the highest."

The story may be true, for other Lancashire writers refer to it as one of the established traditions of the locality.

But Thomas Fuller, in "Church History of Britain" (1655), makes a statement indicating that a similar story was told of Henry VIII. "Dining with the Abbot of Reading," wrote Fuller, "he (Henry VIII) ate so heartily of a loin of beef that the abbot said he would give one thousand marks for such a stomach. 'Done!' said the king, and kept the abbot a prisoner in the Tower, won his one thousand marks, and knighted the beef."

Later writers erroneously attributed the famous pun to Charles II, the merry monarch.

Of course, the story does not account for the origin of "sirloin," which is obviously derived from Old French "surlonge," from "sur," meaning "upon," "above" or "upper," and "longe," "loin."

But the Oxford dictionary believes the famous pun may have influenced the adoption of the now prevalent spelling. Formerly the word was regularly spelled "surloin."

Samuel Johnson, who was probably the first lexicographer to spell the word "sirloin," says "sir" was a "title given to the loin of beef, which one of our kings knighted in a fit of good humor."

HOPE SHARPEST RECONVERSIONS IMPACT PASSED

Canadian Industry and Workers Look to 1946 for Smooth Shift Back to Peacetime Production

By JACK WILLIAMS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Dec. 11 (CP)—Canadian industry will clak down 1945 as the year of reconversion headaches. At the yearend those headaches were by no means over but there was at least hope in the minds of both employers and employees that the sharpest impact had passed.

Admittedly there was a difficult winter ahead. Industry as a whole went throught most of 1945 geared to intensive war production, able to give only limited attention to the problems that would be inevitable when the war ended.

That end came more suddenly than industrialists, in common with others, had anticipated. It came, too, well toward the end of the year, at a time when employment normally drops off and that added a further complication.

The lapse between VE-Day, May 8 and VJ-Day, Aug. 15, provided a limited cushion in the reconversion of industry to a peacetime basis.

Direct war employment had touched its peak of 860,000 in September, 1943. By Jan. 1, 1945, it was down to 675,000, after VE-Day the trend turned more sharply downward and from VJ-Day on the line became almost vertical until, it was estimated unofficially, there were fewer than 100,000 in war jobs at the end of November.

Augmenting this flow of war workers on to the labor market were the veterans being discharged from the forces, more than 400,000 at the end of November.

Meantime, production engineers were making good time in switching plants from war to peacetime products; but there were inevitable layoffs while equipment was changed and retooling took place. Consumer goods—new cooking utensils, refrigerators and scores of small gadgets — began coming off production lines.

While all this was going on the lines of employment graphs were reflecting a sudden change. The employment line went down while the line showing the number of unemployed rose abruptly. In mid-autumn the two lines crossed and for the first time since the early stages of the war Canada had more people looking for jobs than it had unfilled jobs.

There was still a lot of work to be done. Men were needed in the mines; but they were largely skilled men. Men were needed in woods operations; but former factory workers were hesitant to leave city homes for distant lumber camps. Men were needed for housing; but many of those required were experienced tradesmen and construction was delayed by material shortages.

Those with their finger on the pulse of business and employment conditions believed it would be spring before reconversion troubles would end and Canada would be in the full swing of post-war production.

Mrs. J. W. Ripley and her three children, of Medstead, Sask., who were travelling to meet Mr. Ripley in Hamilton, Ont., where they will make a new home, were shaken up severely in their berths.

FOUNDER OF HICKOK COMPANY DIES

Rochester, N.Y., Dec. 11 (AP)—S. Rae Hickok, founder and president of Hickok Manufacturing Company, one of the largest manufacturers of men's accessories, died yesterday.

Mr. Hickok began his enterprise in the kitchen of his home, making watch fobs and initialed belt buckles for fellow students at the University of Rochester. In 1909, he purchased a half interest in a jewellery business, later buying his partner's share for $50.

PICTON

Council Orders Brighter Lighting Of Picton Streets

Picton, Dec. 12—The street lights here are to be brighter in the future, town council decided at its final session for 1945, Monday night. Mayor N. McKibbon stated that the higher powered bulbs were taken out and replaced by those of smaller wattage, as a war measure. When Reeve Ralph Warren gave figures to show that cost of street lighting in town amounted to $3,107.54 in 1939, with high-powered bulbs and $3,708.52 in 1945, the the mayor declared that "if the town is paying the same rate we are being defrauded."

Council asked Public Utilities to replace pre-war bulbs in the street lights and that all fixtures be cleaned.

Sewage Proposal.

A. E. Berry, director sanitary engineering division, Ontario Department of Health, wrote re the issuing of a mandatory order for the installation of a sewage system in Picton. He asked for additional information on the plans and financing before the Municipal Board can act.

Alberta Coal.

Council endorsed a resolution of North Bay council which advocated the opening of the market in Ontario and Eastern Canada to western coal.

Building Permits Granted.

Building permits were granted to Don Hill for erection of a neon sign; Bernard Kingsley to erect a shed at a cost of $500 at his canning factory; Sam Vigodda to erect an addition to his abattoir; Robert Cockburn to remodel and build an addition to his machine shop at a cost of $1,000.

Mayor Entertains.

Following the session, Mayor N. McKibbon entertained members of council and town officials at dinner. He expressed appreciation of the co-operation given him. He felt the 1946 council had the approval of the ratepayers in their decision to install a sewage system here, as it had been an issue in the election. Mayor-elect Ralph Warreh paid tribute to the services of the retiring, mayor other council members voicing similar sentiments.

PEKINESE UNHURT

Hamilton, Dec. 12 — (CP)—A small Pekinese puppy got a long free street-car ride when he was pinned to a tram by the safety guard. Puzzled by the sound of barking under his feet, the motorman found the pup four hours after he remembered noticing the guard fell. The pup was unhurt.

Patton's Condition Remains 'Grave'

Heidelberg, Germany, Dec. 12—(AP)—Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., whose neck was broken in an automobile accident Sunday, spent a "good night" but his condition "remains grave," an official bulletin said today.

An earlier announcement said the general was fully conscious, rational and taking nourishment, and that he showed "normally active" tendon reflexes.

One of his nurses said "He doesn't swear like I have heard he does. He tells me not to worry about him and go away, but I have to be there because he never wants to eat or drink. He says he will not unless he gets a shot of whiskey."

Doctors reported there were no signs of improvement in the paralytic condition.

A bulletin on his condition noted he was "cheered by the arrival of Mrs. Patton . . . condition remains grave."

1,500 SCIENTISTS ARRIVE

New York, Dec. 12 — (AP) — The New York Herald Tribune said today 1,500 German scientists and technicians of outstanding reputation have been entering the United States in the past five months to aid American industry in utilizing processes, inventions and manufacturing secrets discovered by Allied agents after Germany's surrender.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas, Dec. 11 (CP)—No. 126 fighter wing, the R.C.A.F.'s largest contribution to occupation of the Continent, is digging in for the winter.

Personnel changes are considerable as men due for repatriation leave are replaced by others who volunteered for the occupation period. Patrols are still flown daily, weather permitting, under supervision of Wing Cmdr. Northcott, Minnedosa, Man.

Squadrons under Wing Cmdr. Northcott, are: No. 411, the Grizzly Bears, commanded by Sqdn. Ldr. Bruce Innes, Battleford, Sask.; No. 412, the Falcon Squadron, commanded by Sqdn. Ldr. D. J. Dewan, Ottawa; No. 416, City of Oshawa, commanded by Sqdn. Ldr. J. D. Mitchner, Saskatoon, and No. 443, Hornet Squadron, commanded by Sqdn. Ldr. C. D. Bricker, Grenfell, Sask. Commanding Officer of 126 Wing is Group Capt. W. E. Bennett, Halifax, member of the R.C.A.F. since 1928.

Social facilities for Allied officers in Hamburg—a few miles from 126 Wing—consists of an elaborate setup in the Atlantic Hotel and the Officers' Country Club. A "Canada Club" is to be opened in Hamburg for other ranks—exclusively for Canadians—in addition to the existing Broadwater Club.

Under Flt. Lt. Vince Forbes, Vancouver, preparations are being made for winter sports, outdoors and in. Popular games are soccer, golf, basketball and volleyball.

Capacity attendance has been reached at courses of Christian Citizenship, organized by Protestant chaplains of the R.C.A.F. for airmen and airwomen stationed in Britain.

Nine courses, held at Stratford-on-Avon and lasting a week each, deal with Christian ethics. Christian personality, and the Bible. Sqdn. Ldr. H. R. Ross of Red Deer, Alta., now in charge of the courses said: "Only a few of the students plan to make the ministry a career but most of these young people will become leaders in their home churches when they return to Canada."

Assisting Sqdn. Ldr. Ross as teachers are Sqdn. Ldr. Oliver Nugent of London and Cobourg, Ont. Sqdn' Ldr. Nugent replaced Sqdn. Ldr. DeCourcey Raynor who withdrew because of illness at the end of the fifth course.

Lady Frances Ryder, who is running one of the largest Servicemen's "private hospitality" organizations in Britain, announced in Bournemouth that she is trying to arrange for the continuation of the scheme through post-war years.

Lady Ryder spoke in reply to an expression of the R.C.A.F.'s appreciation by Group Cpt. H. G. Richards, commanding officer of Bournemouth Repatriation Station. Records show that between the start of 1944 and July this year nearly 25,000 R.C.A.F. officers and airmen were invited to meals in private homes, dances and other entertainment; and more than 74,000 R.C.A.F. men and women called at the Bournemouth and London centres.

Report Received With Skepticism

Chungking, Dec. 12 — (AP)) — The Chinese Central Daily News reported from Peiping today that Russians have agreed to assume responsibility for clearing non-National troops out of Manchuria. The report was received here with some skepticism, however.

If true, it would entail a virtual Russian campaign against Chinese Communist troops in Manchuria. Most observers here considered such an eventuality most unlikely. Russians have, however, agreed to help Chinese government forces move into key Manchurian cities.

The Chinese government's information minister meanwhile denied reports that negotiations have been or are in progress for establishment of United States naval bases in China. The minister, K. C. Wu, told questioners at a press conference today that "these groundless rumors have been spread by certain quarters to mislead the public and create international misunderstanding."

MUST HAVE ALL SERVICES

Windsor, Dec. 12 — (CP)—Beer and wine authorities will not be granted in future to hotels that do not offer all hotel services, Judge W. T. Robb of Orangeville, chairman of the Ontario Liquor Authority Control Board, said yesterday. The Board, considering applications for new licences, is to meet in Hamilton today.

Group Captain Tommy Atkinson Has Been Retired

Winnipeg — Canada's number one airman, Group Captain H. H. (Tommy) Atkinson, has retired from the service after 25 years with the Royal Canadian Air Force.

G/C Atkinson, lately senior staff officer for supply and organization at No. 2 Air Command Headquarters, Winnipeg, was the first man taken on the strength of the infant R.C.A.F. in 1920, transferring from the Royal Air Force to the Canadian Service with the rank of Warrant Officer First Class. His airman's regimental number was "1".

Commissioned in 1939, he served at the R.C.A.F. Station, Trenton, as adjutant and later senior administrative officer. He also acted as Chief Instructor and Officer Commanding the R.C.A.F. School of Administration there. He took up his duties at No. 2 Command Headquarters in 1942 and senior personnel staff officer, and later took over the position which he filled with distinction until his retirement, November 28.

NEW RECORD MADE

New York, Dec. 12 — (CP) — The B-29 "Dreamboat" last night established a transcontinental airplane record of five hours, 31 minutes and 44 seconds between Burbank, Calif., and La Guardia Field, New York.

WEDDINGS

WENSLEY—WEESE

In a beautiful setting of chrysanthemums and ferns at Bridge Street United Church on December third, at 2.30 o'clock, a quiet wedding ceremony was solemnized by the Rev. Doanld C. Amos, in which Geraldine Ethelwyn, daughter of Mrs. M. B. Weese, and the late Morton B. Weese, was united in holy matrimony to Kenneth A. Wensley, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. T. Wensley, of this city.

The bride looked charming in an afternoon dress of ice blue with corsage of gardenias. She wore a wine feathered hat with gloves and shoes to match. She was attended by Miss Freda Donaldson wearing a black and turquoise dress with matching hat and corsage of Sweetheart roses.

The groomsman was Mr. William Van Tassel.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother for a few close friends.

The happy couple left by motor for a wedding trip through New York State, the bride wearing a grey and black ensemble.

BRIDE-ELECT HONORED

Stirling.—A popular December bride-to-be was the recipient of a delightful kitchen shower at the home of Mrs. Wm. Drewery, 4th Line of Rawdon, on Thursday, Dec. 6, by a large number of friends.

A decorated chair was placed for the guest of honor, Miss Phyliss Vance, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Vance, whose marriage to Mr. John Sheridan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sheridan, takes place this month.

Following a short musical program, Dougie Harding wheeled in a decorated baby carriage filled with black and white graniteware. An address making reference to the popularity of the honored guest and the high esteem in which she was held by her many friends, was read by Verna Sutherland.

Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess.

Evolution of Santa Claus Explained To H&S Assoc.

The Spirit of Christmas filled all minds at the regular meeting of The Queen Alexandra Home and School Association last night. Mr. and Mrs. John Deacon led in the singing of Christmas carols and the spirit of the season was further emphasized by Mr. Deacon's two delightful solos "O Holy Night" and "A Christmas Candle".

Leading up to the main discussion "What to Tell the Children about Santa Claus", was a clever skit written by Mrs. D. Marshall and enacted by Mrs. Sherman, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Seldon and Mr. D. Marshall. Mrs. W. L. Langlois then led the discussion. The main points emphasized that we must tell our children truths, not falsehoods, that Santa Claus is the spirit of Christmas touching the hearts of all. No one has ever seen him, the Santas in parades and over the radio are people dressed and acting the way they believe the real Santa would dress and act. When the child is old enough to inquire who fills his stocking tell him the truth, do not evade the issue. The parents fill the stocking because Santa, being a Spirit, needs help to do his work. It must be explained and illustrated to the child that many of the most precious things in life are neither seen or heard. Since Santa is a spirit he works through all people who love little children, through parents, aunts, uncles, cousins and even through the child himself who has now grown old enough to help bring the Spirit of Christmas to his younger brother or sister or to a little friend who may not happen to be as fortunate as himself.

Mrs. Langlois then told the story of St. Nicholas, who loved Jesus very dearly and who also loved little children. On Christmas Eve it was his custom to have gifts for all the little children, but he himself was never seen nor ever wanted thanks for these gifts. After his death his spirit lived on and spread to many lands and took different forms according to the climate and habits of the people living there. In our northern country he became Santa Claus and we picture him with a sleigh and reindeer and a warm workshop. Our picture of Santa was created for us by the poem "Twas the Night Before Christmas", written one hundred and twenty years ago by Dr. Moore, of New York.

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. H. R. Gibson and the thanks of the Association extended by Mrs. Geo. Wishart, Preceding this discussion was the business part of the meeting, Mrs. das Street, and that a stop-light siding. Mrs. Gordon Barclay, reporting for the Safety committe, stated that special precautions were now being taken for the safety of children crossing Dundas Street, and that a stop-llight would be placed on the corner of William and Dundas Streets. Mr. John Deacon, convener of Cultural Aids was appointed representative on the Belleville Film Council. From 7.30 to 8.30 the teachers were in their class rooms and were visited by the parents. The rooms of Miss MacPherson and Miss Elson were tied for the attendance prize so each were awarded the full amount.

Coffee was served with some of the fathers, dressed in Santa Claus costumes, doing the serving

Women's Activities

THOMASBURG W.A.

Thomasburg.— The December meeting of the Anglican Woman's Auxiliary was held on Friday evening at the home of the President, Miss Emma Porter, with a fair attendance.

The Secretary read a report of the November Diocesan Board meeting and the Dorcas Secretary read a letter of acknowledgment from the Indian residential school at Elkorn, Manitoba, for the bale of clothing sent recently, as well as a letter from the Diocesan Dorcas secretary.

The treasurer at this time was asked to give the annual financial report for the year and the president spoke of the past year's activities, hoping that greater things could be accomplished in the future and thanked all for their past co-operation. A vote of thanks was extended to the president for her many services of the past.

Following a business discussion arrangements were made for the annual Christmas meeting to be held shortly.

THOMASBURG W.A.

The Women's Association of Thomasburg United Church sponsored a concert and lecture in the Oddfellows' Hall on Wednesday evening, along with a sale of home cooking and fancy work. The proceeds of the evening were very gratifying and the evening's entertainment was one of the most enjoyable to be presented in the village in some time.

Rev. Bernard Heywood was the chairman for the evening and troduced Rev. J. W. Houston, B.D., minister of the Tabernacle United Church, Belleville, who served as a chaplain overseas. Rev. Mr. Houston gave his audience a very interesting story of his life as a chaplain of the army in Canada, in England, and lastly in the theatre of war in Europe.

Mr. Donald Elliott, of Napanee, was held in vocal numbers and Misses Jean and Marion Sills of Plainfield, also favored with vocal numbers with guitar accompaniment.

At the close of the evening's entertainment, the ladies of the Association served refreshments.

HALLOWAY W.M.S.

Halloway.—Mrs. Earl Snider was hostess at the December dinner and meeting of the W.M.S. after a sumptuous dinner, Mrs. Ed. Emerson took charge of the Christmas and candle-lighting service with Mrs. John Townsend lighting the candles. Mrs. Emerson welcomed the ladies of Zion Hill Auxiliary who were present. Mrs. Roy Sills favored with a solo "O Little Town of Bethlehem". Mrs. Denyes brought greetings from the Zion Auxiliary. The meeting closed with prayer and the members of the Baby Band were each presented with a box of candy, nuts. The proceeds of the dinner were $7.40 and from the Baby Band gift boxes, $5.80.

T.O.G. CLUB

The regular monthly meeting of the T.O.G. Club was held last night at the home of Mrs. Hopkins, West Bridge Street, under the direction of Ruth Ireland. The meeting was opened by carol singing. A worship service was conducted by Ruth Ireland, assisted by Kay Beattie and Lois Liddle.

During the evening gifts were wrapped for the Victor Home in Toronto. Later, games were played and refreshments were served.

MELROSE W.M.S.

The annual meeting of the Melrose W.M.S. was held on Wednesday, Dec. 5, at the home of Mrs. F. Davis with a good attendance.

Mrs. C. MacFarlane, 1st vice president, presided and the beautiful Christmas program as outlined in the Missionary Monthly, was presented with Mrs. A. Reilly, soloist, and Scripture readings being given by Mrs. C. MacFarlane, Miss M. McLaren, Mrs. Russell McFarlane, Mrs. J. Milligan, Mrs. English. Rev. Mr. Lougheed conducted the election of officers as follows:

President—Mrs. Jack English
1st Vice President, Mrs. Wm. McMechan
2nd Vice President, Mrs. Russell MacFarlane
Treasurer, Miss Mary McLaren
Secretary, Mrs. C. MacFarlane
Supply Secretary, Mrs. E. Pascoe
Finance Secretary, Mrs. Fred Davis.
Temperance Secretary, Mrs. E. Pascoe
Community Friendship, Press Secretary, Mrs. C. MacFarlane.
Literature Secretary, Mrs. J. Milligan
Missionary Monthly, Mrs. John Weese
Pianist, Mrs. Arnold Reilly
Mission Band Superintendent, Mrs. Jack English
Assistants, Mrs. Clare Weese, Mrs. Arnold Reilly.

MOUNTAIN VIEW W.I.

On Wednesday evening, Dec. 5, the members of the Mountain View Women's Institute held their annual community banquet in the church basement. There were about 65 present. Everyone was seated at tables which were laden with all kinds of delicious food. After everyone had partaken of this grand meal, Mrs. L. Wallbridge, Institute president, called everyone to order and a business meeting and a short program was enjoyed. The program consisted of Community singing. A duet by Sylvia Motley and Marilyn Barber. Song by girls of Mountain View School. Instrumental solo by Miss M. Huff; two vocal duets by Misses Barbara and Shirley Wilson and a humorous reading by Mrs. Clifford Barber.

ST. PETER'S W.M.S.

Madoc.—The annual meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Chas. Spencer with the President, Mrs. Wm. Miller in charge.

The treasurer's report showed a decided increase in givings over last year, the Glad-Tidings' Secretary also reported an increase in subscriptions. Mrs. McCaffrey's took charge for the election of officers, the report of the nominating committee was presented. The officers for 1946:

President —Miss Vankleek.
1st Vice President—Mrs. J. McCaffrey.
2nd Vice President—Mrs. A. Johnson.
3rd Vice President—Mrs. Caverley.
Secretary—Miss Mary Mackintosh.
Treasurer—Mrs. Fred Curry
Expense and Supply—Mrs. Armstrong, Mrs. Hallstone

Sick and Visiting Com.—Mrs. Finch, Mrs. Lewis, Mrs. Caverley and Mrs. T. Blue.
Home Helpers—Mrs. C. Spencrer

Mrs. Millar spoke of the new study book, "Think of Africa". Forty visits were made to sick and shut-ins during November.

The meeting closed with prayer and the Mizpah benediction. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Caverley in serving afternoon tea.

ROSLIN Y.P.U.

The Young People's Union of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Roslin, met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Cross on Dec. 5, with an attendance of forty. Five new membership fees were received. Mr. Foote read a very fitting poem.

The regular progressive crokinole was played with six tables taking part. Winner of the ladies' prize was Doreen Cross while Mr. Glass won the men's prize.

The hostess then served dainty refreshments. All departed thanking the hostess for her hospitality.

BONARLAW

Newly Married Couple Honored

Bonarlaw, Dec. 12.—On Monday evening of this week a large number of friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Ward Luery gathered in St. Mark's Parish Hall and gave the newly-wedded couple a miscellaneous shower of useful gifts.

W. J. Barlow acted as chairman and called Mr. and Mrs. Luery to the platform when an address was read expressing the esteem in which the bride and groom are held by all in the community and wishing them health, success and happiness throughout the coming years. Both Mr. and Mrs. Luery expressed their thanks and asked their friends to visit them.

Refreshments of sandwiches, cake and coffee, were served. Many of those present played euchre and all had an opportunity to have a chat with the bride and groom. They will reside in Bonarlaw.

Scientific studies reveal that among the best-read advertisements are those in comic strip form, those containing recipes, and those with a war message.

Mrs. Ann Shipley Is No Lady--- She's a Mayor

By FRANK HINDS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 12. (CP)—Forthright Mrs. Ann Shipley of Kirkland Lake, a frank 46 years of age and "definitely not size 16," is the only "lady mayor" attending the United States convention of mayors and municipalities here.

But it is more by virtue of her alert, inquiring personality than by her unique position that Mrs. Shipley has made her presence felt at the convention where any interview with her is interrupted by American mayors introducing her to other delegates with "Mayor So-and-So meet her honor, the mayor of Canada."

A member of a Canadian delegation of mayors attending the convention in the role of observers Mrs. Shipley says: "I'm not really a mayor at all—I'm a reeve, serving my third term and entering my fourth on acclamation But it's too confusing to explain to the American delegates the difference between being reeve of Teck township and mayor of Kirkland Lake, so I let it pass."

Mrs. Shipley's reeveship embraces the three localities of Chaput Hughes, Swastika and city-sized Kirkland Lake with its peactime population of 26,000. A widow, she has three 'teen-age children, two girls and a boy.

"Here at the convention or back at home at work, I don't believe in taking advantage of the fact that I'm a woman—I ask no quarter," she said, adding with a grin "and I give none."

"I've done no shopping and won't have a chance to do much, but it doesn't matter because the shopping is so good in Canada. I'm not paying for New York labels, but I'd like to get one dinner dress and all I've seen so far is size 16!

"But I've had a couple of good sea-food dinners—frogs' legs are my favorite dish—and I managed to get to "Oklahoma!""

Asked what she thought of the long-run musical comedy hit, Mrs. Shipley said "I'd better not say—Mayor La Guardia wouldn't like it."

Mrs. Shipley went into municipal politics when years ago she ran for the Kirkland Lake School Board—"My husband's idea"—and went on from there to the reeveship.

"Some day when the children are a little older, I'd like to go into provincial or federal politics, but I take no part in anything but local affairs at the present time—while I'm heading a municipality". Politics. "I'm a Liberal."

Mrs. Shipley sent the tenor of her part in the convention when on the first day, she was halted from entering a convention car by a bland convener who, taking her for the wife of one of the American delegates, asked her to wait for "the cars for the ladies" which were leaving later.

"I'm no lady—I'm a mayor," she protested.

NYLONS ON SALE FEB. 19

Owen Sound, Dec. 11—(CP)—The line forms to the left, folks.

A hosiery firm began running nylon through its machines today and the finished product, along with that of other hosiery mills throughout Canada, will go on sale Feb. 19.

The price? That's up to the Prices and Trade Board.

Kingston Road W.A. Holds Bazaar and Tea

The Women's Association of Kingston Road United Church held their annual tea and bazaar in the church.

The tea table was centred with 'mums and the booths decorated with Christmas emblems. Tea was poured by Mrs. E. Farnsworth and Mrs. T. Logan. Serviteurs were Miss F. Donaldson, Mrs. G. Little, Mrs. F. Farnsworth, Mrs. T. Warren, Mrs. J. Garbutt, Mrs. E. Ridley.

Tickets in charge of Mrs. M. Reid.

Mrs. C. MacDonald, Mrs. Gazely and Mrs. Wilson had charge of the fancy goods. Mrs. H. Walkom, Mrs. La Rue, Mrs. M. Ryan, the homecooking.

The treasurer reported approximately $90 received.

ROVER CAN READ TRAFFIC LIGHTS

Vancouver (CP)—Dogs can read traffic lights. A story describing how a certain dog observed and obeyed traffic lights appeared in a Vancouver newspaper and promptly brought a flood of letters from readers who maintained the story was impossible since dogs are color-blind

However, dogs can distinguish between degrees of brightness. And that's how they can tell the difference between the stop and go signal. All they have to do is remember whether the red light is at the top or bottom of the standard.

Ten-Year-Old Russian Children Held For Slavery

By DANIEL DE LUCE

Nuernberg, Dec. 12 (AP) — Ten-year-old Russian children were kidnapped for slavery in German war factories as part of the Nazi campaign of "extermination through work," according to evidence submitted Tuesday at the war crimes trial of 21 of Hitler's top leaders.

Producing the Germans' own records of mass enslavement of conquered peoples to keep the Nazi war machine running, Thomas J. Dodd, United States assistant prosecutor, said the kidnapping policy was approved by Alfred Rosenberg, the party's official philosopher and fifth-column expert.

Not only were children kidnapped for slave labor but the abduction also of children of "good blood" was favored by the Gestapo to build up Germany's war-depleted population, other Nazi records disclosed.

The Nazi leaders on trial before the international military tribunal earlier in the day's session watched with mixed emotions a documentary film of themselves in the decade in which Hitler seized power and set Germany on the road to aggression and ruin.

Shows German Trial

Titled "The Nazi Plan," the film portrays the rise of national socialism from political street fighters, led by a frenzied ex-corporal, to a terror that swept over Europe. Its closing scenes showed the trial of Germans who attempted to kill Hitler with a bomb July 20, 1944 .

All the footage came from German cameras, including excerpts from an official Nazi party film directed by exotic Leni Riefenstahl and titled "Triumph of the Will." This film depicted the Nazi congress held in Nuernberg in September, 1934.

Officials who edited the celluloid saga of Nazidom, gave the "starring roles" to five of the defendants—Hermann Goering, Rudolf Hess, Joachim Von Ribbentrop, Baldur Von Schirach and Alfred Rosenberg.

But there were also shots of Julius Streiche, Konstantin Von Neurath and Franz Von Papen making statements. Virtually all of the accused could pick themselves out from party and government bigwigs assembled on historic occasions.

Hitler Dominates

Hitler dominated "the Nazi plan," in the film as well as in life. Joseph Goebbels clumped through the lie factory of his propaganda ministry and through anti-semitic outrages. Mussolini, Laval, M. Daladier and Prime Minister Chamberlain had their own mixed moments with the Fuehrer.

Most persons, with a long memory, would recall having seen many scenes from "The Nazi Plan" before in newsreel flashes or in longer features such as Poland's "Baptism of Fire" and "Victory in the West." But pieced together in a monumental documentary, it was offered by the Allied prosecution as visual proof of conspiracy.

Scenes of a Berlin people's court administering Nazi justice to those who sought Hitler's life last year were exhibited only privately to high party members in Germany and so far as can be learned have not been shown to the public abroad even yet.

A raving bald-headed Nazi judge named Freisler was filmed upbraiding Count Schwerin Von Schwanefeld, one of the men accused of plotting Hitler's death, in this language:

"But you are a filthy rascal. Do you collapse under the stress of this vulgarity? Yes or no?"

"No," answered the Count.

"No," screamed Freisler. "You could not even break down because you are a measly little pile of filth which has lost all self-respect."

More Scotch Whiskey Being Made Available

Toronto, Dec. 12 — (CP) — More Scotch whisky is being made available to Ontario Liquor Control Board stores for December than for other months, a Board spokesman said Tuesday.

"I'd say that the Scotch supply situation this month will be easier although it certainly won't be a case of Scotch unlimited," he added.

"The fact is that because December sales are always higher than in other months our distributing organization is allocating larger supplies of Scotch and other liquor to individual stores in December than they would get in any other month."

Asked about a report that every permit holder would be able to get his bottle of Scotch for Christmas, the official said: "I can't say that because . I don't know how many permit holders will want to buy a bottle of Scotch."

The current Ontario liquor ration allows four bottles of spirits monthly — two in the first half of the month and two in the second half — with the provision that only one of the four may be Scotch whisky.

U.K. Govt. Will Set Up Elected Convention In Newfoundland

London, Dec. 11—(Reuters)—Prime Minister Attlee announced toda y that the British government will set up an elected national convention in Newfoundland next year.

He said the convention will be established as early as 1946 as the climate of the big island guarding Canada's St. Lawrence River basin permits.

Newfoundland, first British Colony in the western hemisphere, was a self-governing dominion from 1855 to 1933 when financial difficulties forced it to appeal to the British government. Since 1934 representative government has been suspended and the island has been governed by a British government commission.

Samuel Favors Reopening Palestine To Jew Immigration

London, Dec. 12 (CP)— Viscount Samuel, first High Commissioner of Palestine, was on record today as favoring the reopening of Palestine to Jewish immigration.

Speaking in the House of Lords yesterday, he denied that Palestine was overpopulated and said it was untrue that the development of the Jewish community there was made at the expense of the Arabs. He said that in his opinion the population could be doubled or trebled.

Lord Samuel assailed youthful Zionists for "rampant nationalism...imported from the west," and said the country's progress must depend on co-operation of the Jews with neighboring Arab states.

NEW BASEBALL LEAGUE

Heuvelton, N.Y., Dec. 11 (AP) —Formation of a new Class C border baseball league representing six New York State and Canadian communities has been announced.

John Ward of Ogdensburg was elected acting president of the league yesterday, and William J. Burns, Rochester, secretary.

"Penguins" Will Enable "Muskox" Expedition to Travel in Comfort

By ANDY ROSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Dec. 12 (CP)—A special train will chug out of the railway yards here within a few days bound for Churchill, Man., to deliver 15 spanking new "penguins"—mechanical snowshoes for the army's operation "Muskox," an 80-day, 3,000-mile trek across the bleak sub-Arctic scheduled to start next Feb. 14.

The "penguin," so named by an anonymous draftsman who worked on the plans, is the latest of a long line of military snowmobiles developed under a cloak of secrecy from pre-war civilian models.

Now on the assembly lines stand 15 nearly-completed "penquins," and, much of the success—and particularly the comfort—of the army's ambitious cold-weather military and scientific tests this winter will depend on its performance under rigorous Arctic conditions.

The 10-000-pound "penguin" is a mechanical musher at which any old-time northland trapper or prospector would gape in awed disbelief.

And, who wouldn't on seeing what resembles the cabin of a motor torpedo boat charging through the snow at a 30-mile-an-hour clip.

Getting down to technicalities, the "penguin's" webbed feet are provided by yard-wide steel and rubber tracks operating on 16 pneumatic-tired disc bogey wheels. Sprocket-driven and powered by a rear-mounted engine, these broad treads make ground contact over nearly the entire length and two-thirds of the width of the vehicle.

In the resulting low ground pressure lies the secret of the "penguin's" success in moving over deep snow and soft, boggy ground found in vast expanses of northland swamp and muskeg.

Sitting up front with all-round vision, an operator steers with two levers in the same manner as with all fully-tracked vehicles. Two leather-cushioned double seats face each other in the body of the cab and can be folded down to provide a double bed at night.

A large part of the cab is formed by wide "thermo-glass" windows—non-clouding double layers of glass separated by an air breathing space.

Heat for the cab is furnished in two ways. A unique system blows exhaust forward along a sealed space under the floor and out through both sides of a hollow front bumper. A special heater, independent of the main engine, can heat the cab to "room temperature" in emergencies, such as operations on injured or wounded personnel.

Turkeys Generally More Plentiful Than Last Season

Toronto, Dec. 12 — (CP) — Turkeys for the Christmas festivities appear more plentiful than last year on some Ontario farms, although in other districts smaller flocks are reported, the Ontario Agriculture Department said Tuesday in its weekly crop report.

In Simcoe south and Stormont counties, turkey flocks were said to be larger and more numerous. But in Lambton and Lincoln, smaller marketings were indicated and Muskoka and Temiskaming producers said turkeys would apparently be in short supply.

Plentiful poultry and egg supplies were reported in Lincoln, Glengarry, Nipissing and Sudbury counties, milk and dairy products were generally short of demand.

Poor weather conditions caused delays in corn picking, particularly in Halton and Lambton while in Algoma in Northern Ontario few local potatoes or vegetables were being marketed. Farmers in Middlesex and Lincoln were able to start fall plowing when frost left the ground.

Rough feeds were generally in plentiful supply, although supplies of concentrates were scarce and farmers said seed grain would be needed.

NAVY CALLS OFF SEARCH

Miami, Fla., Dec. 11—(AP) — The Navy yesterday called off its search for 27 Navy airmen who disappeared in six planes last Wednesday. Planes and surface craft which travel the area where the airmen are believed to have disappeared will remain on the alert indefinitely, the Navy reported, "but the special search is being ended as of today."

WAGES ARE NOT THE CAUSE OF THE STRIKE AT BROWNS' BREAD

There is actually no problem relating to wages or working conditions at Browns' Bread that could not be settled—without delay. In fact, if the Union leaders had not interjected the question of compulsory membership in the Union, Browns' Bread employees would have been enjoying any and every increase which the War Labour Board might, as we shall see, have approved months ago. But first—

WHAT ABOUT WAGES AND WORKING CONDITIONS?

As you know, Government Wage Controls apply to all of us . . employees and the Company. Like everybody else, Browns' Bread management has to comply with the Government's anti-inflationary policy. But—to settle such matters as wages and working conditions—there's the Regional War Labour Board. Nothing can be done without, but much can be done with, this Board's permission. For instance, in March, 1944, on behalf of our employees we asked the Board to permit us to reduce the standard working week by 6 hours—from 54 to 48 hours, with the same take-home pay and with the over-time premium increased from time and a quarter to time and a half. The Board agreed. It agreed, too, when we wanted our employees' holiday plan made more liberal; for example, an additional one week's holiday with pay after 5 years' service. Just two examples of many—but I would like you to keep them in mind.

COLLECTIVE BARGAINING IN ACTION

I, myself, on several occasions, invited the Union leaders to come to the factory, study the job classifications and establish wage rates which would then be submitted to the War Labour Board for approval. Never once did the Union leaders accept and act upon the invitation. As far as the Company is concerned we have bargained collectively in all good faith—under Canada's Wartime Labour Regulations, P.C. 1003. Our employees, of course, know that we put before the Union leaders an agreement. It defined the relationship, grievance procedures, seniority provisions, job descriptions with rates of pay, hours of work and general working conditions. We offered a wage structure in line with and often in advance of comparable companies in this area. What then? The next step was simple. For if the Union leaders were dissatisfied with the wage proposals of the company, they had only to apply for a hearing before the Regional War Labour Board—if, that is, they really wanted above all else a new wage structure for the men and women of Browns' Bread. But—in all the months since negotiations opened—the only Board that can possibly authorize any change whatever in wages and working conditions has been consistently ignored by the Union leaders and never has been approached by them. . Meanwhile, any increase in wages granted by the Board to our employees—had the Union leaders successfully applied—has been, and still is, denied to them . . . why?

WHAT DO THE UNION LEADERS WANT?

It is a matter of fact that so-called "union security" has no necessary connection with, nor can it guarantee "job security," as the security of an employee in his job is determined by economic conditions over which no Union has any control whatever. Is it possible, then, that the Union leaders are displaying far more interest in Union Security, as it is termed—in getting something for the Union rather than for the men and women of Browns' Bread? A larger Union treasury, for example, built up through compulsory membership and the dues of "Union Shops" would unquestionably be a decided advantage to Union leaders in competition with rival Unions.

SHOULD NOT SOUND UNION LEADERS TRUST THEIR MEMBERSHIP?

In answer, it may be pertinent to quote the words of a member of the United Mine Workers Union speaking in the House of Commons as quoted in Hansard, November 22nd, 1945:

> "If an organization set up for the purpose of bargaining collectively with the employer justifies its existence, if it is doing the kind of job it should do for its membership, it should have no fear of its membership leaving the organization . . ."

I invite you to consider and find your own answer to the question why, in a democracy, some Union leaders consider it necessary first to tame, with the tyranny of the Union Shop, those whose highest interests they so volubly claim to promote.

THE UNION SHOP — OR NOTHING?

It is not surprising that many of the men and women at Browns' Bread are perplexed. Quite naturally, their minds become somewhat confused by Union leaders who speak in the same breath of (a) the Union Shop and (b) Collective Bargaining, as if they were one and the same thing; and at the same time do nothing about such important matters as wages and working conditions.

In response to the demands of the Union for the anti-democratic Union Shop, this Company, as an indication of a desire to assist its employees in paying their Union dues, offered a voluntary, revocable check-off. Here let me quote once again the member of the United Mine Workers Union:

> "My experience, and I think it is that of many others, over the past 30 years, is that when you harness the membership of an organization so that they cannot back out if they so desire, there is a tendency to create a dictatorship . . . The men are anchored and they must stay whether they like it or not. It should be clearly understood that a revocable check-off is all that is necessary."

Such a check-off has been offered by Browns' Bread.

THIS STRIKE IS ILLEGAL

Let me quote the Labour Regulations—P.C. 1003, Section 21 (1) (b), which reads as follows:

> "No employee shall go on strike until—
> (b) An attempt has been made to effect an agreement under Sections 11 and 12, and fourteen days have elapsed since the Conciliation Board reported to the Minister."

Here are the facts:—The Conciliation Board mailed its report to Ottawa on November 22nd. The Company received its copy at 11:45 a.m. on November 24th. The Union struck at 2:30 a.m. on Sunday, November 25th —less than 24 hours later.

THERE'S NO REASON FOR THE STRIKE

It continues because the Union leaders insist on attempting to obtain the totalitarian powers which they would acquire under a Union shop contract. The Union leaders wish to compel our employees to join the Union—or lose their jobs.

There is not a single matter of disagreement at Browns' Bread which could not have been settled long ago co-operatively, democratically, effectively, for the greater good of all of us in this 50-year-old organization. The Union's demand for compulsory unionism, whether it be the "maintenance of membership" or "Union Shop," is alone closing the door to settlement.

BRIMSEK IS 11TH GOALIE TO START WITH NHL CLUBS

In For Tough Time Because Boston Fans Like Paul Bibeault

By The Canadian Press

Frankie (Mr. Zero) Brimsek's return to the hockey wars from the armed forces was not too happy a spectacle for the former Vezina trophy holder, as Chicago goals into the Boston Bruins' Black Hawks battered eight goal Sunday night, but Mr. Zero's first appearance on home ice at the Boston Gardens tonight might prove a different story.

Brimsek incidently, is the 11th goaltender to start with national hockey league clubs this season, making this year one of the most unusual in this respect only two clubs have used the same goalie in all games to date, Detroit Red Wings and Montreal Canadiens.

Toronto Maple Leafs with three, lead in the number of goalkeepers used. Aldege (Baz) Bastien served for the first five games, allowing 20 goals, after which he was replaced by Gordie Bell who missed 31 shots in eight games. Frank McCool who returned to bolster the faltering Leafs has been in action for four games, passing 14 goals. Bruins Black Hawks and New York Rangers have used two goalies.

Brimsek who replaces Paul Bibeault is in for a tough time, for Bibeault has won great popularity with the Boston fans. He has played in 12 games, allowing 36 goals and at present ranks third among the league's goalie's following Detroit's Harry Lumley and Montreal's Bill Durnan.

Bibeault's future is not too certain at present. Montreal Canadiens still hold title to him, and it is reported that he may figure in a cash deal with Toronto Maple Leafs. Bruins however still are anxious to hold on to him as a stop gap in case Brimsek fails to get back to form rapidly enough.

Mr. Zero's first test on home ice tonight comes against the league's leading goalie, Detroit's Lumley. Outcome of the game will decide the holder of second place in the league's standings. Victory for Boston would lift them ahead of the deadlocked Red Wings and Black Hawks, now in second place, while a Detroit victory would lift the Red Wings to within one point of the leading Canadiens.

Memorial Plaque Won by Former Mayor of N.Y.

(By The Canadian Press)

James J. Walker, former mayor of New York, was selected by New York boxing writers yesterday as the 1945 winner of the Edward J. Neil Memorial Plaque, given annually to the person regarded as having done the most for boxing during the year. Named in honor of the Associated Press sports writer and foreign correspondent killed in the Spanish Civil War eight years ago, the award will be formally presented at the anual banquet of the boxing writers Jan. 23.

All but 15 of 140 experts polled by the Turf and Sport Digest of Baltimore have picked Louis B. Mayer's three-year-old filly Busher as "horse of the year." It marked the second straight year a filly had run away with honors in the poll. Purchased for a mere $50,000, Busher won 10 of her 13 races before breaking down and ran her money winnings to $334,035, seventh among the all-time winners.

Maurice (Rocket) Richard of Montreal Canadiens has been selected as the greatest hockey star of 1945 by a committee of American hockey writers headed by Braven Dyer, sports editor of the Los Angeles Times, it was learned at Montreal yesterday . The award will be presented at a dinner in Los Angeles, Dec. 27 and Richard will receive it by proxy as he will not be able to attend.

The 1946 Canadian amateur golf championships, a wartime casualty, will be revived at Edmonton "probably in July," secretary-treasurer B. L. Anderson of the Royal Canadian Golf Association said last night at Richmond Hill.

New York Rangers yesterday sent left wing Al Kuntz and right wing Hal Brown, National Hockey League rookies, to St. Paul of the United States League, subject to immediate recall.

B. E. Singleton, 27-year-old rookie pitcher for Boston Braves, today was sentenced to 60 days in jail with 47 days suspended, for striking another man during an argument. He pleaded guilty to a charge of battery.

CHANDLER WILL HAVE TO CAST DECIDING BALLOT

Baseball Commissioner Must Decide Number of Night Games to be Played

By CHARLES DUNKLEY

Chicago, Dec. 12—(AP)—Albert B. "Happy" Chandler today will make his first major decision as commissioner of baseball since his election last April as the successor to the late Kenesaw Mountain Landis.

Chandler, in presiding over joint session with the American and National league club owners will cast the deciding ballot on the number of night games the clubs will be allowed to play next season. The leagues will vote as separate units, with Chandler casting the third ballot.

The joint session will wind up the annual winter meeting of the leagues which also will decide on the retention or elimination of the bonus system and formally adopt the baseball foundation for promotion of the game.

Larry MacPhail, president of New York Yankees, who installed night baseball in the big leagues when he was in charge of Cincinnati and later at Brooklyn, believes night baseball has gone out of bounds and should be put back in its place. When MacPhail started the novelty at Cincinnati, the limit was seven games. He still believes seven games should be the maximum.

However, the two St. Louis clubs—and Browns and Washington Senators will oppose the seven-game restriction because of their success with night baseball last season. The Cardinals played 40 games under the lights in 1945: the Browns 39, and Washington 33.

The refusal yesterday of the American and National leagues to accept the Pacific coast league as a third major circuit was no rebuff to Clarence Rowland, Pacific coast league president.

"We will be back and not with our hat in our hand," Rowland commented today.

In turning down the Pacific coast appeal, President Will Harridge of the American league, and Ford Frick, National league president, said that the major league club owners and officials recognized the Pacific coast league as "potential major league territory," and offered the coast league the services, if desired, of a co-operating committee to study the problem.

Marriage Annulled On Grounds Husband Of Unsound Mind

Montreal, Dec. 11 — (CP) — Marriage of Garnet Napier Coyle of Westmount, and Marie Loretta Lessard in Lanark, Ont., April 17 1944, was annulled in Superior Court today on the grounds that Coyle was of unsound mind at the time of the marriage.

In rendering judgment, Mr. Justice Pierre Casgrain said Coyle was unable to give a legal and binding consent to the marriage. At the time of the ceremony, and for some considerable time before it, the judge said, Coyle suffered from a mental disorder and in the law of this province "there is no greater incapacity than that arising from the loss of mental faculties."

Chips Off The Sports Block

By GEORGE H. CARVER

A TOUGH ONE TO LOSE

Old Lady Luck slipped an assist to Old Man Condition at the Harty Arena Monday night when the Redmen bowed to the Barriefield Bears by the odd goal in five after a torrid struggle that saw the Reds from the Moira slip down into a tie for second place after perching on the top rung for a week. The Bears now lead the loop with nine points and Locos by virtue of their 5-1 win over Vics on Monday drew on even terms with the Redmen with eight points.

The St. Louis gang can slip back to the top tonight if they can take the measure of Vimy providing the Vics slip in a win over the Bears.

Paced by Leo Goyer ably assisted by big brother Vern, Day and Wardaugh, the Reds carried the pastime for the first two chukkers to their rugged army opponents and at the beginning of the final stanza were one goal up. But the fast pace of the first two periods began to tell on the St. Louis boys and they began to wilt like a wet sack before the army forays. Lady Luck was credited with an assist late in the period when an Army pass from behind the nets slithered into the twine off a Redman skate. It was a tough break.

• • •

However, the setback has not daunted the scarlet-sweatered gang from Front Street and district. A little more attention to positions and that important factor, condition, will put them on the same scale as anything in the league. They are playing good hockey and by the time the playoffs roll around it will take the best Kingston has got to relegate them to hockey oblivion.

• • •

Tonight, as was mentioned before, they tangle with the Vimy squad, and on past performances should rack up a couple of points at the soldiers' expense. Should Vics provide an upset and defeat the Bears, then the Reds can once more look down on the rest of the loop.

LOOKS LIKE A BUSY WINTER

Hockey will ride on the crest of an oldfashioned wave in the city and district during the coming winter according to OHA groupings released yesterday and reports of non-affiliated loops being formed.

Reminiscent of the good old days when special trains, rabid fans, fistfights and verbal arguments waged long into the night highlighted the hockey season here, is the announcement of the Intermediate "A" grouping which comprises Belleville Redmen, Kingston Locos, Oshawa A.A.A. and the Peterborough Legion. Many a bucket of suds has passed below the bridgework of the fans here since the last hockey tale of these four cities, always sports enemies, was told.

• • •

The intermediate 'A' loop looks like the cream of the hockey crop in these parts, and intercity rivals, always aflame through sports activities on softball and baseball diamonds, will receive added fuel this winter. The announcement of the grouping is being received with undisguised delight by fans of this city whose appetite for the game was kept alive here during the war years mainly through the efforts of air force teams.

• • •

A promising array of hockey talent will be seen in the junior ranks, according to the grouping. In the Junior "C" series will be seen Belleville, Campbellford, Stirling-Marmora Combines, Hastings-Norwood Combines, Tweed, Trenton and Picton which will be officially known as the Prince Edward Combines.

Belleville has been officially entered in Junior "B" but the O.H.A. granted them permission to play in the "C" loop with the understanding that they must win the league title in order to participate in the "B" playdowns. It has been suggested that the "C" teams finishing in second and third place play off for the right to enter their group playdowns, but this will be left to the loop officials to decide.

• • •

Don't stop reading yet. There is more hockey fare on the winter menu. An intermediate "B" grouping has been formed with R.C.A.F. teams from Mountain View, Trenton, No. 6 Repair Depot hooking up with a squad from Batawa. There is no information as yet as to where this group will play its games, but more about that later.

• • •

READY TO GO

Convener for the Intermediate "A" group is Frank Buckland, of Peterborough who will conduct his meetings in Belleville. S. R. "Sandy" Burrows has been appointed convener for the intermediate "B" and junior groups with meetings to be held here. All groups must announce winners by March 1st. Mr. Burrows announced today that he will call meetings in the near future to draw up schedules and iron out any group wrinkles which may materialize.

• • •

Teams of intermediate calibre in the northern and nearer districts organized a Trent Valley League the other day, this column was informed this morning. The loop will not be affiliated with the O.H.A. and will embrace squads from Campbellford, Tweed, possibly Madoc, Trenton and Batawa. A special meeting has been called on Sunday next in Marmora for organization purposes.

• • •

SPECIAL MEETING

Not losing any time following the announcement of the junior grouping, representatives of that loop will hold a special meeting in the Hume Arena here on Sunday next at 3 p.m. Teams represented will be Belleville, Picton, Campbellford, Trenton, Stirling-Marmora Combines, Hastings-Norwood Combines and Tweed. Business on hand will be the drawing up of schedules, discussion of appointments of referees, and any other business pertaining to the operation of the group which may come up. It is urgent that a full representation be on hand so that everything can be discussed and all teams have a voice in the matter.

Later it was learned that representatives of a Kingston junior team haye been invited although the squad was not mentioned in the groupings released by the O.H.A. yesterday.

Montreal, Dec. 12 — (CP) — The promised post-war sport revival seems to be getting into full swing, especially as far as new and proposed hands-across-the-border leagues are concerned.

First step in the new cousinly relations cementing process is the new class C border baseball loop that has Granby and Sherbrooke in Quebec and Kingston, Ont., lined up against three New York State squads that fills a long-present gap. Then there's talk going the rounds that the American Hockey League is mulling over the idea of placing teams in several Canadian centres such as Quebec, Ottawa or Hamilton, Ontario.

During the past decade or so, Canadian cities have dropped out of the international circuits under pressure of the rich gates drawn in south of the border. But now some of the minor hockey outfits in the U.S. are lagging in their drawing power, while many Canadian centres are ripe to slice a substantial financial melon.

Three former stars around the N.H.L. are cavorting now in sunny California, with roles in "Gay Blades," now being filmed in Hollywood. One of them, Ossie Asmundson who played for New York Rangers and Detroit Red Wings, is also technical director for hockey sequences in the film. Charley Sands, erstwhile Toronto Maple Leaf, Boston Bruin, Montreal Canadien and Gothamite, is putting in his spare time with the Los Angeles Monarchs in the Pacific Coast League, while Bud Cook is playing with Oakland Oaks. Bud, a brother of the glittering Bill and Bun of Rangers, served a term with Boston Bruins, but more lately has been starring with the U. S. Coast Guard.

Chicago, Dec. 11 (AP)—Jack Zeller, retiring as Detroit Tigers' general manager, isn't getting out of baseball after all. He'll help run tryout camps in Texas cities for the East Texas and Evangeline Leagues, which want to operate as independents and figure they can't pay enough to lure players from more distant points ...The Cubs' Charley Grimm expressed surprise that the Reds managed to waive Woody Williams out of the National League yesterday.

Jeff Heath, the "most traded" Cleveland outfielder who is hanging around the major league meeting to learn first-hand where he's going, says he wouldn't mind being traded to the Yanks or Tigers. They're probably the clubs that want him least.

When Cincinnati Reds were announcing the sale of Frank McCormick someone asked where they got Eddie Shokes, who likely will get the first basing job..The answer from a dark corner was: "from Joe Miller's Shokes Book."

BAGBY OF INDIANS GOES TO RED SOX

By SID FEDER

Chicago, Dec. 12 (AP) — Jim Bagby Cleveland's temperamental right-handed pitcher, was traded by Cleveland Indians to Boston Red Sox today, thereby returning to the leadership of Manager Joe Cronin, with whom he was "a-feudin" when he was last with Boston.

In return for the 29-year-old son of a one-time league pitcher, Red Sox gave the Tribe Vic Johnson, tall, left-handed curve-baller, and an estimated $5,000 in cash, as the ivory market at baseball's winter meetings finally showed signs of life.

Before this deal, the only two big league transactions of the two-weeks major and minor conclaves, saw Philadelphia Phillies buy first-baseban Frank (Buck) McCormick from Cincinnati Reds and right-hand pitcher Johnny Humphries from Chicago White Sox.

Saliva Tests Show Horse In Race Drugged

(By The Canadian Press.)

The Maryland Racing Commission, at a hearing in Baltimore yesterday, heard Dr. James C. Munch, a university professor, declare that saliva tests of the horse Shako, winner of a Pimlico race Nov. 19, showed a positive drug result. The hearing, faced by trainer Clay Stuphin of the Sylvester W. Labrot Stable, was the first on six stimulation charges arising from the Pimlico fall meeting.

The inquiry was featured by the presentation of a brief by the Maryland Horsemen's Protective Association claiming the commission had gone "too far" and racing in that state would be destroyed.

The Major Baseball Leagues' meeting in Chicago yesterday brought out word that Cincinnati Reds had sold Frank (Buck) McCormick their slugging first-baseman, to Philadelphia Phillies for a reported $30,000 and one player. McCormick was voted the National League's most valuable player in 1940.

Paul Courteau of New Haven jumped into second place with 30 points behind Pete Leswick of Indianapolis in the scoring race of the American Hockey League, according to last night's tabulation. Leswick continued to lead with 35 points.

Ace Bailey's University of Toronto seniors romped to an easy 17-5 victory over McMaster University Intermediates in an intercollegiate exhibition hockey tilt at Varsity arena last night. Spearheading the locals was Wally Halder with five goals and three assists. Kosick, Doyle and Bromley each scored twice for the winners.

Avery Brundage of Chicago was re-elected president of the U. S. Amateur Sports Federation which, at its meeting in New York yesterday, reverted to its name of United States Olympic Association.

Major baseball club owners in session at Chicago yesterday postponed decision until tomorrow on the application of the Pacific Coast League for major-league rating.

Through his sharp infighting, Dave Castilloux of Montreal disposed of Juste Fontaine of Milwaukee in 10 rounds last night at Milwaukee. In the semi-final Johnny Gaudes, 126, a local boxer stopped Jean Barriere, 127, of Montreal in the second round of a scheduled eight-round go.

ST. PAUL SAINTS DOWNED 4-3 BY KANSAS CITY

Winners Confirm First-Place Spot in United States Loop

(By The Canadian Press)

Kansas City Pla-Mors confirmed their first-place spot in the United States Hockey League Tuesday night by a 4-3 trouncing dealt to St. Paul Saints at St. Paul. Omaha pulled up into second place with a 5-3 victory over the cellar-dwelling Forth Worth Rangers in a game on Omaha's home ice.

League-leading scorer Joe Schack of St. Paul only managed one assist during the evening in his encounter with the Kansans and his stock dropped accordingly. Fort Worth's Russ Kopak, second man in the scoring lineup, did not show on the scoring ledger at all, however, and Schack's lead seemed secure for the moment.

The Omaha victory was a feat because of the fact that five Knights were not in uniform because of injury or illness. Fred Gibbon of Omaha in the third period broke the deadlock which had held through the first and second frames of the game and a minute later Gordon Howe made it a two-goal lead. Both Gibbon and Howe had scored earlier in the game, with the remaining marker credited to Barry Sullivan.

Hank Blade scored the winning goal for the Kansans — his second of the game — after the Saints had staged a last-minute rally to ring the bell twice and deadlock a game which had looked as though it was in the Pla-Mor bag. The Saints, like Omaha, were hampered by the absence of two players, but their luck was out all round. Bobby Dill and Lloyd Ailsby, both of the Saints, had to leave the game because of injuries.

Kansas' Wingy Johnson scored two of the victors' goals. Bobby Dew, Bob Kirkpatrick and Pechet scored for the Saints.

The Kansans will meet Minneapolis Wednesday night while Tulsa Oilers meet Dallas Texans in the only other scheduled league game.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

LESSON NO. 863
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

When an expert keeps changing ideas, he gathers no standards. Nor do his followers. Nor their neighbors. And so, their procedure in all cases is not constant. It brings on the arguments.

You will hear some of them claim the game would be too tame if confined to a set of rules that were too accurate. It makes a good alibi for those who are not sure that they are correct.

Horse Sense simply rounds up for you the handful of standard rules that are true. Knowing them, if you slip away from the path, at least you know how much. Others may not.

Be sure of your standards for an opening one bid; a hand with better than average in all essential items. Even when it looks weak, you know you are right if your hand has these items.

Be sure of your standards for an immediate one-jump takeout; a biddable suit, six or more tricks, two or more sure tricks. When you have more, this tells you how much more.

You may be one of those birds who like to open a bid short now and then. At least you know what you lack. Or you may like to slip in an underbid on occasion. At least you know what you have over.

Recognize the standards in this pair of hands:

SOUTH
♠A J 10 2
♥9 7 4
♦Q
♣K Q 9 5 3
♠9 8 5 4
♥None
♣A 4

The south hand may look puny with only an ace and a king. But it has the standard needs for an opening of one club; a biddable club suit, five or more tricks, four high cards, two sure.

Without the diamond or club queen, you might take a pot shot at opening that hand. But you'd know there was a high card lacking.

The north hand has much more than is needed for a jump reply of two diamonds. But you know how much more and in just what items.

Therefore, when the bidding comes around again, you needn't be in doubt. You know what surplus you have to work with.

GALT RED WINGS BEAT ST. MIKES BY 5-4 COUNT

Upset Victory Puts Winners in Second Place in Junior "A" Race

(By The Canadian Press)

The rampaging Galt Red Wings, unbeaten in six previous contests, crowned their string of successes last night at Galt by edging Toronto St. Michael's College 5-4 in an upset victory. It was the league leaders' first loss this season and moved Galt up into second place in the junior "A" Ontario Hockey Association standing, two points ahead of Oshawa. St. Mike's now lead by two points.

A hat trick performance by Marty Pavelich, who banged in two counters in the first frame and another in the second gave Red Wings their spark. Lee Foglin and Adamo counted the other Galt goals. Top scorer for St. Mike's was Tod Sloan, who rammed home two counters and assisted on another, while other Toronto goals went to Costello and McKay.

St. Mike's started off in promising fashion, with Costello taking a Sloan to Macell pass for the initial marker and Sloan following it up 23 minutes later on a pass from Sandford. But Pavelich, on successive passes from Wiseman and Davis, tied it up with two late in the period goals.

Pavelich put Galt in front halfway through the second stanza on a Hodgson to Uniac play and the Red Wings made it two up a few minutes later when Foglin banged home a Wiseman pass.

Two minutes later Sloan got one of these back with an unassisted effort.

Adamo made it 5-3 shortly after the start of the last period and both fast-skating teams went without a counter until McKay ended the scoring in 8:33.

The game was relatively clean throughout with only four penalties called, two of them majors.

Unofficial Copy Of Jap Surrender Will be Given R.M.C.

Ottawa. Dec. 11—(CP)—One of nine existing unofficial copies of the Japanese surrender document will be presented to Royal Military College, Kingston by Col. Moore Cosgrave, Canadian soldier-diplomat who signed the Japanese surrender instrument on behalf of Canada.

Col. Cosgrave said in an interview last night he would offer the copy to the college. Among other prized souvenirs are the pen with which he signed the document and an official pass to the former ceremony. He intends to present the latter to Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

AMATEUR HOCKEY IN QUEBEC ENJOYS ONE OF BEST YEARS

Three Loops Operating and Every Game Sees Record Attendance

By PIERRE LE MOYNE

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Dec. 11 — (CP) — After struggling through six years of war under great handicaps and difficulties, amateur hockey in Quebec has emerged as powerful as ever, and is now enjoying one of its greatest booms.

The three top amateur circuits in the Province—the Quebec Senior Hockey league, the Provincial Hockey league, and the Junior Amateur Hockey Association located in Montreal — have been crowded to the limit by fans in all hockey centres.

The Q.S.H.L. almost quit operations last season but decided to carry on with four teams, and now is operating with six, drawing capacity crowds at Quebec, Shawinigan Falls, Valleyfield, Ottawa—where Ottawa Senators and Hull Volants play their home games—and Montreal.

The Provincial Hockey league which disbanded at the end of 1940-41 season "so as not to interfere with the voluntary enlistment of its players into Canada's armed services," has resumed operations with teams from Lachine, Sherbrooke, Drummondville, Victoriaville, St. Hyacinthe, and Cornwall, Ont.

The league applied for senior A status but was turned down by the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association because "it had failed to fulfil its obligations to the Q.A.H.A." However the P.H.L. will be given another hearing when it has completed all Q.A.H.A. requirements such as paying dues and returning players' certificates, and it will probably be classed in the ne[illegible] category.

The Junior Amateur Hockey Association operates with six teams within the island of Montreal and plays all games at the Montreal Forum. It serves as a great training school for local talent.

One-Year Limit On Time Club Can Keep Player

Toronto, Dec. 12. (CP)—Maclean's magazine today turned up the fact that the National Hockey League last June 15 put one-year limit on the time a Club may keep an amateur player on its negotiation list. Previously a player could be kept on a Club's list until he signed, even if he wanted to play with another club.

In an article on "hog-tied hockey," the magazine said when a player's name is on the list, other clubs may not bargain for his services. If they do there's a $1,000 fine.

"A particularly convenient thing about the negotiation list is that although each club in the league is allowed only four players on it, as soon as a player accepts a few dollars and signs his name to a contract his name comes off."

Then he may be placed on the reserve list, with a limit of 25 players and three goalies, or on the contingent reserve list, which has no limit. "Either way, room is left on the negotiation list for another bright young prospect who doesn't know what's being done with his future."

When the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association recently renewed its agreement with the N.H.L., also renewing the negotiation list, "the N.H.L. don't even bother to tell the C.A.H.A. that a one-year limit had been put on the negotiation list."

ST. LOUIS FLYERS TIED FOR THIRD

(By The Canadian Press)

St. Louis Flyers climbed into a tie for third place with Cleveland Barons in the Western Division of the American Hockey League last night when they skated to a 6-4 home-ice triumph over the Eastern Division leading Hershey Bears.

The victory was the third straight for the Flyers who have been displaying greatly improved form in their recent games. Hershey came from behind three times to tie the score, but a late third period rally gave Flyers the verdict.

Morey Rimstad paced the St. Louis attack with a pair of timely goals while other Flyer markers went to Hec Pozzo, George Blake, Bill Allum and Fred Hergert. Jim Drummond, Ken Smith, Gino Rozzini and Peggy O'Neill were the Hershey marksmen.

It was the only fixture scheduled in the A.H.L. last night.

Cleveland invades Pittsburgh for a game with the Hornets tonight and Providence Reds are hosts to the Indianapolis Capitals.

Referees Told To Keep Game Clean and Fast

Toronto, Dec. 11 — (CP)—Referees and team officials were warned that the Ontario Hockey Association intends to present "a clean, fast brand of hockey" this season, the Association announced last night.

"High sticking must go," president George Panter of Gravenhurst told a special meeting on playing rules for referees, coaches, managers and players, the announcement said. He added that "a proper understanding of the rules by all concerned" would make a better game.

W. A. Hewitt, chairman of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, pointed out during the rules discussion that the new offside rule permits an attacking player to have one foot over the blue-line in taking a pass. He is offside if both skates are over the line.

The rule has already shown to advantage by speeding up the game and eliminating whistle blowing, Hewitt said.

REMANDED A WEEK

Whitby, Dec. 12—(CP)—Lorne Cecil Harris of nearby Ajax, yesterday was remanded for another week on a murder charge. He is charged with killing Mrs. Audrey Lyons at her Ajax home last month.

AT THE McCARTHY — Romantic stars of "The Lady Eve," Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda return to the McCarthy Theatre screen in Columbia's gay Wesley Ruggles' comedy, "You Belong to Me." Miss Stanwyck is seen as a woman doctor whose patients are mostly handsome young men; Fonda appears as her insanely jealous husband. Second feature stars Lawrence Olivier in "49th. Parallel."

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

Chicago, Dec. 12 (AP)—In spite of prexy Pants Rowland's tongue-in-cheek emphatic statements, the Pacific coast leaguers feel they've made considerable progress toward what they're after——Even before yesterday's turn-down of the loop's major league bid, Rowland was hinting that it merely was laying the ground work for a more serious effort in a few years after the clubs are able to build new ball parks...On the other hand there's Deacon Branch Rickey's comment: "That's one of the most interesting things about this meeting—this study of the evils of prosperity."... It isn't true that there hasn't been a big deal since the start of the meetings. The Palmer House, the hotel they're being held in, was sold Monday—for about $20,000,000.

Potted Palm Pickups.

While some of the ball clubs are getting discouraged about trading possibilities, Boston Red Sox still are in there pitching offers—thereby causing considerable discomfort to Ted McGrew, who has to pack 210 pounds around as liaison man One of yesterday's hottest reports was that Pittsburgh Pirates have bought Jimmy Brown from St. Louis Cards, but the deal will not be announced until after Jan. 1 Among lobby-standers: Bob Feller, passing out cigars on the birth of his first son and telling about his baseball school.

Cleaning the Cuff.

Red Patterson, national league publicist, is reported ready to take a big job with the Yankees —which led one Gotham scribe to moan: "We come all the way to Chicago to hear a New York newspaperman is changing jobs."

SENTENCED TO HANG

Quebec, Dec. 12 —(CP)— Paul Henri Dery, 26, of Quebec, was sentenced to be hanged March 5 after a Criminal Assizes Court jury found him guilty of murdering his aunt, Mrs. Alfred Giroux, 57, Feb. 17.

Dery was arrested at the scene of the crime, his aunt's home, soon after it was committed and a blood-stained butcher knife and pipe wrench were found in his pocket.

SUFFOCATED IN CELLAR

Niagara Falls, Ont., Dec. 12 — (CP) — Three-year-old Billy Rysdale was suffocated in the cellar of his home last night when trapped by fire of undetermined origin. Firemen worked with inhalators for several hours in an effort to revive the child after he was taken from the burning building.

Norma's grandmother had also lunched at the country club although Jocelyn, Norma and their little group did not discover her until the meal was over. She was then seen to be at a bridge table in a corner room, furiously sweeping open a pack of cards for the cut. She looked approvingly at the little party as they passed by and said absently. "So glad you're having a wonderful time, darling!" and then, in surprise, to one of the women who made up the bridge quartette, "Didn't that child only get here this morning? Good heavens!" after which she observed. "You, Harriet. Mine was a club. Blue pack. No bid," all with the swiftness and definiteness of a flash of lightning.

Jean Kimberley's mother was also at the club—a handsome woman of thirty-five or—six; she come up to the girls, turned a dramatic, intense concentration upon Norma, asked her a dozen affectionate questions, and finally come around to the subject of Phil. How was Daddy? He'd been in New York. Tell him Aunt Jane was glad they both were home.

Jocelyn studied her with great interest as she talked, remembering that Norma had said this attractive grass widow was interested in Philip Fordyce, and when Nita Royce came running down the club steps after them she looked at her too with a little stir at her pulses. She was another who wanted to marry Phil, was she? She was hardly distinguishable from Jane Kimberley, equally animated, reckless in speech, sensationally pretty. But indeed, Jocelyn thought, all these women were pretty.

They went into town in the big Fordyce car, and saw a picture of which Jocelyn had but a vague impression. Life itself was too thrilling at the moment. Afterward they went to a hotel to dance; the girls apparently much amused but, Jocelyn suspected, deeply chagrined at having with them only one young man. However, they picked up two other young men who went to the same prep school as Johnny Kimberley, and after that things became hilarious again. The others had cocktails; Norma had tomato juice and looked sternly at Jocelyn; but Jocelyn shook her head at the cocktails and only went so far as to promise Norma that if her father permitted them she should have them the next time.

At six they dropped the others and went on alone, and then Jocelyn spoke seriously to Norma; "Children your age shouldn't order cocktails in public places like that."

"Children! But my dear," Norma said, dragging the lart word into two syllables, "you're dating yourself! I mean everyone does it, and everyone goes on being quite decent and I mean what's the harm?"

"I don't think you should, and I'll be surprised if your father does," said Jocelyn.

"Oh, Dad!" Norma said with a pitying laugh. "But he's not, after all, any better judge than Mother?" she demanded innocently.

"She knows there's no answer to that," Jocelyn thought. Aloud she said. "But you're with him now. And I think it's for you to set the example, Norma," she added, after a moment. "You're a natural leader; if you set a fashion, they'll follow it."

She could sense that Norma was pleased; a vaguely gratified look came over her sulky little face; she said in a mollified tone: "I'm not even out yet!"

"That wouldn't matter. You're a gentlewoman," Jocelyn said adroitly. "You've been places; you've had advantages that these other girls haven't. And your position will make you important, no matter where you go or whom you marry. Anyway," Jocelyn finished. "While you're with me I don't want you to drink cocktails. And if you're not with me, whom will you be with?" she finished, smiling. "Miss Sanderson is all ready to take up her duties. She feels that I am not qualified to act as chaperon to a girl of your position."

"Who said she did?" Norma demanded, startled into sudden interest in something other than her own affairs.

"She did, herself. She called on me soon after I arrived here. She asked me if I spoke German and French and how much I lived abroad, and I don't think I made a very good showing." Jocelyn's mouth widened into a smile; her eyes were still serious.

"Well, the old busybody!" ejaculated Norma.

When they reached home Mrs. Fordyce's voice and Philip's voice could be heard coming from one of the big rooms upstairs, and Norma went in to them at once, leaving Jocelyn to proceed to her own room, to take her bath and get into dinner clothes. It was after seven o'clock when she crossed the upper hall to see if Norma was ready. She opened Norma's door cautiously, for she had advised a nap before dinner; immediately she stepped in, her face flushing.

The room was striped with tiers of drifting cigarette smoke; Norma was at the dressing table with her gypsy mop of silky, smoky black hair into a tumble, and her talonlike little hands rubbing something into it from a bottle.

"Mattress is at dinner," said Norma of her maid. "And my head was itching. I think I have lice."

The other person in the room laughed huskily at this, without changing his position. He was a youth of perhaps twenty, generously built, with a mop of red hair. He was dressed in golfing wear, and had stretched himself comfortably upon the satin and lacy surface of the bed, cramming half a dozen small pillows under his head, and so being enabled to smile amiably at the women over his cigarette.

"Norma," Jocelyn said, in a tone that did not attempt to disguise her displeasure and shock. Norma laughed, unembarrassed, and the young man immediately sat up.

"Yep; I'm getting your pillows and whatnots all mussed," he said. He yawned and flung his long athletic arms in the air. "Boy, am I sleepy!" he said. "I played thirty-six holes. I was so tired I was an emergency case, but I just heard Norma was back and so in I came, and weaving my way busily upstairs I just dodged what's-her-name-Mattress."

"Norma, your father wouldn't have liked to come in and find you this way," Jocelyn said, still too much disturbed to know quite what course to take. "Hadn't you better comb you hair back and come into the other room?"

"No; she hadn't," said the young man easily, grinding out his cigarette on a tray and rising to his feet with a fresh series of yawns and stretchings. "For I'm on my way. I've not been introduced—Miss Britton? How d'you do, Miss Britton? I'm Charles van der Lipp, three words. My mother thinks it's a French name, and she often pronounces the Charles the French way. But it's Dutch. I'm a little meinherr, eating kloqjes and skating on the Rembrandt van Rijn. Good-bye, my darling," he said to Norma. "I love you with your hair that way. I'm so glad to be free of your boudoir!

"Did he actually walk in here as he said?" Jocelyn said when he was gone. "Do you know him very well? He shouldn't," she went on, shaking pillows and jerking covers straight, "do a stupid thing like that. Mussing things up with his dirty golf shoes!"

She did not look at Norma as she spoke, but she sensed a sulphurous silence over by the dressing table.

"He's my best friend," Norma said presently, in a voice of suppressed fury. "Played with him when I was only six years old!"

"He seems, in spite of his disorderly ways, a nice boy," Jocelyn commented mildly, still busy.

"I happen to like him very much!" Norma said icily.

"You are a silly little fool, and I am another to keep a job like this," Jocelyn thought, "but there is something about this whole madhouse that fascinates me." Aloud she said, glancing at a tray containing two small glasses, "You sent downstairs for cocktails?"

"Certainly!" Norma answered haughtily.

There was a silence. Jocelyn sat down and looked at the other girl. "Norma, that's not nice," she said. "If you don't know that, he should."

"I suppose you know what is nice?" Norma murmured to her own reflection in the mirror.

"I seem to know what isn't," Jocelyn answered, a trifle more sharply than she had intended to speak.

Norma began to speak steadily, in a sort of drone.

"I won't be spied upon, and reported, and talked to," she said. "I don't do anything anyone else doesn't do, and I've not three heads, and there's no use people following me around and making out that everything I do is monstrous! I'm perfectly able to manage my own affairs if I am only sixteen; I'll be seventeen in about another month, and when I'm eighteen I'm of age! If people are nice to me I'll be nice to them, but if my father thinks for one second of an instant...."

"Why she is a mere infant!" Jocelyn thought, watching her part and fluff her hair, and pout as she surrendered it to the ministrations of Mattress, who at that moment came into the room.

"Norma, if you had a daughter of sixteen—" Jocelyn began patiently.

"Which I haven't!" Norma snapped, seeming to feel this a rather apt reply.

"Which you haven't. But if you had, and she was—well, pretty and was someday probably to be very rich, would you let her go about alone to parties and restaurants and dances?"

"Certainly, if I trusted her and if she wasn't a fool, and I'm going to tell my father so'" Norma answered warmly.

"You wouldn't feel that she might get herself into difficulties, find herself in awkward situations?"

"I think people like my father and grandmother and, well, like you too," Norma said calmly, "have filthy minds! What do they think we're all doing all the time? I should hope we had sense enough to keep ourselves out of trouble!"

"But Norma, girls don't. You were talking today of the little Petterson girl who was driving on the Skyline—"

"But that just meant she didn't know how to drive; it didn't mean she wasn't behaving herself!" Norma said, and as she was a creature of brief and changing moods, and as she had pretty well talked herself out of her ill temper, when Jocelyn laughed, she laughed too reluctantly, and they went downstairs to dinner with no further words.

The dinner party consisted of the bridge foursome, two college boys who had come over to pay there respects to Norma, and who were so shy and inarticulate that they needed a great deal of encouragment, and the pretty, talkative girl who had brought them along. Covers had been accordingly laid for nine, and Jocelyn found herself facing her first formal dinner quite composedly, settled as she was among the young people and not obliged to speak during the entire meal if she felt so disposed. But glib as the girls were, and politely responsive as were the boys, they did need some help, and Jocelyn was presently guiding the conversation with all the skill at her command, and was rewarded by more than one flash from the group, and by a sudden description of a submarine's machinery by young Buddy Taylor that amazed them all.

She noted that only one of the boys took a cocktail; the pretty girl, Janet Trent, observing that it gave Mama fits if she did. Philip had been in the group when they came downstairs, looking handsome, Jocelyn thought, in his dinner jacket; he smiled at her once or twice absently as he talked to the other women during the dinner; he did not once address her directly. She was glad to be more or less ignored, because the glitter and elegance of the whole scene was rather breathtaking to her.

EVIDENCE

Dudka told Maj.-Gen. Harry W. Foster, of Picton, Ont., and Halifax, president of the court, he knew it was the 12th S.S. Division which had taken him prisoner because he was told so by an English-speaking Hungarian who added that the Canadians were lucky as the unit never took any prisoners in Russia. This statement was stricken from the court record as irrelevant.

Dudka said he saw the characteristic S.S. dress worn by the Germans at the Abbey headquarters.

Parts of Maj. Learmont's testimony dealing with the grenade Maj. Learmont said Metcalfe carried and identification of the enemy division by Maj. Learmont as the 21st Panzer Grenadier division were reread to the court.

Pte. George P. Talbot, Truro, N.S., the Second Canadian prosecution witness, described the killing of Metcalfe and related two cases in which he believed wounded stretcher bearers of the North Novas and the Sherbrooke Fusiliers were murdered by German guards in Authie.

40 DEFENDANTS

civilians and others in the audience of more than 300.

Of the five doctors on trial, 74-year-old Dr. Klaus Schilling was in charge of medical experiments at the camp and was accused of killing hundreds of prisoners in Malaria experiments. He had begged on the witness stand to be allowed to go on with the paper work on the results, saying he needed only a desk and a chair.

Two of the other camp physicians, Fritz Hintermeier and Paul Walter, were charged with conducting "pressure" experiments on prisoners for the benefit of the German air force.

United States troops freed 32,000 tortured and emaciated men and 350 women when they overran Dachau in the April advances. It has been estimated that at least 5,000 Jews were killed in the Landsberg section of the camp alone.

Decapitation had been regarded as the probable fate of any of the Dachau war criminals sentenced to death, but United States army instructions have reinstated hangings, as in the case of common criminals. It was explained that the Germans consider hanging "a more ignominious death" than beheading.

The court retired to consider sentences after hearing defence pleas for mercy for several defendants.

Defence chief Lt.-Col. Douglas Bates declared that if the defendants were guilty "of a common design of extermination" so was every German "who contributed to waging war."

WALL STREET
By HUDSON PHILLIPS

New York, Dec. 12 (AP)—Sizeable selling caught up with today's stock market and pivotals lost fractions to more than two points in active dealings.

Motors, already strikebound, and steels, threatened with a shutdown on Jan. 14, set the pace. The recently-high aircrafts fell a similar amount and lesser declines were posted by rails, rubbers, oils, utilities and selected industrials.

After a quiet, irregular opening, dealings picked up on the downturn. A few shares were up from extreme lows near the fourth hour.

Lower were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, Chrysler, Packard, Goodyear, Montgomery Ward, Caterpillar Tractor, United Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Standard Oil (N.J.) and Standard Gas & Electric $4 Pfd.

Slight fractional losses predominated among Canadian issues at mid-day. Lake Shore eased 1-2 and Canadian Pacific and Dome Mines slipped 1-8.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Dec. 12—(CP)—Hogs were 15 cents cwt. higher, cattle trade continued active at firm prices, calves, lambs and sheep were steady, in trade on the livestock market here up to midsession today.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 500, calves 150, hogs 400, sheep and lambs 200. Unsold from yesterday were 700 head of cattle, 150 stockers.

Prices on the trade included:

Cattle: Weighty steers $10.25-$13.50, butcher steers $10-$11.75, heifers $11.50 down, butcher cows $7.50-$9.50, canners and cutters $5.25-$7.25, bulls $7.50-$9.25, fed yearlings $11.75-$13.75, a few stockers $8-$9.25.

Calves: $15-$16 choice, plain vealers downward to $9, grassers $8.

Lambs: $14.50-$15 good ewes and wethers, bucks $1 cwt. discount, culls $7-$12.

Sheep: $3-$9.25.

Hogs: Dressed, Grade A $18.15, Grade B1 $17.75, sows $15.50-$16.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 12. (CP)—Gold and Industrial stocks declined nearly a point each in the early session on Toronto Stock Exchange today and western oils had a minor gain. Base Metals held about even with Tuesday's close. Turnover was small, 790,000 shares for the first three hours.

Noon prices were down 1-2 to 3-4 for Abitibi 6 per cent Pfd., Brazilian, Canadian Breweries, Cockshutt Plow, C.P.R., Eastern Steel, Ford A and Dominion Steel B.

Eldona recorded a substantial recovery, getting back to $1.43 for a net gain of 18 cents. Donalda at $1 30 was up 4 and Dickenson gained 10. Madsen, Osisko and Lingman Lake posted gains. The weak spots included Teck Hughes, Colomac, Kirkland Lake, Powell Rouyn, Trans-Resources, Wasa Lake, Pickle Crow and others .

Lady Oakes Debunks Many Legends About Her Late Husband

Nassau, Bahamas, Dec. 12—(CP)—Lady Oakes did a sweeping job of debunking many of the legends that cluster about the name of her late husband, Sir Harry Oakes, in an interview here.

She spoke of one story that he arrived in Kirkland Lake in Northern Ontario, where he discovered the rich Lake Shore Gold Mine, in 1914, hungry and penniless, and received a grubstake which started him on the way to his spectacular prospecting successes.

"It's amazing how many people are supposed to have grubstaked Harry in his early career" said Lady Oakes. "The poor boy must have been hungry all his life. He arrived in Kirkland Lake in 1911 and had a mine in production in 1914."

She said also that there was no truth to stories that she was a boardinghouse keeper in Australia and that she grubstaked Sir Harry when he was there in search of gold. "At the time he was in Australia I was a baby in arms," she said. "I met him for the first time in 1922 on a ship while I was on my way to Portuguese East Africa. We were married in Australia the following year."

Lady Oakes, who spoke of her late husband as "Harry," said he graduated from Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine, in 1896, went to Alaska in the 1898 boom, prospected Australia and New Zealand and at Death Valley in California before going to Northern Ontario in 1911.

"The story is told," she continued, "that he was thrown off the train at Kirkland Lake because he couldn't pay his fare, and when he stuck his pick into the ground at the spot on which he landed — there was gold there.

"Actually what happened was that Harry got off the train at Swastika. This was, at that time, the nearest station to Kirkland Lake four miles away—a very hard, rugged and wild country in those days. He prospected at Swastika for a while and then gradually wended his way toward Kirkland Lake where he struck his pick—and that was it. This 'pay streak' afterward came to be known as Tough-Oakes, and that's all there is to the tale."

Passengers in Car Severely Shaken As Result of Rear-End Collision

William Hopkins, Foxboro garage owner, is in the Belleville General Hospital suffering from facial injuries and possible concussion as the result of a rear-end truck-car crash shortly before five o'clock Tuesday evening about two miles north of the city on the Foxboro highway.

Fred Berry, R. R. 5, Belleville, had been driving toward the city when he stopped his car to fix a flat and had just stepped out of the auto when the Hopkins' truck also being driven toward Belleville, crashed into the rear. The Berry car was driven by the impact for a distance of 54 feet before it turned over on its top in the west ditch, while the Hopkins' truck proceeded for a distance of 87 feet following the impact. The Hopkins' truck did not leave the highway.

Four passengers in the Berry vehicle, Mrs. Berry and her three children ranging in age from one to five years were severely shaken up as result of the impact with the oldest girl, Elsie, aged five, sustaining an injured jaw.

The accident was investigated by Provincial Constable Hector Gould.

Guidance Director, Department Of Education, Gives Splendid Talk to Board, Kiwanis Club

H. R. Beattie Tells How Work Should be Co-ordinated From Time School is Entered

Members of the Board of Education, members of the Vocational Guidance Committee of the Board, invited guests and members of the Kiwanis Club heard a most interesting address at their weekly luncheon on Tuesday, when Howard A. Beattie, Director of Guidance of the Department of Education, Toronto, spoke on the subject "Guidance." The speaker has only been in his present position for a year but he has made a fine impression wherever he has been speaking on this interesting subject. Mr. Beattie was introduced by Norman Smith, chairman of the Vocational Guidance Committee of the Kiwanis Club and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by George Currie, principal of the B.C.I. also a member of the club. Lorne McDougall presided with Harold Carruthers leading the community singing and Ralph Clapp collecting the several fines imposed. It was one of the largest gatherings that the club has held for some time and all left the banquet hall with a clearer conception of the merits of Vocational Guidance.

The speaker at the outset of his address praised the Kiwanis Clubs in the Province for the interest they have taken in this work and Fred McAllister, former President of Kiwanis International, who for many years has taken a definite stand on this important question.

Mr. Beattie said in part—

Child Needs Help

"Every school child from the time he is first faced with the necessity of making decisions and choices that will affect his future, vitally needs help in understanding his own talents, in selecting the school course that will best develop those talents, and finally in choosing, training for and entering the occupation for which he is best fitted. The purpose of guidance is simply to give this help.

"Every individual finds his fullest happiness in doing well the work for which he is best fitted, and in that work he can make his best contribution to the community and the world. Guidance is the process of assisting the individual first to study himself—his skills, his strengths, and his weaknesses—then to study the world of work so that he can find in it a place in which his skills may be most useful, his faults the least handicap.

"It must be noticed that emphasis has been placed on the words "process" and "assist". Guidance is not a bit of magic by which a counsellor looks at a student and says: "You should be a machinist—or an aviator—or a nurse." It is not a quick easy solution to the problems of the present and the future. It is the slow often difficult process of helping a student to help himself.

More to be Accomplished

"While it may rightly be said that this is something good teachers have always done, the increasing complexity of the occupational world has brought in the last few years a realization that more can be accomplished by supplementing the great number of informal guidance practices by scientific procedures and special organization.

There are three main areas in which guidance work is being developed with the expectation that when this is done, activities may be extended to take in many of those things which are more complicated and difficult to handle. Following is a brief outline of those things which will receive immediate attention:

(1) Pupil adjustment—"Each pupil has particular abilities and capabilities. It is a question of immediate concern as to what these qualities are, as well as a matter of determining how to make use of them.

(2) Pupil choices—"Throughout the school life of a pupil, he is constantly faced with the problem of making choices. Because he often lacks information on educational requirements and occupational opportunities, his choice is based on a mere whim or fancy.

(3) Pupil transfer from school to school or to the world of work—"So frequently teachers will be heard stating that a certain pupil is not doing well because he has moved around so much from school to school. To a lesser degree the same problem faces us in each single change. The adjustment in transferring from elementary to secondary school is not an easy one. The adjustment in transferring from school to the world of work is even more difficult.

In order to assist pupils in their adjustment to school, in their choices, and in transferring from school to school or to the world of work, organization is necessary. Provision has already been made in many schools for the essentials of a guidance program. Other schools are just starting to lay the groundwork for the fundamentals. In each case attention is being given to the provision for the following:

A Study of Individuals

"Information should be gathered about each pupil's strengths, weaknesses, capacities, abilities, real interests, and personality traits. Everyone must assist in collecting such information and what is more important, it must be assembled in some orderly fashion. Perhaps the best method is by a 'student personnel' record system. The record should be a continuous one from the time of entering school until school leaving. Too frequently at the present time there is one system of records for the elementary school and another system for the secondary school. If education is a continuous process, then continuity of records is advisable.

A Study of Occupations.

"Then on the other hand are the differences in the requirements and opportunities of hundreds, even thousands of occupations. It is unnecessary to prove the statement that pupils have very little knowledge of the occupational world, and that our schools should do more to give pupils information on the world to be faced. Of all the methods, lessons in "Occupations" where instruction is provided as in any class such as mathematics or social studies are the most valuable. Also methods such as films, radio programs, talks by outside speakers, books, pamphlets, part-time work and many other methods must be used.

Counsellors

"Thus with a study of individuals in our schools, and with a study of the world of work, it is possible by expert and skilful counselling to make all the work effective. Such work must be done by experienced teachers with the proper personality and training. Training is necessary to avoid advice of an amateur nature being given to our young people. The counsellor cannot do all the guidance work, but should be responsible for its organization, and also for those specialized phases which the regular teachers have neither time nor training to do. A school counsellor must study the pupil's personnel record, selecting items for consideration, and planning the interview with reference to the personality and need of the pupil. The interview must centre around the pupil's plan; what vocation, if any, he has chosen; what his strong and weak points are; what prospects he has for continuing his education; how his assets, liabilities and plans harmonize with his vocational choice, etc. By such interviewing the pupil will come to feel that choosing a vocation is a serious undertaking for which the responsibility rests with him and will also come to feel that the counsellor is a person able to help him.

Not Case of Haste

It is not a case of hastening a pupil into an occupational choice. In fact in many cases the counsellor must warn the pupil he is not ready to make a choice. It is, in all cases, a matter of stimulating interest, and seeing that occupational choices when made are based on study and not on mere whims or fancies.

In order to assemble in a convenient form all the information gathered about pupils, many schools are already using cumulative records. Certain recommendations have already been made by the Guidance Branch of the Ontario Department of Education on forms to be used and procedures to be followed. Certain tests will be gradually introduced, but not until someone in the school is trained to interpret them. Tests are valuable only when the person handling them is trained to administer and to interpret them. In bringing about a better understanding of the students, cumulative records serve as a gathering place for all pertinent information, such as achievements, interests, hobbies, participation in extra-curricular activities, test results, and personality traits.

Great Strides Made

Great strides have been made in the gathering and dissemination of occupational information. Lessons in "Occupations" are now obligatory in all Grade IX classes. The fact that at least 25 per cent of our secondary schools are providing similar instruction in other grades is most encouraging. Also, too, many elementary schools are teaching such work in Grade VII and VIII The Vocational Guidance Centre, along with other agencies, is providing our schools with information on occupations and educational opportunities. Films in the field of guidance are available from the Visual Education Branch of the Department of Education. Two series of five half-hour broadcasts on Guidance have been produced by the Ontario Department of Education and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. These methods along with many others too numerous to mention are being developed so that accurate and up-to-date information will be available in every school.

The third necessary requisite for meeting this challenge of present-day education is trained teacher-counsellors. While some will contend that every teacher should be a guidance worker, it must be recognized that at the present time teachers have neither the time nor the training to do all of the guidance work. Trained workers are necessary to direct the work and to assume responsibility for the specialized phases of the work. During the summer of 1945, one hundred and fifty teachers attended the courses of training provided by the Ontario Department of Education.

Co-Ordinate Work

Through the efforts of these teachers as well as those who have been training elsewhere, it is hoped that the initial steps will be taken for co-ordinating the guidance work in our schools. However, it must be mentioned that it will be necessary to set aside for guidance work the equivalent of one teacher's timetable for each five hundred students. Then through the co-ordination of the Principal's work, the subject teacher, the home-room teacher, and the teacher-counsellors, guidance will become a reality.

In conclusion Guidance is not entirely new. It is the oldest feature of education, but the latest to receive special attention. With the solid foundation which has been laid, guidance will not become a superstructure on top of the school organization, but rather it will become an integrating force for every branch of education."

"I Did Not Realize the Benefits of a Life Interest Plan"

"A LIFE INTEREST PLAN will protect my wife and children and save considerable money for my estate.

"Under this plan I can provide for the welfare of my wife during her lifetime; arrange for extra advances of money to take care of any emergency—such as an illness of either my wife or children; plan for the education of my children.

"A number of years may be required to carry out my wishes so I appointed The Trusts and Guarantee Company rather than a friend as executor and trustee in my Will. They will be always on the job and no unforeseen event will upset the continuity of their administration of my estate."

Hospital Fire At Maple Creek Takes 7 Lives

Maple Creek, Sask., Dec. 12 (CP)—An inquiry was in progress late Tuesday into circumstances surrounding a fire which, breaking out in zero weather at 11:15 p.m. Monday night, gutted the 20-bed General Hospital here and smothered to death seven of the 16 patients in the institution.

The blaze, which apparently started in a feed-elevator shaft, spread rapidly through the three-storey brick and veneer building, erected in 1908.

Dead are:

E. A. Frederick, about 73, old-age pensioner of Maple Creek.

James Chadwick, about 75, old-time rancher of the Keeler Springs district.

George Adams, 84, original member of the then Royal Northwest Mounted Police during its trek to Fort Walsh.

Dennis Leo Gaff, 61, son of one of the first ranchers in the Maple Creek district.

Mrs. Richard Beach, 83, of Golden Prairie.

Lee Sam, 65, of Maple Creek.

Robert Young, 71, rancher, living 16 miles south of Maple Creek.

Loss to the hospital was estimated at $50,000. Maple Creek is 270 miles west of Regina and 55 miles east of Medicine Hat, Alta.

Three-Hour Blaze

The nine patients saved from the flames were removed to the nurses home and taken later to Maple Creek military hospital. None was injured but all suffered from shock. Names of those who escaped were not available.

The fire was first noticed when nurses smelled smoke. It blazed for three hours before the town fire department, assisted by firemen from the military camp and citizens were able to bring it under control.

A cold southeast wind was blowing when the fire broke out. Immediately the alarm was sounded, Dr. F. B. Dawson and Dr. John Mitchell, with Miss Edna Guillod, hospital superintendent for 25 years, directed the removal of the patients.

Maple Creek's 12-man fire department was on the scene within a few minutes, and was joined by military firemen from the camp adjoining the town. One eye-witness said the fire was like a "smudge."

"There was lots of smoke and very little blaze," he added. Soldiers downtown when the siren sounded rushed to the scene. When the smoke became too dense they donned firefighting respirators and dashed in and out of the burning structure.

MAPLE PRODUCTS BILL

Ottawa, Dec. 11 — (CP)—The Commons today gave third reading to an act respecting the manufacturing, inspection and sale of maple products.

The bill, previously passed by the Senate, requires sugar producers to obtain licences if they export sugar or maple syrup from one province to another.

Dutch Nazi Leader Sentenced to Death

The Hague, Netherlands, Dec. 12 — (Reuters) — Anton Mussert, Dutch Nazi leader, was today sentenced to death by a Dutch special court.

Mussert, who was charged with high treason, took the sentence calmly and did not show the slightest surprise. His trial opened at The Hague Nov. 27 and lasted two days. Promulgation of the verdict was postponed for a fortnight.

A 49-year-old former water works engineer, Mussert formed the Dutch National Socialist party in 1931 and collaborated with the Germans when they entered the Netherlands in May, 1940.

Hitler gave him the title of "Fuehrer of the Netherlands people" in 1942.

THIS is frankly a patriotic appeal to all who have living quarters for rent—in apartment blocks, rooming houses and hotels. You are asked to give returning veterans and their families, not only an equal chance but a preference, when they enquire about accommodations ... BECAUSE THEY DESERVE IT! They've done plenty for all of us at home, in protecting our country and our homes. Now it's our turn. These typical young Canadians had homes when they went away.

There have been great movements of population during the war. Many members of the forces have married since enlisting and face the problem of home-making under new and difficult conditions. Their ambition is to settle down, get to work and establish their homes. GIVE THEM A BREAK! You are not asked to give this accommodation, just to rent it, at rates approved by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

MRS. HOUSEHOLDER!

You, too, may help by renting unoccupied space in your home. One, two or three rooms made available to a veteran and his wife, will assist greatly in the veteran's rehabilitation and re-establishment in civilian life.

IT DIDN'T HAPPEN HERE!

This might have been your home, but for our gallant service men. Now that they're returning, let's show them and their families every consideration. Rent a part of your home. Give veterans priority!

If you have space which you can make available, list it with the Citizens' Rehabilitation Committee, the local branch of the Canadian Legion, or Rooms Registry, 19 Campbell St., Phone 2738, advertise it in the newspapers or list it with a real estate agent.. Inquire at the nearest Rentals Office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board about five months or less rental agreements.. These are exempt from normal Wartime Prices and Trade Board non-eviction regulations, and five months tenancy will help many veterans through the winter.

Grisly Exhibits Presented at Nazi Leaders' Trial

Lamp Shades of Human Skin, Preserved Head Shown

By NOLAND NORGAARD

Nuernberg, Dec. 13 —(AP)— A preserved human head and lamp shades made of human skin were presented as evidence of atrocities in Nazi concentration camps at the war crimes trial of 21 top German war leaders today.

The grisly exhibits were added to the Germans' own records of murder and brutality placed before the four-power international military tribunal by Allied prosecutors charging the once-powerful Nazi warlords with "crimes against humanity."

Relating the already-revealed horrors of the notorious concentration camps at Mathausen and Buchenwald, the United States assistant prosecutor, Thomas J. Dodd, declared: "We feel no argument is necessary to support our statement that the Nazi conspirators used these concentration camps as places of terror."

The preserved human head, shrunk to the size of a baseball and resembling the war trophy of an aboriginal head hunter, was that of a Pole who had been caught fraternizing with a German girl.

Buchenwald Victims.

The three pieces of human skin tanned into parchment for lamp shades for the wife of S. S. Standartenfuehrer Koch came from victims at Buchenwald selected because of their "artistic" tattooing, according to an affidavit by a former prisoner of the concentration camp.

"In 1939 all prisoners with tattooing on them were ordered to report to the dispensary," the affidavit said. "No one knew what the purpose was. But after the tattooed prisoners were examined, the ones with the best and most artistic specimens were kept in the dispensary and then killed by injections."

Telling of the shrunken heads, the former prisoner was quoted in the affidavit as saying: "I also saw the shrunken heads of two young Poles who had been hanged for having had relations with Jewish girls. The heads were the size of a fist and the hair and marks of the rope were still there."

Jew-baiter Julius Streicher, alone of all the defendants, remained unmoved. The others averted their eyes but from time to time stole glances at the barbaric trophies.

The "death ledgers" of the Mauthausen Camp recorded the deaths of more than 35,000 prisoners from 1939 to 1945. On March 19, 1945, 203 persons died in 12 hours, the records showed.

36 OFFICIALS, GUARDS AT CAMP WILL BE HANGED

Men Who Operated Horror Camp Received Sentences Calmly

Dachau, Dec. 13 (AP) — A United States military court today sentenced 36 officials and guards at the notorious Dachau concentration camp to death by hanging for the murder, torture and starvation of thousands of the camp's inmates.

Another defendant was sentenced to life imprisonment and three others were sentenced to terms of 10 years each.

The 40 defendants were convicted yesterday by the military tribunal, which debated only 90 minutes before bringing in its verdict. Among those convicted were five camp doctors and three prisoners who had collaborated with the S.S.

Witnesses at the trial said 5,000 Jews were killed at Dachau, prisoners were brutally beaten, naked men were immersed in ice water for experiments and some men were sent to the crematory while still alive.

The camp was the most notorious and most feared of the concentration camps set up by the Nazis for political prisoners.

The men who operated the horror camp received their sentences calmly for the most part, only a few showing any change of expression.

The life sentence went to Peter Betz, a guard, against whom there was little evidence of personal cruelty. Ten-year terms were given Hugo Lausterer, who was said by witnesses to have been kind to prisoners; Albin Gretsch, who was drafted into the S.S. and against whom no personal accusations of cruelty were made; and Johann Schoepp, who was drafted from the Romanian army by the S.S. and assigned to guard the Dachau tower.

Dr. Klaus Karl Schilling, 74, who killed many prisoners in experiments through which he sought a malaria vaccine, and S.S. officer Martin Weiss, commandant of the camp, were among the 36 sentenced to die.

Schilling, who last week begged the court for time to complete his experimental records, blinked his eyes rapidly and bowed his bearded head when he heard the words: "Death by hanging."

Witnesses Describe Further Mass Shootings of Canadians in France

By WILLIAM BOSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aurich, Germany, Dec. 13 — (CP Cable) — Further mass shootings of Canadian prisoners of war by the Germans during the second day of the invasion of Normandy June 7, 1944, were described here today by two Nova Scotia soldiers appearing as witnesses in the war crimes trial of S.S. Maj.-Gen. Kurt Meyer.

As the trial went into its 4th day with the prosecution still presenting its case, Cpl. Walter McLeod of Glace Bay, N.S., and Pte. James Conrad of Whitehead, N.S., told how nine members of their regiment, the North Nova Scotia Highlanders of Truro and Amherst, were cut down by German fire at close quarters near Authie, France.

McLeod and Conrad escaped the slaughter which took place after they had been taken prisoner at Authie along with Pte. Gus Doolan of Sydney, N.S., and nine others.

They told the Canadian military court trying Meyer that their group guarded by German soldiers, was moving along a road east of Authie with their hands over their heads when German troops going into battle came out of a wheat field.

One of the Germans out in front pulled his pistol from its holster and shot at the group of prisoners when only 20 feet away. A wounded German also shot at the prisoners with his rifle and Conrad said a German guard seemed to be shooting at them too.

Of the group of 12, only McLeod, Conrad and Doolan moved on to the Abbey of Ardenne where prisoners were being concentrated.

"The other nine were shot down and they never moved," Conrad said.

The witness testified that there was no battle firing in the area. Lt.-Col. M. W. Andrew of Stratford, Ont., chief defence counsel, suggested in cross-examination that the Germans had seen the prisoners suddenly when they came out of the field. Conrad admitted that it "could be so."

Meyer, 33-year-old former commander of first an S. S. regiment and then a division, listened impassively as the evidence was translated to him. Two seats behind the German officer sat Lt.-Col. Don Forbes of Sydney, N.S., second in command of the North Novas at Authie who now is commanding the North Novas battalion of the Canadian occupation force in Germany. He was attending as a spectator only.

Meyer commanded the 25th Panzer Grenadier Regiment and later the 12th S. S. Division which faced the 3rd Division in the Battle of Caen, Normandy.

In today's testimony, Cpl. McLeod told Col. Andrew that although the guard in front of the prisoners did not "actually do anything" to stop the firing, it seemed from the words he shouted at the attacking troops that he was trying.

The evidence given by Conrad and McLeod was the second eye-witness account of mass shootings of Canadian prisoners. Yesterday Sgt. William McKay of Toney River, N.S., described how eight members of the North Novas were shot by three German guards at the village of Authie.

COMMONS HOPES TO PROROGUE ON SATURDAY DEC. 15

Resolution to Provide Increases For Members To be Amended To Include Senators

By JACK WILLIAMS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Ottawa, Dec. 13 (CP)—Members of the Commons today went to work on a dwindling order paper, but they still had a heavy agenda to complete if they were to meet parliament's target of a Dec. 15 prorogation.

The day started with at least one cheerful prospect for tiring members of the Commons. They had the assurance of Veterans Minister Mackenzie that a resolution providing for a $2,000 tax-free expense allowance to supplement the $4,000 indemnity of members was being amended to make provision for an increase to the Senate.

For several days there had been periodic spontaneous requests from the floor of the House for consideration of the indemnity measure, but meantime the government had been trying to find a means of avoiding what appeared to be certain Senate opposition.

Yesterday the Commons cleared away three of the four budget bills and dealt with a number of departmental estimates.

Final Approval.

The Senate gave final approval to a bill providing for an increase from $100,000,000 to $750,000,000 in export credit loans and heard Senator A. D. McRae (PC—British Columbia) announce that he would ask at the next session for investigation of Canada's mineral production by a special Senate committee.

Senator Vincent Dupuis (L—Quebec) urged the establishment of a national organization to improve infant health and give assistance to mothers.

When the budget bills were up, Finance Minister Ilsley announced he was withdrawing a proposal made in his Oct. 12 budget, to relieve taxable pensions of succession duties.

Mother Has Hopes Operation May Save Child with Rare Disease

Long Branch, Dec. 13—(CP)—Mrs. Thelma Mitchell, mother of "blue baby" Gail Edith, two, today pinned her hopes for a successful, life-saving operation on her child on the fact that in the Toronto area is a boy of eight, born with the same mystifying disease as Gail but he underwent surgery and is now a bright, pink-cheeked boy.

Both children were born with tetralogy fallot, starving for oxygen because the heart cannot pump sufficient blood to the lungs.

Yesterday the Mitchell family physician, Dr. A. E. Noble, said he had applied for admittance to John Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore for Gail in the hope a successful operation could be performed there.

From Baltimore came word such operations have been performed there and at least one "blue" baby is recovering while a second, on which the operation was successful, is being given oxygen.

Effect of the disease on Gail is that she breathes heavily and her body, even her fingernails and toe nails are continually blue. Since birth she has been through coma after coma. But in between is as playful as any other child. Doctors said she might live to adolescence but not through it without some corrective operation.

Herbert Morrison To Visit Canada

London, Dec. 13 (CP Cable) — Herbert Morrison, Lord President of the Council and government leader in the House of Commons, will visit Canada and the United States during the parliamentary recess beginning next week.

Mr. Morrison will visit Ottawa, Montreal and Toronto and will also "make and renew contacts in the United States."

No dates have been announced for the visit but it is expected he will cross the Atlantic after the Christmas holidays and will go to Ottawa in response to the invitation extended him by Prime Minister Mackenzie King while Mr King was in London recently.

Mr. Morrison will address the annual dinner of the Toronto Board of Trade while in Canada.

Three Men Safe After Harrowing Night on Lake

Toronto, Dec. 13 — (CP) — A Toronto Life Saving Station open boat with four men aboard, missing during a search for a fishing boat that made port today under its own power, was reported sighted shortly before noon some four miles out in Lake Ontario.

After the fishing boat and its three-man crew had put in at Port Dalhousie, on the opposite side of the lake from here, a call for two airplanes was issued to search for the life-saving boat which was last seen at midnight when its crew helped start the stalled engine of a second searching lifeboat near the spot where it was reported sighted today.

The sought lifeboat was in charge of second officer Dewey Robinson. Others aboard were patrol officer George Ragan, Howard Leratt of Toronto, and Webber Transom, member of the Northern Marine and Engine Company which owned the fishing craft which was subject of the original search.

As well as planes, Toronto life-saving craft and a United States coastguard vessel from Youngston, N. Y., joined in the search for the life-saving vessel.

Search for three men in the fishing vessel began late yesterday. The craft was towing a similar vessels from Bronte to Toronto and because of shortage of fuel, cast the towed vessel adrift. The towed vessel, which had no crew aboard is still being sought.

The Toronto life-saving search for the men in the fishing boat ended with a telephone call from Port Dalhousie this morning that all were "safe and sound."

The report was made from Port Dalhousie by Hugh Summers of Toronto, who said both ships made Port about 6 am., after engine repairs were made, the official said. With him were the others in the crew, Howard Langton of Bronte and Alex Bourbeau, Toronto.

Station officials, uninformed of further details, said the men apparently were blown some 30 miles off their course when engine trouble developed in the lead boat, which was towing the other on a 30-mile trip from Bronte to Toronto. The steel fishing craft were to be shipped by rail from Toronto to Northern Ontario.

Spurred by fears that the men might not survive freezing temperatures or be blown far into the centre of the lake, the search was started after a third vessel making the trip arrived safely in Toronto yesterday.

At Bronte, the wife of 23-year-old Langton, said she had word of the safe arrival at Port Dalhousie and added that the three men had spent the large part of night repairing an engine after the boat was all but swamped by heavy seas.

Port Dalhousie, Dec. 13 —(CP) —Three men, safe after a harrowing night in a disabled fishing craft on turbulent Lake Ontario, described today how improvised engine repairs enabled them to make port here after drifting some 30 miles off course.

Objectives of an intense search which started when their 45-foot craft became overdue on a 30-mile trip from Bronte to Toronto, the men reached Port Dalhousie, some 30 miles across Lake Ontario from Toronto, at 6 a.m. after drifting for hours in freezing temperatures.

They are Howard Langton, 22, of Bronte, and Alex Borsos, 33, and Hugh Summers, both of Toronto. All crew members of a lead boat towing another, they revealed that the second craft with no passengers was still adrift after it broke loose just before their engine trouble developed.

Ice was coated on their small steel craft and Borsos said all "were very sick" as waves tossed the disabled tug about.

The two craft set out from Bronte for Toronto, where they were to be shipped by rail to Northern Ontario, about 10:45 a.m. yesterday and Borsos said the second boat broke loose about two hours later.

A driving shaft broke as they were swinging around to pick up the second craft, he added, and temporary repairs were unsuccessful.

The men, huddled in a small cabin while waves broke over the front of the tug, said they sighted several planes that took up the search after a third vessel reached Toronto safely. One seemed to come directly overhead, but signals with frantically waved coats and overalls were unseen.

Finally, Borsos and Summers, both engine mechanics, made desperate stabs at fixing the broken coupling. Working with bits of scrap and pieces of wood as the boat tossed about like a cork, they completed the repairs and tried the motor. The propeller worked.

Langton said the men saw lights about this time and headed for them, thinking they were those at Hamilton harbor. They were surprised but no less happy to find it was Port Dalhousie, he added.

The tug, owned by the Northern Marine and Engine Company at Bronte, was moored in the harbor and the company notified. Officials were expected here later today to make plans for its return to Toronto, as planes continued the search for the other unmanned craft.

Britain, France Agree To Withdraw Troops From Syria, Lebanon

London, Dec. 13 — (CP)—Foreign Secretary Bevin told the House of Commons today that Britain and France have agreed to joint withdrawal of their troops from Syria and Lebanon.

Signed in London today, the British-French agreement provides for close alignment of policy in the Middle East with the object of settling unrest marked seven months ago by armed clashes in a Syrian demand for independence from France.

"The two governments," said an official announcement, "have recognized that it was in their joint interest to encourage, within the framework of international collaboration, the economic well-being and security of the peoples of the Middle East."

Rome, Dec. 13 —(AP)— Italy's northern provinces, except disputed Veneziagiulia and bordering Udine, will be returned to Italian administration around Dec. 31, Rear Admiral Ellery W. Stone, chief Allied Commissioner, announced today.

Admiral Stone said the islands of Pantelleria, Lampedusa and Linoea — which figured in the Sicilian invasion strategy and in discussions of post-war sovereignty — also will revert to Italian control.

Urges Veterans Added to Staffs Wherever Possible

Ottawa, Dec. 13 (CP)—Pre-discharge interviews indicate the employment situation for veterans is becoming "more serious," Veterans Minister Mackenzie said yesterday in urging employers to make provision for adding discharged servicemen to their staffs wherever possible.

In a statement he said:

"In October 97,436 veterans were interviewed. Of these only 54,789 had definite places for employment. That leaves 42,647 for whom provision must be made eventually, although about 50 per cent of these will be taken care of in the coming few months through vocational and university education. The fact is that more than 23,000 have absolutely no definite plans."

The minister's statement showed that the largest proportion expected reinstatement in their old jobs. These amounted to 25,919. Another 3,752 were returning to their own businesses, while 1,820 were returning to their own farms. A total of 13,298 had new jobs arranged prior to discharge.

SUMATRA REJECTS DUTCH DOMINION STATUS PROPOSAL

Indonesians to Support Unrecognized State In its Fight For Full Independence

Batavia, Java, Dec 13. (AP)— Indonesian leaders from Sumatra today rejected Dutch offers of Dominion status and declared they would support the unrecognized Indonesian Republic in its fight for full independence.

Their position was stated by Acting Governor Amir of the Sumatran Indonesian "government" after a conference with Premier Suton Sjahrir and other leaders of the "republic". Amir and three members of his staff were flown here from Padang in a British plane.

The principal opposition to Dutch rule previously had been concentrated in Java, with only a few minor disturbances in Sumatra. While today's conference was in progress, it was reported a Dutchman had been shot dead near an internment area at Medan, Sumatra.

Amir told a press conference he was "standing fully behind" the Sjahrir Cabinet in its struggle against the Dutch.

"Like the people in other parts of Indonesia," he declared, "we reject Dutch Dominion status and demand full independence. Sumatra, with the strongest youth movement, in Indonesia, has long been a country of revolution against the Dutch. Every act against the population of Java, we feel, is also directed against ourselves."

Small-Scale Clashes

Meanwhile, small-scale clashes were reported between British and Indonesian forces at several points in Java. One British Indian soldier was wounded in a skirmish at Buitenzorg and a Dutchman was killed at Bnadoeng, Java's summer capital.

Clashes between British troops and infiltrating Indonesians at Ambarawa, Central Java town near Semarang, cost British forces one killed and five wounded.

Indian troops set fire to the Indonesian settlement of Bekassi, near Batavia, and R.A.F. planes machine-gunned fleeing villagers in reprisal for the massacre three weeks ago of British and Indian survivors of a plane crash, it was reported.

British action following new outbreaks in which a British soldier was killed and four others, including a Japanese lieutenant, wounded.

R.A.F. Thunderbolts and Mosquito Bombers destroyed four trucks and three passenger cars attempting to flee the village. A British soldier was killed by gunfire from a passing train as he sat in a truck guarding a railway crossing.

Goering Sure Of Death Grows More Cynical

Nuernberg, Dec. 13—(Reuters) Dr. Gustave Gilbert, Columbia University psychologist, said today that Hermann Goering, Baldur von Schirach, Hans Frank and Albert Speer, defendants at the war crimes trial of high-ranking Nazis, are resigned to death.

Dr. Gilbert has made a study of the accused since their arrest.

"While these four expect to die, the approach of each to the possible death sentence is different," Dr. Gilbert said.

"Goering is cynical and views death as the fate of defeat which cannot be avoided.

"Von Schirach, when he was originally in solitary confinement and more penitent, looked on the death sentence as a just punishment for getting involved in an ideology which he was unable to evaluate. He still is resigned, but now takes a stronger attitude.

"Frank, who has become converted to the Catholic faith since his capture, has repented and declares that Hitler was the embodiment of evil.

"He is prepared to suffer God's punishment and converts his feelings of guilt into religious ecstasy, saying: 'I must be prepared to expiate the sins of the Nazi Party.'

"Speer feels that while he has nothing on his own conscience, he was vicariously responsible for the evils of the party."

All the other accused either consider that they do not merit death or they are afraid of death, Dr. Gilbert said.

Julius Streicher, whom Dr. Gilbert described as neurotic, boasted that he was right and would die a martyr's death.

Marshall-Stark Memorandum Given Committee

Tells Reasons Why Approval Of Report on Talks Refused

Washington, Dec. 13 (AP)— Gen. George C. Marshall and Admiral Harold R. Stark told British military leaders in July 1941, that they could not commit the United States to go to war if Japan attacked British or Dutch territory, investigators into the attack on Pearl Harbor learned today.

The Senate-House of Representatives Committee investigating Japan's Dec. 7, 1941, attack was given a Marshall-Stark memorandum on their reasons for refusing to approve a report on American-Dutch-British conservations held at Singapore in April of that year.

Paragraph Cited

Gen. Marshall and Admiral Stark, contending that the report contained "political matters," cited a paragraph saying:

"Our collective military strength can only be developed fully if our governments agree to act together should any of them judge that the Japanese have taken action which necessitated active military counter-action."

They cited other instances where, in their opinion, the conversations had gone into the political field, rather than being confined to drafting military plans for use in event the three countries all should become involved in war with Japan.

Gen. Marshall was chief-of-staff at the time and Admiral Stark was chief of naval operations. Their memorandum was sent to United States army and navy observers at London for communication to the British chiefs-of-staff.

Whether the United States made any agreement to fight Japan, in the event British or Dutch territory was attacked, has been a question brought up frequently in the committee's hearings. Former State Secretary Hull, as well as military witnesses, have denied there was such an agreement.

Various Proposals Criticized.

Gen. Marshall and Admiral Stark also criticized various military proposals in the American-Dutch-British report, calling "unacceptable" the "small part which is proposed for British naval forces."

They said British delegates had emphasized repeatedly that retention of the Malay barrier was vital to security of the United Kingdom but "of 48 British naval vessels available in the eastern theatre only three British vessels are to operate in the vicinity of the Malay barrier."

"No British vessels whatsoever" they added, "are committed to the naval defence of the barrier against Japanese naval forces advancing southward, nor to offensive, operations designed to close the passages of the barrier to the passage of Japanese raiders.

One Dead and 25 Homeless After 5 Houses Burn

Drummondville, Que., Dec. 13 —(CP)—Swept by a strong west wind, a fire which started yesterday in the chimney of one home destroyed five houses, left more than 25 persons homeless, and resulted in the death from nervous shock of a 74-year-old woman in the small Eastern Townships village of St. Felix de Kingsey, 20 miles south of here.

The fire destroyed the Kingsey telephone exchange, located in the home of the company manager, Albert Houle, and also left the municipality without electric services.

Mrs. Albert Lamoureux, 74, mother of Aime Lamoureux whose home was destroyed, had been removed to the home of a neighbor where she died. Lamoureux's home, restaurant and shoe repair shop was located next to the home of Edward Gagne where the fire started.

Taking a firm grip on Gagne's home, the flames spread in rapid succession to Lamoureux's building, and thence to the home of Houle. The blaze also took a hold on the restaurant and home of Thomas Vachon, and a tenement owned by Oscar Fortier, before firemen from Drummondville under Capt. A. Larivee were able to reach the village.

A pump manned by five men was used to pump water from wells — the only available source —and a number of the wells were dried up before the pump itself finally froze. By this time however the blaze was well under control, and all danger to the village, which was threatened with extinction, was removed.

Jap Carrier Sunk First Time Out

Tokyo, Dec. 13 (AP)—Japan's largest and newest aircraft carrier in its first engagement was torpedoed and sunk by a United States submarine in the Philippine Sea in 1944.

The 40,000-ton Taisho, launched as Japan's answer to ever-increasing Allied air supremacy, exploded and sank six hours after it was punctured by a single torpedo June 18, its senior staff officer disclosed.

Another carrier, the 30,000-ton Chokaku, also was sunk by an American submarine on the first day of that engagement.

Deanna Durbin Placed Tenth In Treasury Report of Big Incomes

Washington, Dec. 13 — (CP) — Deanna Durbin, Winnipeg-born singer and film actress, was listed 10th last night in a United States Treasury report of big incomes topped by the name of Louis B. Mayer, movie magnate, who received $908,070. Miss Durbin's income was $326,491.

The movie magnate got $908,070 from Loew's Inc., for personal services in one year, a supplement to an earlier partial listing of individuals' income from corporations disclosed. The report as a whole covers returns for the calendar year of 1943 and fiscal years ending in 1943 and 1944.

Ranking immediately after Mr. Mayer, in front by nearly $450,000, were Charles E. Wilson, General Motors executive, and Thomas J. Watson, International Business Machines executive.

Fred MacMurray, in fifth place and Miss Durbin were the only actors to make the first 10 as individuals. The income of comedians Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, reported as a single salary —$424,320 — ranked fourth.

Following is the list of the 20 individuals who, according to the Treasury statements, received the greatest income from corporations for personal services in one year:

Louis B. Mayer, $908,070; Chas. E. Wilson, $459,041; Thomas J. Watson, $425,548; Fred MacMurray, $419,928; John B. Hawley, Jr., President of Northern Ordnance Inc., $400,000; Nicholas M. Shenck, President of Loew's, $391,860; Ormond E. Hunt, General Motors, $359,519; Albert Bradley, General Motors, $350,432; Deanna Durbin, from Universal Pictures, $326,491; Barbara Stanwyck, from Paramount and Warner Bros., $323,333; E. H. Bobst, of Hoffman la Roche, Inc., $308,175; John Thomas Smith, General Motors, $306,310; Donaldson Brown, General Motors, $306,160; Charles F. Kettering, General Motors, $306,117; Elmer J. Mannix, Loew's $300,725; Sam Katz, Loew's $298,125; Harry L. (Bing) Crosby, $294,444; William Powell, $292,500, and David Bernstein, Loew's, $285,906.

Income taxes took a big bite out of these payments, however. The rates generally ranged from 50 per cent or more on income of $200,000 to about 90 per cent on income approaching $1,000,000.

NINETIETH BIRTHDAY CELEBRATED BY P. E. COUNTY RESIDENT

Mr. David Clark, father of Mrs. Chester Longwell of this city celebrated his ninetieth birthday at his home near the old White Chapel, a short distance east of Picton last Sunday.

Mr. Clark is enjoying good health and is exceptionally active for a man of his years. Last summer he kept a fine garden and until recently attended to a herd of cattle. At the present his time is occupied with caring for a large flock of hens. He resides alone preferring to remain in the house that he has lived in all his life.

Other members of his family are Mrs. Thomas Howell, Brighton; Mrs. Stanley Thompson, Cherry Valley and Percy Clark of Oshawa.

BUILDING CONTROLS REMOVED BY GOVT.

Signifying a gradual relinquishing of building controls by governmental authorities it is now no longer necessary for potential builders to apply to the Controller of Construction at Ottawa for permission to proceed with construction of buildings costing more than $500, it has been announced.

During war years when a heavy demand by a large program of governmental and other construction had made building materials scarce controls were instituted which made it necessary for a government building permit to be acquired before construction was commenced.

On December 5, the above order was rescinded with city engineer, Charles Mott, receiving word today from Ottawa to this effect. Thus in the future potential builders will be called upon only to acquire a city building permit from the city hall before proceeding with construction.

Three Traffic Charges Dismissed

Dismissal by Magistrate T. Y. Wills of two charges of careless driving and one of operating a motor vehicle with bad brakes featured the county police court proceedings on Thursday morning. In dismissing the cases against the three local motorists, the magistrate claimed the Crown had not sufficiently proven its case.

Charles J. Sager was acquitted of a charge of operating a motor vehicle with bad brakes, the charge resulting from a motor accident occurring 24th of November when the auto driven by Sager struck Jeremiah Brant who was walking on the highway in Shannonville. The investigating officer testified that with brakes fully applied only one wheel of the vehicle would lock, but this was satisfactorily explained by Sager when he stated the brakes on the vehicle in question were of the mechanical type and were apt to freeze in cold wet weather.

Alton Hadley of Stirling was acquitted of a careless driving charge resulting from an accident on the Foxboro-Stirling highway. Crown witness testified the auto driven by Hadley had skidded a distance of 372 feet before coming to rest after crashing a highway sign and tree. The charge was dismissed when evidence did not prove Hadley had been driving at an excessive rate of speed.

"The accused admits he was travelling at 50 miles an hour and despite statements of officers I do not consider this excessive," stated Magistrate Wills in dismissing the charge.

The other dismissal concerned a charge of careless driving against George Stapley of Napanee district and came as result of the Crown witness failing to prove that the accused had been driving the vehicle in question. Stapley had been apprehended as he was parked along the highway and in the opinion of the investigating officer in a condition unfit to be in charge of a motor vehicle. "We have no evidence that the accused actually was driving the car," stated Magistrate Wills — "I cannot convict this man on the evidence given."

A charge of vagrancy against Stapley was withdrawn at request of the Crown.

Pleads Guilty.

Morris Faulkner of Trenton pleaded guilty to a charge of careless driving and was assessed the minimum fine of $5 and costs of $2.50. Faulkner had been emerging onto Highway No. 2 from the main gate at Trenton Air Station and had collided with a tractor trailer owned by Everett Black of this city. Damages amounting to approximately $700 resulted to the Black owned transport.

Case Remanded.

Arraigned on charges of assault and doing actual bodily harm Lloyd Louis and Bruce Brant of Shannonville were remanded for one week at request of counsel and were granted the privilege of bail at $500 each. The two had engaged in altercations while riding in a bus east of Belleville and had assaulted the driver when he asked them to desist.

A careless driving charge and one of non-support were also enlarged for one week.

MARMORA

FO. S. M. Bonter Presumed Dead

Word has been received by Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bonter, Marmora, that their son, Flying Officer Stewart Millen Bonter, reported missing on a raid over Hagan in the Ruhr district on March 15, 1945, is now presumed dead for official reasons.

A member of the Leaside squadron and pilot of a Halifax bomber the late flying officer was on his fifth operational flight when it is presumed he was shot down. Three other members of his crew were reported missing at the time.

Two of the remaining members who bailed out safely visited Mr. and Mrs. Bonter when they were en route to their homes in Vancouver. They held out little hope that their pilot was alive as the plane crashed in flames after it had gone into a tailspin.

Born in Marmora, 26 years ago, Flying Officer Bonter received his early education in that village. Prior to enlistment he was associated with the Canadian Industries Ltd., in the Brownsburg, Ont., plant of that company in the capacity of foreman.

He was prominent in the promotion and organization of sports and took an active interest in the Young People's activities of the United Church.

He received his early air force training at No. 5 I.T.S. in this city, later going to Centralia and Oshawa. He received his pilot's wings upon graduation from the St. Hubert, Que., flying school.

He went overseas in April, 1944. Other members of the family are three brothers, Herbert and Ray, of Marmora, and Flight Sergeant Eldon Bonter, R.C.A.F., who is overseas, and two sisters, Mrs. George H. Gay, (Mildred) of Belleville and Miss Grace Bonter, of Toronto.

HAS SHARE OF BAD LUCK

Toronto, Dec. 13 — (CP) — A Toronto girl whose muskrat coat was stolen from Christie Street Hospital where she was making a voluntary visit Tuesday night as a member of the Ardenette Club feels she has had more than her share of bad luck. She saved her money to buy the coat, then spent three months in hospital for a back injury, and faces an expensive bone grafting operation after Christmas.

Farmers Angry Over Urbanites Taking Trees

"I want some birdshot and I want it fast" demanded an irate farmer of a clerk in a Front St. hardware store.

The clerk looked up in mild surprise at the tone of voice used by the customer.

"Yes sir" he said. "Are the birds that bad?"

"Some of 'em are," growled the irate one, "and I'm going to fix them once and for all if they don't leave my property alone."

"And I'm not fooling son," he went on. "The birds I'm after haven't any feathers, but they have plenty of nerve."

The farmer, it was learned, was referring to urbanites who, rather than pay the price demanded by vendors for Christmas trees, take along the family axe and drive miles in the country to select their own trees from farmers' woodlots.

"It wouldn't be so bad," the farmer stated, "if these city chiselers would cut a young tree and take it home, but the most of them prefer the top of a large tree. They cut the tree down, remove the top and let the rest of the tree lay where it falls. I have seen at least twenty fine trees spoiled this way, and I'm going to take some action."

"A few slugs of bird-shot placed in the right spot might cure some of these fellows of their help-yourself-to-the-trees habit" he growled as he strode out of the store.

150 Prize Fowl Lost in Fire

Loss of approximately $1,000 resulted Wednesday afternoon when a pen of 150 prize fowl owned by Mr. Elmer "Benny" Leeman, College Street, was destroyed by fire.

Included in the loss were show birds of many different types among them Buff Orpingtons, Andalusians and other varieties.

The fire started during the afternoon when no one was around and had gained considerable headway before noticed and the fire department called. About one half of the hen pen was damaged by the blaze, the birds for the most part suffocating in the top floor. The pen was wired for electricity, but there was no stove, it was stated.

Mr. Leeman's show birds were a popular sight at district fall fairs and only recently he had received a communication from Madison Square Garden officials in New York City asking him to exhibit his birds at a poultry show there. He had been too busy to crate his birds for shipment, he stated. Mr. Leeman claimed it would take him eight years to breed back into the equivalent of prize fowl lost in the blaze.

MORE WAR CRIMINALS SOUGHT

Batavia, Dec. 13—(AP)—The Allied war crimes commission in Java announced today it had listed 244 persons, most of them Japanese, as war criminals and said 43 of those named already were in custody.

Heading the list is Lt.-Gen. Imamura, accused of responsibility for the deaths of 300 British officers. Another Japanese sought is Lt.-Col. Anami, charged with responsibility for the deaths of 1,500 Britons and Australians used as slave laborers.

Obituary

MICHAEL DOLAN ADAMS

Michael Dolan Adams died suddenly at his home, 212 Foster Avenue this morning.

The late Mr. Adams had attained to the advanced age of ninety-three years and was more than ordinarily active for a man of his years up until almost the time of his death. It was his custom to walk to the business section of the city and the market frequently and he was well known to many citizens.

Born in Richmond Township Mr. Adams was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Adams. For thirty years he was a general merchant in Marlbank. Later he was in the grocery business in Toronto. Disposing of his business in that city he came to Belleville 23 years ago and opened a grocery store at the corner of Albert and Queen Streets, under the name of Adams & Edie. In March 1932 the firm disposed of the business and since that time Mr. Adams lived retired. In this city and in the communities where he formerly resided Mr. Adams was held in high regard. He was a member of St. Michael's Church.

Surviving him are one daughter, Mrs. Donald Edie, Belleville, and one grandson, Colin Adams Edie. Mrs. Walter Belair of this city is a niece of the deceased. His wife died some years ago.

Resting at the Thomas C. Thompson Funeral Home, 38 Everett Street; the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

DONALD HOWARD BURLEY

Donald Howard Burley, age ten months, son of Private Howard and Edna Burley, North Front and Donald Streets, Thurlow township, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Wednesday evening after an illness of several weeks' duration. The family attend Christ Church.

Surviving besides the parents are one sister, Sharon, age two years and the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Burley and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Caverly, both of Belleville.

Resting at the Pinkston Funeral Home, Church Street at Victoria Avenue; the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

MRS. MARY MARSHALL (Stirling)

Stirling, Dec. 13 (Special) — Mrs. Mary Marshall, widow of John Marshall, died here at the home of her sister, Miss Sarah Delaney, on Wednesday, Dec. 12th., after an illness of six months' duration.

Born in Stirling the late Mrs. Marshall was a daughter of the late William Delaney and his wife Catharine Wilkinson. For many years she lived in Detroit, Mich., being engaged as a bookkeeper and stenographer. For the past five years she made her home with her sister in Stirling. She was a member of the Church of St. James the Minor.

Surviving her are her sister, Miss Sarah Delaney, and one nephew W. R. Delaney, Barrie.

The funeral announcement is made in this issue.

DR. WILLIAM G. MACKECHNIE (Toronto)

Marmora, Dec. 13 — The death occurred at the home of his daughter 195 Albertus Avenue, Toronto, on Sunday, December 9th., of Dr. William Graeme Mackechnie, late of Port of Spain, Trinidad, and Marmora, Ontario. Deceased, who was in his 77th year, is survived by his widow, the former Ada Squire, of Brighton, Ont.; one son, Dr. Graeme Mackechnie, Timmins, Ont.; two daughters, Mrs. T. Carey and Mrs. Jasper Moore of Toronto. The late Dr. Mackechnie came to Marmora in 1895 following his graduation, and was assisted in his practice here by his brother, Dr. Randall Mackechnie. He was resident of Marmora until 1912, when his practice was taken over by Dr. Hamilton Crawford.

He was a member of Marmora Presbyterian Church and Marmora A. F. and A. M. 222. The funeral service was held at two o'clock on Tuesday afternoon in the chapel of the Trull Funeral Home, 2704 Yonge St., Toronto, and interment took place in Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

100,000 Horses To Provide Meat For Belgian Contract

Swift Current, Sask., Dec. 13 (CP)—Surplus horses from western ranges, whose grazing lands are of more value for cattle and sheep, soon will provide meat for Belgium, where horse meat is a staple article of diet.

Thousands of the animals have known the freedom of range lands but never the touch of harness or saddle. Now a market has been found for them—the meat for Belgium and by-products for Canadian industry.

Six months ago, the Saskatchewan Horse Co-operative Marketing Association here began remodelling a disused power plant to meet, with a similar plant in Edmonton, a Belgian contract for 10,000 tons of pickled horsemeat, to be filled by January, 1947.

Today approximately 100 men, 40 of them ex-servicemen, are processing the first batches of the more than 100,000 horses which the contract involves.

WILL CARRY 10,000

Ottawa, Dec. 13 (CP)—The troop-carrying liner Queen Elizabeth on her return voyage to New York Dec. 27 will bring back 10,000 Canadian servicemen, it was learned yesterday. The Elizabeth landed hundreds of Canadians at New York last week.

Thurlow Ratepayers Discuss Formation Of Twp. School Area

Plans for the formation of township school areas came under discussion at a meeting of approximately 75 ratepayers of Thurlow Township held in the Township Hall at Cannifton, Wednesday night.

Representatives of Foxboro, Cannifton, College Hill, Point Anne and other school sections, were present.

Reeve George MacDonald, of Thurlow township, acted as a preliminary master-of-ceremonies and appointed Mr. Ken Bird, principal of the Prince of Wales School as chairman.

R. H. Macklem, public school inspector for South Hastings, outlined the advantages of school areas and showed by a comparison of the present tax rates with what they would be under a township school area that substantial savings could be effected.

He pointed out that the township of Thurlow was losing $3,000 annually in extra grants because the schools were not organized in the new system. "Over 40 per cent of the rural schools in Ontario are now in school areas", he said, "and if the formation of school areas continues at the present rate, all schools will have the advantage of a modern system of school administration."

In Hastings County, Inspector Macklem, told the meeting, 18 of the 24 townships are organized in school areas with the new area in Madoc township of 14 schools going into operation after Christmas.

OPPOSES COVERING

Chatham, Dec. 13 (CP)—Awakened as bricks hurtled through the roof of her trailer home, Mrs. Alfred Boulley, wife of a construction worker, escaped injury when an 88-foot wall of a new storage building of the William Rennie Seed Company collapsed yesterday. I. A. C. Maynard, manager of the company, said damage would probably be more than $10,000.

No Marked Change In the Paralysis Of General Patton

Heidelberg, Dec. 13 — (AP) — Doctors in attendance on Gen. George S. Patton today reported he had spent a good night and his general condition remained satisfactory with no complications.

The medical bulletin indicated, however, that there had been no marked change in the paralysis from which Gen. Patton is suffering as the result of a broken neck sustained in an automobile accident last Sunday near Mannheim.

The noon bulletin:

"Temperature 100, pulse 62, respiration 20. The general had a good night and is cheerful and alert. His general condition remains satisfactory with no complications. Neurological status remains about the same."

Labor Seeks to Hold Gains in New Year

By JACK WILLIAMS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 10 (CP) — Canadian labor turns toward a new year in somewhat anxious but nevertheless determined mood. The Labor movement emerged from the war with its membership at an all-time high, with new legislation favorable to labor and with a firm intention of keeping in peacetime the gains made on war production lines.

Reports made public in 1945 placed the total membership of labor unions at 720,000, double the pre-war figure. The question of what was going to happen to that membership loomed large as the year neared an end. The unions had found new strength in war industries. Thousands of semi-skilled workers carried a union card for the first time; but many of them had to change jobs to fit into the peacetime economy.

Strikes in the early part of the year had been low—for the first eight months the time loss was 63 per cent lower than in the same period of 1944—but at the end of the year the figures soared, largely as a result of the Ford Motor Co. walkout at Windsor, Ont.

The main issue in the Ford dispute was union security—the demand of the United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.) for a union shop and check-off. The company opposed that demand with the argument that a union shop agreement, requiring every employee to join the union, and the compulsory deduction of union dues from payrolls, were undemocractic.

While statements from both sides emphasized the union security issue there was evidence of strong feeling in the minds of the ordinary worker walking the picket line that other securities were involved, too—job security and wage security.

Ask Guaranteed Wage.

A guaranteed wage of $1,800 a year was one of the issues between the company and union. The average Ford worker admitted that he received a good hourly rate and that he had worked steadily while war production was at its peak, but he was nervous about the future.

Fluctuations in peacetime employment were not peculiar to the Ford Co. They had been fairly common throughout the automobile industry. The Windsor workers who during the strike went for weeks with their only income from union relief vouchers and family allowances recalled pre-war days when they had experienced alternate periods of high production and lay-offs.

They looked on union security as their hope for wage and job security to prevent irregular work periods.

The Windsor strikers—10,000 in the Ford plant and at one time 8,500 on a sympathy strike in other Windsor automobile factories—were not the only Canadians out of a job as the year drew to a close. In November only four of the 29 largest Canadian cities had more vacant jobs that unemployed and in those centres there was difficulty fitting the available men into the unfilled jobs.

Some of those who had jobs were worried about wages. "Take home pay" had become a popular topic of conversation during the year. Many workers had been upgraded to higher paying jobs during the labor-short war years and most of them had supplemented their regular weekly wages with overtime.

Latest government figures covering 1,724,000 employees showed that at October 1 pay envelopes held an average of $32.08 compared with $32.36 on October 1, 1944. The drop was attributed to job changes and less overtime. It was apparent wages would be one of the big issues in 1946.

Also on the 1946 agenda was the future of such legislation as the federal labor code which introduced compulsory collective bargaining in 1944. The federal government had stepped on to what was normally provincial ground during the war, but the future of such legislation had still to be determined.

Irish Girl May Get Big Hollywood Role

Hollywood (CP)—It's another of Hollywood's little incongruities that a girl who looks like Alice in Wonderland is a leading nominee for the role of Amber in "Forever Amber."

The girl is Peggy Cummins, a very earnest little Irish actress who played Alice on the London stage. Her hair is long and blonde, her eyes are dusky violet. There is an elfin quality about her small, pale face.

That doesn't sound like the Amber that Kathleen Winsor wrote about.

Yet Twentieth Century - Fox officials say definitely that Peggy is being considered for the role; moreover, that her present screen grooming by wardrobe and makeup departments is in that direction.

Peggy is not at all perturbed by the prospect of the part. A competent actress, in her opinion will tackle anything.

The "Forever Amber" script, at last report, was having a hard time negotiating the shoals of censorship. Some think it will ultimately founder, however much the scenarists lighten its sinful cargo. If this happens, the screen may get a sterile rewrite, or the whole thing may be shelved.

Approaching Yuletide

The year 1945 has been one of events of world and historic importance, the defeat of the German and Japanese aggressor nations, and the use of atomic energy in the atomic bomb. Out of these two major events stem many others which will have repercussions down the coming generations. Immediate tasks concern the elimination of the menace of aggression in the future, the control of atomic energy, resettlement of Europe and Asia, the trials of German and Japanese leaders on charges of crimes against humanity by plotting war, trials of lesser Japanese and Germans on charges of committing atrocities or allowing them to be committed, and the Allied planning for the future of the world in peace.

Canada's armed forces have been sending their members home in ever-increasing flow. They will be able to enjoy the first Christmas in many years at home. The war's end has had a profound effect in the reunion of families. There have been many days of rejoicing and welcome and every member of the forces has some relative or friend waiting to greet him and help him back into the civilian round of life. There were the days of mass celebration of the end of the two sections of the great war. In June when Germany fell and in August when Japan went down there were celebrations here as in other lands.

And now drawing near is the one festival of the whole calendar which has always stood for the family relationships, Christmas. Six times Christmas came and went during the struggle and men overseas and families and friends at home were separated for all those years or for lesser periods. Peace means so much to the world and to the family life at this time. Now for the first time the family ties are reunited or are about to be reunited and Christmas is the festival when the family life is enthroned. It will be a merry Christmas indeed. But through the dangers and hazards of war there are many who will not come back for they gave their all for their country. At this time of general rejoicing these heroes are remembered by their comrades and their relatives and friends at home. Could they speak they would ask that those who mourn would take heart and participate in the Christmas festival as they would, could they but return.

At this Christmas season the people will think on those in other lands bereft of their fathers and friends and their homes and needing shelter, warmth and food. Canadians have not forgotten those not so fortunate and as individuals and as a nation through the shipments of food they have sincerely tried to make life happier for the unfortunate peoples of war-torn territories.

Christmas has a message of peace for the world that had known no peace for the long years of war and entering into its spirit people can enjoy what this Christmas of 1945 brings — the time of family gatherings and reunions in the full spirit of Christmas. For a short time Christmas and its spirit will occupy first place. The festival elevates the family life and the world is a family and so peace and good will should prevail.

The observance of Christmas in its true aspects offers a great hope for mankind. Christmas was not allowed to lapse during the war years because it had the spirit that spoke a universal message for mankind. Now after war, men and women, boys and girls naturally seek to give voice to their deepest feelings in this merry time of Yule and Christmas.

Plans of Progress in Kenya

One of the far-reaching plans of the British people is a ten-year budget plan by the Development and Construction Authority of the Government in Kenya, British East Africa. The aim is that long-term planning of capital expenditure for development and welfare schemes need not be limited by the short-term annual estimates of normal budgeting. The immediate task will be to carry out plans already co-ordinated by the former Development Committee. These involve the expenditure of some four million pounds of which half will be provided by Kenya and half by the British taxpayer.

A ten-year conservation plan will be entirely financed by the United Kingdom. This scheme has been called the "agricultural section of the general plan for social and economic development of the native reserves of the colony." Improvement in farming methods is forecast. Two new training schools for Africans are to be established immediately. The European staffs are being recruited from the sons of local farmers. A survey is to be made to examine the effect of the existing types of land on farming and the possibility of increasing prosperity among African farmers by land utilization, by soil and water conservation, swamp drainage and such like. New research centres are being started in several places.

Five-year plans will be shared between the United Kingdom and Kenya, including a road to open up new land for African settlement, housing construction and education. Education plans include training centres for European, Indian and African women who will become teachers and organizers in the forward drive. The aim of the extended school system is to equip children to be useful members of Kenya's mainly rural society. Schools are being developed as community centres where practical training is combined with the necessary general background.

They Will Know They Were Beaten

(Ottawa Journal)

The question is asked often: Do the Germans know they were beaten?

Answer seems to come in that announcement from Berlin that the Allies have begun the stupendous task of transferring 6,500,000 Germans from Austria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Poland into the four occupation zones of Germany.

To understand what this transfer means, to grasp its magnitude, let us try to imagine what would happen if all the people living in the provinces of Quebec and Ontario, all living in their towns, cities, villages and on their lands, were taken up and moved into Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. Let us try to imagine also that these Germans will be moved into zones where living conditions are already appalling, with nothing like the space, or the land, or the living possibilities that could be found in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. British, American and Russian zones in Germany are already overcrowded with refugees that have poured into them from eastern Europe, are thronged with roofless, hungry, disease-infected people.

Know that they were beaten? If the German people are not aware of it, then nothing that could ever happen to them between earth and heaven could make them aware of it.

Use for Flame-Throwers

(The Lamp)

Discarded military flame-throwers are now being used in the Louisiana sugar cane fields to burn out weeds growing between the rows of young cane. In reporting this the Department of Commerce said that "the operator's skill in handling this spectacular wartime innovation is measured by its ability to kill obnoxious growths without scorching the growing cane."

Newspaper Facts

A bumper apple crop in the State of Washington was saved from probable loss by a full-page ad in the Spokane daily newspapers asking for volunteers to pick the crop. The Farm Labor Office was swamped with applications, and farmers gratefully saw their apple crop safely harvested.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

(Copyright, 1945, Edgar A. Guest)

SECOND TABLE

A table for the children? Yes,
But set it up nearby
And let them share all happiness
The family can supply.
And let them pass their plates to me
A second time or third,
For children should the Christmas be,
Without one scolding word.

Time was beyond the guarded door
I heard the glasses clink;
Watched old folks' plates passed up for more
And saw the turkey shrink.
With hunger in my eyes I stood
To share a small boy's fate
And vowed at Christmas when I could,
I'd make the grown-ups wait.

So, if the table full-length spread
No longer seats us all,
Then let the children first be fed;
Give age the second call.
Serve drumsticks and the wishbone, too,
Upon some youngster's plate.
If we must set the board anew,
Then let the grown-ups wait.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Herbert and Mrs. Patterson of Rochester, N.Y., were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. Salisbury, Cedar Street.

Mr. R. J. Graham went to Detroit, Mich., today.

Mr. Jack Denmark of Kalamazoo, Mich., formerly of Belleville, is visiting friends here.

30 YEARS AGO

DEC. 13TH., 1915.

At a meeting of the city council the following were appointed to compose the permanent fire brigade in this city: Chief, W. J. Brown; Firemen, Robert J. Symons, W. Lynch, James Clement, Harry Reeves, Gilbert Brown, T. D. Barriage, George Smith; Drivers, S. Waddell, J. P. Clarke and W. Morey.

Mr. D. Adams Brown of Philadelphia, Pa., recently spent a few days here with his mother at her home on Coleman Street.

The editor of the Daily Ontario is very grateful to Bro. James of the Bowmanville Statesman for the following very complimentary deference: "Editor J. O. Herity of the Daily Ontario, Belleville, has proved himself a splendid interviewer and an exceedingly interesting writer judging by the intensely instructive write-ups he has recently given of the cities and towns he visited last month to get at first hand the people's testimony on the working of local option."

A new pipe organ, which cost $10,000.00 is being installed in St. Michael's Church this week.

Mr. William Carnew, County Crown Attorney, of this city, has very generously donated unconditionally a magnificent team of horses to Col. Adams of the 155th Battalion which will be mobilized in this city. It is needless to say that the gift is much appreciated and that the donor has been heartily thanked for the same.

40 YEARS AGO

DEC. 13TH., 1905.

Considerable damage was done by fire about three o'clock this morning at the residence of Sheriff George Hope at the corner of Bleecker Avenue and Bridge Street east. Col. A. A. Farley of Quebec City is the owner of the building. Loss to tenant and owner is covered by insurance.

Belleville Lodge No. 251 A.O.U.W. recently elected the following officers: J. A. McCamon, W.M.; J. S. Peck, Foreman; W. C. Mikel, Overseer; George Denmark, Recorder; H. J. Clarke, Treasurer; W. O. Adams, Financier; W. G. Cunnington, Guide; J. Canning, Inside Watchman; Trustees, J. H. Moon, J. W. London and E. L. Palen.

Mackenzie's Column

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

London, Dec. 13 (AP)— The heavy increase in divorce in Britain represents to a large degree the opening of the floodgates to the accumulation of grievances between the soldier overseas and his wife back home.

We don't need to mince words. There's been a lot of unfaithfulness on both sides. The majority of the petitioners are soldiers but this certainly doesn't mean that the wives have been more unfaithful than their men.

Naive Outlook

Tommy Atkins sometimes has a naive outlook on this sort of thing. For instance, many married soldiers don't consider that they've committed adultery by associating with an unmarried lady of professionally easy virtue. You get that slant on the young man in the divorce court.

Before his case comes up for trial, Tommy likely will swear to his lawyer with great fervor that he hasn't committed adultery. This is an important point in British law, because if a petitioner is guilty of misconduct, and doesn't make it known to the court in advance, the case is thrown out. Well, Tommy gets on the stand and his wife's lawyer demands:

"Do you mean to swear that you haven't had any relations with a woman since you've been overseas?"

To this the astonished young man retorts:

"Of course I've had relations with women. Who hasn't? But that isn't adultery so long as they aren't married."

Much Explaining Needed

It then takes a lot of explaining to make Tommy understand that he has violated the law just as much as has his wife whom he is suing. This means that his case will be dismissed unless the court gives leave to amend the petition.

The increase in divorces probably has been due to the protracted separation necessitated by the husband's duty overseas.

This has been a long war, and the soldiers have been away from their wives in most cases between 40 and 48 months without leave at home. And there have been more men in foreign service than ever before in British history.

Then, too, redistribution of the population for war purposes is partly responsible. In many instances wives, whose husbands were overseas, were moved into other districts to take industrial jobs. There they made new friends and perhaps were indiscreet. Another cause of divorce, common to every country in wartime, is hasty marriage. And there is the strain and stress of war.

Poorer Class More Victorian

An interesting deviation is to be found among the poorer working people. There is a more Victorian attitude among them than in the upper classes. The laboring man, for instance, may be inclined to restrict his wife's liberties and may think he must have a divorce because she has been out walking with another man. The women, for their part, have become more independent economically during the war and are getting more divorces.

The kindly intervention of welfare workers eases many matrimonial craft over the rocks. A lot of returning soldiers are willing to carry on with their wives despite past infidelity by the latter. It may be that children turn the trick, or that forgiveness comes through logical recognition of the monotony and drabness of the wife's life at home. This also is true of many women whose men have had a fling overseas.

COMMONS HOPES

The proposal stemmed from the Ives Royal Commission investigation, but Mr. Ilsley said further consideration indicated there would be wide implications and he wanted more time to consider the position of annuities and life interests..

Consideration of a bill amending the War Revenue Act revived discussion on changes in the tax on furs.

Benefit Primary Producer

Mr. Ilsley said he disagreed with Chester McLure (PC — Queen's) who maintained that the revision would result in a higher tax than previously applied. The minister also said he was hopeful that the reduction would benefit primary producer rather than the consumer.

J. M. Macdonnell (PC—Muskoka-Ontario), speaking when excess profits taxes were up for discussion, objected to the policy of leaving some tax rulings at the discretion of the minister. Mr. Ilsley said he was frequently confronted with representations of those who were anxious that there should be opportunity for discretionary power in exceptional cases and the application of common sense decisions.

Members who took part in discussion of the Resources Department estimates devoted their attention largely to the Northwest Territories and the system of national parks.

When the Justice Department estimates were before the House, requests came from a number of members for improvements in Canada's penitentiary system and implementation of major recommendations of the Archambault Royal Commission on penitentiaries.

Have to Widen Jurisdiction

The system of Borstal institutions was specifically mentioned, but Justice Minister St. Laurent said that system could not be introduced in Canada without a widening of the Dominion's jurisdiction.

He referred to the government's announced intention of appointing a commissioner in an effort to effect improvements along the line recommended by the previous commission and said the duty of that official would be to confer with the Attorneys-General of the provinces seeking their co-operation.

John Diefenbaker (PC — Lake Centre) urged government action to prevent small arms getting into the hands of criminals. Mr. St Laurent said the matter had received serious consideration but it was considered unwise to go to the extent of confiscation of pistols and other arms in the possession of ordinary citizens. It would receive further study and recommendations would be made at the next session, possibly for a tightening of registration regulations.

NOW THEY'RE PSYCHONEUROTICS

Neuro means nerve. Neurosis means nerve disease, that is if I'm not psychotic it does, for Webster says the suffixosis means a condition, state or process, such as hypnosis (sleep), lordosis (forward spinal curvature, swayback), tuberculosis (disease characterized by development of nodules or tubercles in the affected tissue or organ), chlorosis (the green sickness, a peculiar type of anemia in young women—it was much more frequent when I was driving my one horse around the country roads of Yates County than it is today) or bromidrosis (bromos, a stench, hidros, sweating.)

But the term neurosis has acquired wider significance than that, as Webster meticulously mentions — it is a "functional nervous disorder without demonstrable physical lesion," such as hysteria, migraine, epilepsy. To confuse everybody's understanding and give us psychologists more room to play around in. Stedman's Medical Dictionary (1933) defines neurosis as "any form of nervousness" and specifies several varieties, from anxiety neurosis (gloomy forebodings) to shell-shock.

"Shell-shock" went out of fashion with trench warfare and has been succeeded by "battle-fatigue." That is, for the duration of the fox-hole stage of the fighting. Sometimes battle-fatigue was called "combat-fatigue."

Since the cessation of hostilities the doctors have become less sentimental again and inclined to classify all such cases as "psychoneuroses"—psych or psycho meaning mind. Not that the psychoneurotic just imagines things, nor that he is insane, crazy or off his nut in the ordinary sense of the word. But you know as well as I do that one's thinking, one's attitude and behavior, one's personality and indeed one's character is considerably influenced by one's experience, by what has happened to one in life, by the teachings and training one has had, by the example shown by parents and others, by one's company, companions or associates. That's what the psycho-part of the term "psychoneurotic" means and that is all it means.

My advice to all persons who have acquired a psychoneurotic attitude or way of thinking is perhaps stereotyped but I sincerely mean it: Forget it. That is to say, forget what you take the term to imply. It's just too bad if you let your own peculiar notions about the significance of "psychoneurosis" get you down. I'm not fooling when I say we're all more or less psychoneurotic. When I get to worrying about my own insanity I find consolation in just keeping mum and observing the greater insanity of my friends, neighbors and casual acquaintances. Try it and see.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A Hundred Warts

Son, 12, has about 100 warts on his hands. Some doctors advise acid, some electric needle, some burning them off... Our present doctor claims they are from nervousness and if left alone they will disappear. (Mrs. G. L. H.)

Answer—Heavens only knows what the doctor may mean by "nervousness"—or whether you misunderstood him—but I'd agree with his advice to let 'em alone. Warts have a way of coming and going.

Riboflavin and Niacin

Can you tell me what food contains the most riboflavin or nicotinic acid or both?. (Mrs. F. D.)

Answer—Dried peas, beans and other legumes supply as much of these components of the vitamin B-complex as any other food. The soybean probably supplies the greatest amounts of these, as well as thiamin.

Vitamin A

Is there any danger in taking too much vitamin A? When I asked for 25,000 unit capsules the druggist said they might have a weakening effect, so I hesitate. (I. C.)

Answer—The druggist was trying to impress you. It may be wasteful but never dangerous to take 100,000 units of vitamin A daily for any length of time.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

How is "Faneuil" in "Faneuil Hall" pronounced?

The preferable pronunciation of "Faneuil" is "FANN-'l," although the name is sometimes pronounced "FANN-y'l," and the earlier "FUNN-'l" is occassionally still heard.

The building in Boston known as Faneuil Hall received its name from Peter Faneuil (1700-1743), a merchant of French Huguenot descent, who was born at New Rochelle, N.Y., and who inherited a large fortune from an uncle.

Peter Faneuil never married and he named one of his best ships the "Jolly Bachelor."

Faneuil donated funds for a combined city market and town hall on condition that the city would legalize and maintain the structure.

As originally built Faneuil Hall consisted of a substantial two-story building of brick, 40 feet by 100 in its ground dimensions, the arched lower story being used for a market and the upper as an assembly room.

At the first town meeting in the hall the "city fathers" pronounced the structure "spacious and beautiful," decreed it should always be known as Faneuil Hall in perpetual testimony of the town's gratitude to the giver, and ordered a full-length portrait of Peter Faneuil hung in the building.

This original Faneuil Hall was almost entirely destroyed by fire in 1761, but a new structure was built by the city on the old foundations.

In 1806 Faneuil Hall was altered and enlarged according to plans designed by the architect Charles Bulfinch. It has been altered several times since and in recent years attempts have been made to restore it to its original architectural condition.

A provision in the Boston charter forbids the sale or lease of this public forum of the city.

A specified number of citizens may obtain use of Faneuil Hall free provided they agree to comply with certain regulations.

Beaten Germany on Economic Feet Two Years Hence is U.S. Policy

By GRAHAM HOVEY

Washington, Dec. 13 — (AP) — Beaten Germany, if the United States has its way, will be back on its economic feet two years hence, able to pay its own way and to raise the living standards of its people.

This is the long-range objective of United States policy toward the Reich as laid down by the State Department. It comprises a middle-ground between "hard" and "soft" peace proposals.

To carry it out, however, the United States and the other Allies will have to provide funds — perhaps hundreds of millions — to permit Germany to import necessities during the next two years.

The State Department made public United States policy by releasing the text of a statement prepared at the request of the War Department for guidance of occupation authorities.

The United States plan is based on the assumption that Germany will retain its present boundaries, including the industrial Ruhr and Rhineland areas, United States officials said.

This assured opposition from France, which has insisted that those two zones be stripped from Germany.

Women's Activities

ST. JOHN'S W.A.

Stirling.— The annual election of officers for St. John's Woman's Auxiliary was held on Tuesday, Dec. 11, in the Parish Hall with the rector, Rev. C. C. Brazill, presiding.

The new officers elected for 1946 are:

Honorary Presidents, Mrs. B. Alger and Mrs. C. C. Brazill.
President, Mrs. H. Rodgers
1st Vice President, Mrs. H. Cooke
2nd Vice President, Mrs. G. Clute
Secretary, Mrs. W. Savage
Treasurer, Mrs. F. Kent
Little Helpers' Secretary, Mrs. T. Tanner
Pianist, Mrs. B. Alger
Convener of Visiting Committee, Mrs. T. Tanner
Convener of Program Committee, Mrs. G. Clute.

MURRAY CANAL W.A.

The annual meeting of the Women's Association was held Tuesday at the home of Mrs. F. Seward. The President, Mrs. W. Price, presided over the worship period using Christmas carols. The election of officers for the coming year was in charge of Rev. Mr. Sunter. The officers elected were:

President, Mrs. W. Price
Vice President, Mrs. A. Seward
Secretary, Mrs. F. Chapman
Treasurer, Mrs. W. Seward.

At the close of the meeting dainty refreshments were served by the hostess.

THE LADIES' AUXILIARY TO THE CANADIAN LEGION

The Ladies' Auxiliary to the Canadian Legion, held their monthly meeting in the Sacco rooms on Wednesday afternoon for the election of officers. A large number of members was present and the 1945 officers were re-elected. The ladies are continuing with their splendid work of welcoming the boys overseas; meeting most of the troop trains and giving the boys gifts.

ST. PAUL'S W.M.S.

Over forty ladies gathered at the home of Mrs. R. A. Patterson Stirling, on Tuesday, Dec 11, for the meeting of St. Paul's W.M.S.

Gaily lighted Christmas trees and wreaths together with a beautifully arranged worship centre, seemed to help each one present to catch some of the Christmas spirit .However; more important in producing this effect was the seasonable program prepared by Mrs. H. Hulin.

After the usual opening exercise and business procedure, the Rev. A. M. Laverty in a brief ceremony installed the newly elected officers for the year 1946. The annual reports of the secretaries were given, and each department made a very creditable showing, with the Mission Band, Baby Band and Community Friendship being outstanding. Mrs. E. A. Luery brought Christmas greetings from the Mission Band members to the W.M.S. ladies.

Miss Della Caldwell presided over the afternoon's program. The first part, consisted of short scripture passages, interspersed with carol singing. Preceding the first carol Miss Caldwell lighted the candles surrounding the worship centre and Mrs. Ellis read an appropriate poem. The readers of the Scripture passages were Mrs. H. Hulin, Mrs. E. G. Bailey, Mrs. R. Christie, Mrs. B. Emmons, and Mrs. Ellis. The carollers were Miss Potter, Mrs. Macklin. Mrs. H. West and Mrs. Miller sang a duet, also Mrs. F. Houchin and Mrs. H. Munroe.

"The Christmas Message", was the theme of Miss Potter's fine address and she said, "Christmas is the great High day in the world, as well as in the church. No burden of care or grief, no experience of disastrous fortune, no newly made graves, can wholly shut out its sunshine. 'Although every heart knoweth its own bitterness', the birthday of Jesus, comes whether men laugh or sob, not to mock but to comfort and inspire. Only one cloud can obstruct its splendors, and that is the cloud of sin. No life can be normal and beautiful and really strong and joyous, unless it includes love and reverence for the Christ Child. Since His Birth a new glory has shone on all common scenes, a new joy has filled the common heart that has been opened to the Prince of Peace."

Prayer by Mrs. Yateman and the benediction hymn sung by Miss Potter brought this impressive Christmas service to a close. Delicious refreshments were served by the committee in charge, and the hostess was thanked by the President.

MOST PERFECT BACK OF 1945

Lovely Evelyn Johnson, Barbizon model, has the most perfect back in 1945, according to Dr. C. W. Weiant, director of research of the National Chiropractic Association, New York. Miss Johnson, a former Colorado school teacher in a Japanese war relocation centre, was selected from a field of lovely women for the physiological and aesthetic perfection of her back.

The Marry Go Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

The Wolf—Just a Myth?

Aren't men getting cynical about women, these days! First, there was that columnist who declared that women are worse "wolves" than men. And yesterday, I picked up a little tome called "What Men Don't Like About Women," by Thomas D. Horton who apparently believes that most women are "wolves" in their eagerness, their possessiveness, their sense of ownership, their penchant for other women's husbands, and the way they panhandle lunches, dinners and Christmas gifts, although he doesn't call them wolves. He can think of lots of other names.

I have done a little research on the subject, and I find that there have always been "wolves" of both sexes, ever since Paris stole Helen-of-Troy and Circe tried to vamp Ulysses. The male wolves have been called successively cavaliers, gallants, Lotharios, ladies' men, carpet-knights and later sheiks, skirt-chasers, Great Lovers and now, wolves.

The lady-wolves have been called sirens, Jezebels, coquettes, Loreleis, flirts, mantraps, vamps —and lots of worse things; but never, until a few weeks ago, did I hear them referred to as "wolves".

A dictionary defines a wolf—among other details— as "Any ravenous, cruel or rapacious person or thing". And, of course, there have always been women, whose great sport in life was stealing other women's men, vamping any man who came within their radius— alluring temptresses who collected men, as the Indians collected scalps. Some of them have been burned as witches—enchrantress sort—when they tried lures and fed their insatiable vanity once too often.

But, in these days, nobody takes a vamp very seriously. She is typed as a "glamour-girl" and so well advertised that she can't do much prowling. Every other woman and every man is ready for her. She is as obvious as a "Fresh Paint" sign. She might as well go around waving a lantern. But all she wants is attention, applause and popularity—to feed her vanity. She has no desire to break hearts or spoil anybody's life. So, she cannot be called a "wolf".

The gold-digger is another type that might be clyassed as a "wolf," except that her designs are not the same as the he-wolf's. And there is the marrying girl, whose object is always matrimony; but who ever heard of a marrying wolf.

So, with all my research, I have not yet been able to find any feminine counterpart of that newest of Casanovas, the popular "Wolf". Indeed, I am beginning to think that the wolf, himself, is just a beautiful myth —like the one in Red Riding-Hood!

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

His Girl Friends Wants a Career

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm very much in love with a girl who has one more year in high school. I graduated last year and am at present in the Coast Guard where I am studying to be a radio technician. When I finish that course I will be getting enough money so I can marry. She thinks we are too young to marry, and won't even become engaged. She says she wants a career. Also, she thinks her parents won't approve of marriage.

We've been going together for two years and have tried going with other boys and girls, but always come back to each other. Do you see any harm in becoming engaged about Christmas?

Wondering

Why consider becoming engaged at all? You are both so young. And she still has another year in school. Then she will probably want to go to college, and you will probably want to take advantage of the education benefits under the G.I. Bill of Rights when you are discharged from the service.

Patience is a dready thing to counsel when one is in the grip of the ecstasy of first love. You'll both look back on this affair as one of the most beautiful experiences of your life. Keep it on a high plane, and try not to think of becoming engaged or married until you are both older.

She Would Like to Meet New Friends

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a girl of 16 and we've recently moved to this neighborhood, and am finding it rather hard to make acquaintances. In the old neighborhood I knew everybody and we had good times always. I've seen boys and girls passing the house and would like to meet them, but how is this possible?

Junior

I'm sure this problem will solve itself if you will try to be patient. You didn't seem to have trouble before you moved to this neighborhood, and undoubtedly are an attractive girl. Perhaps the boys and girls there are just as anxious to know you.

Why not attend social activities in your community clubs, or in the church nearest your home? And now that school has started, you'll probably find boys and girls in your classes eager to meet you. Don't become impatient, and before you know it you will be as popular as you were in the old neighborhood.

She Has to Account for Every Penny

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've always been a very truthful person and I despise lying. Since I've been married I've had to lie just to save a scene, as my husband seems to think he must know everything I do every minute and what I do with every penny he gives me.

I care nothing at all about affairs he may have, but to get back at him I ask about the girls who call him up and those he lunches with at noon. And naturally he lies out of them too.

Why do we do this to each other? We might really have a happy time if we stopped all this cross-questioning.

Baffled.

Fear is the real reason of all this cross-questioning —You're afraid to say to your husband: "I did get myself a new hat today, what of it?" And he's probably afraid to tell you about going to lunch with one of the girls in his office, which may be philandering of the foolish variety and insufficient to make any wife jealous. The greatest blessing to each one of you would be to be perfectly frank and honest. Don't lie to each other about such unimportant things.

FASHION FLASHES

WHITE SHOULDERS gleam again as the decollete evening frock becomes more general. A deep decolletage marks an evening frock of black tulle made with a pointed over-apron of black taffeta. Shoestring shoulder straps of taffeta. A cascade of red silk roses falls from the waistline.

Just the same, there are many women who, while they like decollete evening frocks, want discreet necklines for themselves. For them, then, a lovely sheath of black crepe topped by a screen fishnet decollete. The jet embroidered crepe fishnet extends from the bodice top to form long sleeves winged at the armhole.

It's wonderful how much detail there can be in swim suits that consist of but a bra and brief shorts. Multi-colored stripes, framed in navy blue binding, are used for the bra of a rayon suit. Halter strap of the bra can be used as a bow, leaving bra strapless. The shorts are of the striped fabric with back of navy. Tiny flap pockets on shorts.

A carry-over from last year is the use of prints with sequins picking up the dominant colors and design. Used in scarfs during the winter, this device appears not only on Spring prints but on blouses as well. Dresses are of the lavish, afternoon type or formal evening frocks.

Smart women are going in for fur stoles, with the skins intricately worked and draped. Long panel ends that snap up into muffs are part of the design of cape stoles made to wear with fitted, fabric coats in colder climes and over evening frocks at southern resorts. Luxury furs such as mutation mink, silver-blue and patina

Reconstruction Problems and Trade Most Pressing Post-War Problems In Canada Says Dominion Bank Head

Toronto, Dec. 13—Post-war reconstruction problems and the magnitude of Canada's debt, with greater effort to maintain export trade, were the principal subjects of the address by Mr. C. H. Carlisle, President of The Dominion Bank, to the shareholders at the annual meeting in Toronto on Wednesday.

There was no magic wand, said Mr. Carlisle by which the colossal needs of a world ravaged by war could be met and a paradise instantly attained.

Referring to Canada's indebtedness, totalling $1,238 per capita, he said: "The liquidation of Canada's debt, the carrying charges on the indebtedness and the cost of Government in its entirety is the direct responsibility and obligation of each citizen or resident of Canada. You have given to Government an unlimited power of attorney as to assessment and expenditure. Therefore, you undoubtedly have a direct and vital interest in Government expenditures and in the obligations Government creates for you."

"Greater efforts were needed to maintain exports at a volume essential for moderate stability and prosperity. Our goods had to be competitive, and there was a limit to the loans and donations we could make to other countries to increase their purchasing power."

Need Rigid Economy

"There is a great and constant demand upon Government to make this or that expenditure, whether it is essential or non-essential, or whether we can afford it or not," he declared. "Our present financial position necessitates a rigid economy. "What we have been doing, and are doing," he declared, "is really subsidizing idleness.

"There always have been periods of unavoidable unemployment," he continued. "They will be recurrent. The only way to mitigate them is through Government, industry and labor working for a common purpose, for a greater economy and expansion of trade. This work is not being done."

"Our production is being retarded or suspended, thousands thrown out of work, while domestic markets were depleted of merchandise and industry deprived of equipment and replacements. "All wars are destructive," he said, "including industrial wars. The time has arrived when peace should displace war."

Financial Statement Analyzed

Mr. Robert Rae, the General Manager, in analyzing the financial statement for the year, pointed to assets exceeding $300,000,000, profits of $1,080,000 after Dominion taxes of $842,000 and $93,000 added to profit and loss account compared with $105,000 the previous year. Public deposits, up $29,479,000, were $263,834,000. Quick assets, $227,076,000 equalled 80 per cent of public liabilities compared with 77.46 per cent the previous year. Cash assets, $56,035,000. were 19.78 per cent of liabilities. Investments totalled $163,677,000. Call and short loans in Canada increased by $2,471,000, those elsewhere, at $3,498,000, were virtually unchanged. Current loans in Canada were $65,421,000, about the same as the previous year.

GIVEN TWO MONTHS

Kingston, Dec. 13 —(CP)— Alexander Moore Wednesday was sentenced to two months in jail on a charge of common assault Dec. 7 against Mrs. Edith King whom, he said he mistook for someone else.

Magistrate James Garvin commented that motive of the offence was obscure. He warned that attacks on women were too prevalent and must be checked.

Stirling

Stirling — Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Irvine and Paul of Tweed were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Carman Fitchett.

Wren Mary Hulin of Toronto was weekend visitor at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hulin.

Mr. Harry Skerratt of Mountain View was in town for the weekend.

Mr. Creighton McConnell returned Monday afternoon to Trinity College School following a few days spent at his home due to the arrival Saturday of his father, Hon. Capt. Rev. A. S. McConnell following over three years overseas.

Friends of Mr. Earl Luery will regret to learn he is a patient at Belleville General Hospital.

The students of the local high and public schools are trying their Christmas examinations this week.

Mrs. Albert Fraser is in charge of Stapley's Grocery due to the absence through illness of Mrs. M. Runnalls. Mrs. Runnalls' many friends wish her a speedy recovery.

Mrs. A. E. Strickland is assisting at the local post office during the Christmas rush.

FOXBORO etc

Foxboro—Miss Marion Daniels of Toronto spent Sunday at her home here.

The pupils are busy practicing for their annual Christmas entertainment.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Gardner of Belleville were Sunday afternoon callers at Mr. R. Yorke's.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Yorke, Gilead, were Sunday evening callers at Mr. W. Hodgen's.

Rev. L. Shorten attended a meeting of the Young People's Union in Oshawa on Saturday.

Sunday guests at Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Montgomery's included the latter's son Mr. John Montgomery, Mrs. Montgomery and son and a cousin, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Brown of Colborne.

Sapper George H. Woods returned home from overseas on Sunday last.

Mr. Richard Yorke and Mrs. A. Shaw were dinner hour guests on Sunday at Mr. W. Hodgen's.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Daniels and Miss Marion Daniels called on relatives in Stirling on Sunday afternoon.

Reeve George Montgomery and Mrs. Montgomery and son Douglas of Frankford were supper hour guests on Sunday at his father's, Mr. Ed. Montgomery.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Gardner of Belleville, Mr. R. Yorke and Mrs. A. Shaw were Sunday afternoon callers at Mr. Fred Prindle's, Plainfield.

Miss Carol Stewart celebrated her seventh birthday on Thursday when five young friends were entertained at her home.

The regular missionary meeting was held in the S. S. rooms on Thursday. Mrs. Clare Finkle was pianist and played "Silent Night" as quiet music. Rev. L. Shorten gave a most interesting talk on "The Crusade for Christ" explaining individual obligations. The members of the Mission Band then took charge and the Scripture lesson was given by Ruth Reid and another Christmas hymn was sung. Marie Royal gave a recitation and Mrs. Ewart Sills lighted red and white candles on a table with lace cloth. During this period the "Nativity" was well given by Shirley Finkle and a story of a "Christmas in Angola" was interestingly given by Mrs. Bill Rombough.

Clem Ketcheson Named President Cheese Producers

Clem H. Ketcheson, Sidney township, was named president of the Hastings County Cheese Producers' Association at their annual meeting held in Stirling Wednesday afternoon. He replaces John Bell of Marmora, who had acted as president of the association for the present year.

Ormonde Coon, provincial president of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association, was the guest speaker for the meeting and briefly reviewed association projects, giving highlights on their proposal for blanket insurance on cheese while in factories, on artificial insemination and on permanent pastures.

Other speakers heard at the meeting included H. Lynn Fair, agricultural representative for Hastings, who spoke on agricultural matters, Roscoe Robson, M.L.A. for East Hastings, who advocated individual testing of dairy cattle in an effort to weed out the "boarders" and also spoke on smaller packaging of cheese in an effort to increase home consumption. Dairy Instructor George Pollard was also heard.

Other Officers Named.

Other officers elected at the meeting included W. E. Bateman of Tweed as vice president and Bert Finkle of Halloway as secretary treasurer.

Directors named as follows: Sidney, Ernest Kells, Trenton; Thurlow, Cecil Ketcheson, Halloway; Tyendinaga, Edward Lazier, Corbyville; Rawdon, William Carr, Stirling; Huntingdon, Morley Haggerty, Halloway; Hungerford, Harry Coulter, Tweed; Marmora, John Bell, Marmora; Madoc, James Nickle, Marmora, and Elzevir, James A. Moore, Queensboro.

With approximately ninety county cheese producers present, the meeting was the best attended ever held by the association.

Shell Employees Honored

On Saturday night, two well known Belleville men, and a newcomer to the city, were honored at a presentation banquet in the Crystal Ball Room at the King Edward Hotel in Toronto. Almost two hundred Toronto division employees of the Shell Oil Company of Canada, Limited, received gold emblems in token of their long service with the Company.

Mr. John Leslie Airth (centre), who replaces A. G. Marvell as Branch Manager and Tank-Wagon Salesman O. D. (Ross) Lewis (left) and John B. H. Newell (right), all received emblems signifying over 15 years with Shell.

Mr. Airth comes to Belleville from Peterborough, where he has been branch manager for the past fourteen years. He has always been active in community affairs and at present is a director of the Peterborough Rotary Club.

Memorial Service For PO. R. Conley Held at Carmel

Stirling — A committee composed of R. A. Patterson, Harry Francis—representing the veterans of World War I—and Russell West and the Rev. A. M. Laverty, representing the veterans of World War II, appealed for contributions to the War Amputations Fund which is designed to build a clubhouse and recreation centre in Toronto for "Amps" of the two wars. Without any canvassing or solicitation other than a letter over the signatures of the aforementioned four veterans $124.60 was raised and sent to Toronto; two notable conrtibutions were $50.00 from the Woman's Institute and $25.00 from River Valley War Workers.

Memorial.

A Memorial Service for Pilot Officer Roy Clifford Conley, R.C.A.F. killed in action over Germany, December 29, 1944, was held in Carmel United Church last Sunday. A large congregation which crowded the church to the doors gathered to do honor to one of the community's gallant sons. A detachment from 6 R.D., R.C.A.F., Trenton, where Roy was stationed for nearly two years before going overseas, was present and one of their number blew 'The Last Post' and 'Reveille.'

The church was decorated with white mums and a large photograph of the deceased airman centred the communion table and the flowers. The R.C.A.F. standard was set in the fore part of the church.

The service was conducted by Captain the Rev. A. M. Laverty, minister of the church. "O God Our Help in Ages Past," "O Valiant Hearts" and "The Lord's My Shepherd" were the hymns, while "The Souls of the Righteous" was read responsively and Revelation 7:9-17 was the lesson. Douglas Pyear sang a solo "There is no Death." In his brief address the Padre said that it was entirely fitting that a service of this kind should be held in the Church of God so that in the fellowship of the Christian faith those whose hearts were sore heavy might be sustained and comforted.

PICTON

Bata Employees Enjoy Dinner

Picton, Dec. 13 — Plans for enlarging production at the Picton branch of the Bata Shoe Co., were announced at a banquet given local employees. Dr. Karl Herz, general manager of the company, stated that the expansion plan would be undertaken early in 1946.

The local staff was entertained at a turkey dinner at the Globe Hotel. Anthony Cekota of the Batawa plant, summarized the progress already made. Proposing a toast to the employees, he remarked on the fine team play. He felt that a bright future lay before the shoe company. Rex Huff, Shirley Suddard and James Jenkins spoke on behalf of the employees.

It was revealed that the company plan to place their entire production of casual shoes at the Picton plant.

Tony Ronza, local manager, ably presided. Art Duncan of Batawa was song leader and Douglas Elliott, RCAF, gave piano selections.

Following the dinner, all journeyed to the Yacht Club for games and dancing.

WINS AWARD

Los Angeles, Dec. 13 — (AP) —Dairyman Glenn O. Lynch's complaint that noise from low flying planes at Lockheed air terminal had reduced the production of his herd won him a $5,000 award from a jury in Superior Court yesterday.

A GOOD CHRISTMAS

Fort Erie, Dec. 13 — (CP) — Fort Erie merchants say they are looking forward to as good Christmas trade this year as last, when employment in Fort Erie was at its peak and plants were busy on war contracts. They report purchases by American war veterans, taking advantage of the 10 per cent premium on United States currency, are taking up the slack caused by local layoffs.

McColl-Frontenac Rewards Service Long-Term Dealers

Long term McColl-Frontenac dealers in Belleville and district were appropriately awarded for their years' service when at the Y.M.C.A. Wednesday evening they received tangible recognition from their parent organization at the firm's annual dealer award meeting.

Daniel Coffey of Read was the recipient of a gold watch and certificate following his completion of 20 years' service with the company, while Albert "Toots" Holway received a silver tray in recognition of his 15 years as service station operator with McColl Frontenac.

District men receiving ten-year awards included the following: Harold Wells and "Shelley" McIntosh of Stirling; Donald Bradshaw, Trenton; Hermon Brendt, Selby; Albert Grindrod, Picton; Wilfred Maxwell of Bancroft and Ed. Perry of Cloyne. Five year awards presented in absentia went to James Armstrong of Trenton and Hiram Ellis of Milford.

75 in Attendance

Attended by approximately 75 district dealers and officials of the company, the meeting took the form of a dinner meeting with T. I. "Inky" Thomson, district manager, acting as chairman. Arrangements for the dealer award meeting were made by the Belleville representative, Gerald DeLong.

Thomas Kendall of Oshawa, superintendent of sales promotion for Central Ontario was the guest speaker and urged dealers to prepare for the highly competitive and prosperous post war years which are ahead. He divided the post-war period into three phases, (1) the reconversion period, (2) the boom period and (3) the levelling off period. This applied to almost all Canadian industry and business, he said.

Other company officials heard during the meeting included Hugh McDonald, Major Eric Whittaker, and John Pritchard, son of the Canadian president of McColl-Frontenac.

6 out of 7 Accused Japs Convicted By Military Court

Manila, Dec. 13 — (AP)—Six out of seven Japanese accused of killing and burning two American fliers and five Filipinos at Cebu City last March were found guilty by a military commission today.

Lt.-Col. Isamu Morimoto and Capt. Kestaro Tsuruyama were sentenced to death by hanging. Sgt. Takeo Kawai also was sentenced to be hanged but mercy recommended because he turned prosecution witness.

Kawai testified he had orders to hack the fliers to death.

A fourth was sentenced to life imprisonment and two others to 10 years each at hard labor.

Charlottetown, Dec. 13 — (CP) —A tiny baby weighing only one pound, 10 ounces at birth died in hospital here last night. Doctors struggled ever since the child was born prematurely last Friday to save the life of the little girl.

Deadly U.S. Missile 'The Bat' Was Used Late in Jap War

Washington, Dec. 13—(AP)—The United States Navy disclosed today that it used a deadly self-guided missile called "The Bat" against Japanese ships and land targets during the late stages of the Pacific war.

"The Bat," launched from a mother aircraft, steered itself to the target by means of radar. If the target dodged, "The Bat" changed course right along with it.

Rear Admiral George F. Hussey, Jr., chief of the Navy Bureau of Ordnance, said it was the first fully automatic guided missile ever used successfully in combat. Already, he added, developments have made it obsolete.

Circulation of Canadian daily newspapers increased by over 15% during the war.

Amateur Hockey in Ontario Makes Rapid Strides After War Checks Finally Removed

Many New Leagues Are Being Formed With Plenty of "Feeder" Material

Toronto, Dec. 13 —(CP)—Hockey teams in search of elbow room should steer clear of Ontario.

With war checks finally removed, expansion is the keynote throughout Canada's busiest hockey province. Established leagues such as the Ontario Hockey Association's junior "A" and senior "A" groups still are functioning, war-stilled organizations like the Michigan-Ontario League are coming back and in the north the prospects too are bright.

In the Ottawa district junior hockey is being revived in an effort to put the game back on a prewar footing. A five-team city league started a 16-game schedule Dec. 1 and natural ice circuits will operate in the district.

"Feeder" material for the amateur assembly line in Ontario will be provided by the Minor Hockey Association, which hopes to have possibly 200 entries by 1946. Practically every community will have hockey of some kind.

Two Hamilton teams are entered in the compact five-team senior A grouping and one of them —Tigers — currently shares the league lead with Staffords, lone entry from Toronto. The Staffords' lineup shimmers with names like Normie Mann, the hockey veteran from Newmarket, and two former National League stars, Jack McLean and Jack Ingoldsby.

New entries in the league include Stratford Indians and Owen Sound Mohawks.

Junior 'A' Strong

Possibly the nation's strongest junior loop — the O.H.A. "A" loop of eight teams — seems set for another tense struggle with at least two teams arising to threaten the margin of the defending Toronto St. Michael's College team. St. Mike's, Memorial Cup champions last season, now hold a two-point edge over the resurgent Galt Red Wings.

Galt has won seven straight, including a decision this week over previously undefeated St. Mike's. Oshawa Generals, with six victories in eight starts, also threaten the Irish. New teams in the junior loop are Hamilton Lloyds and Barrie Flyers.

The Northern Ontario Association looks for a banner season, with play already under way in the senior circuit which sent out such strong teams as Sudbury Frood Tigers in search of national honors. New Liskeard, Haileybury and Cobalt have announced intention of operating in the central group of the N.O.H.A., with intermediate and juvenile entries.

District leagues are functioning in Sudbury and North Bay and veteran hockey men foresee a return to the old boom days with at least four northern centres linked in a bigtime circuit. Sault Ste. Marie's immediate outlook is not bright, but plans are in process for a new rink for next season.

The Michigan-Ontario League, suspended in 1940 because of the war, will resume this season as a four-team group with two clubs each from Windsor and Detroit. The schedule will open Dec. 21.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

Chicago, Dec. 13—(AP)—The theme of baseball's major league joint meeting—which, at least, closed earlier than most of the joints around the loop—apparently was "making Happy happy". . . Baseball commissioner Happy Chandler didn't exactly get his own way about everything, but he got plenty of concessions from the club owners . . . . If the minor leaguers tried to slap him down at Columbus—and Chandler won't admit they did—the only slaps he got here were on the back. . .

Suggestion Box

During a discussion of what the yanks will do with George Stirnweiss next season, someone suggested the club would be in a heck of a fix if Joe McCarthy wants to play Stirny at short, Larry McPhail wants him at second and Del Webb at third . . . The solution was to give him a Dan Topping for the New York Yankee football club. . . That's not too far fetched, either, because Stirny was rated tops as a minor league pro football coach at Norfolk, Va.

Low Moan Dept:

Chicago Blackhawks will try out defenceman Ralph Nattress from their Kansas City farm as a major league hockey player. . . If they'd change that "N" to "M" he'd make them a soft touch.

Cleaning the Cuff

The Cub's Phil Cavarretta has put on 12 pounds since the ball season ended, which must require some fair country eating . . . Showing the lengths to which a basketball coach will go, Notre Dame has picked up a 6-foot 8-incher, George Riley, from the Decatur, Ill., state championship high school team.

TO THE VICTORS...

Secretary Wally Harden of the Belleville Softball Association received the crests emblematic of the junior softball championship of Ontario from the O.A.S.A. today. They will be presented to the Columbian Squires junior provincial titlists of this city in the near future. The handsome silver trophy awarded annually to the junior champs will arrive from Windsor within the next few days and will likely be presented to the Squires at the same ceremony which will see the youngsters proudly receive their crests.

SEEING IS BELIEVING

It is not very often that this column gets in a plug for the movies, but boating and canoeing enthusiasts should not miss the Grantland Rice shortie playing at the Belle Theatre today and Friday. It is monickered "Paddle Your Own Canoe" and it means just that. The short was filmed up around Algonquin Park way near the Taylor Stanton Camp. It deals with canoeing in Canada showing various types of canoes old and new methods of canoeing, etc. The beauty of Canadian lakes the rugged majestic scenery that is the northlands justifiable claim to fame is pictured in the film in natural splendor. Drs. Locke and Gibson of this city and Judge Charles Cameron were present "on location" when the short was filmed and they vouch for the authenticity of the various shots. Lovers of canoeing, and natural scenery should mark the short down on their entertainment menu as a "must."

Hockey fans throughout the country are mourning the passing the other day of Harry Mummery, ponderous former star of the ice-lanes in the days when hockey was a he-man's game and brawn counted as much if not more than brains. Ivan (Ham. Spec.) Miller in a fine tribute to the late 56-year-old hockey player writes:

"Harry was one of the 'unfortunates' of hockey in that he enjoyed his heyday in the years when professional hockey was a gruelling, 'survival of the fittest' battle, with many scars and few dollars. He toiled in the days when professional hockey salaries ranged far below the big returns lavished on up-and-coming youngsters. His career was spread through the days of different rules, when hockey players were stick-handlers.—when sheer ability had to be backed by courage and agressiveness—when the ability to take it was the yardstick of a player's value.

• • •

"Mummery was a ponderous figure. He came east to play with Canadiens, moved to Quebec for the 1919-20 season and moved to Hamilton with the Quebec team when Percy Thompson, generalissimo of all Hamilton professional teams, purchased the N.H.L. franchise in 1920.

"Weighing more than 250 pounds, big Harry toiled here for several seasons, retiring after playing part of the season of 1923 and returning to the west.

• • •

"He was here in the days when Joe Malone, acclaimed one of the greatest stick-handlers in the history of hockey, was worming his way through the toughest defences in history to compile record scoring totals. He was a teammate of "Cully" Wilson, the firebrand who boasted more stitches than any two players in the game. Bert Corbeau, ill-fated Penetang defence star who was a drowning victim near Midland several years ago, was another teammate. So was George Carey, "prima-donna" centre. "Goldie" Prodgers, who came up through the old Trolley League, was another Hamilton favorite in those days, together with "Butch" Arbour. Billy Coutu, fighting defence star who was later suspended from hockey for life, teamed up with Mummery on the Hamilton defence. Then there was Joe Matte, who starred previously in amateur hockey and was with Hamilton's 1918 Allan Cup team. Among many others during those several years was "Mickey" Roach, one of the most graceful skaters who ever roamed the front lines in the N. H. L.

• • •

"Those old days were great days, when men were men and hockey was a bruising battle that combined brawn and brain, of necessity, when every game was stamped indelibly upon the minds of patrons.

"It is because those games were unforgettable, and fans felt so much closer to the players, most of them roistering, swashbuckling good fellows, that one feels genuine sorrow in the passing of the history-making pioneers.

"Harry was never an outstanding star, but he was a solid, hard-working chap who gave his best at all times."

• • •

SO WHAT, FELLER?

Bob Feller, ace fireball hurler of the Cleveland Indians excitedly announced from Waukegan ("They loved me in that town") the other day that he was the poppa of a brand new seven-pound nine ounce baby boy. He hopes he will be a righthander, says the proud "old man." What makes these guys so proud of their offspring is beyond our comprehension. But we do know of a guy who gets up at two and six o'clock every morning and gives the best ten-day older in the country a bottle. And he weighs nine pounds ten ounces, (the lil Joe, not the old man) and is gaining weight every day. And if his wife reads this, we're not kidding.

STAFFORDS WIN FROM STRATFORD BY 6-3 SCORE

Oshawa Generals Surprised by Barrie and St. Kitts Upset by Hamilton

(By The Canadian Press)

In a nip and tuck struggle in which the visitors started out in winning fashion, Staffords defeated Stratford Indians 6-3 in the Senior O.H.A. series last night at Toronto. It was the third victory of the race, in five starts, for the Toronto sextette and gave them a sharing portion of the leadership with Hamilton Tigers who have won their three games against no losses.

Indians were leading 2-1 early in the second period but Mara tied it up and McLean registered the payoff at 7:31 in that session which ended 4-2 for the Staffords. The homesters outscored Stratford 2-1 in the finale.

Mann was top scorer for the winners with a couple of netfinders, the four others being shared by Shannon, Mara, McLean and Ingoldsby. The Stratford Aces were Woodward, Hewson and Macey.

In the Junior "A" series, Barrie Fliers sprang a surprise on their home ice by winning their second game of the campaign 3-2 in overtime at the expense of Oshawa Generals who had previously dropped only one decision in seven appearances. Generals, through Jack Marshall, earned the only tally of the first inning and the teams were deadlocked at 2-all in finishing both the second and third periods. Needham scored his second goal of the night in the overtime play for the victory. Wilnes was also a Barrie scorer and Ross Lowe accounted for the other Oshawa counter.

The other junior tilt between St. Catharines and Lloyds at Hamilton saw the teams tied twice before the home crew took a 6-4 verdict for their third win of the winter to put them into fifth place in the standing along with Toronto Marlboros

Although Hamilton led 2-1 for the first stanza, the rivals were even 3-3 before reaching the third chapter.

Kemp and Ketola were the double-scoring kids for Lloyds, with Stoddards and Huatiuk getting one apiece. Falcons' markers were divided among Davidson, Cameron, Auger and Tom Smelle.

TRENT VALLEY HOCKEY LEAGUE AGAIN FORMED

William Shannon, Marmora, Becomes President of Loop Disbanded in 1940

Marmora—To consider the reviving of the old Trent Valley Hockey League, which has been dormant since 1940 representatives from Campbellford, Tweed, Batawa and Madoc joined those of Marmora in a round table conference in the council chambers on Monday evening. Wesley Hamilton, B.A., who was first called upon to take the chair, considered he was not qualified to act since he had not been associated with the Trent Valley League activities of the past. He called upon William Shannon of Marmora to preside and to lead the delegates through the organization meeting.

Outlined Position

In so doing the chairman first outlined Marmora's position. There was no covered rink in the village yet there was a strong desire to play intermediate hockey on the part of lads of the village. The juniors would have a place on the Marmora-Stirling Combines as last season. The forming of the Marmora Athletic Association had been accomplished and its executive chosen. He had contacted Madoc for Marmora's intermediate team to play home games there but the rink had been promised to Madoc's local league. Marmora wanted to make up an intermediate team and to see if other teams would allow its home games to be played on their rinks. "Gerry" Quinn of Tweed asked for an expression, said he had in mind that the Trent Valley League was the best proposition for the district.

Kinsmen Sponsor Teams

The Kinsmen of Tweed were sponsoring a junior team and would support a team in the Trent Valley League. He added his support to the words of the chairman that they form the Trent Valley League. At this stage the chairman pointed out that the League was given a belated chance to affiliate with the O. H. A. but that could be considered later. "Bud" Fisher of Madoc, the leading spirit behind Madoc's rural league touched upon the Madoc Athletic Association and the desire of all the players of his league that it continue to function. The Madoc Athletic Association could not sponsor a team in the Trent Valley League and any team representing Madoc would have to be sponsored by other individuals.

Time to Revive Loop

There was a possibility that a star team of the Madoc League might be placed in the Trent Valley playdowns. Art Duncan, speaking for Batawa, said he had followed the Trent Valley League for years. It had been dead for five years and it was time it was brought back to life. He realized the position Mr. Fisher was in in Madoc. The Trent Valley League had served places in the district well. If Madoc had an entry, he felt it would help the Madoc Rural League. He thought Marmora could play its home games on other ice. "Get her going and bring her back to the colorful days," was his parting advice.

"Bud" Davidson of Campbellford wished to see the league revived although there was no club as yet to enter it from Campbellford. They expected to form one there next week. He was for the reorganization of the league and he had heard that Hastings and Norwood were interested. Reeve R. E. Neal of Marmora Village as an old hockey player and coach was called upon for his views. He said the best idea as he saw it, was to form the Trent Valley League and push it along. He thought they could still operate a team, without a rink until eventually a rink was forthcoming. He felt too that Madoc could still put a team in. He suggested that they organize the league and pick the officers and allow Madoc and other places invited to the meeting another chance to get in.

Discussion Ensued

Discussion ensued as to the presidency of the league, the names of William Shannon and "Gerry" Quinn being mentioned. The latter's suggestion to open in the regular way as a meeting of the Trent Valley League was endorsed and Wesley Hamilton was asked to act as secretary. Minutes of the last meeting held in Campbellford in March 1940 were approved. The election of principal officers of the league ensued, resulting as follows:

President—William Shannon, Marmora.

Vice President—Art Duncan, Batawa.

Secretary Treasurer—W. Hamilton, Marmora.

A further meeting to choose the executive and draw up the schedule will be held on Sunday afternoon in Marmora and other teams are expected to seek admission then.

GORDIE BELL STARS FOR REDS IN AMERICAN LOOP

On Loan From Toronto Maple Leafs Goalie Makes Sensational Saves

(By The Canadian Press.)

Providence Reds, backed by the stellar goaltending of Gordie Bell, defeated the powerful Indianapolis Capitals 7-2 in an American Hockey League game last night. Pittsburgh Hornets moved to within three points of the western division leading Capitals when they trounced Cleveland Barons 7-3 in the only other contest on the A.H.L. schedule.

Bell, on loan to the Reds from Toronto Maple Leafs, held the Caps scoreless until late in the second period while his teammates built up a 4-0 lead and coasted to the victory. Roger Gagne and George Boothman led the Providence attack with two goals apiece.

Providence took the lead on counters by Boothman, Wendell, Jamieson and Gagne in the first session and Boothman added another in the second stanza before Jim Conacher finally broke the ice for the Caps. Tony Hemmerling, Gagne and Roger Bedard clicked for Reds in the final heat with George Ritchie notching the second Indianapolis marker.

Pittsburgh flashed their best home-ice offensive of the season in whipping Cleveland and if it hadn't been for Johnny Kiszkan's brilliant netminding in the Barons' nets the score would have been much greater. The Cleveland goalie was credited with 66 saves, 27 of them coming in the first period and 23 in the final heat.

Bobby Walton was the leading marksman for the Hornets with two markers while Doug McMurdy, Don Metz, Marcel Bessette, Joe Klukay and Johnny Mahaffy collected the others. Lou Trudel with two, and Bus Brayshaw were the Cleveland goalgetters.

BOSTON BRUINS AND RED WINGS PLAY 2-2 DRAW

Boston Takes Early Lead by Goals by Clapper and Herb Cain

By The Canadian Press

Only one point separates Detroit Red Wings from Boston Bruins in the National Hockey League standings today, but on the basis of past performances even that much of a margin is misleading.

The teams fought to a 2-2 stalemate in Boston Dec. 2 and they came back to the garden last night to repeat the performance. With Boston ahead 2-1 entering the third period, Murray Armstrong caged Harry Watson's rebound for a goal which sent another 2-2 deadlock into the record books.

At that Bruins could hardly have expected to hold their lead over Detroit, because they haven't won a scheduled N.H.L. game against the Red Wings since December 28, 1943.

The division of points in Wednesday's only scheduled game moved Detroit into second place, a game behind the leading Montreal Canadiens who are at home tonight to Toronto Maple Leafs. Chicago Black Hawks, tied with Bruins in third place one point behind Detroit, play Rangers at New York in Thursday's second fixture.

Before the usual sellout 13,900 fans at Boston, playing coach Dit Clapper opened the scoring for Bruins at 6.25 on the second period on a 50-foot shot on which goalie Harry Lumley's line of vision was partially screened by Milt Schmidt

Four minutes later Bruins made it 2-0 when Herb Cain, finishing a play started by Pat Egan and helped along by Bill Cowley, beat Lumley from close range.

The Detroit drive started later in the second period when Boston's Bep Guidolin drew an interference penalty. Red Wings stormed into the attacking zone and Carl Liscombe produced their first score at 11.18 when his shot hit the cross bar behind Paul Bibeault and dribbled into the cage.

There was no further scoring until Armstrong and Watson teamed for the tying goal in the third period.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

LESSON NO. 864

By SAM GORDON

You can be better than you are. You can help your bridge by a little practice figuring out what you are unable to see. Do a bit of this with a pair of partnership hands like these:

SOUTH
♠A J 10 2
♥9 7 4
♦Q
♣K Q 9 5 3
♠9 8 5 4
♥None
♦A K J 7 6 5 2
♣A 4

The bidding hops around like this:

SOUTH	NORTH
1 C	2 D
2 S	3 D
3 NT	4 NT
5 H	6 S

Take the north hand and draw yourself a picture of what you can visualize in south. Your first reply of two diamonds is a one-jump; the signal that keeps the bidding open to at least a game.

Having bid the lower rank first, south says he has at least five clubs and four spades. So, he can have no more than four red cards.

His three no-trump bid denies a biddable heart suit or a black suit that is rebiddable or support for your rebiddable diamonds. In reply to four no-trump, five hearts signals one ace and one king.

His opening promises, among other things, five tricks with four high cards. With only one ace and one king, his other two high cards must be queens. With only four red cards, he must have two shorts.

An even number (four) divides unequally (three-one) more often than equally (two-two.) With your long diamonds, this may be his short suit. So, he probably has three hearts and one diamond.

Thus, by the time you are ready to bid six spades, what do you see in partner's hand? An ace, a king, two queens, five clubs, four spades (probably) three hearts and one diamond. His ace could not be in clubs. So, it is probably in spades.

If you call them off, they'll think the cards are marked.

Unlimited Night Games Allowed In Major Loops

(By The Canadian Press)

The majors' meeting in Chicago with baseball commissioner A. B. Chandler came to a close after the club owners had agreed to permit unlimited night games in the 1946 season and preliminary arrangements were made to have the proposed $50,000 baseball promotion program conducted under the sponsorship of the commissioner's office. A committee will work in conjunction with interested amateur organizations.

The moguls shelved the recommendation of the minors for the elimination of all player bonuses and extended the major-minor agreement for one year.

The Quebec team of the reorganized Canadian - American Baseball League has been brought into the farm system of the Chicago Cubs, it was announced at Chicago yesterday.

Baseball deals yesterday included the trading of Jim Bagby to Boston Red Sox for Lefty Vic Johnson and $5,000 cash and sale of shortstop Lamar Newsome by the Red Sox to Philadelphia Phillies for $15,000.

Former athletic star of Runnymede Collegiate, Toronto, Doug Cook was the choice for captain of the 1946 Western Mustangs of the Intercollegiate Senior Football Union, the selection being made at London yesterday.

After service in the U. S. Coast Guard and now weighing 150 lbs, Lew Jenkins, former lightweight boxing champion, said at St. Joseph, Mo., yesterday he would start training Monday for a ring comeback in which he would fight as a welterweight.

The Stadium gridiron at Cleveland, O., has been covered with five inches of straw and paper to keep it from freezing before Sunday's National 'Pro Football League championship final between the Rams and Washington Senators. The Ram management bought 9,000 bales of straw, costing $7,200, for the purpose.

World champion Joe Louis, weighing 220 pounds — 15 more than he expects to when he meets Billy Conn in a title defence next summer — boxed three slow rounds against Big Boy Brown, 240-pound Detroit Negro, at Eugene, Ore., last night before 4,500 who gave the Brown Bomber a great ovation when he was introduced.

Kansas City Extends Lead To 2½ Games

By The Canadian Press

Victories by Kansas City and Tulsa Wednesday night in the United States hockey league sent the oilers into a fourth-place triple tie with Minneapolis and Dallas and extended the Pla-mors' first-place margin over St. Paul to 2½ games.

Three thousand Minneapolis fans saw a poor exhibition as the Millers bowed, 7-4, before Kansas City, with Andy Chakowski and Hank Blade leading the way for the Pla-mors with two goals apiece. A seven-goal first period, from which the winners emerged leading, 4-3, virtually decided the dull contest.

The oilers invaded Dallas to run up an early 4-1 margin and halt a garrison finish by the Texans to skate off 7-5 victors before 2,500 disappointed fans. Emil Degenais and John Ubriaco duplicated the Chakowski-blade feat by scoring two apiece for the winners in this contest.

Fort Worth plays at Tulsa in the only game scheduled for Thursday night.

Hockey's Big Seven

(By The Canadian Press)

Boston Bruins' ace playmaker Bill Cowley earned an assist last night as the Bruins drew with the Detroit Red Wings and advanced to a fourth place tie among NHL scoring leaders with a total of eight goals and seven assists for 15 points. Cowley was the only high-scorer to advance as other teams were idle. Max Bentley holds the top spot with 24 points, followed by linemate Bill Mosienko with 22 and Canadiens' Toe Blake with 16. Two other Chicago marksmen, Clint Smith and Alex Kaleta, are tied with Cowley for the fourth spot, while Doug Bentley and Gaye Stewart bring up the rear with 14 points apiece.

The Leaders:	G	A	Pts
Max Bentley, Chicago	15	9	24
Mosienko, Chicago ..	9	13	22
Blake, Montreal	11	5	16
Clint Smith, Chicago	8	7	15

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Dec. 13 —(CP)— Hollywood wolves sound like a group of characters you might expect to find hanging around the corner of Sunset and Vine any day. But it's also the name of a hockey team — and from all reports you're going to hear more about them. The hockey team, that is.

Paul Thompson, manager and coach of Vancouver Canucks in the Pacific Coast League, believes hockey will become a major sport in California within the next two years. Canucks, currently heading the P.C.H.L., recently completed a southern trip in which they played six games in seven days.

"California intends to rival the National League," Thompson told Duke (Vancouver Sun) McLeod. "The people want nothing but the best, and the men who run the sport down here are ready to provide them with everything they want."

Thompson added:

"Those southern capitalists have enough money to pay a man the N.H.L. salary limit of $7,000 a season if they feel like it. Wait until the Easterners find out there's still plenty of gold in California."

The Hollywood club is coached by Toronto-born Bob Gracie, 35-year-old former forward who saw service with Toronto Maple Leafs, Montreal Maroons, Boston Bruins, Brooklyn Americans. Gracie played last year with Pittsburgh Hornets in the American League — and scored 94 points to lead the individual scorers.

Canadian players with Wolves include Normie Schultz of Ottawa, who joined the United States armed forces and was with Gen. Patton in Europe; Blink Bellinger, who played with Kirkland Lake, Ont., Blue Devils when they won the Allen Cup in 1934-1940, and Tommy Campbell, 22-year-old Toronto boy.

Redmen Earn Triple Tie For Lead by Drubbing Vimy 7-2 at Kingston

Locals Dominate Play Throughout and Hockey Scrambly in Spots

The Belleville "Redmen" skated to an easy 7-2 win over Vimy in Kingston Wednesday night and by virtue of the win, are now resting very comfortably in a triple tie for first place in the league, with Kingston "Locos" and Barriefield "Bears." The game was not very good from a spectator's point of view as the locals dominated the play throughout and only spectacular work on the part of Summerville in the Vimy cage prevented the score from mounting higher. Several times throughout the game the "Redmen" found themselves right in front of the Vimy net only to be thwarted by the Vimy netminder.

The Army boys looked as if they were going to make a game of it for the first few minutes but while Kerleuk was serving a penalty for "tripping," the scarlet-sweatered locals bulged the twine twice on goals by "Bernie" Meagher on a pass from St. Louis at 8.13 and Don Barrett with "Al" and "Bernie" Meagher assisting at 8.30. Cook, the Belleville twinekeeper, pulled off some real "saves" in the initial period, one in particular on Kerleuk, when he was all alone in front of the Belleville cage only to be outguessed by the canny Cook.

Show Superiority.

Belleville showed their superiority early in the second period by scoring while shorthanded. Baldwin was "CPB" (confined to penalty bench), when the Meaghers broke away, "Al" being the marksman with "Bernie" assisting, after four minutes of the period had elapsed. "Leo" Goyer made it 4-0 at 7.50 on a pass from Day. Just before the end of the period "Bernie" Meagher got his second tally of the evening on a pass from "Vern" (Santa Claus) Goyer.

The Army lads had quite a few chances in this period but could not get the rubber behind Cook in the Belleville cage.

Scrambly Hockey.

The third period was scrambly hockey — the locals were tired and the Army was desperate. The Army determination finally paid off after three minutes of the final stanza with McDonnell and Kerleuk combining for a well-earned goal, the latter being the marksman. Two minutes later, Baldwin added another to the Belleville score with Williams assisting.

Vimy scrambled back gamely and their efforts were rewarded when "Sammy" Gaw beat Cook from close in after Kerleuk and Smith had set up the play halfway through the period. Just before the final whistle, "Leo" Goyer and Wardhaugh raced the full length of the ice and Wardhaugh made no mistake to make the final score 7-2 for the locals.

The "Kid" line of Don Barrett and "Al" and "Bernie" Meagher were flying last night, accounting for four counters between them. "Vern" Goyer and "Clare" Williamson and "Speedy" St. Louis were a tower of strength behind the "blue" line and Cook was especially good between the uprights. Summerville played well in the nets for the Army while Kerleuk, Smith and "Sammy" Gaw carried the brunt of the attack. Next Monday the locals tangle with the college boys from Queens.

Belleville: Goal, Cook; defence, C. Williamson, J. Williamson; centre, Barrett; wings, Al Meagher, B. Meagher; subs: V. Goyer, Williams, St. Louis, Baldwin, Moher, Day, Wardhaugh.

Vimy: Goal, Summerville; defence, McDonnell, Kerleuk; centre, Sicoli; wings, Smith and Gaw; subs, Bird, Belway, Grey Fraser, Roche, Ballantyne.

Referees: "Bill" Watts and "Bill" Steen.

First Period

1. Belleville — B. Meagher (St. Louis) 8.13
2. Belleville — Barrett (A. Meagher, B. Meagher)... 8.30

Penalty — Kerleuk.

Second Period

3. Belleville — Al Meagher (B. Meagher) 4.00
4. Belleville — L. Goyer (Day) 7.50
5. Belleville — B. Meagher (V. Goyer) 14.10

Penalties — Baldwin, McDonnell, Moher.

Third Period

6. Vimy — Kerleuk (McDonnell) 3.00
7. Belleville — Baldwin (Williams) 5.00
8. Vimy — Gaw (Kerleuk, Smith) 8.30
9. Belleville — Wardhaugh (L. Goyer) 12.20

Penalties — None.

Oxydol is Far Ahead of Other Soaps in Preventing "Dirty Grayness"

Tests Prove Oxydol Washes Clothes CLEANER and WHITER!

Yes, Whiter! In wash test after wash test—Oxydol proved that it actually washes clothes cleaner and whiter than many other soaps which, unlike Oxydol, fail to get out that last possible trace of stubborn dirt and grime! White and Bright Wash after Wash! Soaps often leave tiny discoloring particles caused by dirt in the clothes and the "hardness" of the water. These stick in the clothes and turn gray or yellow under ironing heat. But Oxydol combats "dirty grayness"—it helps prevent "dirty grayness" from forming in the clothes.

German Dye Trust in June '38 Knew of Nazi Plans for War, Helped Promote Them, Probe is Told Washington, Dec. 13 —(AP)— Senators received testimony yesterday that I. G. Farben, the German Dye Trust, knew of Nazi plans for war as early as June, 1938, and helped promote them.

The assertion came from Col. Bernard Bernstein, director of the American military government's division of investigation of cartels and external assets. He told a military sub-committee that if Germany is to be kept from waging war again "Farben must be destroyed."

In prepared testimony entitled "Farben's Dream of World Conquest," Col. Bernstein declared the evidence is conclusive that:

"1. Without I. G.'s immense productive facilities, its intensive research and vast international affiliations, Germany's prosecution of the war would have been unthinkable and impossible.

"2. Farben not only directed his energies towards arming Germany, but concentrated on weakening her intended victims.

"3. This double-barrelled attempt to expand the German industrial potential for war and to restrict that of the rest of the world was not conceived and executed in the normal course of business.

"For proof is overwhelming that I. G. Farben officials had full prior knowledge of Germany's plan for world conquest, promoted those plans, planned their own operations accordingly, and anticipated expanding their empire on the plunder acquired."

Col. Bernstein dealt at length with a document entitled "Neuordnung" (new order) which he said Farben submitted to the German ministry of economics in June, 1940, when France's downfall was imminent. It showed, he said, that Farben, as well as Hitler, had dreams of world empire.

Scotland Yard Issues Appeal For More Officers

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 13. (CP Cable)—Famous Scotland Yard, short-staffed since the war began, has issued an urgent public appeal for thousands of temporary constables as a wave of murders, bank robberies, shop-breakings and hold-ups sent crime statistics soaring.

Pages of Britain's rationed newspapers are jammed with reports of new incidents in England, Wales and Scotland—but particularly in London. The home office is studying proposals for tightening up National preventive and detective measures.

Scotland Yard officers are holding almost daily meetings to plan a comb-out of the underground and round up thousands of deserters from the British, United States and Empire forces known to be at large in the country.

The latest official figures gave 12,179 indictable offences in London during October—the highest monthly total ever recorded. Since then the crime graph has risen sharply. The increase is most marked in serious crime categories.

Here are a couple of day's major crime reports:

Glasgow—Woman clerk slain ruthlessly by gunman who also wounds man and boy in hold-up at London, Midland and Scottish railway station.

London—Five armed bandits escape after 65-mile-an-hour chase from Leatherhead, Surrey, with stolen safe in their car; housewife beaten and gagged by two men in American uniforms; jeweller slugged by holdup man but robbery attempt foiled by passerby.

Stockport, Cheshire—Vigilantes on duty in three Cheshire townships to combat increasing wave of holdups and thefts.

West England and Wales—Poultry raiding gangs of Black Market operators have stolen thousands of Christmas fowl and farmers form night patrols to guard flocks.

Uniformed police and detectives nightly "seal off" London districts where criminals are suspected to be hiding. Road blocks are set up and all pedestrians and automobiles in these areas are stopped for checks of identification.

Chiang Kai-Shek Appears in Peiping

Tientsin, China, Dec. 13—(AP)—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek appeared in Peiping today for the first time in many years, while his troops, last reported 40 miles beyond Mukden, were reported rolling swiftly toward Harbin, a leading Manchurian industrial centre.

Other National Government forces were moving to Changchun, Manchurian capital, by air.

Observers here viewed these rapid-fire developments as a strong indication that all Manchuria, rich in industry, will be in the hands of Chiang's government forces within a few weeks—and probably with a minimum of bloodshed.

The almost total absence of any Chinese Communist opposition to the Chinese government drive into Manchuria, plus Russia's friendly attitude and cooperation with Chiang's forces, indicates that the Chinese Reds — if they fight at all — will do so in the rugged western mountains where they are strongest. They have reportedly substantial forces at Kalgan, plus an estimated 5,000,000 rounds of Japanese ammunition.

BRITISH STRAFE POSITIONS

Saigon, Dec. 13 — (AP)—British headquarters have announced R.A.F. planes strafed and cannonaded Annamese positions Tuesday in response to an appeal for help from a small French detachment which found itself outgunned at Basse, 60 miles north of the hill station of Dalat.

The announcement said warning leaflets were dropped over the Annamese lines before three Spitfires shot up an emplacement from which the Annamese had been reported using three-inch mortars against the French force.

BRISK MEANS A LOT TO THE EXPERTS AND YOU

Everyone is talking about the brisk flavour of Lipton's Tea. Everyone is trying it—everyone is liking it. You, too, should change now to Lipton's Tea, the tea that experts say has brisk flavour, always fresh, spirited and full-bodied, never flat or insipid. Ask your grocer for brisk tasting Lipton's Tea.

Policy Committee May Advise New Ballot in Strike

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 13—(CP)—The policy committee of United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.) local 200 will discuss today the advisability of a second membership vote on the Federal government's negotiation - arbitration plan for settlement of the three-months-old union security strike of 10,000 workers at the Ford Motor Company plant here.

This is the proposal endorsed by the strike leaders two weeks ago rejected by the general membership. After policy committee discussion the matter of a second vote will go before the union shop stewards.

Only yesterday the company announced rejection of the union's proposals for ending the strike, declaring the government plan "eminently more equitable and workable." The company said it could not accept the union suggestion a government-appointed arbiter be required to decide on the workers' demand for union security within 24 hours of the start of negotiations.

Offers Co-operation

With this turn down by the company, Labor Minister Mitchell offered the co-operation of his department in conducting a new vote.

The union, noting the company had considered the workers' plan for five days said in a six-line statement issued last night that the question of union security could have been settled in the time it took the company to issue its negative decision.

Meantime there were fresh conferences in high union officials, with George Burt, Canadian regional director of the U.A.W., and Royal England, president of the Ford local, visiting international headquarters in Detroit.

Dealing with the union plan the company noted pleasure that the union, even while inserting the 24-hour clause, had accepted the principle of arbitration to that extent and added that any return to work according to seniority was impracticable from the standpoint of getting the plant rolling.

Ontario Labor Minister Charles Daley wired the Ford local urging that a referendum vote be held on the government's original formula which entails a return to work prior to the opening of negotiations and arbitration.

The World is Like That

By Kathleen Norris

CHAPTER 14

Jocelyn wondered what her little group would want to do after dinner, but they left her no doubt. They played a wild game of bridge; they turned on the radio and danced; they finally subsided in a sort of heap upon a particularly deep and soft davenport, discussing their costumes for the Brice party and advising Norma as to her own.

It was at this time that Lorenz appeared to say to Jocelyn that Mr. Fordyce would like to speak to her, and she went into the adjoining room. Phil was standing; he said smilingly that he would only detain her for a moment.

"I happen to be dummy," he said, "I just put my mother down eight hundred, and of course she's in a frenzy. She all but accused me of cheating. Tell me, how goos it?"

"It goes well." Jocelyn smiled gallantly, but there was a certain subtle significance in her smile. "At moments she likes me, and at moments she's going to tell you all about me," she said. "But on the whole, as an alternative to Miss Sanderson or boarding school, I think we'll manage."

"What d'you think of her? Of course she's spoiled."

He wanted her to contradict this. But instead she nodded. "It couldn't be helped, I suppose. But she's fine, too. I'm—I'm liking this."

"Not sorry you tried it?"

"No."

"I was afraid—you see, I hardly know her. I've had her on the train three days, but I' dnot really seen her before that for years. I was a little afraid, from the way she talked, that she didn't quite know the difference between a—well, a companion and a lady's maid."

"She doesn't," Jocelyn answered seriously. He looked at her quickly.

"Want me to speak to her?"

"No," she said thoughtfully, unhesitatingly.

For a minute they looked at each other, and then the man laughed.

"Philip, you crook!" called his mother's voice from a nearby room. "We're waiting for you, it's your deal!"

"Good luck!" Philip said. There were a dozen questions in Jocelyn's mind: questions about cocktails, about overnight visits to other girls, about hotel dancing, but she perceived even now that she would have to answer them herself. Norma's father knew as little of the situation, was as unprepared to solve her problems as she was herself.

She presently joined the sleepy group before the fire in the dimly lighted room adjoining, which had the effect of breaking it up. The visitors drowsily departed, and she and Norma went up stairs. Mattress and another maid were in Norma's suite; Jocelyn turned her over to them with a deep inward sigh of relief. She felt completely exhausted.

Lying in bed, reviewing the incredible panorama of the day's events, she felt completely unequal to the inevitable demands of the days to come. If this was Norma's first day, the moment of her arrival, what would the next one be, and the next, and the next? Apparently the girl expected to be, and was accustomed to being, amused every minute. She must be putting on new frocks, driving, dancing, eating, drinking, talking for fourteen hours out of the twenty-four, and Jocelyn was the person upon whom would fall the responsibility of seeing that all this went on safely and sanely.

She knew that she would be bored by Norma, ignored, snubbed, shocked; she knew that her hold here was precarious, that it might be loosened any instant. But the scene was so brilliant, so new, that Jocelyn, snuggling deep into fluffy blankets, sinking off at last into wearied sleep, knew that she would keep herself in the picture if she could.

Just as sleep claimed her, she started back into a moment's consciousness. Kent! Kent! She had not thought of him for hours. And in that fact alone lay ample reason for her remaining at Hill Acres. It was such a relief to forget him, to return to the thought of him rested and fresh! He was out of her life now, and no harm done. No harm done. She had run away from the harm of that night in Piedmont.

The burning consideration of what she was to wear to the Brice party was absorbing Norma when Jocelyn went into her room at ten o'clock the next morning; they discussed it thoroughly, and took up the discussion afresh when Janey Trent came in. There was the Parker's baby party on the second, too.

Any simple ideas that Jocelyn might have had of Watteau costumes or coroneted Queen Elizabeths were dashed when the girls explained their own views of the subject. Jane Trent was going as a baby smiling in the basket shouldered by a peasant mother. Jane's legs would do the walking; the upper part of a bowed female figure in gay rags would be fastened in front of her, and her own head and arms would protrude from the basket supported on the dummy's shoulders. The man who was taking Jane was going as a notorious criminal whose name had lately appropriated the headlines; he would not only wear prison stripes, but have a shaved head, a face painted yellow, a revolver from which blank shots would occasionally be fired to enliven the proceedings, and a string of filthy cans hanging from his belt, from which he would occasionally offer his dance partners cuts of dry bread, canned beans shoveled forth on a strip of shingle, and cigarette stubs. "We must save all our stubs for him!" the girls said enthusiastically.

These details drove the girls into ecstacies, but still the question of Norma's costume remained unsettled. Charles van der Lipp, it seemed, was escorting Norma. Norma, nearly seventeen, seemed young to Jocelyn to be included in this party at all, but it was becoming increasingly evident to her that the heiress to the great industry of the Lockey motorcars was subject to few of the rules that restrained other girls.

"You wouldn't like Carmen, Norma? It would be lovely with your dark hair."

"Darling," said Norma to her chaperon patiently, "I went to a party as Carmen when I was three. I remember Gran gluing a little cigarette to the corner of my mouth."

It was by this time almost decided that Norma should go as a fish bowl with real fish swimming in it. Jocelyn would have been incapable of imagining such a thing, much less would she have known where or how to find it. But once again the power of unlimited money was evinced; when she telephoned the San Francisco costumer, there was instant reaction to the name of Fordyce, and it was promised that the very best that Lewis could manage should be sent down for inspection the following morning.

Norma was now in a state Jocelyn particularly disliked—a smug, elated mood that said that Norma Fordyce was smarter and more ingenious than anyone else, and had been more places and seen more of life, and that she could show these backwoodsy Peninsula people a good many things that would surprise them. She was laughing a great deal, often finishing her laugh with tears in her eyes; she was getting noisy, and the addition of two strange boys to the party, when they all went downstairs for a one-o'clock luncheon, did nothing to quiet Jocelyn's uneasiness or improve Norma's manners. Her hilarity rose to shrieks; she grew silly; she extended affectionate overtures to the boys, and accepted their familiarities in return. Ponny, who was an enormous fellow caught the girl up by the hands and swung her around in a circle until she and her clothes were a whirling blur, and it was Blick, the rougher and noisier of the two, who finally caught her, held her to steady her on her feet, and smoothed down her disordered clothing with a remark or two that Jocelyn felt in very bad taste, to put it mildly.

"Ponny, stop!" Norma screamed, as his big hands gave her frothy underskirts a straightening jerk; Blick, laughing good-naturedly at his brother's boldness, as Jane was, added a comment that rather sobered both girls with its vulgarity, and the four sat down to their luncheon in suddenly gloomy spirits, Norma sending more than one tentative glance toward Jocelyn as she did so—half defiant, half afraid.

When conversation recommenced, it was at a rather more rational level, but Jocelyn did not like or trust the confident, coarse, big Sears brothers, and when Norma proposed to go and spend the following night with their mother, she seized her first opportunity of slipping off to telephone Philip.

"No, not to that house," he said. "Tell her I said no. That is, unless you go along! Much more of this and I'll have her committed to an asylum. I don't think she ought to go to the Brice show, myself, but my mother says you'll be there, and she'll keep an eye on her. But don't stand any of that Sears nonsense; that woman would be so glad to get Spotty compromised with one of those big bruisers she'd turn handsprings. Patsy Carter telephoned me this morning; they're nice people. They want Spotty for dinner, but I said you'd call for her at half past ten. That's tonight. But go easy on that Brice dance. I understand it isn't going to start until about midnight. Kids that age, and they go to bed after dinner and sleep two hours before the party!"

Jocelyn went back to Norma to remind her amiably that a court tennis match was going on in the city and that her father thought they might all like to see it; he was going to try to be there, and as Norma coldly turned down the Sears brothers' suggestion of a ride, it was finally decided they should go into town for the tennis.

Philip met them here, and carried the younger crowd, which by this time had swelled to about a dozen, off for dancing and what was called "tea," and Jocelyn had a free time in which to telephone her aunt in Sausalito, and to pick up some small things she had left behind her at the boardinghouse. At six she was herself picked up by the Fordyce car. Philip was staying in town for a club affair tonight, the others had all scattered, and Norma was alone. She said at once, at her weary and sulky worst, that she wished Miss Britton would not tell tales ot her father; there was no possible reason why she should not stay at the Sears' house tomorrow night; she liked the Searses' very much and her grandmother liked them, and so did everybody else. And again she repeated that she considered the suspicions of the grown-ups disgusting.

Jocelyn chatted along comfortably, quieting her, and presently interesting her, and they were friends again as Mattress dressed her mistress for the Carter dinner. Jocelyn accompanied her to the actual drawing room, saw a gracious quiet woman and some girls and boys take joyful possession of her, and then went thankfully home for the blissful quiet of a solitary dinner in her own room.

So another day went by without mishap, but on the eve of New Year's Eve she heard by telephone from a woman who haughtily described herself as Mrs. Pauncefoote Sears, and who laughed quite shrilly at the idea that Janet von Sturnberg's child could not come to her house without a chaperon. Mrs. Sears described this situation as impossible and too delicious.

"SYNTONA HAS BEEN A GREAT HELP TO ME—I FEEL YEARS YOUNGER"

"Relieved Stomach Disorders, Rheumatic Pain, Nerves Are Relaxed and I Sleep Sound at Night."

Mrs. Nellie Gaymer, 26 Erie St., St. Thomas, Ont., is glad to pass her experience along to others, because she knows what it has meant to her to get relief from long-standing stomach disorders, severe rheumatic pain, nervousness and disturbed sleep. It will pay every man or woman suffering in a similar manner to read carefully her inspiring message.

"I suffered with stomach disorders, constipation and sluggish kidneys for almost 12 years," said Mrs. Gaymer.

"I used to be terribly distressed with gas, bloating and sour acid risings after my meals. I was subject to spells of heartburn between meals and a feeling like there was a lump in my throat. Sometimes I got dizzy spells and sick headaches. Then rheumatic pains set in my arms, limbs and joints. I developed a nagging dull pain across my back. My kidneys were acting too freely and frequently disturbed my sleep at night. I became extremely nervous and worried over my condition.

"After taking many different things without benefit, I decide so try Syntona and I can truthfully say nothing has ever done so much for me.

MRS. NELLIE GAYMER

It relieved the troubles with my stomach so that I enjoy my meals once more. I am now free from rheumatic pain and backache and I do not have to get up during the night. Also my nerves are calmed down and my sleep is more restful than it has been in years. Syntona has been a great help to me and I feel years younger."

Let this pure herbal compound help you, too. Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

RELIEF IN A HURRY FOR THAT COUGH

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Dec. 13—(CP)—The cattle supply was cleared at steady prices up to mid-session on the livestock market here today. Plain to medium butcher steers and heifers were $9—$11, boners $7-$8, choice weighty steers $13.50, butcher cows $7.50-$9.50, canners downward to $5.50, bulls $7.50-$9, fed yearlings $12-$13.50.

The few calves were steady $9-$16. Lambs were steady $14.50-$16 good ewes and wethers, culls $9-$11. Sheep were steady $3-$9. Hogs were steady, dressed, grade A $18.15, grade B1 $17.75, sows $15.50-$16. Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: cattle 120, calves 20, hogs 200, sheep and lambs 150. Unsold from yesterday were 150 head of cattle.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 13 (CP)—Industrial stocks had a small index gain at noon and other groups were down on Toronto Stock Exchange. Trading slackened off to show turnover of 787,000 shares for the first three hours.

Food and miscellaneous stocks were up narrowly and other industrial groups held steady. National Grocers, Canadian Canners, Canadian Food Products, Hunts A and Maple Leaf Milling were stronger. Senior oils showed little change.

Giant Yellowknife was off 25 cents to 7.85 and Colomac at 1.20 was down 13 cents. Small losses were netted by Teck Hughes, Eldona, Bear, Duquesne, East Malartic and Croinor. Little Long Lac was active and 9 cents higher and O'Brien advanced 35 cents to 3.85 in busy trading. Base metals and western oils were in dull action and narrow price adjustments. Chemical Research firmed 3 to 50.

GRISLY EXHIBITS

Press war correspondent, according to available evidence, was executed last winter on the signed order of secret police chief Ernest Kaltenbrunner, one of the 21 defendants.

Another report said 13 American and British parachutists were hanged at the Flossenberg concentration camp after their capture.

A statement from a Budapest Zionist leader disclosed that Hungarian Jews who were too young or too old to serve as slave laborers were automatically consigned to death in concentration camp gas chambers.

United States prosecutors, supporting the charge against 21 Nazi leaders of "crimes against humanity", introduced the affidavit of Rudolph Kastner, leader of a Hungarian Zionist organization, reporting S.S. troops seized 475,000 Hungarian Jews in 1944 and transported them to the Reich in "death trains".

Disclosing another breach of international law by the Germans, Thomas J. Dodd, United States assistant prosecutor, produced a secret S.S. order showing the High Command had directed that prisoners of war who escaped and were later recaptured should be transported to the Mauthausen prison camp and their fate kept secret from the International Red Cross.

British and American prisoners were exempted from the treatment by the order. It said inquiries of the Red Cross concerning the fate of recaptured prisoners of other nationalities were to be answered with the reply, "escaped and not captured".

Brutality in the concentration camps began early, Mr. Dodd declared. He produced orders posted at Dachau in 1933 directing death by hanging for inmates who participated in any kind of agitation or attempted to establish contact with the outside world.

Canada Plans Largest Army of Peacetime

(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Ottawa, Dec. 6 (CP)—The New Year will find Canada dissolving the most powerful armed strength in her history and building a new compact organization on an interim nucleus after a year that brought the end of the war and saw important changes in high command.

Canada's permanent armed forces organization will be more than five times bigger and relatively more efficiently-equipped for combat than the pre-war force.

The permanent forces are to have a strength of about 55,000 men, compared with a pre-war strength of 10,800 and indications are that the reserve set-up will be substantially stronger than that in August, 1939.

Navy—Not less than 10,000 men manning two cruisers, two aircraft carriers, a dozen destroyers and ancillary craft. Behind this will be a reserve of 18,000.

Army—Between 20,000 and 25,000 men backed by a reserve of six divisions whose numerical strength is not given. The Canadian Army Active Force will consist of a brigade group of at least three infantry divisions, two armored regiments, an artillery formation and ancillary troops—ready to fight as a complete unit.

R.C.A.F.—Between 15,000 and 20,000 men for 10 squadrons. The squadrons will consist of four bomber, three fighter, two transport and one reconnaissance. There also will be a reserve of unspecified strength modelled along the lines of the reserve army.

Interim two-year volunteer forces have been set up to tide over the military machinery until the active forces are established. Men accepted in the interim forces have been assured they will be taken on the permanent strength and have up to March 31 to make up their minds.

April is Target.

Meantime repatriation, demobilization and rehabilitation of the peak strength of 81,000 men and women is going on, with nearly 183,000 men brought home from VE-Day, May 8, to Nov. 20 and the target is to have all personnel in northwest Europe, with exception of occupation and administration men, home by April 20.

In Canada demobilization continued at a rate of 65,000 a month and it is assumed that the last discharge will take place shortly after the last repatriate arrives home.

The general plan of rehabilitation laid down by the government has untangled most of its knots, the veteran entering civilian life with mustering out benefits, guarded health and professional and vocational training.

The year also saw Gen. McNaughton, the former commander in the field, go down to defeat at the polls and be succeeded as Defence Minister by a First Great War gunner — Hon. Douglas Abbott.

Other service highlights were the resignation of Gen. Crerar from the command of the 1st Army after it disbanded at the end of hostilities; the appointment of Maj. - Gen. Charles Foulkes, former overseas commander, to the post of chief of the general staff; the resignation of Rear Admiral L. W. Murray as chief of the Northwest Atlantic, after criticism was leveled at him following VE-Day riots in Halifax; and the abandonment of the preparations to send navy, army and air force contingents to the Pacific.

Star Witness Says Meyer Gave Order Take No Prisoners

Pole Saw Seven Canadians Shot at Accused's Hdqtrs.

By ROSS MUNRO
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aurich, Germany, Dec. 14 — (CP Cable) — Maj.-Gen. Kurt Meyer, 33-year-old German S. S. commander, told his Normandy headquarters in June, 1944, "in future no prisoners are to be taken," an eye-witness today told the Canadian military court trying Meyer on war crimes charges.

The witness was Jan Jesionek, 19-year-old Pole who served with the German army and was attached to Meyer's headquarters during the early stages of the invasion of Normandy.

Meyer, who commanded an S.S. regiment of Panzer Grenadiers and later an S. S. division, is charged with direct or indirect responsibility in the murder of 48 Canadian prisoners of war captured by the Germans shortly after D-Day, June 6, 1944.

Jesionek is the star witness for the prosecution. He followed to the stand a series of Canadian army men who had witnessed the murder of comrades while prisoners of the Germans. Jesionek, however, is the first witness who claimed to be present when Meyer issued the orders against taking prisoners.

The youthful Pole told a tense courtroom of how he saw seven Canadian prisoners shot one by one at Meyer's headquarters in the Abbey Ardenne, near Caen, Normandy, on the morning of June 8, 1944.

Changes Testimony

Jesionek's testimony was somewhat confused. In a statement he gave to the prosecution which was read yesterday, Jesionek was quoted as saying he had heard Meyer say as the seven Canadians were brought before him, — "These murderers only eat our rations" — and then ordered the shooting of the prisoners.

Today, however, Jesionek testified on the witness stand that Meyer had actually said: "What should we do with these prisoners? They only eat our rations."

Witness then added that he had not heard Meyer issue orders to another German officer to have the Canadians shot.

In spite of minor contradictions in his evidence, however, Jesionek's testimony provided one of the grimmest chapters of the five-day-old trial.

He said the Canadian prisoners, interrogated earlier by German officers who sneered at them, seemed to realize they were to be shot because they shook hands before going through a small opening from the stables of the Abbey Ardenne, where Meyer had his headquarters, into a park. As each Canadian went out into the park, Jesionek said, he was shot by a German corporal.

Sure of Facts

Questioned about Meyer's statement in the chapel before the prisoners were sent to their death, Jesionek said he stood about 18 yards away from the German commander and was certain it was Meyer. He repeated that he had heard Meyer tell the officers and men that "in future no prisoners will be taken."

After the shooting, Meyer said, German soldiers saw the Canadian bodies. A British food canister lay nearby and the hungry Germans ate from it as they stared at the bodies.

"I was wounded that night and I do not know what happened to the bodies," Jesionek added.

The witness described a meeting addressed by Meyer at which the S.S. leader referred to the bombing of Germany and said: "We in reprisal cannot yet expect a weapon which could work wonders but we ourselves shall make our reprisals against our prisoners of war."

This was before the Germans started launching V-bombs against Britain and Jesionek said: "I understood by this no prisoners were to be taken. They were to be shot. We discussed this as we returned to our rooms and many of us were of quite a different opinion. Many said an enemy without weapons is no enemy. I shared that opinion."

Returning to his description of the shooting of the seven Canadians at Meyer's headquarters, Jesionek said he saw bodies lying at the entrance of the Abbey Park and added that "the place was full of blood."

"The Canadians knew they were to be shot because as they came out one by one they shook one another's hands," Jesionek continued. "In each case as each man went into the park there was a shot. Sometimes I heard a scream."

BEAST OF BELSEN AND TEN OTHERS HANGED THURSDAY

Executed for Committing Crimes at Notorious Concentration Camp

Hamburg, Germany, Dec. 14 — (AP) — Field Marshal Montgomery's headquarters announced today that Josef Kramer, the "Beast of Belsen," and 10 others of the Belsen gang, including blonde Irma Grese, were hanged yesterday for committing crimes at the notorious concentration camp.

The executions were carried out at the Hamelin by Pierrepont, official British hangman.

The 11 condemned to death were moved from Lueneburg's jail to the ancient prison on the banks of the Wesser River at Hamelin five days ago. The gallows were built by the Royal Engineers.

Field Marshal Montgomery denied all appeals Saturday. The eight men and three women hanged were condemned to death by a British military court Nov. 17 for atrocities committed at the Belsen and Oswiecim concentration camps. Nineteen other persons drew prison terms.

Three of the condemned accepted the court's verdict without appeal. They were Elizabeth Volkenrath, 26, head women's supervisor for the S. S. (Elite Guard), Juana Borman, 42, a fanatic who gave up missionary work to join the S. S., and Franz Hoeszler, 34-year-old S. S. member who helped pick victims for the gas chamber.

Kramer, 39, was camp commandant. Irma Grese, was the pistol-packing "Queen" of the Belsen gang.

Others who died were Dr. Fritz Kelin, 58, who chose inmates for the gas chamber; Peter Weingartner, 32; Karl Francioh, 33; Ansgar Pichen, 32; Franz Starfle, 30; and Wilhelm Dorr, 24.

Field Marshal Montgomery's terse announcement said:

"All 11 of the Belsen criminals who were sentenced to death at Lueneburg were executed by hanging at Hamelin yesterday, Dec. 13.

"The executions were carried out at the following times:

"9:34 a.m., Elizabeth Volkenrath.

"10:03 a.m., Irma Grese.

"10:38 a.m., Juana Borman.

"12:11 p.m., Josef Kramer and Dr. Fritz Klein.

"12:46 p.m., Karl Francich and Peter Weingartner.

"3:37 p.m., Ansgar Pichen and Franz Hoeszler.

"4:16 p.m., Wilhelm Dorr and Franz Starfle."

Two gallows were used, permitting the eight men to be hanged in pairs. The women walked to their death singly.

German civilians said former concentration camp inmates were allowed to witness the hangings by special passes.

Armed British Tommies stood guard at the 15-foot high wall around the prison.

Execution of the "Belsen gang" ended a story of sheer horror involving wholesale murder, torture and brutality seldom equalled even within Nazi Germany.

During the trial of the 44 Belsen officials before a British military court, it was established that the concentration camp had been the scene of callous neglect, vicious sadism and outright murder.

2-Ton German Bomb, Dropped Five Years Ago 'Sterilized' on Sunday

Croydon, Surrey, England, Dec. 14 — (CP Cable) — By Sunday night Satan should be harmless, once and for all.

Satan, a 4,000-pound German bomb, was dropped in a South Croydon lumber yard five years ago. Since then residents of the town have virtually ignored the unexploded concentration of high explosive.

But Royal Engineers have been working on Satan for 198 days now and they are near the end of their job. The danger zone of South Croydon probably will be evacuated again Sunday morning while sappers do their final "sterilization" of the bomb.

It was expected the job would be completed yesterday and residents were moved out of the area as sappers went down the 40-foot-deep shaft leading to Satan. However, the bomb's fuse broke and the soldiers had to make a new approach today. They now plan to remove the filling from the case, a task which will take from six to 12 hours.

Sappers working at the foot of the shaft, hip-deep in the water of a subterranean stream, today exposed the filling cap of Satan and tomorrow will complete their final preparations for the end of the missile.

COMMONS PASSES BRETTON WOODS MONETARY PACT

Approval One of The Conditions Laid Down By U.S. to Obtain 4.4 Billion Loan

London, Dec. 14—(CP)—The House of Commons today gave final ratification to the Bretton Woods monetary stabilization pact, approval of which was one of the conditions laid down by the United States for a loan of $4,400,000,000 to Britain.

The measure was passed without dissent on its third and last reading and went at once to the House of Lords. The action came barely 14 hours after the Commons had approved the terms of the loan by a vote of 345 to 98.

The Bretton Woods bill was rushed through its second reading last night by a vote of 314 to 50. Under parliamentary procedure the second reading generally determines whether a bill will pass. The third reading is committed to take the consideration of possible amendments preparatory to sending the measure to the Lords.

A sharp debate punctuated by personal clashes between Labor and Conservative leaders, preceded the vote on the loan terms.

The bill was rushed to the House of Lords for a first reading in hope of its clearance in time for royal assent before parliament's Christmas recess Dec. 20.

An opposition amendment by Conservative Robert Boothby, member for Aberdeen east, seeking to limit Britain's liability to the world stabilization fund in the event of devaluation of Sterling, was withdrawn when the government refused to accept it.

"It is quite obvious that if we have to withdraw from the fund it is practically because we have no gold or dollars left," said Mr. Boothby. "That is why I am concerned that we accept an obligation to repay this money to the fund in gold, or gold-convertible currency. It is a danger which disturbs me."

Hugh Dalton, chancellor of the exchequer, replied that the Boothby amendment would modify the obligation Britain was required to undertake if it signed the Bretton Woods agreement, and "it is, therefore not one I can accept."

Lord Beaverbrook, whose newspapers have been among the loudest critics of the Anglo-American financial agreement, and who was a member of Mr. Churchill's wartime and caretaker governments, will seek to block approval of both the loan and the Bretton Woods plan in the house of Lords Monday.

In a previous motion, by which he sought to influence ratification in Commons, Lord Beaverbrook said the two measures "involve return to the gold standard, abolition of the sterling area and destruction of imperial preference (in trade.)"

Weather Forecast

Manitoba: Scattered snowflurries today; fresh to strong northerly winds; generally fair and colder tonight and Saturday.

"Mary Christmas," That's Her Name

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 14 (AP) —"Your name, please?" asked Probate Judge Joseph W. Monahan.

"Mary Christmas," responded the divorce seeker who stood before him.

"The same to you," beamed the judge, "and now your name, please."

Pleasantries concluded, Mary Christmas of West Medford presented allegations of cruelty and was awarded a divorce.

J. Owen Herity, Manager of C. of C. And Former Publisher, Dies Early Today After Brief Illness

J. Owen Herity, Manager and Secretary of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce and Industrial Commissioner for the City of Belleville, died in the Belleville General Hospital early Friday morning, after an illness of about four weeks duration.

In the death of Mr. Herity, a life of usefulness, a life of giving and receiving friendship and of unselfish motives, a life of integrity and of faith in his fellows, and a life of industry and intrepid in spirit has run its course and leaves a void in the civic, social, fraternal and educational life of the city which will remain unfilled for a long time to come.

LATE J. OWEN HERITY, native of Huntingdon Township, who for the past thirty-five years has been a resident of Belleville, for more than ten years was associated with the Daily Ontario as editor and publisher and for the past twenty-five years Manager and Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce and Industrial Commissioner for the City of Belleville.

Born in Huntingdon Twp.

Although many years have passed since he left his country home, Owen Herity delighted to reminisce of his early life in Huntingdon Township where he was born seventy-five years ago, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Herity. He loved the township of his birth and the days of his boyhood and young manhood passed there, were complete in happiness and interest; the country school which he attended, the teachers who started him on the road to learning, the friendships he made during those days and his happy home life were dear to his heart.

In his studies Owen Herity progressed well and he developed a strong liking for reading; before he was ten years of age he read the entire Bible in one year. On leaving the township school he attended high school in Stirling and on graduation there he became a student at the Model School in Madoc, preparatory to becoming a school teacher.

Taught at Ivanhoe

His first school was at Ivanhoe which was the largest single master school in the district, with one hundred pupils to govern and instruct. Later he taught school at Moira and it was at this period of his life, that he decided to become a lawyer.

With this end in view he enrolled in arts at Toronto University where he pursued his studies diligently. Some years previously he felt a strong urge to write which he satisfied by writing for the weekly press in the county now, however, the urge asserted itself more persistently and eventually he changed his plans and became a newspaperman when he purchased the Markham Sun. For eight years he successfully conducted this weekly paper and in 1910 he came to Belleville and became part owner of the Daily Ontario. Mr. Herity assumed the editorial management of the paper and he conducted his department with marked ability and success. He was a graceful, forceful, lucid and pleasing writer and his articles were often reproduced in numerous papers in the province.

Mr. Herity had been for years the representative of the Ontario Motor League in this district and secretary of the local Motor Club.

For a number of years he served on the Belleville Hastings Suburban Area Commission as representative for the city.

In 1920 Mr. Herity was urged to accept the position of Secretary and Manager of the Chamber of Commerce which combined with it the office of Industrial Commissioner for the City of Belleville. He was reluctant to give up newspaper work, but he saw in the offer an opportunity to serve the city and this he did in a highly efficient manner for twenty-five years. As a means of placing on record the high esteem in which Owen Herity was held by the Chamber of Commerce and citizens generally a complimentary banquet was tendered to him at Hotel Quinte on the evening of March the ninth this year. It was indeed a happy and enthusiastic gathering of all walks of life in this city and Mr. Herity was highly eulogized for the many fine traits of character which he possessed and for the highly valued services he had rendered the city. An illuminated address was presented to him accompanied by a handsome gift.

A Constant Reader

Mr. Herity was a constant reader and at his home, 42 Highland Avenue, he possessed a large library of excellent books. He was endowed with a retentive memory and his mind was a store house of information on many subjects; he could always recite a ready quotation or reference applicable to almost any matter.

Being able to impart the interesting and informative knowledge which he possessed he was an interesting companion, and his fame as an after dinner speaker and lecturer was wide spread. Before the Second Great War he was much in demand to address gatherings throughout the province. He was also very fond of good music and flowers. Each summer season he spent many happy hours in the garden at his home.

Prominent in Masonic Order

Mr. Herity was associated with Bridge Street United Church and fraternally he was prominent in the Masonic Order being Past Wor. Master of Eureka Lodge No. 283 A.F. and A.M.; Past District Deputy Grand Master Prince Edward District; Past First Principal of Quinte Friendship Chapter R.A.M. No. 227; Past District Superintendent Prince Edward District R.A.M.; member of King Baldwin Preceptory Knight Templars No. 6; member of the Scottish Rite at Kingston and a Thirty Second Degree Mason. He was also a member of Belleville Lodge I.O.O.F. No. 81, and a former member of the Independent Order of Foresters, Court Moira No. 33 and at one time he was High Chief Ranger for Eastern Ontario.

Faithful Member of Rotary

Mr. Herity was a popular and faithful member of the Belleville Rotary Club and had an unbroken record of attendance over a period of twenty-one years up to the time of his last illness. He held a high place in the esteem of Rotarians as a whole and was appointed to the important office of District Governor. Upon his retirement from this position he was presented with a handsome clock as a slight token of appreciation of the excellent manner in which he had discharged his duties. He was also an honorary member of the Kiwanis Club. J. Owen Herity was a good citizen; he accomplished much good as he passed through life and he was a friend to many. Those who knew him well and enjoyed his friendship will long retain pleasant memories of their association with him.

He was the last of his family and is survived by one son, Thomas Herity of this city. His wife died in 1943.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street.

The funeral will take place on Monday, December 17th., to Bridge Street United Church at three o'clock and interment will be in the family plot in Belleville Cemetery.

LONG CHRISTMAS HOLIDAY

Toronto, Dec. 14 —(CP)— The Toronto Stock Exchange announced today there will be no session of the exchange on Monday, Dec. 24 and only a part session on Monday, Dec. 31. On the 31 the market will close at 12. The market will thus be closed from Friday, Dec. 21 to Wednesday, Dec. 26.

BODY IDENTIFIED

Montreal, Dec. 14 — (CP) — Provincial Police said yesterday that the body of the Indian burned to death Tuesday in a vacant shack in the Lac Bouteille area, 65 miles north of Montreal, had been identified as Henri Flamant, who apparently had lost his way in the bush shortly before his death.

HOUSE TACKLES DWINDLING STACK OF ESTIMATES

Drive For Prorogation Late Saturday Sees Commons Sit Long After Closing Hours

By GEORGE KITCHEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 14 — (CP) — A wearying House of Commons today tackled a dwindling stack of civil departmental estimates as proceedings were stepped up in the drive for prorogation this weekend, possibly late Saturday night.

The supplementary estimates, drawn up after the 1945-46 estimates were prepared, likely will be introduced today.

Some members, particularly those from the far west, are expected to leave for their constituencies tonight, with others pulling up stakes Saturday night, Sunday and Monday.

The drive for prorogation was intensified last night when the House disregarded the 11 o'clock adjournment rule and sat until midnight considering departmental estimates, passing supply for the justice department.

Some debate might develop today when the House receives from the banking and commerce committee the bill providing for Canadian ratification of the Bretton Woods monetary agreements, object of a five-day Social Credit filibuster which extended into the early part of this week.

The Social Credit group might express further opposition to the bill, passed by the committee with two minor amendments, when it comes up for third reading in the Commons.

Little debate is expected on a bill sponsored by Prime Minister Mackenzie King to provide a $2,000 boost in the sessional indemnity of members of the Commons and the Senate. Only two members—Angus MacInnis (CCF—Vancouver East) and W. H. Herridge (People's CCF—Kootenay West)—expressed opposition when the resolution was introduced yesterday.

Far Pacific Seen as Likely Choice For Ocean Test of Atomic Bomb

By ELTON C. FAY

Washington, Dec. 14—(AP)—The atomic bomb is expected to get its ocean test in a remote corner of the Pacific sometime next spring, far from shipping lanes and populated areas.

Although a White House announcement that President Truman himself suggested the test against warships indicates desire for early action, those in a position to know say the preparations may require as much as five months.

In addition to selecting and preparing target ships, it will be necessary to assemble an array of precision instruments and scientists to work with United States army and navy officials on the test.

Policing of the test area in itself will be a major task. Scientists can only conjecture and estimate the results of an atomic bomb explosion over or in the ocean. The weather, particularly the winds, must be checked closely to determine the drift of air charged with radio activity by an explosion. Similar guards must be established in relation to the sea, with its mineral content capable of radioactivity.

Revolting Story Of Warsaw Ghetto Unfolded at Trial

Polish Jews Slaughtered By Thousands in Massacre

By DANIEL DE LUCE

Nuernberg, Dec. 14 — (AP) — Six million European Jews were ruthlessly slaughtered in the Nazi campaign of extermination, said German secret police estimates placed today before the International Military Tribunal trying 21 of Hitler's top leaders on war crimes charges.

Allied prosecutors filed an affidavit by Dr. Wilhelm Hoettl, right hand man to defendant Ernst Kaltenbrunner in the secret police, giving the estimate.

"Approximately 4,000,000 Jews had been killed in the various extermination camps while an additional 2,000,000 met death in other ways, the major part of which were shot by operational squads of security police during the campaign against Russia," Hoettl said in his affidavit.

Hoettl attributed his figure to Adolf Eichman, chief "Jew catcher" in the secret police. He said Eichman confessed it to him in August, 1941, in expressing the conviction that he would have to pay for "the millions of Jewish lives on his conscience."

Total Too Low

Gestapo chief Himmler thought Eichman's total was too low, Hoettl's affidavit revealed. But Hoettl added that Eichman was the best informed official on Jewish executions.

Thousands were killed when S. S. troops wiped out the Warsaw Ghetto in a 29-day massacre in 1943, according to records submitted by the prosecution.

Details of the mass murder in Warsaw were read from the reports of the S. S. police chief of the city, who wrote that he ordered troops "to destroy the entire Jewish residential area by setting every block on fire."

The reports showed that the S.S. chief, a Maj.-Gen. Stroop, directed the annihilation campaign from April 17 to May 16, 1943, and that he boasted he had killed 7,000 Jews in battle, 5,000 to 6,000 by explosions and fires and collected 49,000 others "whose extermination in camps can be proved." The cost to the Germans was 15 dead.

No attempt by Allied officials to write an account of the mass murder in the ghetto has yet equalled the shocking clarity of the S.S. reports themselves.

Established at German insistence and over the protests of Polish city officials, the ghetto housed 400,000 Jews behind guarded walls until "resettlement"—transfer to Majdane or elsewhere—reduced the population to less than one-fourth by the spring of 1943.

Attacked with Tanks

Stroop was entrusted by Gestapo chief Himmler with the forced evacuation of the remainder, described as "a cleansing operation" to "preserve the health of the German forces."

He started by attacking with tanks and armored cars what the Nazis called "Polish bandits" reinforcing the Jews. Sweatshop arms plants, which had been producing inside the Ghetto for the Wehrmacht, provided the victims with the means of resistance.

Flame throwers and artillery were called into action by the Germans and Wehrmacht engineers were detailed to blow up hideouts with T.N.T. Chemical smoke was used to flush fugitives from sewers. Systematically block after block of buildings was set ablaze.

Material Could be Used

"The former Ghetto is completely destroyed," Stroop finally advised his superiors proudly, "but the ruins still contain a vast amount of stones and scrap material which could be used."

Among sample excerpts from the daily operation reports teletyped to higher S. S. headquarters were the following:

"April 22, 1943 — 1,100 Jews caught for evacuation, 203 bandits and Jews killed. When engineers blew up dugouts a considerable number of Jews and bandits were buried under the ruins. When we found it necessary to execute some bandits they collapsed shouting 'Long live Poland'."

"April 24, 1943 — Despite the danger of being burned alive, Jews and bandits preferred to return into the flames rather than risk being caught by us. Over and over again the Jews kept up their firing almost to the end of the action."

Inmates Became Insane

"April 24, 1943 — Captured Jews reported many of the inmates of the dugouts became insane from the heat, smoke and explosions. Several Jews were arrested who had kept close liaison with a group of Polish terrorists and collaborated with it. During today's operation several blocks of buildings were burned down. This is the only and final method which forces this trash and sub-humanity to the surface. The result of today's operation: 30 Jews evacuated, 1,330 Jews pulled out of dugouts and immediately destroyed, and 362 Jews killed in battle."

"April 27, 1943 — Jews who were leaders of the entire resistance movement . . . jumped from burning windows and balconies abusing Germany and the Fuehrer and crushing German soldiers."

"May 3, 1943 — We discovered several times today that Jewesses had pistols concealed in their bloomers. Every Jew and bandit will from today on strip completely for search."

"May 15, 1943 — The chapel mortuary and all other buildings in the Jewish cemetery . . . were destroyed."

AIRBORNE TROOPS NOW IN JAVA TO AUGMENT FORCES

Two Companies of Infantry Also on Hand to Help Restore Order

By VERN HAUGLAND

Batavia, Java, Dec. 14 — (AP) —A British spokesman said today that two companies of the 3rd and 4th Gurkha Divisions and a battalion of the British 6th Airborne Division have arrived in Java to augment the military force engaged in restoring order.

Dr. Hubertus J. Van Mook, Acting Governor-General of the Dutch East Indies, today rejected Indonesian suggestions that the dispute over Indonesian demands for independence be referred to the United Nations Organization.

Dr. Van Mook, on the eve of his departure for Holland, told a press conference this his government feels the situation in the East Indies is primarily a matter for direct discussion between the Dutch and the Indonesians.

The Dutch view, he said, is that between results may be obtained by direct discussions.

A British statement reported minor clashes at several points, including Soerabaja, Ambarawa, Buitenzorg, Batavia in Java and Belawan in Sumatra.

Two Indian soldiers were killed and four wounded when Indonesians with machine-guns and mortars ambushed a Punjab patrol near Soerabaja. Four Indian soldiers were wounded in a skirmish at Belawan, near Medan.

Fighting at the other points was limited to desultory exchanges of shots between Indonesians and British patrols.

British military police arrested J. Petersen, notorious Nazi leader of the German community here, and about 100 Indonesians in a raid in the Kramat district. The raid was made as the result of the shooting and subsequent disappearance of a European on a street here yesterday. It was not learned whether the victim was killed or wounded.

FIRST 1946 MODEL CAR ARRIVES IN CITY

The first 1946 model automobile has arrived in the city and is now on exhibition at the White Rose Service Station operated by C. R. Clapp and Son. It is a Nash model and was shipped to Toronto by rail and driven to this city by Mr. Clapp. The advance information states that the car has one hundred improvements from the last model that was built in 1942, when passenger cars for civilian use excepting by priority, were taken off the manufacture list. The general outlines of the car have been little changed from the last car that was built by this firm but an advanced heating and cooling system has been installed and draughts have been eliminated. Many citizens, anxious to obtain a new car, have inspected the new model but cars are still on the priority list and will not be in great supply for some time to come.

CONCERN FELT OVER WHEREABOUTS OF MISSING BOY

Douglas Deline (or Clark) aged 16 left his foster home in Sidney recently and there is anxiety felt about his whereabouts. He weighs approximately 130 pounds, is 5 feet 7 1-2 inches in height, has grey eyes, ruddy complexion and is wearing a grey overcoat, light brown suit and brown shoes. Anyone able to furnish any information of his whereabouts may communicate with Inspector T. D. Ruston.

TWENTY-TWO DIVORCE ACTIONS LISTED

With twenty-two cases listed, an all-time high record for divorce actions to be heard in Belleville at the non-jury sittings of the Supreme Court of Ontario will be seen here Monday afternoon when the fall assizes open before Mr. Justice Keiller Mackay of Toronto.

Twenty one divorce actions and one alimony case comprise the complete court docket, no other cases being listed for trial.

In announcing that a record number of divorce actions would be heard in Belleville during the Supreme Court sitting, county officials here stated that previously the high in divorce actions had been eleven. Court is scheduled to open at one o'clock Monday afternoon.

SALVATION ARMY STARTS SERENADING FOR CHRISTMAS SEASON

Commencing their annual program of Christmas serenading which each Yuletide season sees the band members playing carols in different parts of the city, the Salvation Army band tonight will be heard in the East Hill district, according to officials of the local Salvation Army. As in previous years the city will be divided off into districts and on designated evenings much loved Christmas carols and other numbers will be played. Tonight the Salvation Army band will be heard in the Alexander, Pine, Foster Ave., Chatham and Burnham Street area, it was stated.

FLAG AT HALF STAFF

WAAC Member Reported Missing

Vancouver, Dec. 14 — (CP) — Police revealed last night that Ruth Alice Watson, pretty 19-year-old member of the Canadian Women's Army Corps whose home is in Vancouver, has been missing since Monday evening.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police trying to find traces of the girl used a police dog in the hunt yesterday but nothing was found in a search in the vicinity of her home in the Kitsilano district.

Miss Watson was discharged from the C.W.A.C. Monday and has not been heard of since she left her home to meet a girl friend, L/Cpl. Norma McKay, also of the C.W.A.C., at a downtown intersection. Both girls had worked at Ottawa while in the army. On her discharge Miss Watson had received more than $100 in back pay and allowances.

Police said they faced a "blank wall" in trying to trace the girl's movements.

NO COMPENSATION

Ottawa, Dec. 14 — (CP) — James Franceschini, Italian-born Toronto contractor, will not receive compensation for his internment after Italy entered the war, Justice Minister St. Laurent said last night in the Commons. Replying to John R. MacNicol (PC — Toronto Davenport), he said during consideration of Justice Department estimates he felt those who had been interned unjustly during the war should receive some compensation.

Obituary

MRS. LUCY ETTA DEAN

After a brief illness Mrs. Lucy Etta Dean, widow of Samuel Dean, and late residence 364 Bleecker Avenue, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Thursday.

The late Mrs. Dean, who was in her 73rd. year, was born at Hoards Station and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Huffman. For many years she lived in Thurlow Township and for the past ten years she resided in this city. For some time past she made her home with her niece, Mrs. Lorne Alexander, 364 Bleecker Avenue. She was a member of the United Church at Bethany.

Surviving her are one sister, Mrs. Eugene Sargent, Ada, Mich.; one granddaughter, Mrs. Alfred Leureux, Toronto; one grandson, Russell Wilson, Kingston, and four great grandchildren.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street; the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

JAMES BUCHANAN

James Buchanan died at his home 155 Dufferin, Avenue, on Thursday afternoon after an illness extending over four years.

Born at Keene, Ontario, the late Mr. Buchanan was in his 75th. year and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Buchanan. Before coming to Belleville he resided at Stirling and Deseronto. For thirty-five years he made his home in this city and for twenty years he was in the employ of the Ritchie Company and the Canadian Department Stores. Later he was engaged with Quick & Robertson.

Mr. Buchanan was well known and highly esteemed by many friends to whom his death has brought much regret. In the days when curling was popular here he was a member of the curling club and when health permitted he was an enthusiastic member of the Belleville Bowling Club. In religion he was a member of Bridge Street United Church and when health permitted he took part in church work being an honorary steward.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Myra Bogart; two sons, Alson Buchanan, Detroit, now overseas with the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps, and J. Edgar Buchanan of this city; three sisters, Miss Eliza Buchanan, Campbellford; Mrs. Mary Brooks, Leamington, and Mrs. Jean Turk, Oshawa; one brother, Mr. Archie Buchanan, Preston.

Resting at the Pinkston Funeral Home, Church Street at Victoria Avenue; the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

OWRINE IVAN CAIN
(Thurlow Township)

Owrine Ivan Cain died at his home in the second concession of Thurlow Township this morning after an illness of one month's duration.

Born at Mallorytown the late Mr. Cain was in his 45th year and was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Edward Cain, now residing at Lynn, Ontario, and where he lived until four years ago when he moved to Thurlow Township. He was a member of the United Church at Shannonville.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Winnifred Watson; his parents; two daughters, Gladys and Mabel, also two sons, Albert and Ivan, all at home; two brothers, Howard of Oshawa, and Victor of Frankford; two sisters, Mrs. Lawrence Driscoll, Montreal and Mrs. Clarence Shurtliff, Oshawa.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church St., until Saturday morning, then at his home; the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

MACHINERY DELAYED

Toronto, Dec. 14 —(CP)— Strikes in the automotive industry which supplies parts to implements firms are delaying delivery of farm machinery, Murray Knox of Fergus, representative of a manufacturing firm (Beatty Bros.), yesterday told members of the Ontario Retail Farm Equipment Dealers' Association in convention here.

He said immediate prosperity for the farm implement industry seemed assured but prospects for delivery of needed tools to the farmers were uncertain.

BEVIN GOES TO MOSCOW

London, Dec. 14 — (CP)—Foreign Secretary Bevin took off today from Northold airdrome for Moscow to attend the Foreign Ministers' Conference.

Mrs. Bevin went aboard the Skymaster plane just before its departure and talked with her husband a few minutes. Later she said: "I feel confident they will come back successful."

(U. S. State Secretary Byrnes made a brief stop at Frankfurt today on his way to Moscow.)

Chinese, Japanese Fags Not as Good As Kinsmen's

That Kinsmen cigarettes really find their way around to eventually arrive at their destination is indicated by a recent letter received from AB Jack Diamond of this city who at the time of writing was stationed in Hong Kong as member of occupational force.

"We were ashore for five weeks as occupational force" wrote Seaman Diamond, "therefore had to resort to Chinese or Japanese fags. I assure you they are terrible."

Seaman Diamond arrived home approximately at the same time as his letter advising Kinsmen to take his name off the list. He was a crew member of the Canadian cruiser "Ontario" with which he made the circuit of the globe.

Another former Belleville service man writes in appreciation for Kinsmen cigarettes is Captain "Tommy" Mason, now with No. 14 Auxiliary Service Section in Holland helping to supply, as he explains "various services not normally supplied by the army."

At the time of writing Captain Mason was busily engaged in preparations for a children's Christmas party for which appropriate toys had been made available. "I have been mixed up in all sorts of parties," he explains, "but this is the first time I have helped to throw one for the kids." He says he will be spending Christmas in Holland.

The following Belleville boys were each shipped three hundred cigarettes by the Belleville Kinsmen Fag Fund:

A. C. Adams, R. H. Adams, C. M. Brown, A. Cooper, F. DeCarlo, J. Diamond, T. Donohue, C. Emerson, K. Grimson, R. H. Hubbs, W. B. Johnston, W. H. Laughlin, H. Mills, W. Mugford, W. Noakes, S. Orr, A. Outstanding Exhibit of Handicraft Displayed at Mountain View Station

What do the airmen and airwomen at Mountain View do in their spare time? Visit their Hobby Shop of course. The lads and lassies at the station have a very up-to-date shop. It was opened just a little over a year ago and has been expanding ever since. At first there was only a trickle of people using its facilities but the interest has been mounting steadily ever since and "Hobby Lobby", as it is called, is going to have to move into larger quarters to accommodate interested personnel. According to F/O Osborne, supervisor of the shop, approximately 20 percent of the station personnel visit the Hobby Shop every day.

Thursday was "Open House" at "Hobby Lobby" when the public was invited to visit the camp to see the products of the airmen's efforts when they vied for the $100 prize money donated by the K. of C. War Services. A large number of city residents as well as others from nearby places visited the outstanding exhibit.

Hobbies displayed included art, needlework, leatherwork, woodwork, metal work, model aircraft, plastics and photography, and very adept skill was evident in the various exhibits.

"Bambi" Ingenious Toy

Highlight of the woodwork exhibit was a "Bambi" rocking horse by LAC. Tachuk. "Bambi" has very ingenious electric eyes that light when he is rocked. A scale working model of a "Lysander" complete in detail even to landing lights was the pick of the model aircraft display.

The art exhibit was very good including some very fine "airbrush" work by LAC. Ralph Laing. Included in the display were paintings by Sgt. "Alfie" Schultz and the commanding officer of the station, Group Captain E. C. Tennant.

The photography section featured "shots" by Sgt. "Jerry" White, Sgt. "Jack" Follansbee and LAC. "Hal" Grayson.

Major Prize Winners

Judges for the various competitions were: Miss Nugent, Mr. Smith and Mr. Allison of Belleville Vocational School; Miss Shaw and Miss West, district supervisors of the Singer Sewing Machine Co.; Miss "Lee" Phelps, Y.W.C.A. Special Services Officer; Mr. Urban S. Hughes. K. of C. Auxiliary Services Officer and Sgt. "Jerry" White, NCO i/c station photographic section.

Miss "Lee" Phelps, Mrs. Dow of the Y.W.C.A. Auxiliary Services and Flight Officer "Joy" Bristol, Sr. W.D. Officer, assisted by some of the Women's Division served the guests with refreshments.

Tributes Paid to Memory Of Late J. Owen Herity By Prominent Citizens

Representative citizens today paid tribute to the memory of the late J. Owen Herity who passed away in the Belleville General Hospital early Friday morning. Civic, municipal and service club officials as well as private citizens united in paying a sincere eulogy to the late manager-secretary of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce.

Will be Greatly Missed . . . Mayor Follwell.

"The passing of the late J. Owen Herity has removed from this city and his native county one of its most illustrious sons," Mayor Frank Follwell said.

"He represented all that was noble and good. His work for this city and its residents will long stand as an intangible monument to a representative citizen, who placed the betterment of his fellow man far beyond that of personal aggrandizement."

"His memory will be forever green in the hearts of not only his personal friends but the population of Hastings County and the far-flung districts whose people knew and loved him.

"The City of Belleville will miss Owen Herity. For his rich achievements gained without the pomp and glory of public fanfare have been one of the chief contributing factors to the high position this city holds in the ranks of Canadian communities."

"On behalf of the City of Belleville, its council and residents I offer our deepest sympathy to those who remain to mourn the loss of one of Hastings County's best loved sons, who did so much for so many.

Notable Industrial Commissioner.

"The death of Mr. J. O. Herity is a great loss not only to the industrial life of Belleville, but to the entire county," R. A. Pringle, City Industrial Commission head, said today.

"From an intimate association with him and his work for the past six years, as Chairman of the Industrial Commission, I can say without reserve that no Municipal Industrial Commissioner stands as high as Mr. J. O. Herity with the industrial departments of the railways, banks, and large manufacturing firms throughout Canada and the United States. He had made a contribution to the life of the City of Belleville which will endure.

His successor, when appointed, will find that Mr. Herity has left a feeling of goodwill and confidence throughout Canada and the United States, which will be of great assistance to him for years to come.

The members of the Commission have not only lost a valuable colleague, but a good friend, and personally and on their behalf, I extend to the family of the late Mr. Herity, our sincere sympathy.

Gave Faithful Service

"The late J. Owen Herity was a pillar of strength to the Chamber of Commerce during his many years of faithful efficient service to his community," J. J. Trudeau, president of that organization said in tribute today.

"His ability to reach out far beyond the confines of his own community and his faculty to fathom and assist in solving the many problems that annually crop up in our organization were contributing factors to the high position we hold in the ranks of Canadian cities."

"His untiring energy and willingness to adapt himself and his qualities to the betterment of civic, industrial and service club activities in Belleville will long remain in the memories of his colleagues of the Chamber of Commerce."

"His quiet unobtrusive manner endeared him to all of us. His opinions were sought and given in a manner that bespoke careful thought and study. J. O. Herity was seldom wrong. We shall miss him. The city of Belleville shall miss him. His memory will live long in our hearts for he was an exemplary citizen, one who loved his fellow man, and his native community in a manner that was notably apparent in his good deeds."

Outstanding Rotarian.

The epitome of Rotary ideals, the late J. Owen Herity and his work in furthering and bettering the life of this service club will be forever green in the memory of Belleville Rotarians, A. D. McLean, president of the Belleville Rotary Club said today.

"Mr. Herity covered a wide sphere of Rotarian activities and his work in connection with this club and with Rotary International will forever stand as a monument to an illustrious son of this city and a Rotarian who was deeply loyal to his convictions. He held an outstanding record of attendance, which in itself is a remarkable tribute to his memory. For twenty-one years he had not missed a meeting. He was the good will ambassador of Belleville for Rotary and his passing is noted with sincere regret by his fellow clubmen of Rotary here.

He leaves a rich heritage, one that is deeply appreciated not only by Rotarians but other service clubmen and citizens as a whole. Belleville and Rotary is indeed the poorer with the passing of a man who held their interests deep in his heart and gave much of his life for the betterment of his city and district.

Always Willing to Help

"Owen Herity has been an honorary member of the Kiwanis Club and a regular attendant at our meetings for almost a quarter of a century" was the tribute of Mr. Lorne McDougall, Kiwanis Club President.

Always one who could be counted on to fill any emergency he was a real source of strength to the club. He will be sadly missed in Service Club circles and the business community where his many friends found a ready response to requests for advice and favors. The Club joins with the citizens of Belleville to mourn the passing of one of the community's greatest public servants."

Will Be Missed By Merchants

"The Retail Merchants' Division of the Chamber of Commerce join with the citizens of Belleville in paying tribute to one of our most distinguished citizens, J. Owen Herity, who passed away today," J. G. Galloway, chairman, said in tribute.

"Truly a man of sterling character—beloved by all for his understanding of human nature—for his warm personality and high ideals.

"His death will be a source of sorrow to many throughout the United States and Canada.

"His was a most useful and constructive life. His vast knowledge,—his great talents were put to the utmost use in the interest of his fellow citizens in Belleville.

"He will be missed by the Retail Merchants for his interest and wise counsel, so freely given at all times."

A Distinguished Citizen

Past president and director of the Chamber of Commerce and a personal friend of the late J. Owen Herity, Mr. J. B. Boyce said in tribute to a well-loved former colleague, "I have always looked upon my years of association with Mr. Herity as one of the greatest privileges of my lifetime."

"His tolerance, kindliness, high and noble purposes his great breadth of vision and depth of devotion, with which he inspired all with whom he came in contact, were but symbols of the strength and integrity of his character.

"He went about doing good, spreading the gospel of goodwill and love, and left this life as he had lived it with the well-being of his fellow-man and of this city, which he loved and for which he had done so much, uppermost in his thoughts.

"With the passing of Owen Herity Belleville has lost a distinguished and illustrious son and humanity a great Christian friend.

"And now, as was spoken of Abraham Lincoln, he belongs to the ages, one of nature's finest noblemen."

Lt.-Col. H. Smith Re-elected Pres. Canadian Legion

Lieutenant-Colonel H. E. Smith was re-elected president of the Belleville Branch No. 99 of the Canadian Legion at the meeting for the election of officers held in the club rooms on Thursday evening. Other officers elected were 1st vice president, R. J. Graham, D.S.O., 2nd vice president, Bert Wells, treasurer, Tom Hetherington, Sergeant-at-Arms, G. Aselstine and executive, Leroy Madden, Charles Jeffs, Frank Gardner, Jacob Yanover, P. Decarlo, Walter Harden, R. Newton, Gavin Scott, Dave Batchelor, S. Galpin, W. Ashline and E. Dainard. The secretary will be appointed by the officers of the Branch at a later date.

Nine new members were initiated in the Legion with Leroy Madden giving the aims and objects of the association. Tom Hetherington gave a fine financial report while Charles Jeffs gave a report on the bingos held, which showed a profit of $2,400 to date. Ernie Dainard reported for the Poppy Fund showing a balance of $1,439.89 on hand. It was unanimously endorsed that George Ellarby, the efficient secretary of the Legion, be given a $100 as an honorarium. Comrade Graham asked that a list of the members of the Legion be posted in the club rooms and Charles Jeffs donated a frame for the purpose.

A report was given by Comrade Gardner respecting the property that the Legion is interested in and some discussion followed the report. At the conclusion of the meeting the women of the auxiliary served coffee and sandwiches, which were very much appreciated and the thanks of the Legion was expressed by the president.

Veterans Returning to Civvy Street Find Pleasant Vision Of Home a Sad Disillusion

By FRED KERNER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Thousands of men and women who served with Canadian armed forces have had a constant dream during days of meagre military life—the pleasant vision of a home. But that dream shattered—or remained still a dream — when they returned home to discover the critical housing problems confronting all Canada.

Instead of finding an abode, they discovered they must be content with anything, provided it had a roof and four walls. Instead of returning to that dream home on civvy street, many are living in a room or two—if they have been fortunate.

Some lucky ones live in summer cottages, temporarily insulated against the cold of winter. Some have a room "with bed and two windows." Tots sleep in bathtubs or bureau drawers in the style of the Moon Mullins comic strip character, Kayo. Few have had their dream fulfilled.

Not Bright Picture

A Canadian Press survey of problems confronting veterans and families of servicemen still overseas does not present a bright picture. With the rapid discharge of fighting forces, the cry everywhere is: "We must have more houses."

"The situation will grow a great deal worse before it gets better," was the discouraging comment of Housing Registry, emergency shelter agency, social agency and civic committee officials.

In many instances authorities tell disheartening tales of broken homes and delinquent children directly resulting from the attempt to house "too many people in too few homes."

Returning veterans have been bitter in their criticism of failure to provide them with adequate housing, and "every troopship brings more grief."

Conversion of buildings and barracks formerly used by the services has helped some.

At Charlottetown, airport buildings have provided quarters for nearly 100 families. About 60 families are sheltered in Norwegian Air Force buildings at Toronto. Forty families moved into C. W. A. C. barracks at Kitchener, Ont., and in Winnipeg an old immigration department building is home to 34 families.

Practically Homeless

Greatest Canadian population focal point, Montreal has countless servicemen and their families practically homeless and at least 1,000 are living in quarters urgently needing repair. Some 4,000 homes are under construction at present by private enterprises and will alleviate the pressure.

Available accommodation for 400 couples at St. Paul L'Ermite, premises of a munitions plant 21 miles east of Montreal, only has drawn 16 applications. Though complete facilities are available and rates of $9 a week per person includes room and 21 meals and $7.50 pays for room and 15 meals, the vacancies are blamed on lack of transportation to the city.

Applications totalling more than 5,000 are unfilled in Toronto where close to 2,000 veterans and 3,000 servicemen's families seek homes. Wartime Housing Limited is constructing 600 houses in nearby townships but authorities promise no immediate relief to the acute situation.

In the Maritime provinces more applications are filed after each ship docks and a list of close to 800 in Halifax increases without letup. At Saint John only possible hope to help 900 homeless veterans is an exodus of war workers.

Trend Always the Same

Throughout Ontario the general trend is the same. Hundreds are living in cramped quarters, one Cornwall veteran and his family made a tent their home until cold weather forced them to seek aid.

More than 500 families seek homes in Peterboro and some 200 applications of servicemen still are unfilled in Kingston. Accommodation for 1,500 to 2,000 families is required in central Ontario cities including, Chatham, Galt, Stratford, Guelph, Owen Sound and Simcoe.

Northern Ontario authorities fear the winter will find many families homeless. Untroubled by housing problems during the war years, Timmins saw a dwindling of accommodation after VE-Day and many North Bay families are living in summer cottages out of the city.

Thousands of veterans entering the Training and Reestablishment Institute at London, Ont., forced civic officials to press into service all buildings in the vicinity. Approximately 800 veterans and soldiers' families seek homes in Hamilton and more than 300 families need shelter in St. Catharines.

The Winnipeg city Housing Registry lists more than 900 applications. Six hundred servicemen's families need homes in Regina. Progress has been made in Edmonton since withdrawal of United States troops, but about 800 veterans are due to enter University of Alberta in January adding again to the number of undomiciled families.

Over 3,500 discharged servicemen at Vancouver applied for homes in November, of which about 800 were placed temporarily. At Victoria 425 families are in urgent need of quarters. Hundreds of servicemen settling in the rich fruit-growing British Columbia Okanagan Valley have found even single rooms unavailable.

The number of homeless increases constantly and the only solution remaining is to "build more houses . . . and there are no materials with which to do so."

PRINCESS ELIZABETH STEPS OUT TO FIRST NIGHT CLUB

For the first time in her 19 years of life, Princess Elizabeth dined and danced in a public restaurant on the night of Dec. 3. The Princess and women companions were escorted by four officers of the Life Guards, one of whom gave the party. This photo was made at the Bagatelle, a fashionable Mayfair night spot, as the party had supper. The Princess is seated between the Hon. Margaret Elphinstone, LEFT, and the Hon. Mrs. John Willis, RIGHT. Across the table from them sat the Life Guard officers, including Captain John Willis, husband of Mrs. Willis, who gave the party. The Princess danced with Capt. Willis.

Picton's Entry In Basketball Defeats "Y"

Picton, Dec. 14—McFarland Construction, Picton's entry in the O.A.B.A. won its third straight exhibition basketball game here Tuesday night, by defeating Belleville Y.M.C.A. At the close of the game, the scoreboard read 35-35, indicating a tie game. Ten minutes overtime was played, each team adding ten points. A check up of the score book revealed an error on the score board, Picton having led 37-35 at the end of the regular game.

The game was watched by a large crowd of fans. The game was fast and rough. At the end of the first half, Belleville led 23-20. In the third quarter, Picton held Belleville to two free shots while adding 11 points to make the score 31-25. In the final quarter Belleville outscored the locals 9-5, for a final score of 37-35 in favor of Picton.

Germans, Austrians To be Repatriated

Chungking, Dec. 14 — (AP)— All Germans and Austrians in China, including Jews, will be repatriated unless they obtain permission of the Ministries of Foreign Affairs and Interior to remain in the country, it was announced officially today. Pending repatriation, they will be interned unless they produce "valuable guarantees," either Chinese or foreign.

All such Nationals who were suspected of spying, sabotage, or collaboration with the Japanese during the war will be punished according to Chinese law, the government statement added.

The decisions, which affect approximately 20,000 European Jews in Shanghai alone, were drawn up by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and approved by the executive Yuan Nov. 27, the announcement explained.

Municipalities In Germany To Hold Elections

(By William Boss)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With Canadian occupation force in Germany, Dec. 14—(CP)—(By mail)—Municipalities in the Canadian occupation zone in northwest Germany have been advised that elections of city, town and village boards will be held next spring.

Meanwhile political parties and meetings may assemble with military government permission. Parties may look beyond the municipal elections of next spring to ultimate provincial or national activity.

Applications to form parties must be submitted to the military government outlining the proposed program, the rules of procedure to be established, and how the party plans to obtain funds.

So far little interest has been shown in politics, perhaps because civilians are engrossed with the problems of how to get through the winter. Two applications so far received have been approved. One authorized formation of a democratic party, the other of a communist branch.

Children Innocent Victims of War

By GODFREY H. P. ANDERSON

Berlin, Dec. 14 — (AP) — Thousands of hungry halfclad children left without parents or home are the most pathetic innocent victims of Hitler's war. You see them everywhere in the larger German cities — white-faced round-eyed ghosts wandering amidst ruins, living by their wits until youth aid organizations find them.

It is officially estimated there are 14,000 homeless children in Munich alone. Many lost both parents in the war. Some of the youngest do not even know their names.

The older ones who often had no schooling were for years accustomed only to a life of running wild on the streets. Some of the 11 and 12-year-olds are particularly difficult to handle since they are constantly trying to escape from authority in order to resume a career of thieving and scrounging which they call "adventure."

Berlin newspapers contain daily columns headed "Kinder Verloren" (lost children) with pathetic appeals from parents who lost families when the war swept down on them, sometimes more than a year ago. Some, giving up hope of finding their own children, offer to adopt others but often they are living in half-destroyed homes which are unsuitable, and the offers have to be refused.

Says Lieut. J. Couper Among Three Murdered By Germans in June '44

Ottawa, Dec. 14 — (CP)—The Ottawa Journal in a newspage story yesterday said it had learned that Lieut. Jack Couper of Peterboro, Ont., was among those believed murdered by the Germans in Europe following the invasion in June, 1944.

The paper said the body of Lt. Couper was found in a grave with those of two other soldiers. The grave was opened after officers of the Cameron Highlanders of Ottawa were told that it contained the bodies of Canadians.

Lieut. Couper's name was not included in an official list of 114 Canadian soldiers allegedly murdered by the Germans while prisoners of war, which was issued by defence headquarters last night.

Headquarters files showed that Lieut. Couper was attached to an infantry reinforcement unit at the time of the invasion and was listed as presumed killed in action June 8, 1944, two days after D-Day.

WHY HE WAS IN NYLON LINE

Manitowoc, Wis., Dec. 14 — (AP)— A middle aged man got at the end of the long line of women who waited their turn to get to the hosiery counter of a department store — and buy a pair of nylons. After almost an hour, he left the line for a few minutes. When he returned he didn't get his position back, so again he went to the end of the line. Another long wait and he finally reached the hosiery counter. "A pair of men's sox, size 10, please," was his request.

$7,000 FIRE SOUND

FINED $62.90 AT NAPANEE

Napanee, Dec. 14 —(CP)— Harvey Brown, 21, Brockville, transport driver, was ordered to pay a fine and costs totalling $62.90 yesterday after conviction on a charge of stealing a case of cigarettes worth $175 from an overturned transport truck two miles west of Odessa Dec. 6. Police told the court a total of $2,106 worth of tobacco was stolen from the transport.

SICK MAN HELPS AMBULANCE

Kansas City, Dec. 14 —(AP)— Robert Brown, a war veteran suffering from Malaria, grew impatient when an ambulance called to take him to a hospital failed to arrive. He got out of bed at his home, dressed, went in search of the vehicle, and found it stalled with a dead battery. Brown helped to push the ambulance to a start, then climbed in it and rode on to hospital.

Future of British Forests

Attention is focused today on forestry problems in the United Kingdom which suffered a drastic reduction of its woodlands to meet the national needs of the two great wars. The woodlands are a crop which may be heavily cut and yet renews itself and therein timber and lumber differ from metals. Though Britain casually seems to be well wooded, this is an erroneous impression because of the comparative frequency with which trees appear in hedge rows and in country estates.

Actually though forest is a natural vegetation of most of the United Kingdom, the actual area under cover of forest is only five percent compared with eighteen percent in France, twenty-five percent in Germany and fifty-five percent in Sweden.

Throughout historical times Britain's forests were felled to provide agricultural land, for building materials and for fuel. Not least was the use of timber for building Britain's navies and merchant ships. The Napoleonic Wars brought a serious depletion in British forests through the needs of the navy. The industrial revolution brought along demand for softwoods but by 1913 Britain's consumption of wood increased fivefold while only seven percent was provided from homegrown timber.

In the two World Wars about one million acres of trees were felled. Between 1939 and 1944 the sacrifice of half a million acres enabled Britain with help of Empire experts to meet about 80 percent of timber needs from home resources and thus saved seventeen million tons of shipping space. In 1938 only four percent of the United Kingdom timber needs came from home forests.

The United Kingdom has but two million acres of usable timber left. Her problem is to replace the woodlands to ensure homegrown needs of the country's needs in any future emergency. After the First Great War a forestry commission was set up to acquire land for forests. Now the declared aim of the commission is five million acres of well-managed forests in 50 years. Three million acres to be created by afforestation and two millions from existing woodlands would bring nine percent of the area of the United Kingdom under forest, contribute to the national safety and assist in development of rural Britain. Forty percent of the U. K. woodlands, it is estimated, will be under private ownership. Owners of "dedicated" woodlands would receive state grants.

The British Government, says the Minister of Agriculture, sees the necessity as a safety measure of rebuilding as quickly as possible the U. K.'s reserves of standing timber together with the possibility of enhancing utilization and increased employment in rural Britain offered by systematic forestry and afforestation. The government will continue to extend the national parks system as opportunities occur.

Christmas Entertainments

The passing of time brings the excitements and thrills of Christmas preparations and of Christmas entertainments in schools and Sunday Schools. Childhood by the millions will be represented at thousands of these functions which are characteristic of the season. No gatherings are so enthusiastic as Christmas entertainments at these assemblies. The little mind of wonder which is so much a manipulation of the growing interest of the child in life accepts these entertainments at their full value and reaps a harvest of joy and merriment. This wonder mind is not fazed by the fact that in one town or city in the Christmas season, Santas may appear at numbers of entertainments. That is nothing to upset the faith of the children even if there is a multiplicity of Santas. The reason is clear, the child is convinced that Santa does exist and the more appearances there are the more the little boy or girl sees the proofs of Santa's inspiring personality. It pays big dividends in love and affection to the teachers and parents who prepare these entertainments This wonder world of the child at this time is recreated again and every child becomes a merry spirit giving full sweep to the imagination. In this these boys and girls can teach their parents and elders invaluable lessons in life.

Exposing Nazism's Evil Heart

Never did any other age have such an opportunity to hear and learn how even in what has for long been called an enlighted and cultured age men and women could so far turn from what is honorable, decent and fair as to be guilty of such crimes as have been proven against Nazi men and women who were associated with German concentration camps. Stories are being told which make mankind shudder at the evidence of cruelty and depravity proved against those in control of these camps.

A few days ago there was heard the awful story told by some of those who had been victims of Japanese crimes which shocked the world. The Japanese general, Yamashita, has been sentenced to hang for permitting such atrocities. The terrible stories of atrocities at Belsen and at Daohau camps are fresh in the minds of the readers everywhere. Only Thursday 36 officials and guards at the notorious camp at Dachau who had been found guilty of crimes against prisoners as murder, torture and statvation were sentenced to death by hanging while one other received a life term and three were sentenced to ten-year terms.

The revelation of the iniquity of the rule of the aggressors continues to unfold and it points a warning to the world to take every step to prevent such a regime of murder and brutalities ever again gaining control or semblance of control. It is a lesson showing how human beings under false teaching and evil influences and inhuman and upsocial motives and with hatred in their hearts and love of exercise of brutal authority over the prisoner and the weak can deteriorate and degenerate until they become bestial and inhuman and haters of their fellowmen. The world is horrified at the revelations showing how widespread evil can become under the influence of a demagogue in the mad lust for power, loot and vengeance.

Orange Juice in Frozen Slabs

(From "Marketing," Toronto)

California oranges continue to widen their market with frozen orange juice. The product is available ten months in the year, is frozen in 1-lb. slabs, sealed in transparent bags and packaged for distribution in a fibre board carton. It is sold to frozen food cabinets. The frozen product is not price competitive with juice from fresh oranges, but meets a convenience demand, and also supplies fresh juice to areas that cannot obtain fresh oranges all the year round. Six-pound containers are provided for institutional use. Lemon and grapefruit juice are to be added this winter.

"Despite modern inventions, the newspaper remains and will remain for some time to come the best medium to guide public opinion."—Most Rev. Norbert Robichaud, Archbishop of Moncton.

King Tut's so-called curse — "Death shall come on swift wings to him that toucheth the tomb of a Pharaoh"—always got a chuckle from Dr. Alfred Lucas, famous English chemist who was a member of the archaeological party which entered the inner chamber of the tomb in 1923. Others in the party died, mostly from natural causes, including old age. And now Cairo reports the death of Dr. Lucas from a heart attack. But it took 23 years to catch up with this last survivor and scoffer at curses. — (Windsor Star.)

CHRISTMAS MEMORY

She loved the Christmas season so!
The holly and the mistletoe;
The children's laughter, and the ring
Of doorbell and the caroling;
The Christ Child in the stable bare;
The Star of Bethlehem shining there;
The gold and frankincense and myrrh,
Which presents of the Wise Men were;
The stockings at the chimney hung,
And all the gifts for old and young.

She loved the joys of Christmas Eve!
The faith of children who believe
In Santa Claus and go to bed
With dreams of reindeer overhead,
And dolls and sleds and horns and drums
They've waited for: "Till Christmas comes!"
She loved the cards which friendship sends,
The love which Christmastime attends,
And oft she said: "If I'm away
Let nothing spoil their Christmas Day.

"Be sure these things you do for me:
Get ornaments to trim the tree;
With wreath and ribbon deck each wall;
Hang mistletoe inside the hall,
Remember, pile the sideboard high
With figs and raisins, cake and pie;
Sing all the carols as of old;
Tell all the Christmas tales I've told,
And don't, because I've gone away,
Let sadness spoil the Christmas Day."

The city council has made a grant of $500.00 to the 155th Battalion.

The result of the special Voters' List Court held before Judge Deroche was that 325 names out of the 1020 names submitted were added to the present list of voters.

Mrs. John Taugher and Miss Reginia Taugher of this city have arrived in San Francisco, California, where they will spend th. winter.

Last evening a team of horses attached to a sleigh ran away on Front Street and at the upper bridge they turned and when half way over the bridge they became further frightened by an approaching automobile and endeavored to jump over the side of the bridge. One of them got over the railing onto the pedestrians walk and the other got half way over, but was held back by its harness. It took considerable time to get the horses free and get the outfit straightened out.

Washington Spotlight

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Washington, Dec. 14 (CP)—The need for friendly, generous, understanding thinking on British problems by the American people was seldom greater than when the announcement was made that arrangements had been completed for a $4,400,000,000 loan to Britain subject to congressional approval.

But a simple circumstance on that very day set up a train of anti-British thought in the quarters where it could do the most harm.

Washington correspondents were called to the State Department in the afternoon to be given texts of the loan and associated agreements and an exhaustive background talk by State Secretary Byrnes and the chief American negotiators.

They were pledged to release none of what they had been told not even permitted to say the loan agreement had been reached.

Before the reporters got back to their offices the news services were carrying a story on a broadcast by the BBC, quoting its Washington correspondents as reporting that the loan agreement had been reached and stating the general terms.

American correspondents gritted their teeth in rage but stuck by their restrictions as to release of the story and their papers used only London dispatches announcing end of the long negotiations.

Canada is well-represented in Washington by its embassy and information service but casual inquirers often pick this reporter's telephone number when seeking information. The queries run all the way from information on how to get Prince Edward Island blueberries to the availability of Canadian caviar; the possibility of getting into the Canadian regular army and what is the best Canadian newspaper.

The prize query came from a Washington lawyer who wanted to know what Canadian city he should settle in and what his prospects were for admission to the Canadian Bar.

Asked his reason for moving to Canada he replied: "I have two growing sons; this country is going to enact compulsory military training; I don't want my sons to go through that and I am sure they won't have to if they are brought up in Canada."

Mackenzie's Column

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

Dublin, Dec. 14 (AP)—This is a tough article to control because my whole impulse is to start right out with the glorification of two beef steaks which my wife and I have just eaten at our first meal in the capital of Eire.

They were steaks such as we've dreamed of but haven't even seen since the United States hit stride in food rationing. Who starts serious columns with dissertations about beef steaks, no matter how unusual? I do—being given too following impulses.

The reason is this instance for the whimsical approach is that these beef steaks—being particularly impressive after close rationing in the United States and closer in Britain—are symbolic of a great change for the better which Eire has undergone in recent years.

The Eire which I have known for a generation has been transformed from a land in which there was much poverty and distress to one in which, I am informed in official quarters, there is no real destitution.

To get the full significance of that you must have seen—as I have in years past—poverty so harsh in some country districts that many families rarely knew anything better than potatoes and salt for food, and were grateful for even these small blessings.

I don't want to give the impression Eire has suddenly become a land flowing with milk and honey. However, its position has improved so much during the last dozen years, and especially since the beginning of the war, that Dublin today is the mecca of a host of tourists from Britain, in search of relief from drab, meagre rations.

Not a few are drawn by the fact that there's plenty of good liquor to be had here, whereas spirits of any sort are almost as rare in London as molten gold and cost about as much. Of course there is rationing in Ireland, but those juicy steaks are real and there are plenty of other good things to go with them.

About the greatest vial shortage is coal—and that's mighty bad. Ireland is dependent on imported coal, most of which has come across the Irish Sea, but Britain herself is short now and the continent is impoverished. The result is Ireland has fallen back heavily on her traditional fuel—the sweet smelling peat cut from the huge bogs. There are miles of peat stacked up in huge piles along the highways about Dublin, but of course this cannot begin to take the place of coal, especially for industrial purposes.

This change in Eire's economic position really had its genesis back in the early 30's when Eamon De Valera as head of the government began his agricultural reforms. At that time southern Ireland grew only one-third of her foodstuffs. The government made special prices for wheat-growing and began compulsory measures as well, with the result that during the war the country grew all her foodstuffs, including sugar. Eire gained considerably during the war, in which she maintained her neutrality, although large numbers of Irishmen joined the British forces. The pre-war national income was £170,000,000 (about $765,000,000) and now is £250,000,000. As against this national income the national debt is £41,000,000.

LT.-COL. WULFBERG FOUND SHOT TO DEATH IN COACH

Calcutta, Dec. 12—(AP)—United States army officials said today that Lt.-Col Rolf Olaf Wulfberg, commander of the ordnance ammunition area at Camp Kancrapara when an explosion killed seven Americans and 84 Indian employees last month, was found shot to death in a railway coach Saturday.

The army said a bullet pierced his head but did not say how the fatal wound was inflicted. Results of the army investigation of the camp Kancrapara blast have not been disclosed.

The coach was on a train en route to Darjeeling, in northern India, where Col. Wulfsberg was travelling on leave orders.

DEFECTIVENESS AND DRINKING

Entirely apart from mental defect or deficiency and the low intelligence quotient of the individual, which are prime factors to alcohol, purely physical deficiencies of weaknesses, which may not be apparent to the casual observer contribute to the desire or craving for alcohol.

Especially important, I believe, and generally ignored or not recognized as contributory to alcoholic indulgence, are (1) common nutritional deficiencies and (2) the common physical weaknesses associated with faulty development of the body.

The common nutritional deficiencies are mainly calcium and phosphorus shortage, vitamin D shortage, inadequate intake of vitamin B-complex, insufficient iodine, throughout early childhood and early youth.

The physical deficiencies or weaknesses are general flabbiness, poor or fatigue posture, spinal curvature, pronated feet (weak ankles, potential flatfoot) and other developmental imperfections due to the utter neglect of physical education and training in our comon schools. If the public school system anywhere in the country gives physical education a place in the curriculum equal with the place given, say, English or arithmetic, I have not heard of it and I'll be delighted to learn about it.

If a child or youth has any such physical deficiency or weakness he or she is keenly aware of it. A narcotic such as alcohol lowers or for a brief interval makes him or her less aware or unaware of his or her inferiority to others.

The various functional weaknesses or impairments due to nutritional deficiencies are mostly not apparent to the casual observer, often, indeed, not even to the physician making a routine physical "checkup," but the child or youth himself is conscious of the weakness, you may be sure. He or she has learned by experience just how his or her speed, agility, wind, skill and all-round physical condition rates in comparison with the best of his or her companions or associates. Once the young person becomes thus aware of his or her weakness or inferiority, the young person has an inferiority complex.

Hence I say our quaint American educational system is partly responsible for the cultivation of the drinking habit in youth. Physical education gets small consideration in our grammar and high schools. Pupils are regularly graduated from schools where a swimming pool is provided, although they can't swim. Through connivance of teachers, parents and too often the unprincipled physician, these youngsters are "excused" from gymnasium classes and swimming classes.

Where the majority of the group or gang are precocious, sophisticated in worldly ways it requires a certain amount of self-confidence for a boy or girl to decline to take just a little drink with them—and a boy or girl who has had no physical training is unlikely to have much self-confidence. His or her inferiority complex makes the first drink too easy.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Watering at Nose

Nose has been running water for years—first it seems all thick and stuffy and then runs water for hours and then it is clear for the rest of the day. This happens usually early in the day. (I.C.)

Answer—Perhaps manifestation of allergy. Send stamped self-addressed envelope for pamphlet "Relief for Allergy." Inclose ten cents in addition if you would like also the booklet "The Calcium Shortage." Calcium deficiency, I believe, is a comon cause of such trouble.

Tired and Sleepy

Tired and sleepy most of time. Husband says I must have been born tired. Have poor memory. 33 years old. Three children. Don't feel like doing anything—can't even enjoy a movie because I am too tired and sleepy. Nose feels stopped up all the time. Skin and hair dry. (Mrs. C. R. G.)

Answer—Send stamped self addressed envelope and ask for pamphlet "The Iodin Ration."

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What causes scale in teakettles?

The hard, lime-like coating that frequently forms inside teakettles results from changes in the solubility and chemical composition of the minerals in the water when it is heated.

When hard water is boiled in a kettle the calcium, magnesium, silicon, iron and aluminum compounds in it tend to precipitate and accumulate until they finally form a thick incrustation.

Soft water does not produce such scales, and their formation can be prevented by softening hard water through chemical treatment.

Teakettle scales vary in composition, but the majority of them probably contain calcium carbonate, calcium sulphate or silicates as their chief constituents.

Except in the hands of experts there is no known substance that will effectively remove this scale or sediment without appreciable injury to the metal of the kettle.

If repeatedly used any chemical method will in time affect the vessel unfavorably and therefore mechanical methods of removing the scale are preferred.

The U. S. Bureau of Standards suggests a ten to twenty per cent solution of ascetic acid, or very dilute hydrochloric acid (say five per cent) used at room temperatures. In using such acids for scale removal the teakettle should be emptied and thoroughly washed with plain water as soon as the scale is dissolved or loosened to prevent the metal from being attacked.

A solution of ordinary washing soda will also sometimes loosen scale. If the vessel is made of aluminum it is safer to use silicate of soda or "water glass" with the solution of washing soda.

HOUSE TACKLES

Amend Housing Act.

Other business before the House includes a motion by Mr. King for approval of the Washington declaration on atomic energy and consideration of remaining estimates.

Yesterday, in addition to dealing with the resolution for an increase in indemnity, the Commons gave final reading to the last of four bills based on changes announced in the Oct. 12 budget. The bill dealt with amendments to the Income War Tax Act. Final reading also was given to a bill amending the National Housing Act.

The Senate gave third reading to Bill 15, the "transitional" Emergency Powers Act which will replace the broader and more sweeping War Measures Act on Jan. 1. Third reading was given several budget bills.

In the Commons, Mr. King tabled a historic exchange of messages with Rt. Hon. Neville Chamberlain, then British Prime Minister, at the outbreak of war, which told how Britain appealed to Canada to assume the leading role in the Commonwealth Air Training Plan, later a decisive tool in the final victory.

Defence Minister Abbott disclosed that 180,000 Canadian soldiers, exclusive of sailors and airmen, will have returned home by the year-end and said that beginning late in January the 37,500 brides and dependents of Canadian servicemen will be brought to Canada at a rate of more than 2,700 every two months. Three ships will be allotted for their passage.

New Tax Structure

During study of the bill amending the Income War Tax Act, Finance Minister Ilsley said the government had worked out a new income tax structure before the budget was brought down but decided to continue this year the practice of straight percentage deductions.

While he did not disclose details of the new plan, Mr. Ilsley said the government will return to the pre-war practice of allowing exemptions for children to take the form of deductions from income rather than deductions from taxes.

Before the war taxpayers were permitted to deduct $400 from income for each child but this later was changed to make the exemption a deduction of $108 from tax.

Mr. Ilsley gave no indication whether the new schedule, which will take into account the payment of family allowances, will be introduced in the budget to be brought down in the session to be held next spring.

The housing bill gave rise to considerable discussion, with Donald Fleming (PC—Toronto Eglinton) charging there had been federal interference with municipal community planning.

Mr. Ilsley, who handles administration of the National Housing Act said he knew of no interference, but if there was any he was sure it was well meant and was aimed at elevating rather than lowering community planning standards.

While he was not prepared to make an immediate statement on how money provided for in the bill would be spent, he said one section set aside $150,000,000 for loans and the payment of losses for loans and another set $125,000,000 as theoretical limit of investments which may be guaranteed by insurance companies.

Ship's Ensign Presented To Township Council

Picton, Dec. 14 — The ensign from H.M.C.S. Hallowell, now decommissioned, was presented to county council on Wednesday by L. B. Calnan, chairman of the Hallowell Comforts Committee. The flag, ten by five feet, was accepted by Warden H. A. Cleave and will be hung in the council chambers.

Dr. D. S. Lighthall, physician to Prince Edward County Home, reported 50 aged persons there. One-third are able to help with farm work there.

Mention was made of the fine work done by the superintendent and matron, Mr. and Mrs. Cockburn, and council voted each a bonus of $100.

A resolution asked the Health of Animals Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture to carry on the regular tuberculin test of cattle in this area early in 1946. This is essential if the county is to maintain its standing as an accredited area, and to retain the export market for local cattle.

Harold Goodell Is Sentenced To Two-Year Term

Napanee, Dec. 14 —(CP)— Harold Goodell, 33, Kingston, was sentenced to two years in Kingston penitentiary and Thomas Bedard, 25, formerly of Niagara Falls, Ont., was remanded a week for sentence when they appeared yesterday after previous conviction on charges of stealing $144 Nov. 26 from the Modern Motors garage in Napanee.

Magistrate J. B. Gervin said he would consult penitentiary officials with a view to having Bedard's unserved reformatory term included in his sentence. Bedard escaped Nov. 3 from Welland county jail after being sentenced to eight months in reformatory.

Should Foster Spirit Of Helping Those Released From Prison

Ottawa, Dec. 14 — (CP)—The Federal Government cannot force Canadian employers to hire persons released from penitentiaries, Justice Minister St. Laurent said last night in the Commons.

Many employers did not want to hire anyone with a penitentiary record.

He was replying to J. R. MacNicol (PC—Toronto Davenport) who asked what was done to re-establish released convicts into society.

Mr. St. Laurent said at present he believed that all which could be done was to foster a spirit throughout Canada of aiding those released from penitentiaries.

It was an educational and moral viewpoint that everyone should attempt to foster. He believed that when anyone helped a former prisoner he was not only helping that person but society in general.

Hastings County Army Officers Awarded M.B.E.

Award of the Member of the Order of the British Empire to two Hastings County army officers and to one Prince Edward County officer was announced today by the Department of National Defence at Ottawa. The awards were included in a list of 486 to personnel of the Canadian Army in recognition of their services overseas.

Hastings County officers to receive the M.B.E. are Acting Captain Joseph J. Nayler of Madoc, and Honorary Captain Archibald S. McConnell of Stirling. The one Prince Edward County officer to receive the award was Captain George Edward Baldwin of Northport.

Included in the list of awards was the award of the O.B.E. to Lieut. Col. Frank L. Shipp of Napanee and the award of the M.B.E. to Captain Kenneth Kingston, Captain Allister MacRae and to Captain Hodgson Gillespie, all of Peterborough, and to WO. 1 John T. Westley of Cobourg.

Former rector of St. John's Anglican Church in Stirling, Captain McConnell only recently returned to Canada after serving with the Canadian Chaplain service overseas. Member of the 4th Division, 8th Light Anti-Aircraft Battery, he saw three years service overseas, two in England and the other twelve months with his unit in France, Belgium, Holland and Germany. He returned to Stirling Sunday night after crossing from Europe on the Queen Elizabeth.

Enlisted in 1942

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Nayler of Madoc, Captain Nayler was born 25 years ago and after receiving his education in Madoc public and high school enlisted in 1942. Training at Gordonhead, B.C., he received his commission there and after being stationed to Camp Borden proceeded overseas in June, 1943.

After service in England he was stationed with Headquarters Staff of the 1st Canadian Infantry Brigade in Italy as liaison officer and early in 1945 went to the western front where he saw service in Belgium and Holland. He received his captaincy while in Italy.

Returning to Canada in October he received his discharge and plans to enter business with the Nayler Garage in Madoc. Three uncles, Major E. T. Nayler, John Nayler and Percy Nayler saw service in World War I.

Fighting Flares In Western Java

By VERN HAUGLAND

Batavia, Dec. 13 — (AP) — Fighting flared at several points in central and western Java today as British authorities brought fresh reinforcements into the strife-torn island despite an Indonesian threat that such action would be answered with a general uprising.

The British command took over all main railway stations at Tandjong Priok and Batavia to facilitate local movement of supplies.

These developments came less than 24 hours after Premier Sutan Sjahrir of the unrecognized Indonesian republic said the Indonesians would resist with arms any further landings of British troops.

Dr. Hubertus J. Van Mook, acting governor general of the Dutch East Indies, postponed his intended departure for Holland for a possible renewal of peace talks with Indonesian leaders.

The most serious outbreak of fighting was near Buitenzorg, where British Indian troops called for tank support to repel Indonesians attacking a convoy. The attack took place in the same area in which another convoy suffered 85 casualties earlier this week.

In central Java, six British Thunderbolts bombed and strafed two small bridges southeast of Semarang and hammered Indonesian gun positions. New fires were reported at nearby Ambarawa, indicating that trouble had broken out there again.

New South Wales Coal Miners Agree To Return to Pits

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 14. (CP)—Hopes for a settlement of industrial disputes in strike-bound Australia mounted today with authoritative reports that New South Wales coal miners had agreed to return to the Pits next Monday.

The miners throughout the state struck Dec. 3 after government and management refusal to accept their demands for a 40-hour week, three weeks' vacation with pay and higher wages. They also were supporting iron workers at the Broken Hill Proprietary Company plant at Port Kembla, N.S.W., who stopped work in September in an effort to gain seniority rights for workers laid off through closing of war plants. Coastal seamen joined the walkout two days before the miners, demanding government intervention in the steel dispute.

Conferences between State and Federal labor ministers and representatives of management and Labor opened the way to settlement of the protracted disputes, which have left 600,000 workers idle

John Marcus Baddeley, New South Wales Mines Minister, was reported to have offered "virtual nationalization" of the mines in that state next year provided the miners resumed work

Another factor was believed to be a five-year plan under which the Federal government would buy and distribute all New South Wales coal from private owners.

A strong anti-strike stand by Prime Minister Chifley in a conference at Canberra with trade union heads last Tuesday was yet another development hastening settlement of the widespread walkouts.

Mr. Chifley demanded that the strikers settle their grievances by arbitration. Until they were prepared to do that, he said he would not consider their demands.

Even trade unionists were admitting today that the strikers have lost public sympathy and that without it their cause was lost. The coal, steel and seamen's strikes only involved 36,000 men but New South Wales coal provides heat and power for large areas of Australia and is a basic material in many industries. Consequently the coal stoppage threw out of work vast numbers in other occupations.

OUTLOOK BRIGHTENS

Washington, Dec. 13 (AP)—The job outlook in the United States brightened with indications there may be 3,000,000 fewer unemployed by spring than the government had figured. Government experts now believe that not more than 5,000,000 will be seeking work by March, instead of the 8,000,000 officially forecast in October.

3 HOUSES RAIDED

Montreal, Dec. 13 (CP)—Police of the Montreal morality squad last night raided three gambling houses and arrested 49 persons, including three keepers. The alleged keepers were retained in custody, while the found-ins were released on bail pending appearance in court today.

CANADA UNLIMITED — The Formative Years

First train Montreal to Toronto—By Jack Martin, O.S.A., C.P.E.

The Age of Steel Begins

NO LONGER WOULD THE TRAVELLER have to suffer the endless discomforts and dangers of the 5-day stagecoach trip from Montreal to Toronto, for in the '50's the age of steel had begun.

Mile by mile, the lines of steel had forged ahead, crossing valleys, bridging rivers, skirting lakes, until, in 1856 the first link in a mighty chain was forged. With wild celebrations all along the line the first clanking, fire-spitting locomotive, rocking over loose ended, inverted V-rails, swaying over wooden trestles, made the run from Montreal to Toronto. To the youngsters of the day, the railroad train with its autocratic conductor meant romance and adventure... distant places and heroic deeds.

To the visionary, to the men who built Canada, the railroad was the magic path of progress that was to bind these far-flung territories into a united whole... to enable all to benefit to the full by the interchange of resources in food and material between the East and the West. We have seen the results of these dreams and efforts... a nation immeasurably greater than was dreamed of a century ago... a nation that is destined to even greater things if we maintain the faith and courage of the pioneers.

We can build an even greater future for Canada Unlimited by keeping our Victory Bonds as a gilt-edged investment and buying more when we are asked to do so.

Mrs. Charles Leavens, of this city, will spend the Christmas season with her son, and daughter-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. C. H. Leavens, Picton.

Rev. Major Arthur Smith and Mrs. Smith were recent guests of Rev. W. G. Hope Swayne and Mrs. Swayne at the rectory of St. Mary Magdalene's Church, Picton.

Ken. J. Colling, sports editor of the Ontario Intelligencer, who has been a patient at Hamilton Sanatorium for some months, has been transferred to Kingston hospital.

LAW. Margaret Prouse, of Little Britain, who has recently returned from England, is visiting Mrs. Kathryn Hogg at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Henley, Victoria Avenue

Flt. Lt. Tommy Byrne, R.C.A.F., who has just returned from Britain is now at Ottawa, and will join the 'Muskox', as an engineering officer and will be stationed at Fort Churchill, from where the Arctic expedition will proceed northward.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Jones and Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Coutts, of Trenton; Mr. George Green, of Wellington, and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Young, of Bayside Sidney Township, attended the silver wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Sadler, of Frankford, recently.

The Rev. A. C. McCallum opened his home on Monday evening for a special meeting of the Bayside Woman's Missionary Society when plans were made for a Christmas Service to be held at White's United Church, Bayside, shortly. Part of the evening was spent in making out a program for the year 1946. Mrs. Mooney assisted by Mrs. Rutter served dainty refreshments and a social time was enjoyed

A shower was held on Tuesday, Nov. 27, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Baines, 5th Concession of Tyendinaga, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hunt, (nee Ruth Baines). The evening was spent in cards and dancing. Music was provided by the MacAvoy Brothers. The party was called to order and an address was read by Mrs. Hubble. The couple were presented with a set of dishes and numerous enamel utensils, for which they thanked their friends and invited them to visit them in their home in Trenton. Refreshments were served.

BEETHOVEN'S EARLY START

Ludwig von Beethoven made a public appearance as a pianist at the age of eight.

WEDDINGS

WAGAR—KINNER

The marriage took place in Galt, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John A. MacDonald, December 5, of Ann Catharine Kinner, Toronto, to Harry R. Wagar, Belleville, Rev. Maxwell C. Parr officiating.

The bride wore light grey afternoon frock, black hat trimmed with sequins, and corsage of orchids.

Mrs. MacDonald was matron of honor gowned in brown crepe with matching accessories, and corsage of Talisman roses.

Yellow and white chrysanthemums in tall standards intermingled with Autumn toned flowers and ferns to form a background for the bridal party.

After a buffet luncheon, a reception was held in the Blue room of the Hotel Iroquois, Galt.

BEARE—GEROW

A pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Dec. 5, at three p.m., when Leila Maude, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gerow, South John Street, became the bride of Richard George Beare, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Beare, Bleecker Ave. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. H. S. Graham before an altar decorated with ferns and 'mums. Mrs. Harold Denison, of Napanee, sang "Because", during the signing of the register. Mrs. John Deacon played the organ throughout the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked lovely in a gown with satin bodice and lace skirt with satin appliqued flowers. Her floor-length veil fell from a white satin headdress. She carried a bouquet of Talisman rosebuds.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Clare Williamson, who wore a gown of yellow, fashioned like the bride's and carried mauve 'mums. Her gloves, calot and shoulder-length veil were also yellow.

The bridesmaids were Mrs. Lorne Smart, in mauve, with yellow 'mums and Miss Jessie Forsythe in green with bronze 'mums.

The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. William Beare. Ushers were Mr. Walter Gerow, Jr., brother of the bride, and Mr. Jack Beare, brother of the groom.

Following a reception held at the home of the bride's parents, the coupde left on a wedding trip to Syracuse, Rochester, and Buffalo, the bride donning an ensemble of blue with matching feather cap, black accessories and seal coat. On their return they will take up residence at 170 George Street.

Out-of-town guests were present from Sarnia, Toronto, Stirling, Napanee and Corunna.

Women's Activities

HOLLOWAY W.A.

The ladies of Holloway Street United Church held their Christmas meeting on Thursday afternoon, in the Sunday School rooms of the Church with a good attendance. The meeting was conducted by Mrs. E. Shortt and the executive committee. All the secretaries reported on their work for the month which was very satisfactory. Mrs. Denton convener of the nominating committee brought in the slate of officers for the coming year. Rev. Mr. Perkins presented it to the ladies and it was accepted as follows:

President—Mrs. E. Shortt
1st Vice—Mrs. H. Ferguson
2nd Vice—Mrs. L. Buck
Recording Secretary—Mrs. F. Scott
Treasurer—Mrs. W. Oliphant
Correspondent Sec.—Mrs. W. Johns
Parsonage Com.— Mrs. C. Ostrom, Mrs. D. Hyde, Mrs. B. Moorman.
Visiting Com.—Mrs. A. Hitchon, Mrs. A. Sills, Mrs. Wicket, Mrs. R. Andrews, Mrs. R. Jose.
Flower Com.—Mrs. G. Dobbs, Mrs. B. Moorman, Mrs. H. Sager
V.O.N. Rep. Mrs. E. Moynes
Auditors—Mrs. A. Sills, Mrs. G. Dobbs.
Pianist—Mrs. H. Hubbs.

Mrs. M. B. Weese conducted the devotional period assisted by Mrs. W. Johns.

Mrs. Leavens read a Christmas legend about the Christmas rose. Mrs. Hitchon read a legend about the Hawthorn bush in St. Alban's England, and Mrs. Oliphant read the legend about Christmas in Bethlehem; how the Romans, Greeks and Armenians keep it on different dates. Refreshments were served by the executive.

CATHOLIC WOMEN'S LEAGUE

The Catholic Women's League held their monthly meeting on Dec. 10, at St. Michael's High School with Mrs. George Wilson presiding.

The 3rd Vice President, Mrs. Morrell, gave a report of the gratifying results of the supper held at St. Michael's auditorium, on Nov. 29. Mrs. McIntyre reported on cigarettes sent to the boys overseas. Mrs. Lowry read the correspondence. Mrs. Callaghan agreed to take charge of the sale of tickets for the national drawing. It was decided to give the usual Christmas gifts. After the meeting refreshments and a social hour were enjoyed.

TABERNACLE W.M.S.

The Christmas meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary and Woman's Missionary Society was held in the church parlors on Tuesday afternoon. The rooms were nicely decorated with a small Christmas tree and lighted candles. Mrs. Burgess, president of the Woman's Auxiliary, presided. Mrs. Froats, president of the Woman's Missionary Society, conducted the business period. Mrs. F. Houston sang a solo which was much enjoyed, Mrs. Youdale gave a very interesting reading. "A Farm House". The rest of the meeting was in the form of a radio broadcast over Stations W.M.S. and W.A. on "The Origin of Christmas Customs".

Dainty refreshments were served and a social half hour was enjoyed by all.

TRINITY W.M.S.

Madoc.—Trinity W.M.S., Madoc, enjoyed a splendid Christmas program at the parsonage on Dec. 6. The meeting was opened by Mrs. P. Caverley with a Christmas reading, "Each Christmas Challenges us to Make the World Ready for the Coming of The Prince of Peace".

A short business period was conducted with yearly reports presented by the Secretaries.

Due to the stand taken over the Japanese-Canadians question it was decided to send a resolution to the government asking for postponement of this Act.

A service of Christmas carols and readings was an inspiration to all, beginning with a story, "A Visit to Bethlehem", which was a beautiful description of the country of the Saviour. Candles were then lighted on a table which revealed a lovely arrangement of the Nativity and a poem, "Candle Light, Burning Bright", read, adding significance to the scene.

The Christmas passages from the Bible were read, depicting the story of Our Lord's Birth, beginning with the Old Testament prophecies. The lovely carols sung, interpreted this wonderful story anew. Solos graciously given by Mrs. W. Hulin and Mrs. A. Poulter delighted all and added much to the Christmas spirit of the meeting.

QUINTE W.I.

Mrs. John Donaldson, 2nd of Thurlow, opened her home for the Christmas meeting of the Quinte Branch of the Women's Institute. A large number of members and friends gathered to enjoy the hospitality so generously given.

Mrs. Atkins opened the meeting with singing of "Hark the Herald Angels Sing".

Mrs. Elmer Sandercock as convener for Education prepared the program. Mrs. Fred Parrott was leader for the afternoon.

Mrs. Chas. Hyde favored with two selections, "The Mince Pie", and "The Inventor's Wife".

All enjoyed the solo by Mrs. Haight, entitled "The Bells are ringing, 'Tis Christmas Morn".

The guest speaker for the afternoon was Mrs. Erle Denyes. The Christmas message, "Good Will at Christmas time and for all the Year", was stressed. In a very intereting manner she told of the journeys of her son, Drury. In the course of his duties overseas, he had the opportunity of visiting Cairo, Bethlehem, Galilee, and the Judean Hills. By his wonderful descriptions and his mother's interpretation, the listeners too travelled in thought and in spirit to the Holy Land. Mrs. Denyes displayed a table full of articles which Drury had sent home—Arab dress, ivory pieces, boxes inlaid with mother-of-pearl, shells, statues. Also there were many pictures and snapshots to illustrate the manuscript.

Every one was thrilled with this most interesting address and expressions of thanks to Mrs. Denyes, also to Drury, were given.

Miss B. Jones was called on and she expressed pleasure and profit from the lovely travelogue.

All joined in singing carols.

Refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed.

UNIONDALE W.I.

The regular meeting of Uniondale Institute was held at the home of Mrs. C. Copeland. The meeting opened by "All Sing Together", being put on the screen with the new movie projector being operated by Miss Nina Sine and the singing of several Christmas carols.

Miss Sine favored with two films, "Front Street, Canada", "Winter Sports", which were very interesting and much enjoyed.

Miss Wallace then took over the topic, "How We Are Governed".

A quiz conducted by Mrs. G. Halsall was won by Mrs. Geo. Burkitt.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. H. W. Rose, Mrs. B. Stickle, Mrs. G. Burkitt and Mrs. Grills.

Santa Claus Comes Early for Very Ill Child

Rochelle, Ill., Dec. 14 (AP) — Softly falling snow a lighted, Christmas tree, Christmas carols —and Santa Claus with a bushel of toys.

It was Christmas last night for Ronnie Johnson, four-year-old cripple, and residents of the community joined to make the event a joyous one for the boy who is suffering from an apparently incurable disease.

While the Girls' Glee Club from Rochelle high school serenaded Ronnie, Santa Claus arrived and dumped his pack of toys under the tree. Ronnie's brother, Dennies, 2 1-2, was equally excited. The boys' mother, Mrs. Arthur R. Johnson, a widow, held back her tears as she watched them.

Physicians have advised her that a bone cancer which set in after Ronnie fell and broke his right leg a year ago, may cause his death at any time. The leg was amputated, but a few weeks ago the cancerous condition reappeared and specialists have given up hope for his life.

RAWDON Y.P.U.

The Young People's Union convened at the Allan School on November 27, and was opened with quiet music played by Miss Lois Weaver.

The group decided to donate twenty dollars of their funds to Missions.

Miss Ruth Rose read a poem and Mr. Gordon Reid delighted with a piano solo.

Mr. Bert Jeffs read the story of the evening "The Legend of Nowassa", an Indian boy who became chief of his tribe through courage and persistence.

Miss Lois Weaver contributed a piano selection and the pastor conducted several games.

On Dec. 3, the Young People held a social evening at Mount Pleasant hall. Mr. John Reid read the Scripture lesson and following the worship period, all enjoyed several delightful games. The offering was $1.25.

Appetizing refreshments were served by the lunch committee and the pastor closed the service.

Children of Mary Hold Meeting

The December meeting of the Children of Mary was held on Wednesday evening at St. Michael's High School, with about sixty members in attendance — including the new sodalists received into the Children of Mary the previous Sunday. The meeting opened with Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament and the singing of "Mother Beloved", followed by the discussion of a study club outline on the altar ornaments of a Catholic Church. This discussion was led by the Sodality moderator, Rev. Sister Mary Lenore.

The reading of the minutes of the last meeting was followed by a report from the treasurer, Miss Mary Dunlopp. Miss Marie Doyle, chairman of the Publicity Committee, announced the completion of the second edition of the Sodality bulletin, the Comet. Copies distributed at the meeting met with the sincere enthusiasm of the members. The Apostolic Committee through its chairman, Miss Mary MacDougal, reported the satisfactory progress being made on the packing of Christmas boxes for children of the parish. Miss Mary Flynn of the Catholic Truth Committee made a favorable announcement concerning the sale of Catholic literature in the church, and thanked those who had contributed to its success.

Reverend Sister Mary Lenore then thanked each committee chairman and members for the commendable work accomplished thus far in the sodality year. Following this, each of the new members was introduced to the president, Miss Gertrude Lynch, and to the other sodalists. The meeting then adjourned to the Assembly Hall of the school where an enjoyable program had been planned. Those taking part in the entertainment were Mary Jean Hudon, Nora Flurey, Rose Marie Scanlon, Barbara Forhan, Violet Graham, and Agnes Marie O'Connor. Then followed the drawing for a large size Nashua wool blanket — the winner being Mrs. J. Boyd, Oak Street. The meeting was brought to a close by a sing-song of Christmas carols.

FORMER PUBLISHER DIES

Gananoque, Dec. 14 (CP) — James A. Thomson, former editor and publisher of the Gananoque Journal, died Wednesday at his home. About 20 years ago he sold his interests to the Gananoque Reporter and retired. Surviving besides his widow are two sisters, Mrs. E. Kendall and Miss L. Thomson, both of Guelph, Ont.

Fashion Flashes

SHEER BEAUTY marks evening fashions prepared for the Southland and for early Spring at home. That rare fabric, white silk chiffon, is used for an exquisite frock with airily full skirt gathered into soft folds at the hips. The bodice is embroidered with wide diagonal bands of brilliants, gold and pearls.

Handsome accessories dramatize informal and formal evening attire. Black satin makes an oblong bag that is beautifully trimmed with silver thread, pearls and shaded beads in the form of large roses and butterflies.

No need to be a musician in order to enjoy and wear the music jewelry now in the shops. Gold plated sterling wire, set with pearls, has been twisted into clefs, and music staffs. There are pins to represent drums, violins, trumpets and other instruments. The clef earring is right with any pin.

We presume that it's our duty to report fads as well as real fashions, so here goes! It appears that one shop is doing a land-office business with doeskin gloves having flared cuffs. On the cuff there is a picture of the wearer's dog painted from a submitted photo. But the glove is not "on the cuff", since the item sells for about twenty dollars.

A wide range in separate blouses and skirts offers an easy and inexpensive way to vary a wardrobe. Nice for evenings is an all-over sequined blouse that is equally good with a full-length or street-length draped skirt.

Growing in importance is the broad-brimmed casual hat of fine felts. Sometimes it assumes a dress-up air with the aid of jewelled bands or fur. One black felt casual achieves quite an air with an ermine crown band and ermine tails pulled through a gold ring at the side.

GRAND OLD COW IS NEARLY 26 YEARS OLD

As the result of a nation-wide "Oldest Cow Contest," the Aberdeen-Angus Journal has awarded first prize to a cow that will be 26 years old in March, and have her 24th calf shortly thereafter. This is believed to be the world's record for a living, producing bovine. The matronly animal is Elm-Branch Blackbird II, a pure-bred Aberdeen-Angus cow owned by H. A. Cunningham, of Pollock, Mo., whose daughter, Vonda, 16, entered the prize winning female in the contest. Since maturing this remarkable animal has averaged a calf each year. She is in good condition, and her owner says that he thinks she will pass the 30-year mark. The cow is pictured here with her 23rd calf.

Australia Facing Dismal Christmas

Sydney, Dec. 13. (CP)— With Australia facing its most dismal Christmas in recent times, three Labor Ministers sat down at a conference table in Melbourne today in a new effort to solve far-reaching strikes which have already thrown more than 500,000 workers into idleness.

They were Edward Holloway, Federal Labor Minister, P. J. Clarey, Minister in Victoria and head of the Australian Council of Trade Unions, and Hamilton Knight, Labor Minister in New South Wales. Mr. Clarey acted with the Prime Minister in earlier negotiations.

So severe has the situation become as a result of the strike that Canberra is a virtually blacked-out city. Prime Minister Chifley was reported working by lamplight.

Alarming Note

Works Minister John J. Cahill of New South Wales, sounded an alarming note today when he warned that there will be neither gas nor electricity at Christmas unless coal is obtained in the meantime.

A further approach to the Broken Hill Proprietary Company to settle the dispute is expected to result from the Ministers' conference.

Robert G. Menzies, Federal Opposition Leader, and former Prime Minister, declared in Canberra that the government should order the strikers to return to work and that legal action should be taken against the "chief wreckers" if the order was disobeyed.

The strikes have brought about an unprecedented restriction of common necessities in New South Wales, reducing living conditions to a level which may go below that of Europeans during the war.

Problem of Relief

With home cooking cut to one meal a day, electric lighting in homes banned after 9 p.m., and a black-out of all major cities in prospect because of the lack of coal and electric power, the deadlock has taken on a much more serious note than at first.

Another problem which will come to a head within a few days is government aid to idle workers. With prospects that 700,000 men and women in four States will be idle in a few days, the government is being asked for unemployment insurance which, only a fraction of the normal basic wage, is still a tremendous drain on the country's financial sources.

If public transportation and lighting systems exhaust coal supplies altogether, what will happen is anybody's guess.

Few, however, believe there will be any resort to violence.

The attention of practically the entire Commonwealth was given to the Canberaa conferences and early reports reaching here indicated that the strike leaders were maintaining the upper hand and were winning practically every point on which they insisted before ordering the return to work of their steel workers, miners and transport seamen.

Schoharie

Schoharie — Mr. and Mrs. Ross Parliament and girls and Mr. H. E. Leavitt spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Norman Leavitt.

Mr. Ralph McDonald and son of Wellington have been wiring the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Walters the past week.

Mrs. Clare Campbell spent the dinner hour on Thursday with Mrs. Mildred Benson.

Mrs. Jack Hubbs and Nancy spent Thursday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John McGee.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Tayler and Lynda spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Harold Walters and Homer.

Mrs. Will McGee entertained the Live Women's Circle on Thursday afternoon but owing to the slippery condition of the roads there was not as good an attendance as usual.

Miss Anna Stone who is a patient at Picton Nursing Home, still remains critically ill.

Boston, Dec. 13 —(AP)— The trawler Gale with a crew of 17 Boston men aboard was reported aground and in danger off Sable Island today in a message to the owners, General Seafoods Corporation, of Boston, but the men were said to be safe and a sister ship was standing by.

Hirohito's White Horse Coming To America

Tokyo, Dec 13. (AP)—The most controversial horse in Japan — White Frost, described as Emperor Hirohito's own mount—is going to the United States as the property of an American lieutenant.

The Japanese Racing Association today ceremoniously turned over the much-publicized white Arabian to Lieut. Dick Ryan, who discovered him five weeks ago in isolated but elaborate stables.

A change in army regulations announced today will make it possible for the lieutenant to take White Frost to the States—where he plans to exhibit the horse at veterans' hospitals, civic and charitable events. Under the new rules, soldiers may take home as pets, dogs, goats, horses, sheep, camels, oxen, antelope, giraffes and deer. Still banned are monkeys, honey bears, parrots, lovebirds and cockatoos.

If nothing goes amiss, White Frost will go aboard a ship at Yokohama within a few days when Ryan starts home for discharge.

Some Japanese sources deny that White Frost is the horse astride which Hirohito was seen in so many pre-war pictures. Others say he was too high strung to be ridden by the Emperor in review, was given to another member of the Royal Family and finally placed in the association stables, but most sources agree he did come from the royal stables—ridden or unridden by Hirohito.

Some 70,000 soldiers and sailors turned out to see White Frost at service rodeo in a Tokyo stadium.

THREE MEN CONVICTED

New York, Dec. 13 — (CP)— Three men convicted after a 22-day trial Thursday were awaiting sentence Jan. 9 on charges of conspiracy, grand larceny and unlawfully soliciting funds.

The men, Raymond Hirsch, 44; William Tyarks, 69, and Lyman Appleby, 37, comprised the so-called Community Mission of the American Catholic Orthodox Church, Inc. Testimony showed they obtained from $50,000 to $75,000 yearly from various donors, who thought they were contributing to charities.

Hockey's Big Seven

(By The Canadian Press)

Chicago Black Hawk marksmen strengthened their holds on scoring position in the National Hockey League scoring race as New York Rangers suffered a 7-4 defeat at the hand of Chicago on their home ice last night. Max Bentley scored twice and earned one assist to boost his total to 27 points and take a firmer hold on first place with 17 goals and 10 assists. Teammate Bill Mosienko was held scoreless but still retained his second place berth with 22 points made up of nine goals and 13 assists. Alex Kaleta, also of Chicago, was awarded a pair of assists to climb into sole possession of third place with 19 points while teammate Clint Smith scored twice to earn a fourth place tie with Toe Blake of Montreal who scored one goal as Canadiens dropped a 4-3 verdict to Toronto Maple Leafs. Both have 17 points. Another Black Hawk, Doug Bentley, earned a goal and an assist to take over sixth place with 15 points. Gaye Stewart of Toronto, Bill Cowley of Boston and Don Gallinger, also of Boston, are grouped in a three-way tie for seventh place with 14 points apiece. All three were scoreless last night.

Toronto Leafs Take Canadiens While Chicago Black Hawks Beat Rangers to Move Up

Sweeney Schriner Scores Winning Goal After Teams Deadlocked Twice

(By The Canadian Press)

Chicago Black Hawks, accumulating goals at a rate which may establish a National Hockey League record, poised a new threat to Montreal Canadiens today as the leadership race developed into a tense four-team combat.

Already possessed of a blanket monopoly on the individual scoring standings, Chicago padded their averages again last night by conquering New York Rangers 7-4 before 14,351 fans at Madison Square Garden.

Two-goal performances by Max Bentley and Clint Smith, high-scoring forwards, spurred Black Hawks to a third-period triumph which notched them past Detroit Red Wings into second place one point behind the leading Canadiens.

Montreal meanwhile dropped a 4-3 verdict to Toronto Maple Leafs at the crowded Forum. That result left the first four teams an equal distance apart, with Red Wings one point behind Chicago in third place and the fourth-spot Boston Bruins another half-game behind Detroit.

At New York Chicago greeted goalie Chuck Rayner with the same hostility they had shown in scoring eight goals apiece in two previous high-scoring performances, both of which marked the debut of a rival goalie.

Really Score Goals

When Frank McCool made his first start this season with Leafs, Chicago poured eight tallies behind him and a week later welcomed Frankie Brimsek of Boston back from war service with another eight-goal barrage.

Against Rangers last night, the Hawks trailed 3-2 after the first period, tied it up 4-4 entering the final and then applied the crusher on scores by Max Bentley, Smith and Robert (Red) Hamill. Other Chicago goals came from Doug Bentley and George Gee, Sudbury, Ont., athlete recalled this week from Chicago's Kansas City farm team.

Alex Shibicky and Lynn Patrick shared Ranger scoring with two goals apiece.

The Toronto victory at Montreal lifted Leafs two points ahead of the trailing Rangers, but the fifth-place Leafs still were three games back of Boston.

Goals by Joe Benoit and Elmer Lach gave Montreal a 2-0 lead before Bob Goldham's unassisted tally broke the ice for Leafs early in the second period. Jackie Hamilton then tied the count with another unassisted effort, but after the Leafs went ahead 3-2 on Billy Taylor's counter Toe Blake tied it again for Canadiens.

With the score knotted 3-3 entering the third period, Sweeney Schriner slammed home Taylor's rebound for the clinching score at 2:15.

Toronto, Dec. 14—(CP)— Tip for Today: The 1946 Canadian Open golf championship will be held at Montreal's Beaconsfield course, probably the first week in August if that doesn't clash with United States tourney dates. . . . Tropical but Topical: A horse named Santa Claus is running at Gulfstream Park in Florida. . . . Coach Dick Irvin of Montreal Canadiens says breaks have put the brakes on right wing Maurice Richard, who scored 50 goals last season to set a National Hockey League record and hasn't done a thing this season. "Maurice is going in as often as ever but his shots seem to be either off the mark or met by sensational stopping," Irvin told Bill (Niagara Falls Review) Gaynon. "But I'm not worrying as class always comes to the top."

With a Belt in the Back: Harry Mummery, who died Sunday in Brandon, Man., at 56 introduced the girdle in hockey. When opposing players bounced off his 275-pound frame and prods with sticks just glanced off his body, it was discovered Mummery literally "wrapped himself" in a rubber band about 12 feet long and 18 inches wide. The trainer stood at one end of the dressing room to hold the band and Mummery wound himself by revolutions across the floor.

Angus L. Erskine, 53-year-old former Canadian army boxing champion and president of a Toronto ornamental swimming team, is behind a campaign to raise funds to finance expenses of Canada's swimmers in the next Olympic games. He is a chairman of a Toronto committee formed by swimming clubs who hope to raise at least $3,000. "We've got $141 now . . . and hope to bring in all Ontario swimming clubs." Erskine, who learned to swim in Salonika, Greece, in the First Great War—he had to swim to survive — also hopes other Canadian provinces will get behind the movement.

MACDONALD BRIER COMPETITION TO BE HELD IN '46

Canada is Most Important Curling Country in World and Game Still Booming

By The Canadian Press

Resumption of Dominion Macdonald Brier play for the first time since 1942 will highlight the Canadian curling season as thousands of men and women returning from the services eagerly return to wielding the besom and stane in hundreds of clubs from coast to coast.

With almost 200,000 active curlers, Canada is the most important curling country in the world. A Canadian Press survey showed that despite curtailment of the game when travel restrictions were imposed, curling clubs taken over for use as barracks, and thousands of curlers joining the services, the 1944-45 season was reported one of the most successful by provincial associations.

A boom among juniors—particularly in the West—added many names to the ranks of enthusiasts of the roarin' game.

Bonspiels Continued

Provincial bonspiels continued throughout the war years and the famed International Gordon Medal matches between the Canadian branch of the Royal Caledonian Curling Club (Quebec) and the Grand National Curling Club of America went on without interruption, though travel restrictions forbade the usual home-and-home play and matches were played at Montreal in the last few years.

Most enthusiastic of the provinces—Manitoba, 10 times winner of the Macdonald Brier in 16 years of competition—is in for a record curling season and many clubs have been forced to turn aside hundreds of prospective members for lack of space.

The Manitoba Curling Association helped its more than 200 affiliated clubs, with an aggregate membership of over 6,000, raise $150,000 for the Canadian Red Cross during the war. Recognizing the interest younger curlers have displayed, the Manitoba Association has sponsored a junior bonspiel confined to high school players.

Montreal's 10 clubs and the 46 district clubs under the jurisdiction of the Canadian branch are building up a program rivalling those of prewar years. Features are the Royal Caledonian Trophy for granite play and the Royal Victoria Jubilee Trophy for irons play.

International Spiel

Another key event is the Governor General's trophy with the final between Quebec and Ontario rinks slated for Ottawa. Highlight of the Quebec City season will be the International Bonspiel Jan. 21-27.

In many Ontario centres clubs that felt the "pinch" of the war years rapidly are getting back on their feet and preparing for elimination 'spiels to select rinks to carry Ontario's colors to Saskatoon for the Dominion championships.

All Ontario clubs predict record seasonal play and new artificial ice sheets have been laid down in some Northern Ontario cities. At Woodstock curling is making a reappearance after a lapse of 35 years.

Saskatchewan has more than 6,000 active curlers registered, but lack of sufficient ice this year may curtail play. Aside from the Macdonald Brier play scheduled for Saskatoon in March, two major provincial 'spiels are slated.

Alberta—Divided into two sections governed by the Alberta Curling Association and the Southern Alberta Branch of the Royal Caledonian Curling Club—has seen an increase in participation year by year and expects a record 1945-46 season.

Cancelled last year, the New Brunswick Bonspiel will be resumed this season. Membership has increased greatly and three new clubs have been formed in the province.

Lack Artificial Rink

"Early bird" bonspiels opened activities at many clubs in Ontario and "bigger and better" season was predicted generally. Many centres lack artificial ice which holds up play until late in December, but despite this handicap there is no lack of enthusiasm

For the first time in its history the Sault Ste. Marie Curling Club started months ahead of previous seasons when sheets of artificial ice were installed. The Sault club, anticipating many new members, announces the fact that instructors are on hand to aid beginners.

Membership at Cochrane reached a new high last year and great pre-season interest was shown this year. Here as in the west curling is becoming a growing interest with high school boys. The North Bay club starts its new season with one load off its shoulders. Last spring, at the conclusion of the club's most successful year, the mortgage on the clubhouse was burned.

The McIntyre Curling Club at Timmins expects membership to zoom over the 500-mark, while the Pamour and South Porcupine clubs also are anticipating a banner year. All Timmins district clubs feature morning games for night shift employees of district mines.

Many Veterans Back

Probably hardest hit by the war, the Grey Curling Club of Owen Sound still confines its activities to the civic auditorium since the Dominion government took over its clubhouse ice for use as an armory. Though the auditorium is equipped with artificial ice making early bonspiels possible, the curlers find no time available for practice.

More than 100 years old, the Galt Curling Club has many veterans back on its roster and membership has been limited since only five sheets are available for play. A 20 per cent membership increase is expected by the Guelph Curling Club.

The Kitchener-Waterloo Granite Curling Club is sponsoring a school series among other innovations this year. High school boys will be given the ice four afternoons a week and experienced curlers will supervise the play.

Brantford's first club in 35 years will have about 150 members. The new club was founded by Eddie Gould, well-known golf official, who received the support of all the city's enthusiastic curlers.

Peterborough club cannot accommodate the many men and women who wish to curl and a long waiting list is being added to daily. Handicapped by the lack of artificial ice, the Brockville Curling Club has carried on activities on Brockville Ontario Hospital ice.

Both Hamilton clubs—The Thistle and Victoria—anticipate record seasons and record membership. The Chatham club has spent more than $1,000 in repairs and plans to sponsor its first 'spiel of the year later this month.

Trainer for Mrs. Elizabeth Graham's Maine Chance farm and a veteran of the turf for 50 years, Tom Smith is scheduled to appear before the New York State Racing Commission and the Jockey Club today to answer to the charge of administering a drug to Magnific Duel at Jamaica track Nov. 1. Smith, who is identified with the year's most successful stable, has protested his innocence.

Smith and other trainers have questioned the legality of the rule which holds a trainer solely responsible for doping even though he is absent from the track.

Two name players suffered mishaps yesterday when en route yesterday to Fort Worth, Tex., for the opening today of the $10,000 Open golf tournament. Byron Nelson was uninjured when his automobile turned over three times on a nearby road while Harold (Jug) McSpaden had to make a forced landing in a pasture in his private plane. Unscathed, McSpaden later landed on No. 1 fairway at the course.

Joe Louis, world heavyweight champion, scored an easy three round decision over Big Boy Brown of Flint, Mich., in an exhibition bout before 5,000 fans at Vancouver last night. It was the last exhibition for the Brown Bomber before he defends his title against Billy Conn next June, and completed a tour of western U. S. and Canadian cities. Louis now goes into training in Indiana. Louis weighed 210 and Brown 246.

Still in the uniform of a U. S. Naval Lieutenant, Mel Jones was in Montreal yesterday in connection with preliminary details for the handling of Montreal Royals in the International Baseball League of whom he has been appointed general manager.

After discharge from the United States armed forces, Tony Graboski of the N.H.L. Canadiens has applied for reinstatement as an amateur hockey play with the intention of joining Ottawa Senators.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

LESSON NO. 865

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

You may have troubles enough figuring out a strip or a squeeze. So, if you muff a smother play that springs up out of nowhere, you may charge it up to lack of practice.

Give yourself a workout in this deal:

Sit south as the declarer at a small slam contract of six spades. West starts out with an opening lead of a heart. With the king and queen in five outstanding trumps, expect to lose a trick; maybe two.

If you can get the unseen trumps out of the way and still have control, your other suits are no worry. Your diamonds and clubs are equal to the task of taking care of the side suit tricks.

Trump the first heart led in dummy and lead the nine of spades from there. When east does not cover, drop a small trump on it in south. West plucks that trick with his lone queen.

Another heart comes from west. Dummy trumps that, too, and the last dummy trump is led. East ducks it for the second time and the south hand takes in that trick with the spade ten.

West shows out of spades on the second trump round. So, it is known that east has left the king and one trump. With no trump left in dummy to lead through east, a smother must be considered.

Lead the south diamond queen and overtake in dummy with the king. Return the dummy diamond ace and sluff the last south heart. Now keep top dummy diamonds coming through east.

If east trumps a diamond, south will overtrump and then pick up the last east trump. Thereafter, dummy gets in with the club ace and you can take the rest with diamonds and clubs.

East may refuse to trump a diamond until he has nothing else. If so, merely keep pouring out clubs on your dummy diamonds.

Maybe east should see a doctor about it.

AT THE CAPITOL — There's romance in the eyes of Marie Harmon and Jimmy Wakely in this scene from Monogram's tuneful western, "Springtime in Texas," now at the Capitol Theatre. The added hit "Sensations of 1945," features Eleanor Powell, Woody Herman and Cab Calloway.

TULSA OILERS BEATEN BY 7-4

(By The Canadian Press)

Ray Powell, hard skating Ranger centre, led Fort Worth to a 7-4 victory over the Tulsa Oilers at Tulsa last night. With a hand in four Fort Worth goals, the first two and last two, Powell was the spark plug of a Ranger offensive that swept the tired Oilers off their feet.

Fort Worth moved into a 4-0 lead in the first period and completely outplayed the home team. The visitors then counted one, Tulsa two in the second. In the third two quick goals for the Oilers placed them 5-4, but they could not penetrate the Ranger defence after that.

The Rangers counted two late goals to make their lead secure, with Powell getting the last one on a solo effort. Powell's first three points for the night were on passed to scoring team-mates.

Nelson Little, Fort Worth goalie, was injured in the third period when struck on the back of the head by a stick during a flurry about his cage.

A crowd of 2,500 saw the game.

New Haven Eagles Spring Big Upset

(By The Canadian Press)

New Haven Eagles, who are buried deep in the Eastern Division cellar, sprang the biggest upset of the American Hockey League season last night when they trounced the western section leaders, Indianapolis Capitals, 9-3.

Playing before a slim home crowd of 1,500 fans, the Eagles ran up a five-goal lead before Caps could reply and were never threatened thereafter. It was the only game on last night's A.H.L. schedule.

Joe Bell led the New Haven scorers with three goals while Kenny Kilrea notched two. The others went to Norm Larson, Jack Milford, George Pargeter and Paul Corteau. Jerry Brown,, Rosy Rossignol and Cliff Simpson were the Indianapolis marksmen.

The game was enlivened in the third period by a fight between Scotty McPherson of the Eagles and Les Douglas of the Caps. Both battlers were banished with Majors and Yves Nadon, New Haven goalie who took a swing at Douglas in the excitement, was fined $25.

British Empire Medal Awarded Pte. R. Fontaine

By WILLIAM BOSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aurich, Germany, Dec. 14 —(CP Cable)— The British Empire Medal was awarded today to Private Robert Louis (Tubby) Fontaine of Newmarket, Ont., for more than two years driver with the Canadian Public Relations unit. But if Tubby or any of the officers who recommended him asked why he was "gonged" they would be at a loss for a specified reason.

Tubby is just one of the guys and the number of close shaves he had would make the average infantry's hair curl. But whether his charges were prudent or thoughtless of personal risk, Tubby always went with them. wherever the stories were, and always brought them back again.

In every campaign that the 1st Canadian Division and then the 1st Canadian Corps waged, Fontaine went into forward areas, as often as nine or ten times a day. Tubby grinned his way through Sicily and Italy and finished the war in Holland with the 1st Corps.

News of his decoration was received with satisfaction by old timers still with the Public Relations unit. They know the decoration isn't Tubby's alone. He just typified the gang — fellows like Hank Price of Calgary; Will Gilbert of Woodstock, Ont.; Noel Marion of Gatineau Point, Que.; J. A. McGregor of North Sydney, N.S.; Bert Thompson of Edmonton; A. T. Whittle of Kirkland Lake, Ont., and Davie King of Burlington, Ont., who was wounded at Anzio in Italy.

For all too long they labored without recognition. Through Tubby's B.E.M. their task finally was recognized for the job of work it was.

Union Members May Decide On New Vote Sat.

Windsor, Dec. 14 (CP)—The question of a second vote on the government-sponsored plan for ending the Union security strike by Local 200 of the United Automobile Workers of America (C.I.O.) is scheduled to go before the union membership Sunday.

Upon a show of hands by the strikers will hinge prospects of putting an end by Christmas to the strike at the Ford Motor Company of Canada plant where 10,000 workers have been idle since Sept. 12.

The back-to-work plan is the negotiation-plus-abritration formula 5,000 striking workers rejected 52-48 on Nov. 29. At that time, an additional 3,500 members of Local 200 did not vote.

The argument that the previous vote was not fully representative of the union membership has been the strongest one advanced by union leaders who have favored taking a second ballot.

If union members approve, union leaders are expected to fix two days next week on which votes may be cast. Ballot boxes will be placed at union headquarers and at all sub-offices, and qualified union members will have from early morning until well into the evening on both days to mark their ballots and deposit them.

Procedure Differs

This procedure differs from that used Nov. 29. At that time, voting followed a meeting in the Windsor arena. Union members voted as they left the building. Later complaints were raised that the arena was too small to accommodate all those who wished to vote.

If Sunday's membership meeting approves voting again, the plan to be submitted provides for a return to work and negotiation and arbitration on all points in dispute.

It also calls for appointment of an umpire of labor relations who will see that the strikers are returned to work without discrimination, and for an arbitrator to whom will be referred all points in dispute not settled by negotiation. If the arbitrator finds it possible to do so, he is to give his decision within five days after the start of arbitration.

Thus to the arbitrator will be left the major issue in the strike—the union's demand for a union shop and a check-off.

On other points such as hospital insurance, two weeks' vacation with pay, increased rates of pay for overtime, creation of various plant committees, injury allowance, promotion or demotion and grievance procedure, an agreement will be reached by negotiation in some instances and by arbitration in others.

The arbitrator is to be chosen for the Supreme Court of Canada.

PAPERS GET REPORTS BY RADIO

Halifax, Dec. 12 —(CP)— Two newspapers in Cape Breton — cut off from communication by a storm that tore down telegraph and telephone lines — were supplied with highlights of the world news through the co-operation of the CBC.

Unable to send the Sydney Post-Record and Glace Bay Gazette the regular news reports over telegraph wires, The Canadian Press arranged with the CBC to broadcast the main news items to the Cape Briton newspapers at dictation speed.

PICTON

Warden Cleave Host at Annual Warden's Banquet

Picton, Dec. 14 — Warden H.A. Cleave, reeve of Bloomfield, was host to 140 friends at a banquet at the Royal Hotel, Wednesday night. Included were members of County Council, Bloomfield village council, town and county officials. A turkey dinner was served.

F. L. Ward, K.C., town clerk, ably presided as toastmaster. Dr. S. H. Roblin, in proposing the toast to the Warden, referred to the high calibre of the men who had held the Wardenship, and this tradition has been maintained by Mr. Cleave. In reply, the Warden referred to the special privilege of occupying this chair during Victory year, and felt that there is a challenge to do all possible for returned servicemen. He expressed appreciation of the co-operation given by council members and the many friendships he had made during his municipal career.

His Honor Judge W. S. Lane proposed the toast to Municipal institutions, expressing the thought that democracy at its best was found in municipal government. He urged that candidates of a high order be selected. In reply, Major G. T. Walmsley, K. C.; Crown Attorney, warned councils against letting control of county affairs slip from their grasp, to that of a central government. He felt local councils are close to the people and know their needs.

Proposed Toast

Mayor G.N. McKibbon proposed the toast to Local Municipalities. He referred to Prince Edward County as progressive, citing its road program, its being the first bovine T. B. free area, and its new program, a Public Health Service Unit. In responding, the Reeves and Deputy Reeves of the County spoke in high terms of Warden Cleave and of the spirit of harmony which had existed.

B. R. Leavens recalled attending a warden's banquet 67 years ago. James deC. Hepburn, M.L.A., said municipal councils are ideal form of government.

Splendid Program

Entertainment was of a high order, and was provided by H. J. McFarland. Guest artists were Madame Jean Pengelly, soprano soloist, Sigmund Steinberg, violinist with Toronto Symphony Orchestra, Heber Mulock, tenor soloist, with Gladys Burslen and Norman Nicholson, pianists, all of Toronto. Red Newman was in charge and sang several songs for which he is famed.

HOCKEY SQUAD TO HOLD MEETING

The Belleville Redmen intermediate hockey squad will hold a special meeting at the Y.M.C.A. tonight, it was announced by team officials early today. A number of problems will be discussed and it is urgent that every player and official be on hand. A practice has been called for Saturday night at the Hume Arena.

Officials also announced that the Kingston Locos, intermediate "A" opposition to the local team will play an exhibition game here with the Redmen on Friday, Dec. 21.

The World is Like That

By Kathleen Norris

CHAPTER 15

"Stupid, to disappoint the poor kid!" she ended the conversation pityingly. "I only want to warn you, Miss Britton, that I am her mother's closest friend, and she may not find this so very amusing. I don't mind tonight, of course; it's just a lot of children, but believe me you'll merely drive the child to some silly or desperate step! I know that blood!

"And I know your type, too," Jocelyn thought, hanging up the receiver. "And if any more women tell me they're the Countess's closest friend I'll believe she was pretty popular! I wonder how far these dear old friends would go if Norma were somebody's penniless niece just on here for a visit!"

The next day was the great day that preceded the Brice fancy-dress dance. It began with hysteria on Norma's part because her costume, when duly filled with fish and water, proved far too heavy for her to support, and frantic costumers were at the house by eleven o'clock to see what could be done. The scaly great fish head was perfect; the mermaid's shining plated tail was perfect, but the glass tank was too heavy. Norma cried bitterly in despair, and was for asking Jane Trent for Jane's costume. "She must have thousands!" she whimpered, when Jocelyn shook her head at this idea. No; she mustn't spoil Jane's fun. There must be some lovely fancy dress in Norma's wardrobe that could be furbished up for this occasion?

Oh yes; Norma had costumes. But she hated them all; she hated this silly dance; she hated everybody! Feverishly she telephoned in one direction for a friend's snake suit, all diamond stripes and scales; failing that, telephoned to another friend to borrow a "Miss America" outfit consisting only of a span's length of bathing suit and silver brassieres. Discouraged in these attempts she flung herself on her bed, refused her luncheon, and sobbed.

At this point the costumer arrived with a new idea; a light harness, a fish tank cunningly made of a transparent bowl within a bowl; no glass at all, only a mica-like material almost as light as paper.

"It may break!" Norma protested, smiling through her tears.

"But how delightful if it does!" exclaimed Charles van der Lipp enthusiastically. Charles and other friends had been coming and going all day; they had sympathized deeply with Norma's trouble, consumed endless trays of sandwiches and cocktails, and were now ready to rejoice with her in a brighter hour.

A car was sent to San Francisco for the special purpose of collecting forty Japanese goldfish with wide feathered tails. The cost of all this appalled Jocelyn. But there was no one she could ask about it; Norma's father was away in Yosemite; her grandmother had been out playing poker until half past three that morning, and as she too intended to go to the fancy-dress ball, she was not to be disturbed until six in the afternoon.

Twenty youngsters were to dine at the house in simple evening dress, some afterward going to their own homes to dress, one or two dressing at Hill Acres. Jocely had a firm word with Norma about cocktails before dinner, but most of the others indulged freely, and it was nine o'clock before they sat down at the table.

Even after that they made no hurry. They played bridge; they called the local moving-picture house to ask what was playing. The time between half past ten and half past twelve must somehow be whiled away; no one wanted to be early at the dance. But eventually it was time for Norma to go upstairs to take off her gauzy silver-and-white dinner dress, and get into the fishy disguise. When they started, Riggs, the underbutler, mounted seriously up to the front seat of the car, with the goldfish tank held steadily in his hand; Jocelyn manoevred Norma, with her scales, tail, empty transparent bowl, into a jump seat and managed to insinuate herself in behind her. Charles had left them half an hour earlier to dress; they were to pick him up.

When he come down to the car at the Van der Lipps' pretentious gate a mile away, he and Norma began to laugh so violently at the impossibility of his getting into the car that for a while there was no prospect of getting started at all. But eventually Charles, who represented an artichoke with Hollandaise sauce, hung on, half in and half out, and driving carefully, not to spill the fish or dislodge Charles, the chauffeur eventually landed them safely at the Brice mansion. It was close upon midnight now, but they were not the last; cars were wheeling about in the black winter night, and the first horns were blasting in the New Year.

There was another delay while they stood in the drive and Charles and Riggs and Jocelyn, from pitchers brought along for the purpose, poured water from a garden faucet into the circular tank that surrounded Norma's slender body. Then everything was ready; they advanced up the steps, and Jocelyn was quite unnoticed in the uproar of enthusiasm that greeted the artichoke and the fish bowl when they went in.

As with every fancy dress party, this initial outburst of admiration exhausted the interest shown in the fantastic apparel of the latest arrivals. Other extraordinary effects were coming in; a rajah on an elephant with six dancing girls, a Popeye nine feet high, Snow White and all her dwarfs. In no time Norma was merely one of a pushing throng laughing, good-natured enough, but too much crowded together to notice anything, except individual comfort and appearance. The fish bowls were crushed together, and the water in such danger of spilling and ruining a hundred stately gowns and period slippers that Norma was easily persuaded by Jocelyn to slip home with her, hurry into exquisite evening wear fresh from Paris, and return to the dance to enjoy comfort and the consciousness of her own beauty undisguised.

Norma paid her respects to the hostess and was greeted by some old friends. Then Jocelyn, who was moving inconspicuously about the revels, noticed to her uneasiness that the girl was drinking cocktails with anyone and everyone, and in the special company of Pauncefoote Sears was growing excited and noisy. There was nothing to be done about it; her grandmother was there, clicking chips in the comparative quiet of a card room, snatching cards with agitated hands, groping for the cigarette or the drinking that was always at her side. If anyone should check Norma it was Mrs. Fordyce; but Mrs. Fordyce had lost heavily the night before, and was determined to get her own back tonight, and her grand daughter's activities interested her no whit.

It was about three o'clock when Charles van der Lipp found Jocelyn in the dimly lighted conservatory. She had been wondering if she might not approach the excited, perspiring, smoke-scented, liquor-scented child who was her charge with the suggestion that it would be a good idea to go home. She was wearied beyond bearing with the whole scene; the costumes that had cost so much care and time and money had lost all their appeal; the brimming glasses of champagne seemed to have been circulating through the milling and dancing crowds forever.

"Miss Britton, could I speak to you a minute? Would you step out here?" Charles said. Jocelyn looked at him in surprise his tone was serious. She had liked this ridiculous boy from the first, even though her first view of him had been the prejudicial one of finding him sprawled in his dirty golfing clothes on Norma's bed; she followed him into a sort of backwater of hallway, and as she saw his expression she laid a hand on his arm.

"Charles, something's wrong? What is it?"

"I'm a skunk for telling on them," he said unhappily. "But it's Norma. She's an awfully decent little kid, and I kind of hate to see her get in wrong."

"Where is she? What's she done?" Jocelyn's thoughts leaped at once to drunkenness; Norma had been fairly on her way to it when she had last seen her. Two-thirds of the youngsters in the room were by this time silly with drink, and some of the boys had frankly, as the girls expressed it amusedly, "passed out."

"She and Peggy Wilson and Ponny Sears and Larry Bickford said they wanted to go down to Santa Barbara and swim and have breakfast. They said they all felt too hot."

"Santa Barbara!" Jocelyn said in a sharp whisper. "Why, they couldn't! That's three hundred miles!"

"They went off about ten minutes ago in Larry's car. They were all laughing, and they said they'd get there about eight."

Jocelyn looked distractedly about. "Where's her grandmother? I must see her grandmother!"

"I went to find her first. But they said she felt kind of sick and they'd been giving her lemon sours, and they thought she'd gone home."

"Charles, don't say anything about this, will you until we know? They may be around here somewhere. Let's look for them everywhere. And then I'll go home and see if Norma isn't there. She was terribly tired and — and excited."

"I know," Charles said wretchedly again. "And she's such a nice little kid."

As miserable a half-hour as Jocelyn had even known ensued. She threaded the thinning crowds. Norma was nowhere to be seen. She could not see either of the Sears boys or the Wilson girl either.

She found her coat and went home, dreading to go up to Norma's room for fear of destroying her last hope, knowing well that she would find what she did find there; quiet lights, perfect order, Norma's bed turned down to display luxuriously pale pink linen sheets, and Mattress half asleep before the fire.

Jocelyn went on to Mrs. Fordyce's room. But that was empty, too, and Mrs. Fordyce's maid reported that someone had telephoned for her mistress that she would stay that night with Mrs. Royce.

Back in her own room, desperate, Jocelyn stood perfectly still for a long minute. Presently she said aloud: "I may be a fool." But with rapidity and decision she went back to Norma's room. It was now four o'clock in the morning. After a brief talk with Mattress, Jocelyn returned to her room, changed her clothes, put on her heaviest coat. Mattress had a packed suitcase ready; she gave the maid only a final warning about not alarming the house, not saying anything to anyone until she had further directions, and descended to a waiting taxicab.

"Mills Fields," she said to the driver.

"What plane are you taking, lady?" the man asked. "I don't think you can get one now until seven."

"There'll be a plane waiting. I ordered one," Jocelyn said briefly. "Don't lose any more time, please. I have to be in Santa Barbara at eight o'clock."

• • •

Jocelyn had never been in a plane before. There was one bad moment; the moment in which she climbed in and was advised to buckle her belt about her. Then all other sensation than one of pleasure and excitement and amazement disappeared. To rise on a great east sweep into the dark; to see the lights wheel and lessen below her and the sleeping world rush backward under the last of the moonlight, was all sheer delight.

There was a soft pillow under her head and a warm rug over her. Jocelyn was tired; she was almost immediately asleep. When she was roused by the pilot's voice it was to a second of alarm again.

"What is it? We're coming down?"

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 14. (CP)—Industrial stocks gained .44 and other groups were narrowly lower at noon on Toronto Stock Exchange. Volume was small at 970,000 shares for the first three hours

Trade in Senator featured the Gold Group. It advanced 23 cents to $1.50 on the news that the drill had cut an important ore body in the lower level. Little Long Lac, Nib Yellowknife, Malartic Gold Fields, Hedley-Mascot, Bevcourt, Surf Inlet, Giant and Chesterville were gainers against losses for McKenzie, O'Brien, Eldona, Dickenson, Osisko, MacDonald and Berens River.

Changes were narrow in the Base Metal list. Noranda and Sherritt were down moderately.

Utilities, Foods, Papers and Senior Oils showed a margin on the up side.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, Dec. 14 — (AP) — Rails rallied the stock market selectively today although there was a notable lack of steam on the comeback and many leaders refused to participate.

Carriers came to the fore after an early mild sell-off but dealings, from the start, were among the slowest of the past several months. While there was little follow-through on the upward reversal, plus signs of fractions to a point or more were well distributed near the fourth hour.

Better performers included St. Paul (when issued) Common, at a new high; N. Y. Central, Eastern Air Lines (up about 8 on a few sales), Chrysler, U. S. Steel and Youngstown Sheet. Backward most of the time were General Motors, Woolworth, American Telephone, Westinghouse, Goodrich and Texas Co.

Canadian Pacific and Lake Shore maintained a firm balance with gains of 1/4 and 1/8 respectively at mid-day. Distillers Seagrams fell one point while Hiram Walker and Dome Mines each eased 1/2.

PURCHASED TWO SHIPS

Buffalo, Dec. 14 — (AP) —The National Gypsum Company has purchased two 10,000-ton ships from the Canadian government to bring gypsum rock from its quarries in Nova Scotia, to its Atlantic seaboard plants, president Melvin H. Baker said last night.

Wallbridge

Wallbridge — After the opening service at the church Sunday evening, Rev. Mr. Hillis showed slides of the Alaskan Highway, where Rev. D. Amos, Bridge St., Belleville, was a chaplain. Besides views of the highway there were views of the places where Rev. Mr. Amos held services, got in touch with the men. The views were very interesting and showed that where men are gathered at work, the church follows them, trying to win them for Christ and His way of living.

Deputy German Military Police Chief Says Six Million Jews Were Killed in Camps, Ghettos

Nurnberg Germany, Dec. 15—(CP)—A grim review of Nazi bloodlust revealing the murder of 6,000,000 Jews in concentration camps and the Ghettos of Eastern Europe has been put on record at the war crimes trial in an affidavit by Dr. Wilhelm Hoettl, deputy of Ernst Kaltenbrunner, the German military police chief.

"Approximately 4,000,000 Jews were killed in the various extermination camps while an additional 2,000,000 met death in other ways," said the affidavit, presented yesterday by Dr. Hoettl to the tribunal trying Hitler's 21 top henchmen. Most of the victims were shot by operational squads of security police during the Russian campaign.

Hoettl told the tribunal that Adolf Eichman, chief "Jew catcher" in the Secret Police, informed him an estimated 6,000,000 Jews had been disposed of during a conversation in 1944, when Eichman began to fear that he would have to pay for the "millions of Jewish lives" on his conscience.

At the close of yesterday's session the trial was adjourned to Monday, after Justice Robert H. Jackson obtained permission to present the United States case against six Nazi organizations—a proceeding which he said may affect the fate of a large number of individual Germans.

The chief American prosecutor said he intended to devote all the time remaining before the Christmas recess to evidence against the Reich cabinet, the Nazi party's leadership corps, the SS (Elite Guard), Gestapo, S. A., and the High Command and general staff of the German armed forces.

Ingersoll Man May Enter Boat In Gold Cup Race

Detroit, Dec. 15 — (CP)—Purchase of motorboat racing engines by Ernest Wilson of Ingersoll, Ont., led to speculation here that he will enter a Canadian challenge for both the Harmsworth Trophy and the Gold Cup in 1946 with his son, Harold, at the wheel.

At Ingersoll, the elder Wilson was reported out of town on a business trip and the son said he had "no comment."

It was reported here that Wilson had received four Packard-Marlin motors for racing hulls and that they would make up a total of 9,600 horsepower if placed in one craft. That would be 2,400 horsepower more than Gar Wood, noted United States racer of pre-war years, had in his Miss America X, last defender of the Harmsworth Trophy.

Canada never has had an entry in the Harmsworth event although the younger Wilson nearly won the Gold Cup race in Detroit in 1939 while driving Miss Canada. In the same year the younger Wilson won the President's Cup at Washington in Miss Canada.

Under the rules of challenging the United States, and the defending titlist, Wood, for the Harmsworth Trophy, Wilson has until next Jan. 1 to file a 1946 entry. Previous Harmsworth challenges have been made by British boats.

The American Power Boat Association under new rules this year made identical specifications for both Harmsworth and Gold Cup boats. All previous restrictions were lifted and the craft may have unlimited power with a hull of no more than 40 feet.

TOO MANY EGG LIFTERS

St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 15 (AP)—The 60th. Annual Minnesota Poultry Show opened yesterday with a headache for officials trying to save the 100 dozen eggs the show birds lay daily. With retail egg prices upwards of 55 cents a dozen, Don Devenney, secretary, said he expects "egg-lifters" to be in abundance. Even in normal egg-price times, he added, the eggs are picked out of the pens as fast as biddy lays them.

DRIVE CONTINUES TO CLEAR PAPER FOR PROROGATION

House Gives Quick Support to Consider Plan For Selected Immigration

By GEORGE KITCHEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 15—(CP)—Members of the Commons, inching toward prorogation which may be reached today, found time last night to give quick support to a suggestion that a parliamentary committee consider a plan of selected immigration to help populate Canada's broad and sparsely-settled acres.

The suggestion was made by Lt.-Col. David Croll (L—Toronto Spadina) as the House was considering estimates for the Mines and Resources Department, which handles immigration matters. A Halifax-dozen members expressed agreement.

Resources Minister Glen said the government had not drawn up any long-range immigration policy because its first duty was the repatriation of servicemen and their families. Any policy decided upon would be subject to ratification by parliament.

Following the immigration discussion and the passage of the mines and resources estimates, the House turned to consideration of supply for the Transport Department, sitting past the 11 o'clock adjournment hour until a few minutes after midnight in the drive to clear the order paper for prorogation.

It was understood efforts were being made to complete work tonight and hold the formal prorogation ceremony Monday.

Estimates to be Passed

Still to be passed when the House rose early today were estimates for the Departments of Fisheries, Labor, National Defence, External Affairs, Finance, Health and Welfare, Public Works and Post Office and supplementary estimates of $21,931,048 tabled yesterday by Finance Minister Ilsley. The supplementaries brought total estimates for the 1945-46 fiscal year to $1,045,552,645.

London Combed With Precision To Apprehend 10,000 Army Deserters

London, Dec. 15—(CP)—An "army" of military and civilian police early today concluded an unprecedented city-wide manhunt in an effort to apprehend 10,000 British, United States and Canadian army deserters and smash a record crime wave.

Striking suddenly at 8 p. m., London policemen aided by military police of three countries, estimated by one newspaper at about 6,000, sealed metropolitan London in a gigantic dragnet and combed the city with the precision of a military invasion.

The check continued until daybreak, when police stations were jammed with hundreds unable to satisfy officials as to their identity. Newspapermen, checking the arrests, repored from 500 to 800 persons had been brought in during the first five hours of the roundup.

Searchers blocked the principal artery streets and bridges, then swooped down on London's theatres, restaurants, bars, night clubs, hotels, railway stations and other night gathering spots.

The net was drawn tightest in the area around the main intersection of Piccadilly Circus. Traffic chaos gripped that busy sector as police swept in on hundreds of vehicles and poured out of subway entrances.

Street traffic and pedestrians were halted. All persons were required to produce identity cards. Those who could were given printed forms to display and were permitted to continue.

Maximum Prices For Dressed Turkeys and Geese Sold Retail Till Dec. 31 Stated by Board

Ottawa, Dec. 15 —(CP)— Maximum prices for dressed turkeys and geese sold retail or directly from the producer to consumer between now and Dec. 31 were announced today by the Prices Board.

The board also set a maximum of two birds to a single householder when the retail price is charged by producers making direct delivery. Sales by producers of more than two to one householder would be considered wholesale transactions, the board statement said.

The prices per pound for turkeys (young hens and toms) were listed by zones and grades as follows:—

	Special Grade	Grade A	Grade B	Grade C
Maritimes and Gaspe	47½	46½	44	40½
Ontario and Quebec	47	46	43½	40
Alberta and Manitoba	44	43	40½	37
Saskatchewan	43½	42½	40	36½
British Columbia	46	44½	42½	38½

The board said the price for old turkey hens is three cents per pound less and those for old toms four cents less than prices shown in the table. For the Dec. 15-31 period, both dates inclusive, box-packed and loose-packed turkeys would sell at the same prices, the statement said. At other periods the maximum price is ¾ cents per pound less for loose-packed turkeys.

Prices per pound for geese with heads off and feet on are as follows:—

	Grade A	Grade B	Grade C
Maritimes and Gaspe	34½	32	26
Ontario and Quebec	34	31½	25½
Alberta and Manitoba	31	28½	22
Saskatchewan	30½	28	21½
British Columbia	32½	30½	24

A one-cent reduction in price is permitted when geese are sold with both heads and feet on.

BUTTER RATION CUT ONE OUNCE AT NEW YEAR

Cut Will Probably Extend Into April to Bolster Sagging Stocks

Ottawa, Dec. 15 (CP)—Canadians are going to get a one-ounce reduction in their butter ration—from seven to six ounces per person per week—starting in January and probably extending into April, to help bolster sagging stocks during the winter period of low production.

In making the announcement last night the Prices Board said it was necessitated by the fact Canada's butter stocks were down from those of last year. This, coupled with a high rate of domestic disappearance and the fact production was at its lowest level during the December-April period, made it impossible to maintain the seven-ounce ration.

The seasonal cut was nothing new to Canadians. They have experienced it every winter period for the last three years. And they had the promise of the Prices Board that the seven-ounce ration would "be restored just as soon as supplies permit—probably in April."

The board said that the cut would be spread out over several months so as to avoid a more drastic curtailment or severe shortage of butter later in 1946.

No change in coupon values will be made. The cut will be effected by missing a coupon every fourth week instead of every eighth week as at present, and the first coupon will be dropped Jan. 3.

The latest figures on Canadian butter production and disappearance bore out the Prices Board statement. Canadian butter production during the September-October-November period of this year was 3,000,000 pounds below the production in the same three months of 1944.

Canadian butter stocks at Dec. 1 this year totalled 51,800,000 pounds, a decrease of 750,000 pounds from the same period last year and 13,000,000 pounds less than the holdings at Nov. 1 of this year.

Heaviest decline in production occurred in November when it was 14,300,000 pounds, about 13 per cent under the same month in 1944.

Domestic disappearance of butter during November was approximately 27,200,000 pounds and the difference between November's production and disappearance had to be made up out of reserves in storage.

George Medal Given Airman Who Rescued Five

Ottawa, Dec. 15 — (CP)—The award of the George Medal to Flt. Lt. Dennis Peter Varden of Merrickville, Ont., and Montreal, for "outstanding heroism" in rescuing five members of the crew of a Liberator bomber which crashed near Dorval airport last June 30, was announced last night by Air Force headquarters. Flt. Lt. Varden's "courage and initiative were solely responsible for saving the lives of five occupants of the aircraft who otherwise would certainly have perished in the flames," the accompanying citation said.

MURDER CHARGE IS PREFERRED AGAINST MOTHER

Baby's Body Found After Mother Had Reported Child Kidnapped

Chelsea, Mass., Dec. 15 (AP)—A weeping 23-year-old mother, Mrs. Rose Carlan, was arraigned today on a charge of murder in connection with the death of her six-months-old baby boy, whose body was found yesterday in her home, 18 days after she had reported him kidnapped.

Mrs. Carlan did not plead to the charge, but said weepingly, "it's not true," when clerk of court Stephen White read the charge in Chelsea district court.

District court Judge John W. McLeod continued the case to Dec. 24, and ordered the woman committed to a psychopathic hospital for ten days observation.

Mrs. Carlan was held on "suspicion of murder" last night after police found baby Ronald's body stuffed under the china closet in a combination dining-sleeping room in the Carlan tenement.

Re-question Mother

The police had gone to the Carlan home to re-question the mother and her sailor husband, James J. Carlan, who flew home from the west coast on an emergency leave from the navy after the kidnapping was reported.

Mrs. Carlan was led by a matron into the Chelsea district court room, in a building attached to the police headquarters, out of sight of dozens of spectators gathered around the street doorway.

Only the press and court officials were permitted in the courtroom.

The clerk read the charge, and then asked Mrs. Carlan:

"Do you wish a hearing on this charge?"

Her head bowed, and weeping since she had entered the room, Mrs. Carlan replied in a low voice:

"It is not true."

The clerk repeated the question, and Mrs. Carlan said "yes."

Then Chelsea Police Capt. Cornelius J. Duggan rose and suggested that Mrs. Carlan be given a mental examination.

Judge McLeod ordered committal to the Boston Psychopathic Hospital, and continued the case without bail.

Meanwhile, Medical Examiner William J. Brickley performed an autopsy on the body of the child, and said he might be able to make a report later in the day.

The infant was found yesterday when police, making what they described as a last search of a combination dining and bedroom, detected a piece of blue cloth after they had opened the bottom drawer of a china closet. The body was bundled in a blue bunting suit.

Died on November 24th.

Police quoted the mother, Mrs. James J. Carlan, as saying that the six-month-old baby, reported missing Nov. 28th., actually died Nov. 24th while she was attending a party in her mother-in-law's apartment upstairs.

Police said Mrs. Carlan maintained that she invented the kidnap story because she was "afraid people would say I neglected the child."

The kidnap report and subsequent demands for ransom touched off a search that led from the tenement districts of Chelsea to several Boston taverns and Springfield, 90 miles away.

TALKS OF BIG 3 MINISTERS START EARLY SATURDAY

Bevin Reaches Moscow After Flying Through Blizzard; Byrnes Says Parley Exploratory

Moscow, Dec. 15 — (CP)—Preliminary talks of the Big Three foreign ministers were expected to get under way here today, soon after Foreign Secretary Bevin's arrival here. Mr. Bevin reached Moscow early this afternoon after flying through a blizzard, the Moscow radio reported.

Earlier it had been feared that the blizzard which delayed Mr. Byrnes' plane yesterday would prevent Mr. Bevin's arrival by air from Berlin today.

A Reuters dispatch from Berlin reported that Mr. Bevin's plane left the German capital in a blizzard fighting its way to Moscow despite danger from icing. Three planes which left Berlin an hour before Mr. Bevin's aircraft had to return when halfway to Moscow.

The planes which were turned back were carrying members of the British Foreign Office staff going to Moscow as part of Mr. Bevin's part for the conferences.

Mr. Byrnes conferred with his staff at the United States Embassy here last night, making last-minute preparations for the talks with the British and Soviet ministers.

Foreign observers here felt that several issues already have taken definite shape. Conceding that the question of controlling atomic energy will be the main issue, observers pointed to Iran and Japan — in the light of recent developments — as subjects which appeared likely to come up for discussion.

Mr. Byrnes, at a press conference last night, gave no indication of what subjects were on the agenda, but said he wanted it understood "this is no peace conference."

He said the "only purpose of the meeting is to carry out the spirit of the Yalta meeting — to meet every three or four months to preserve contacts between the governments." The present conference, he said, was "just exploratory."

$2,000 Expense Allowance Bill Passed by House

Ottawa, Dec. 15 — (CP)—The Commons on Friday passed a bill providing for a $2,000 expense allowance to members of parliament. The bill was carried on division without a recorded vote.

Opposition came from only two members — Angus MacInnis (CCF — Vancouver East) and H. W. Herridge (People's CCF—Kootenay West).

Prime Minister Mackenzie King in a spirited reply to Mr. MacInnis said at no time in Canada's history had it been more important to attract able men to parliament. Some members of the present parliament were finding it difficult to get along on the present $4,000 indemnity. Unless an increase was granted they would find it necessary to resign.

The $2,000 allowance will be tax-free for private members but will be considered taxable income for senators, cabinet ministers and the leader of the official opposition, John Bracken, Progressive Conservative leader.

Wave of Redistributed Germans Floods Canadian-Occupied Area

By WILLIAM BOSS
(CP War Correspondent)

With Canadian Occupation Force in Germany, Dec. 15—(CP)—(By Mail) — The vast east-to-west redistribution of Germany's civilian population now in progress means that the Canadian-occupied area of Northwest Germany is being flooded by new refugees, displaced persons and war orphans whose numbers eventually will reach between 300,000 and 500,000.

The Canadian area already has absorbed many thousands of evacuees from the Ruhr. Prevented by red tape from returning to their former homes once the war ended, or obliged to leave because of the scarcity of fuel, food and accommodation in the battered industrial region, many have found shelter in the Canadian-occupied area.

The new wave from the east was led by more than 30,000 orphaned German children from the Russian-occupied zone, ranging in age from a few months to 14 years.

Whereas billeting of older refugees is on a compulsory basis, efforts were made to ease the hardships of the children by placing them in volunteer homes. The Oldenburg area, for example, absorbed some 20,000 youngsters after a survey of 300,000 homes.

The Canadian zone, although not the bread-basket of Germany, is a surplus area and it is expected the basic German ration will be maintained. Lack of fertilizer reduced crops this year to from 20 to 50 per cent below normal but the supply of vegetables, dairy products and meat is adequate.

Indonesians Mass For Drive Against British Forces

Reinforcements Reported Arriving at Tjikampek

Batavia, Java, Dec. 15 (AP)—Indonesian forces today were reported massing at Tjikampek, 70 miles east of Batavia, for a stand against the British forces.

The Dutch News Agency Aneta said considerable quantities of arms had been transported from Bandoeng to Tjikampek, important rail junction, and reinforcements had been arriving there recently from various parts of Java.

The British command had announced that the chief of the Indonesian peace preservation corps, a uniformed force of the unrecognized republic, has recommended "full military action" if necessary against extremists in Java.

At the same time, a British press statement said disorders were increasing in the northwestern sector of Bandoeng, summer capital of Java, where sporadic fighting has been in progress for several weeks.

Despite continued outbreaks of violence, the statement said, "there is more evidence of positive action by the Indonesian T.K.R. (Peace Preservation Corps) in co-operating with British authorities."

Skirmishes between British anr Indonesian forces were reported near the Dutch naval base of Soerabaja and near Semarang, central Java resistance centre.

A British patrol near Semarang dispersed about 80 armed Indonesians, the British Command announced, while a Punjab company occupied the village of Tjerme, near Soerabaja, after overcoming slight opposition.

The British Command said its troops captured a train and an anti-aircraft gun, as well as many other weapons at Tjerme.

(New Delhi radio said today that Acting Governor-General Hubertus Van Mook of The Netherlands East Indies had left by air for Holland for talks with his government after unofficial meetings with Indonesian leaders.

(The New Delhi radio reported that Dr. Van Mook's offer to the Indonesians went "much further than dominion status.")

RIFLE FIRE CAUSES TROUBLE.

Kentville, N.S., Dec. 15 (CP) —Rifle fire from an unknown source has been causing trouble for the people of Kentville for the last few months. Shots have shattered insulators and caused short circuits, depriving citizens of electric power and light for periods as long as 90 minutes at a time.

On the latest occasion, a fire was started on top of a power pole. The company was making every effort to locate the person or persons responsible for the rifle fire. The power lines carry 22,000 volts of electric current.

THROUGH WITH GUNS

Toronto, Dec. 15 — (CP) — Harry Wozick, nineteen-year-old Toronto youth, is through with guns — and with reason.

He purchased a revolver from a soldier for $5 yesterday, shot himself through the hand in trying it out in a park. Just to top it off, police charged him with having an unregistered gun.

CUSTOMER FATALLY SHOT

Brooklyn, N. Y., Dec. 15 —(CP) —A customer who attempted to overpower two armed men while they were holding up a downtown tailor shop yesterday was fatally shot, police said, and his assailants escaped with $50 loot. The victim was identified as Frank Rausch, 34, a steamfitter.

Union Leaders Hope to Settle Aspects of Strike

By J. D. HOLDSWORTH
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 15 (CP Cable)—Union leaders expressed confidence that they would be able to settle at meetings scheduled for today all aspects of the strike of 36,000 New South Wales workers which has paralyzed industry in Australia and left 575,000 idle.

The strikes, involving the state's coal miners, coastal seamen and some iron workers in the steel industry, originated with a walkout of iron workers at a Port Kembla steel plant last September. The iron workers sought to gain seniority rights for workers laid off through closing of war plants.

The iron workers suffered loss of status with the New South Wales Arbitration Commission and another factor in the continuing strike was their demand that they be permitted to negotiate their demands with the company before their re-registration was accepted.

The union yielded on this point Thursday and an application by the iron workers for re-registration with the commission will be heard next Wednesday.

The coastal seamen joined the strike Dec. 1, demanding government intervention in the steel dispute. Two days later, coal miners throughout the state struck, demanding a 40-hour week, three weeks' vacation with pay and higher wages. They also were supporting the iron workers.

P. J. Clarey, Victoria State Labor Minister and head of the Australian Council of Trade Unions, discussing prospects for an end of the strike, said some of the problems were "pretty sticky" but he saw no reason why they should not be settled during the day.

However, the New South Wales government announced that even if the strikers went back to work Monday present gas and electricity restrictions would remain in effect until after Christmas. The only modification so far is that radio stations have been permitted to broadcast for two hours daily instead of one.

The coal strike has had widespread repercussions because much of Australia's industry is dependent upon New South Wales coal.

HAVE TO MOVE QUICK

Canberra, Dec. 15 (Reuters) — Daniel G. Sullivan, New Zealand's Minister of Supply, Commerce and Industry, said yesterday that Australia and New Zealand are determined to establish a permanent air service across the Pacific.

"We shall have to move fairly quick, I think, to keep up with Pan-American Airways, who want to re-establish their service" Mr. Sullivan said.

400 FRESHMEN

Montreal, Dec. 15 (CP)—Approximately 400 war veterans will begin their freshmen year at McGill University in January, Dr. F. Cyril James, principal and vice chancellor, announced yesterday. There are already 2,000 veterans taking courses at the university and the total enrolment will be increased to an all time high of nearly 6,500.

RUSSIAN SOCIETY FORMED

Moscow, Dec. 15 — (AP)—The Soviet press reported yesterday the formation of a Russian society to promote closer "cultural relations" with Iranian Azerbaijan, where autonomists are fighting government troops.

SLIGHT DAMAGE TO TWO VEHICLES

Failure to stop his vehicle in time while slowing to permit the passage of a shunting engine and freight cars on Pinnacle Street, resulted in slight damage to two vehicles Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Melville Reid was driving north on Pinnacle Street and stopped to permit the passage of the train, when a truck driven by Ernest Arnew, Alexander Street, drove up behind and bumped into the last car of the train. The truck was shoved forward a few feet and jammed into the vehicle driven by Mrs. Reid causing slight damage.

PUBLIC SKATING RINKS WILL BE IN OPERATION BEFORE CHRISTMAS

Weather permitting, public skating rinks promised by the city council will be in operation before Christmas, members of the Board of Education were assured Friday evening by Alderman E. E. Follwell who attended the board meeting as a one-man delegation from council regarding construction of partitions in the basement of King George School. Basements of King George School and of Queen Victoria School are to be used as dressing rooms by the children using the open air rinks during the evening.

An estimated expenditure of approximately $300 will be necessary to build partitions in King George School basement to block off the stairway to the school proper, it was stated. Alderman Follwell asked that the Board of Education assume responsibility of having the necessary partitions erected and include the cost in their estimates for 1946. Upon vote of the members the above responsibility will be assumed by the board.

RESIDENCE DAMAGED $400 BY BLAZE

Overheated stove pipes with the resulting flames catching between the floors of the first and second storeys and running on up into the attic caused approximately $400 damage Thursday noon to the residence of Mrs. Sexsmith, corner of Ridley and Grier Streets. Catching in the open space between the lower ceiling and upper floor the flames raced up through a partition to the attic before it was controlled by members of the local fire department.

TWEED MAN TRAPS THREE LARGE WOLVES

Nocturnal raiders of sheep flocks in Huntingdon Township, three large reddish-grey wolves, were trapped and killed in that area by Ross Palmateer, of Tweed, the other day.

The wolves, apparently driven by hunger from their northern lairs, had terrorized sheep and other livestock in Huntingdon Township for the past few weeks. Palmateer decided to put an end to their raids and accordingly set traps. He finally caught the animals and collected $105 in government and county bounties.

GUNNER J. C. MURRAY ARRIVES HOME

One of the original members of the 34th Field Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery, Gunner J. C. Murray of this city, arrived home this week after five years' service overseas.

He enlisted in 1940 with the battery here and proceeded overseas with that unit a short time later. He has seen considerable service in England, Belgium, Holland and France.

Gunner Murray is a brother of Mr. Leo Murray of this city who served with the Princess Patricia Canadian Light Infantry during the last war, and Frank Murray, a repatriated veteran of the war just finished.

PTE. EDWARD POPE HOME FROM OVERSEAS

Youthful veteran of the European wars Private Edward Pope, son of Edward Pope, of Gilbert Street, arrived home on board the "Queen Elizabeth" the other day after serving four and a half years overseas.

Pte. Pope saw lengthy service in England, Ireland and Scotland as well as Germany and Holland. A brother Morgan is still in the army and at present is with the Canadian occupational forces in Germany. He has been overseas for over three years.

BELLEVILLE VETERAN HAS ARRIVED IN CITY

One of the first Belleville soldiers to be wounded during the invasion of Sicily, Gordon Parkhurst, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Parkhurst, 255 Ann Street, has arrived home from overseas and is now on 30 days' leave prior to receiving his discharge from the army.

Originally a member of the Hastings and Prince Edward regiment with which unit he went overseas and later into action in the Mediterranean war theatre, Gordon was seriously wounded shortly after the start of the Sicilian campaign. After recuperating he was stationed with the Army Service Corps where he served until returning home. He came home by way of St. John, N.B.

MEMBERS OF BOARD GUESTS OF CHAIRMAN AT BANQUET

Members of the local Board of Education closed out their year's activities with a social turn on Friday evening when prior to their last regular meeting of the season they were guests of their board chairman, Mr. Carl Crosby, at a banquet and social evening in the Collegiate cafeteria. Attending the function in addition to board members were members of the advisory committee, principals of each of the four public schools and of the collegiate institute and Secretary Administrator Lawrence A. Kells.

Serving at the banquet were Misses Ferne Easton, Isobel McCabe, Audrey Martyn and Lyra Frost, while arrangements for the banquet were under the supervision of Mrs. S. T. Leggott and Miss A. E. Grout. Decorations for the banquet table and the school cafeteria were planned by Miss Bernice Nugent.

FATALLY BURNED WHEN CLOTHING FIRED

Fatally burned when her clothing caught fire as she was adding fuel to the kitchen stove, Mrs. Frank Anderson, of Warkworth, died on Wednesday afternoon. Alone in her house, Mrs. Anderson apparently had managed to cross to the sink after her clothing caught fire but fell to the floor where she was found terribly burned by her son. Harry Anderson, Brighton, carpenter, is a son.

SLIPPERY PAVEMENT CAUSE OF ACCIDENT

Slippery pavement conditions are blamed for a two-car accident occurring at the Upper Bridge on Friday afternoon when slight fender and body damage resulted. John A. Ward, Dunbar street, was proceeding north on Front street and turning onto the upper bridge when Oscar Murray, Coleman street, was emerging from the bridge onto Front street, the two vehicles coming into collision when the latter car skidded. Damages were settled between the parties.

Tribute Paid Retiring Members Of the Board

Tribute to two retiring members of the Board of Education for untiring efforts in fulfilling their duties was heard at the conclusion of the regular board meeting Friday evening. Retiring members are Chairman Carl Crosby and William Harrison.

Upon motion of board member Ed. Shortt an expression of regret that the two members, Mr. Crosby and Mr. Harrison, did not see fit to stand for re-election, was voted by the board. "Their loss will be felt not only by this board, but also by the city at large," stated Mr. Shortt in making the motion.

In seconding the motion Frank Cushing paid respect to Mr. Crosby for the business-like way in which the board meetings had been conducted under his chairmanship, while he said Mr. Harrison upon many occasions had gone out of his way to be of service to ratepayers in what he considered was his "duty" as a board member. The motion carried unanimously.

Couple Believed Asphyxiated By Coal Gas Fumes

Believed to have died the previous Sunday when they apparently had been asphyxiated as result of fumes from their stove, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Peterson, R.R. 3, Brighton, were found dead in bed last Saturday morning. The couple had been last seen the previous Sunday evening and when they had not appeared during the week it was thought they had been visiting.

Discovery of the tragedy was made by Garnet McMaster who summoned by neighbors, whose suspicions had become aroused, broke into the house and found his uncle and aunt dead in bed.

The Petersons had just a stove in their house and it is believed the first fire suddenly brought quantities of soot down the chimney as it was found completely blocked.

The double funeral was held Tuesday with interment being made in Mount Hope Cemetery. Two sons, Clarence of Victoria, B.C., and Charles of Hamilton, survive.

Former City Man Awarded O.B.E.

Former Belleville resident, WO1 John Taylor Westley, R.S.M. of Cobourg has been awarded the Member of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire for service overseas, it has been announced by the Department of National Defence in Ottawa. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Westley, Cobourg, former resident of Belleville.

Having a distinguished army record, WO1 Westley was made regimental sergeant major when only 23 years old. He enlisted early in the war and was awarded a medal for meritorious service in 1942. He returned to Canada in October of this year. Prior to his enlistment he worked at Brown's Shoe Repair in Belleville.

Union School Section, Thurlow, Endorses Proposal

Roslin ratepayers of Union School Section 19, Thurlow, Huntingdon, Hungerford and Tyendinaga, at a special meeting held in the schoolhouse endorsed a recommendation for township school areas by a 20 to 4 vote.

A township school area, it was pointed out embraces a new form of administration with special government grants allotted to the district. The schools in the area are under the jurisdiction of a special Township Board comprised of one trustee from each school in the section, instead of individual boards of trustees as under the old system. The idea is rapidly gaining favor in various parts of Hastings County.

During the discussion R. H. Macklem, public school inspector for South Hastings, pointed out that under the larger unit of school administration, an adequate nurse service could be set up and arrangements made to have pupils transferred to high school without any direct cost to the parents.

In a comparison of tax rates under the present system with that in a township school area, the ratepayers learned that the average school tax rate for the schools in north Thurlow was 4.2 mills whereas if these schools were in a school area, the extra grants would make a local tax levy unnecessary.

The Rev. F. C. Beazer, Roslin acted as chairman at the meeting with Miss Ruth Wright, Roslin public school principal taking charge of the ballots and voting.

Under the new system the township will receive total grants of $7,317 with nothing to be raised in the form of taxes in the area.

County Health Unit Formed

Picton, Dec. 15.—Initial steps to set up a County Health Unit to service Prince Edward, were taken at County Council this week. A Board of Health was appointed with Mrs. F. J. Webster named for a three-year term, Reeve Donald Thompson of South Marysburgh for two years and Deputy Reeve Norris Whitney, Ameliasburg, and Reeve R. Warren, Picton, for one year. The Ontario government will appoint a member.

The board will control the administration of the County Unit and take steps to employ a medical health officer, a supervising public health nurse, three nurses and a sanitary inspector, all of whom must be qualified in accordance with the requirements. It is not expected that it will be possible to start the plan until well along in 1946.

It is estimated that the plan will cost about $20,000 yearly with the Ontario government bearing half the expense. One year's notice, in writing, is required from either the county or government to terminate the plan.

Boxing Day To be Proclaimed Civic Holiday

The council will stand adjourned until the new council is inaugurated on January 7th except in case of emergency after the regular meeting on Monday night, it was decided at the meeting of the council in committee Thursday evening. It was also recommended that in the interval between adjournment and organization that urgent accounts be paid on the certificates of the Comptroller and the committee chairman concerned. The members of council will be paid immediately after the adjournment on Monday evening. Salaried employees of the city will be paid to the end of December on December 20th.

His Worship was requested to proclaim Boxing Day a civic holiday. The regular staff on Public Works will be paid for Christmas Day, Boxing Day and New Year's Day. The Provincial Tire Corporation, The Greenleaf Company and The Industrial Exchange Corporation were given permission to erect Neon signs on their several properties as outlined in report of the City Engineer and erection of signs to be satisfactory to the engineer.

Given Full Control

The Department of Public Works was given full responsibility and control for sidewalk snow plowing and cleaning within the limits of the city. The Public Works Department was instructed to construct a storm sewer to take care of all water (except sewage) from the present Corbin Lock building and their new addition. The traffic light that was authorized for the corner of Anne and Dundas streets will be placed at the corner of William and Dundas streets when the council rescinded the former recommendation.

Can Make Alterations

Mr. Hawley will be allowed to proceed with the necessary alterations and buildings on the Henry street property as per his request to council some time ago. The City Clerk was instructed to write the Public Utilities requesting the installation of lights at the four open air rinks at the east and west playgrounds, King George School and Pine Street School, the costs to be paid in the usual manner. It was also recommended that the recommendation requiring the advertisement for tenders for the repainting of city signs be rescinded and that a committee be appointed with power to act to investigate further as to prices for a complete job according to prepared specifications and to proceed with the work.

Market Lease Renewed

Mr. Raymond Arnott secured the market lease at the same figure of last year and the agreement will be signed by council on Monday evening. No more lots owned by the Corporation on MacDonald avenue will be sold at present and the committee ordered returned the cheque of Mr. Douglas Bews for some of this property. Street lights will be placed on Catherine street west of Yeomans street, on Hillside street near No. 10 and one on Ann street between Ann Street School and Dundas street corner.

James Moyer, 26, Marmora, Dies After Accident

Marmora, (Special)—Suffering fatal injuries when the car in which he was a passenger crashed into another vehicle one to one half miles south of Marmora early Thursday morning, James Moyer, aged 26, of Marmora, died in Belleville General Hospital Saturday morning.

Three others, Cecil Rouse, Stanley Kerr and Leo Sheridan are also in hospital suffering from serious injuries as result of the crash.

According to reports a car driven by Graham Bell of Marmora township and having as passengers Leo Sheridan and Jean Crossen had stopped on the highway because of motor trouble and while Sheridan was endeavoring to remedy the trouble the second vehicle, driven by C. Rouse, crashed into the rear.

The four injured persons were conveyed to Dr. H. Crawford's office in Marmora and were later transferred to Belleville hospital by car and ambulance. Miss Crossen sustained a knee injury as result of the accident but was able to return to her home.

Preliminary inquest looking into the death was held Saturday morning and adjourned until January 10th.

Warden F. Wilson Retires From Municipal Govt.

Mr. J. Fred Wilson, M.L.A., Hastings West, reeve of Sidney township and warden of the county of Hastings today announced his retirement from municipal government. He will retire from his seat at the head of the township council on December 31.

Warden Wilson who will also relinquish his seat as head of the county council in the forthcoming January session of that body stated that he is withdrawing from municipal life in order to devote his time to his farm and parliamentary activities.

"I greatly appreciate the privilege given me in serving my own township and the county of Hastings. I have received splendid cooperation from both my own township councillors and those of the county body. It has been a distinct pleasure to sit and serve with them," Warden Wilson stated.

Ten years ago he entered the municipal life of his township as a member of the council, and was elected by a substantial majority. Since that time he has been given acclamations. He served six years as a councillor and the succeeding four years as the reeve of his township. Last year he was honored with the wardenship of the county.

This year he offered himself as the Conservative member for Hastings West, and was elected to that seat in the provincial elections.

No Turkeys On Saturday Market

Despite government reports that there will be sufficient turkeys for the Christmas market, Belleville housewives looked in vain on the local produce market Saturday for the traditional Yuletide fare. Not one turkey was offered on the market, while only three geese were seen.

What Christmas spirit was lacking through the absence of turkeys, however, was more than made up by the numbers of Christmas trees offered. Approximately ten or a dozen vendors offered trees, some having full truck loads, with prices ranging from 75 cents to $1.25 each.

Eggs took a further drop on the inside market and although Grade A sold for 45 cents, mediums could be had for 38 cents and pullets at 35 cents the dozen.

Fowl did not appear too plentiful with 38 to 40 cents being asked for general run of chickens and up to 45 cents for capons. A few live Pekin ducks were offered on the outside market at $5 the pair.

One or two apple vendors offering domestic grade of winter apples did a rushing business for a few minutes until stocks were depleted. Winter vegetables such as carrots, beets and parsnips sold readily at 50 cents the peck, while cabbage brought 10 and 15 cents and sauerkraut 15 cents the quart. Potatoes sold at the ceiling price of 48 cents the peck.

Only one or two farmers offered young pigs at $6 each, while green birch and maple wood cut into stove lengths was quoted at $15 the cord.

A. Hobbs Awarded Clasp to Canadian Efficiency Medal

Veteran of both Great Wars and a former company sergeant major in the First Battalion, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, Mr. Arthur Hobbs of this city has been awarded a clasp to the Canadian Efficiency Medal, it was learned today.

The former sergeant major served in the First Great War for a lengthy period and when war broke out in 1939 he enlisted at Picton with the "Hasty Pees".

He went overseas with the regiment and served four and one-half years overseas before being returned to Canada some time ago.

IN MEMORIAM

LLOYD — In loving memory of a dear mother, Margaret Lloyd, who passed away December 16, 1943.

You have only one mother,
Patient, kind and true.
No other friend in all the world
Will be as true to you.
For all her loving kindness,
She asks nothing in return.
If all the world deserts you,
To your mother, you can turn.
So all we can do, dear mother,
Is to go and tend your grave,
And leave behind a token of love
To the best mother God ever gave.
—Ever remembered by her Sons, Daughters and Grandchildren.

LANCASTER — In loving memory of our dear Norman, who passed away December 16th., 1944.

We are thinking of you today, dear Norman,
Thinking of you and the past,
Picturing you in our memory,
Just as we saw you last.
We do not need a special day
To bring you to our mind,
The days we do not think of you
Are impossible to find.
If all the world were ours,
We would gladly give it and more
To see the face of our beloved
Come smiling through the door.
—Sadly missed by Mother and Dad, Myrtle, Rae, Harry and Erna.

PICTON

Burton Pearsoll Demands Recount

Picton, Dec. 15.—Defeated by five votes, according to the count made on municipal election day, Deputy Reeve Burton Pearsoll has asked for a recount in Hallowell Township. Former Reeve D. O. Reynolds was declared the winner on Dec. 3. Mr. Pearsoll was the defeated Liberal candidate in the last provincial election.

His Honor Judge W.S. Lane has granted the appeal and the recount will be conducted before him next Tuesday morning.

In dispute are votes in the reeveship contest allegedly not counted when they were also marked for too many councillors, the names all appearing on one ballot. However, all ballots will be re-examined and tabulated.

Capt. McConnell Given Welcome On Arrival Home

Stirling, Dec. 15—Hon. Capt. Rev. A. S. McConnell of the 4th Division 8th Light Anti-Air Craft Battery, Canadian Chaplain Service overseas, arrived home over the weekend following over three years overseas service with the armed forces in England, France, Belgium, Holland and Germany. Arriving on the Queen Elizabeth which docked in New York Friday of last week, Capt. McConnell was met in Kingston on Saturday last by Mrs. McConnell. Capt. McConnell was formerly a rector of St. John's Anglican Church, Stirling and Rector of Trinity Church, Brockville at the time of joining the Chaplain Service. His eldest son, Creighton, a student at Trinity College School, Port Hope, was at home to join with his brother John in a hearty welcome to their father. Capt. McConnell's mother, Mrs. J. McConnell, a resident of Stirling, motored to Belleville with Creighton and John to meet the Captain. Many friends called on the Padre to extend their welcome.

Addresses Laymen's Meeting

St. John's Laymen's Association met in the Parish Hall Tuesday evening of this week with the Rector, Rev. C. C. Brazill in charge of the opening exercises. The interest shown in this organization is evidenced by the large enrolment and a very successful year is anticipated.

Capt. the Rev. A. S. McConnell who has just returned from overseas was given a welcome by Dr. E. A. Carleton on behalf of the members and introduced to those who were not residents of Stirling during the Padre's years as Rector of St. John's.

Capt. McConnell who spent about two years in England with the 4th Division and then moved into Normandy with the Green Patches, told of experiences at the battle of Falais and Caen, the crossing of Seine into Belgium, spoke of the time spent in Holland and then Germany en route to Williamshead and until VE-Day was declared.

Prior to leaving for Canada and home, Capt. McConnell spent leave at his birthplace in Ireland, bringing back a Shamrock to his mother in town. Capt. McConnell's sister resides in Ireland.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to the speaker for his interesting address which proved to the many present that a great duty had been performed by the padres during the war.

Ransom Demands Made For Child

Chelsea, Mass., Dec. 15—(AP)—Ransom demands, believed by police to have been designed by cruel hoaxers or a "demented person," ranged from $500 to $30,000 for the return of kidnapped six-months-old Ronald Carlan.

As the baby's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James J. Carlan, began their 16th day of terror investigators appeared to be up against a blank wall with few tangible clues.

They pressed their search, however, for a thin, dark man, who was seen near the Carlan home at about the time the infant was snatched from his carriage Nov. 28.

The kidnapping and at least 8 subsequent telephone calls in which persons either claimed to have the youngster or demanded ransom touched off a search that led to several Boston taverns and even to Springfield, about 90 miles away. The hunt, however, led only to dead ends.

The father has explained that he has not the means to pay the ransom asked.

The frantic parents have made several radio appeals for return of the child and have even asked school children to turn over any information to police.

The Roman Catholic Clergy entered the quest in the hope that anyone having the child might deal with a priest. Archbishop Richard J. Cushing offered to serve as an intermediary and promised that any information given to priests of the Boston Dioceses would be treated as a matter of conscience. There has been no response.

Maj. W.A. Davern Promoted to Rank Of Lieut.-Colonel

Wellington Officer Given Command of 2nd Battalion H. & P. E. Regiment

Popular officer commanding the Wellington company of the 2nd Battalion, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, Major William A. Davern, has been promoted to the rank of lieutenant-colonel and given the command of the regiment, the Department of National Defence, Ottawa, announced the other day.

Lt.-Col. Davern has been acting commanding officer of the battalion since the retirement of Lt.-Col. A. V. Yates of Deloro in June.

Lt.-Col. Davern was born in Prince Edward County, on a farm on the shores of Consecon Lake, which had been in the family since 1821. He was educated at Upper Canada College, Toronto, and at Picton Collegiate.

In the First World War he was commissioned as a lieutenant in the 16th Regiment at Picton, in 1915, and then appointed to the 139th Battalion, CEF, at Cobourg. Later, he transferred to the Royal Naval Air Service, in 1916, serving as a flight lieutenant following the amalgamation of the RNAS and RFC into the RAF. He was appointed adjutant of No. 92 CTS at Camp Borden in 1918.

On the establishment of the 2nd (R) Battalion of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in 1940, he was appointed as officer commanding "D" Company at Wellington, with the rank of captain, receiving his promotion to the rank of major in 1941.

Lt.-Col. Davern has been active in public life. He is a former reeve of Hillier Township, a past master of Star-in-the-East Lodge, A.F. and A.M., a member of the Orange Lodge and a member of St. Andrew's Anglican Church, Wellington. Since 1927, he has carried on a hardware and implement business at Wellington.

His wife is the former Isabel Anderson. Their daughter, Mrs. Warren Jones, resides in Belleville.

General Patton Out of Danger

Heidelberg, Germany, Dec. 15 (AP)—Col. R. Glen Spurling, chief specialist attending Gen. George S. Patton, said today the United States Army Commander was "out of danger of death, but there is a possibility that he never will be able to command his troops again."

He described Gen. Patton's condition as a touch and go affair. He said the General might recover fully from the broken neck he received in an automobile crash last Sunday, but again that he might be partly paralyzed for life. He said it would be impossible to forecast the effects of the injuries for at least three or four weeks.

Masked Men Raid Kingston House

London, Dec. 15 — (CP) — A group of masked men, reported to have said they were determined to "stamp out this Hitler cult," last night raided the Kingdom House, headquarters of the Legion of Christian Reformers, and beat up the custodian.

The custodian was seized, bound and gagged after he opened the back door to investigate noises, and later was driven in a motor car for three miles into Pentworth, Sussex, and dumped.

The legion, whose spokesmen have said they consider that Hitler was a divine instrument, first came to public attention two weeks ago at the auction of furniture, Nazi symbols and busts of Hitler at the former German Embassy.

A massive bust of the Fuehrer, described by the auctioneer as "this piece of granite," was bought by Capt. Gordon Canning for $2,000, and later was reported installed in the stone mansion on the 16-acre headquarters estate of the legion in Sussex.

Canning, onetime member of the British Union of Fascists and of the Anglo-German Society, the Link, was detained under guard for two years during the war.

Residents Warned By Fire Chief

Fire Chief William Lynch today expressed a warning to local householders and to proprietors of business establishments against the use of inflammable Christmas decorations and against the use of dangerous type of lighting equipment for Christmas trees.

"The use of inflammable paper for Christmas decorations is forbidden in premises of merchants and other public places," stated Chief Lynch "and if possible should not be used in private dwellings where danger of fire is considerable. Use of ordinary candles as lighting equipment for trees, has always been forbidden."

Each year, according to fire department circles, Christmas decorations are responsible for many fires throughout Canada with resultant loss of life. Non-inflammable decorations should be used in every case, it was stated.

ARMY PAPER EDITOR WITH COSMOPOLITAN

New York, Dec. 13 (AP)—Frances Whiting, editor of Cosmopolitan Magazine, announced appointment of Joe McCarthy, former Originally intended for troops in army weekly, as an associate editor of Cosmopolitan. McCarthy, 30-year-old sergeant who became a civilian a few days ago, will join the staff of the magazine Jan. 2, she said. Formerly a reporter for the Boston Post, McCarthy's job with Yank took him through Europe, Africa and to the Pacific war theatre.

Hastings, England—(CP)—E.J. Breeds, who died at 75, sold beer, whisky and wines for 44 years but was himself a teetotler.

Serving overseas with the 65th Tank Transport Co., Pte. Clifford Copeland, ABOVE, lost his right leg, but he refused to be downhearted about the handicap. He has started a Christmas tree business at the side of his parents' home in Toronto, Ont., and expects to sell 500 of them before Christmas.

$25,000 FIRE DAMAGE

Carleton Place, Dec. 13 — (CP)— Damage was estimated at $25,000 in a fire which swept the residence and office of Dr. J. A. Johnston in a three-storey Carleton Place building while he was absent last night. His offices and suite were gutted and valuable equipment destroyed before firemen controlled the flames in a three-hour fight.

GO 30,000 MILES, JEEPS NEVER USED

Boston, Dec. 13 (AP)—One thousand jeeps which have travelled 30,000 miles without turning a wheel were unloaded at Boston, bound for surplus property sales. Ariginally intended for troops in Barry, Wales, they were rerouted after cessation of hostilities. The freight then was ordered from Luzon back to Boston.

Shopping, Mailing Days Pass

The pre-Christmas days are passing swiftly. Little more than a week remains in which all plans have to be laid and carried to completion so that the annual winter festival may not be lacking in any of its appeal. No season is like Christmastime and everyone asks that so much more than usual be put into the observance as so much more merriment and joy are to be expected.

There are a few bits of advice yet to be given: Do not wait too long, but rather buy at once what is needed as gifts or for the celebration.

The deadline for sending Christmas cards and letters and other mail is drawing very near. Saturday Dec. 15th. should find all parcels mailed, for Alberta and Saskatchewan. Sunday Dec. 16th. should see all parcels mailed for Manitoba and the Maritimes while Monday Dec. 17th. is the deadline for Ontario and Quebec. Mail for local delivery should be posted by Dec. 18th. as deadline.

A Righteous Judgment

In the security of Nazi Germany, Josef Kramer and Irma Grese and their nine associates thought themselves secure.

They are now dead, executed under the findings of an Allied tribunal which sentenced them to die by hanging for their atrocious deeds.

The cruelties untold which they practised upon poor prisoners at the Belsen prison camp have now been avenged.

This is what these offenders against human nature merited and their ending in shame as murderers and sadists was the direct sequel to their offences.

Josef Kramer and these other ten were not secure. A righteous judgment came upon them and has been carried out.

Such others as Himmler, Goebbels and Hitler realized that the judgment of the Allied Nations would not permit them to escape. Therefore they ended their own lives to forestall the judgment of humanity. They knew in their hearts what enormities of crime they had committed and how well they deserved the full penalty of judgment.

Crime and evil destroy themselves, they bring their own doom and humanity is purged of such scoundrels as these Nazi war criminals.

Big R.A.F. Switch to Jet Planes

All R.A.F. fighter pilots not due for early demobilization are being trained to fly jets, reports the London Daily Herald. The switchover is proving far easier than the experts expected, for pilots find the British jet planes simpler to handle than the petrol driven aircraft: there are fewer instruments to watch and fewer controls to manipulate. The speeds of the jet propelled aircraft are, however, so high that a pilot seeking to escape from the cockpit in an emergency would find it impossible to raise himself owing to the tremendous air pressure. A powerfully actuated ejector seat has therefore been developed which flings the pilot clear when he touches a control. Such an operation when carried out in the sub stratosphere might cause the pilot to lose consciousness through lack of oxygen. He would thus fail to pull the rip cord to open the parachute. To eliminate this risk United Kingdom technicians have incorporated a new device in the parachute harness, consisting of an automatic release mechanism. This is set by a button control. As soon as the pilot has abandoned his aircraft the device pulls the ripcord.

Machine Will "Think"

United Kingdom scientists are hoping to produce what will be the most wonderful calculator in the world — a machine that can "think." Experiments are now being carried out by the newly formed Mathematics Division of the United Kingdom Department of Scientific and Industrial Research. If the experiments are successful —and Mr. Wormesley the superintendent is confident that they will be—the machine will not only be able to add subtract, multiply and divide, but from instructions previously put into it the machine will be able to decide what it should do in different circumstances without any outside help.

Centuries Telescoped Into Hours

Calculating machines now in use at the Department of Scientific and Industrial Research laboratories have shown spectacular results. Recently for example, the Government Department started to work out a table of figures for a particularly urgent and complicated problem. After some time it was calculated that it would take nearly three hundred years to complete the table. They then appealed to D.S.I.R. mathematicians who with their machines completed the tables in fifty hours — and every figure had been checked and cross checked for accuracy. These mathematicians are now making a practical and valuable contribution to the United Kingdom industry's peacetime drive by taking from its shoulders a load of complicated statistical research.

Watch That Talks

(Christian Science Monitor)

A running jump is about to be taken into the electronic age if the Federal Communications Commission will only give permission. A company calling itself, appropriately enough, Electronic Time, Inc., wants to operate a "time" radio station of fixed frequency, which would be receivable only on a sort of pocket watch. The signals would give the time and the weather, or some other tidbit of current information.

The possibilities seem little short of staggering. Personally, we can scarcely wait for the time when we attend some hushed gathering like a poetry-reading or something equally awesome and an unseen voice announces coldly from a guest's vest pocket: "The time is 10:30 p.m.; it is raining."

The invention ought to add spice to the trip home in the packed subway, when out of the depths of any man's clothing may come muffled time reports and the final score of the Dodgers-Giants game.

We are probably letting fancy run away with us needlessly. Doubtless the inventors of this later-day gadget have foreseen the problems and have got them all neatly solved, though they don't tell us how. But we still say it will be a different world when a man can escape — if only momentarily — from the amateur concert where his wife dragged him.

Scottish Crown Jewels

The Scottish Crown Jewels, which were brought back from the hiding-place where they have been in safe keeping during the war, are once more on view to the public in the Crown Room at Edinburgh Castle, The Edinburgh Scotsman reports.

Included among the jewels shown with the "Honors" is the Jewel of St. Andrew—which has on its reverse side a miniature of Marie Clementina Sobieski, the Polish princess who was mother of Prince Charlie —which is the Sovereign's Badge of the Order of the Thistle and has been worn by the present King and by King George V on ceremonial occasions at Holyrood House.

The total intrinsic value of the metal and jewels has, as far as is known, never been computed, but some years ago the Crown was valued at £5,000.

U. K. Ships More Coal

In the month of November France received 704,000 tons of coal, 79 per cent of the amount provided for in the import program. Official figures show that Britain has sent 134,000 tons on a promised 109,000 tons while 340,000 tons on a promised 510,000 tons came from the United States. From Germany 210,000 tons came on a promised 404,500 tons and Belgium sent 20,000 tons on a promised 39,000 tons.

Newspaper Facts

Eight million tons of food were grown in victory gardens as a result of daily newspaper campaigns in Canada and the United States.

It is said to take 26 Chinese to produce as much food as one Canadian farmer, which may explain why China so frequently endures famine or near-famine.— (Brockville Times and Recorder.)

BOW-TIE COMPLAINT

All sorts of striking ties are planned
For wearers of the four-in-hand,
But little's done ('tis truth I pen)
For us peculiar bow-tie men.

Because we are a minor lot,
They doom us to the polka dot
And remnants of the solid hues,
From which a lifetime we must choose.

The brothers of the four-in-hand
Have endless choices at command,
But bow-tie wearers, weak of voice,
From ancient stock must make a choice.

"Bow-tie?" the clerk says. "We've a few!
But nothing different or new."
Upon his thumb he shapes a knot,
With: "Here's a lovely polka dot!"

Mrs. (Capt.) R. Matheson and son, Norman, have returned home after spending several weeks with friends in Toronto and Hamilton.

Mr. S. Harryett of Bancroft was a visitor in town today.

50 YEARS AGO

DEC. 15TH, 1895

The ice at the curling rink will be ready for play this evening.

Mr. Sam Nesbitt of Brighton is said to have the largest apple store house on the continent. He has 31,000 barrels of apples in storage at the present time.

Mr. Frank Yerex is in Toronto today purchasing supplies for his new photography gallery in this city.

Mr. Harry Thompson, who has been in the employ of L. W. Yeomans and Company, druggists, in this city, has left for Buffalo, N.Y., where he has accepted a position.

Mr. Thomas Clark, Jr., son of Mr. T. S. Clark, accountant in the Bank of Montreal here, left today for Wallaceburg where he will enter the service of the Bank of Montreal. He was an active member of the 15th Battalion and also of the organizations in connection with Bridge Street Methodist Church. He will be much missed by many friends.

Migrating Birds Make Real Speed

HARVEY BRACKBILL
In The Baltimore Sun

Among the birds, another migration period is drawing to a close. Watching the birds pass on these great journeys, one always wonders just how far they travel in a day—or a night, as the case may be. Porbably it is the rule to progress by stages, with pauses between the resting and feeding. Observation of banded birds indicate this, for birds that are marked during the migration periods are sometimes found in the same little area for a day or two, and then they disappear. While they are actually in motion, however, the birds must often reel off considerable distances.

That belief is also based on banding information, for occasionally a bird that has been caught and marked at one place along its way is caught again (or, in the case of game birds, killed) at a farther point, making possible a calculation of distance and elapsed time. Because the bird may not travel in a straight line as measured across a map, and because there is no knowing how promptly it left the first point, or how promptly was caught at the second, the resulting figure on speed will not be exact.

Some banding records that have recently come to hand include a few that permit calculations of this sort. They show small birds averaging 20 to 70 miles a day on their migrations, and ducks averaging 45 to 150. Here are the records:

A tree sparrow banded in Hartford, Conn., on April 7, 1940, was caught in Barre, Vt., on April 14; it had traveled 150 miles in seven days or less, an average of more than 20 a day. A chimney swift banded at Macon, Ga., on May 7 1940, was trapped again in Litchfield, Conn., on May 19; that is an airline distance of 820 miles, an average of at least 70 a day for the bird.

Thanks to the gunners, data on ducks are more plentiful. Blue-winged teal marked at Necedah, Wis., September 28, 1942, was shot at Chitre, Panama, November 27; that distance, airline, is 2,000 miles and so at the very least the bird averaged 45 miles a day. Another blue-wing banded at Orland Park, Ill., September 11, 1941, was shot at Port au Prince, Haiti, October 10, that 1,800-mile air-line distance means an average of 60 miles a day.

Banding done at Lake Scugog, Ont., has produced a number of interesting records. A mallard banded on October 27, 1924, was killed at Harewood, Md., on the Gunpowder River, on November 3; it had traveled 380 miles in seven days or less, averaging at least 55 miles a day. A black duck banded there on November 3, 1924, was shot in extreme southern Ohio on November 9, having gone 450 miles in six days, for an average of 75 miles a day.

For real distance flying, however, consider these two. Another black duck banded at Lake Scugog on November 3, 1924, was shot at Vicksburg, Miss., on November 15; it had gone 1,540 miles in twelve days, for an average of 128 a day. And a pintail banded at Havana, Ill., on October 20, 1942, was shot at Wichita, Kan., 450 miles away, just three days later; its average daily mileage had to be at least 150.

RUSSIA'S MILLIONS

Russia's population is twice as large as the combined populations of Britain and France, and her birthrate is more than twice as high.

Mackenzie's Column

Dublin, Dec. 15 (AP)—One of the most extraordinary personages of our generation without the shadow of doubt is Eamon de Valera, Prime Minister of Eire—a man whose name is received at home and abroad either with applause or disfavor but never with halfway emotions.

Here we have a onetime college professor who so far departed from his studious role as to become one of the leaders of the ill-starred bloody Easter week rebellion of 1916 against British rule. When this revolt failed he was condemned to death, had his sentence commuted and finally, after lengthy imprisonment and other vicissitudes, became Prime Minister of Eire.

And the most remarkable feature of this story of adventure is that he finally won his position not by armed force as he once tried but through political leadership of his people, in which he matched his keen wits against those of Britain's best.

I have had a long conversation with the Prime Minister, whom I have known for many years. I wish I could repeat it here, for he discussed Irish affairs and international relations with great candor—one of his characteristics. But it was all "off the record."

When the Easter rebellion failed, De Valera and several other leaders were condemned to death.

Accident of Birth Saved De Valera

Most paid the price with their lives, but he was American-born and this is said to have influenced the British authorities to commute his sentence.

It's a long and thrilling story, but he finally gained his freedom and attacked the problem of independence from the political rather than the military standpoint. In this he and his captains have succeeded.

"I frequently have inquiries as to just what the status of Southern Ireland is and this would seem to be a good time to repeat the definition given by Mr. De Valera himself in parliament a short time ago. "The position, as I conceive it to be, is this: We are an independent republic associated as a matter of our external policy with the states of the British Commonwealth."

He added that the King "acts for us under advice in certain specified matters in the field of our external relations."

Example of Strategy

The story of how this position was achieved is one of the best examples of De Valeran strategy. As described to me by one of his henchmen back in 1932 when Mr. De Valera became head of government and there still was a Governor-General to represent the King the Governor-General became angered over an incident and refused to accept Mr. De Valera's advice. Mr. De Valera then asked the King to recall his Governor-General, which in accordance with custom was done.

Mr. De Valera then recommended to the King the appointment of Daniel Buckley, a staunch Republican but a mild and retiring man. The appointment being made, Mr. De Valera deliberately buried Buckley in a little residence and told him to efface himself from public life.

The result was that the Governor-Generalship in effect disappeared. The master stroke, however came in 1936 when King Edward VIII abdicated. For a period of two days there was no King and in that time Mr. De Valera pushed through his legislature an External Relations Act abolishing the Kingship so far as it concerned Southern Ireland.

The move was so adroit that Britain didn't try to restore the old royal status.

BACK TO HORSE-AND-BUGGY MEDICINE

A good thing for you lucky, lucky people that I get a diaphragmatic laugh out of this job now and then. Were it not so I'd be in a vile temper at this moment, for I haven't bowled in six straight days, on account of wet greens, and life seems pretty dreary when there's no bowling. But fortunately a medical colleague comes to the rescue in the nick of time. He sends me a page torn from a throw-away medical magazine, an item headed:

Physician Excoriates Health Writer

The physician who did the excoriating is not identified, but he did it, the throw-away says, "recently in the Delaware State Medical Journal."

The masked doctor said his comment was inspired by an assertion by Dr. William Brady that tonsillotomy (clippings) is preferable to tonsillectomy (attempting to remove all of the tonsil) for children except in cases of malignancy. The masked physician was puzzled why "any man claiming to be a physician would want to go back to the horse and buggy days. I think the answer is that the man himself has never progressed beyond the horse-and-buggy state. We have pure food and drugs laws. We should have an act protecting the public from such columnists. I suggest that such articles should be submitted to a committee of local doctors for approval before publication."

It will not be news to our readers that I am a quack, nor will they be astonished to learn that I am a horse-and-buggy doctor. If the Delaware masked physician will specify one or more fields of knowledge I'll even admit I am an ignoramus. Aren't we all ignorant in one field or another?

But the Delaware monitor may tear his hair and breathe fire and brimstone if he likes, I'll still say we ought to go back to the horse-and-buggy days so far as the tonsillectomy atrocity is concerned. In the horse-and-buggy days when it was good practice to merely "clip" or slice off a portion of the enlarged tonsil, there were very few fatalities from the operation. That's more than we can say of the crude procedure known as tonsillectomy.

I'll say for the record, that a large minority if not the majority of physicians throughout the country have gone back to the horse-and-buggy days in the treatment of enlarged and infected tonsils, since a well known quack and ignoramus began to enlighten thousands of thousands on certain tricks of the trade.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Wheat For Vitamin B

What foods supply the most vitamin B? Is it necessary to take vitamin pills if you can get all the vitamins you need in the food you eat. (M. F.)

Answer—Wheat is the richest source of vitamin B-complex — not things made from it, but just plain wheat, as purchased from farmer, feed store or seed store by the pound, peck or bushel. Certainly you need no pills if you can get all the vitamins you need in food—but that's a very good trick if you can do it these days. Send stamped self addressed envelope and ask in writing for pamphlet "Wheat to Eat." It tells you how to use plain wheat in the everyday dietary.

Rushing The Season

When I was a child my mother used to give us sulfur and molasses in the spring to purify our blood. (E. A.)

Answer—Mine, too. And we liked the taste of it. About equal quantities of powdered sulfur (flowers of sulfur) and old fashioned molasses — dose, a tablespoonful every day until you cried enough. It is a mild laxative, that's all. But outside of Doctor Horsefeather's Almanac laxatives have nothing to do with the purity of the blood.

Lime For Baby

Is it necessary to supply extra lime in our baby's milk formula. Only rain water is available here. (Mrs. A. V. J.)

Answer—If the baby consumes a quart of milk a day that will supply enough lime (calcium). There is in fact more lime in milk than in lime water, ounce for ounce.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

In "Hamlet" Shakespeare makes the Prince of Denmark say "I am pigeon-livered and lack gall."

The gall bladder is present in most vertebrates, including birds, but it is absent from all doves and pigeons. It is a sac in which the bile secreted by the liver is stored until required for use in the digestive system.

Doves and pigeons, however, do produce bile (or gall) in their livers. They differ from most other vertebrates in having no "gall bladder" in which to store the gall or bile.

The bile is a bitter fluid and the ancients believed that the gall bladder was the seat of bitterness, grief and bad temper. Thus the absence of the gall bladder in the dove, combined with the reputed inoffensive nature of this bird, led to its selection as the symbol of meekness and the emblem of peace. No member of the pigeon family, according to legend, has had a gall since the dove sent from the Ark by Noah burst its gall out of grief.

The dove, as a type of gentleness and harmlessness, plays an important part in Christian symbolism. Jesus, when he was baptized by John the Baptist, saw "the Spirit of God descending like a dove," and when Jesus sent forth his twelve disciples he told them to be as "harmless as doves."

Doves and pigeons, however, are not so peaceful as they have been painted. As a rule they are inoffensive toward other birds and other creatures, but they are quite pugnacious and quarrelsome among their own kind. During the breeding season they often engage in fierce fights. In Shakespeare's III King Henry Clifford says "doves will peck in safeguard of their brood." The ground dove is far from being "as gentle as a dove." Members of this species do not hesitate to attack other birds that they suspect of trying to deprive them of their food, and often they engage in battles among themselves, although apparently none of them ever gets hurt.

Doves, particularly turtledoves, are proverbial for their connubial constancy and affection. In his "Fables" (1726) John Gay wrote:

In constancy and nuptial love
I learn my duty from the dove.

This notion of these birds as the perfect models of conjugal bliss was probably suggested by the fact that they have soft cooing voices, have subdued colorings, mate for more than one season in succession and are most frequently seen in pairs.

History of Stirling Given at W.I. Meeting

Stirling, Dec. 14.—The regular monthly meeting of the Stirling Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. A. Gordanier, recently. Following the opening exercises all joined in singing carols.

It was unanimously decided to send Christmas boxes to four members' sons still overseas. The Salvation Army was voted $25, and $50 to the Amp's Fund in Toronto.

Mrs. Henry Cooke read an article on the historical research "History of Stirling", prepared by Mrs. H. Rollins.

"Stirling, incorporated in the year 1858, is a thriving and prosperous village situated partly in the township of Rawdon and partly in the township of Sidney but in the electoral division of North Hastings. A population of about 1,000. Located in the heart of a thickly settled and fine agricultural part of the county and being possessed of one of the best flour mills in the county, one foundry, sash factory and planing mills also other manufacturers with the Grand Trunk Railway running through it is a central market for the products of the county.

Fire Destroyed Flour Mills

The original flour mills together with a woollen factory were built by Mr. W. Baker in 1852. In Feb. 1868 the flour mills were totally destroyed by fire. The whole of the property was later purchased by the late Mr. D. McDougal who fitted up the woollen factory, a four-storey stone building, at a great expense, as a flour mill, by introducing the best machinery and latest improvements, made it one of the best in the County. It was partly run by water and partly by steam. The mill capacity was about one hundred barrels of flour daily. It was leased by Messrs. J. B. Parker and Walter Craske. In the summer of 1868 Mr. White, M.P., purchased the site and ruins of the old mill and rebuilt it and fitted it up for a first class foundry. It was later purchased by Mr. John Graham and with its capabilities did a good business in the manufacture of steel plows and farm implements in general.

The sash factory and planing mills, (a brick building) was owned by Mr. Wm. Martin and leased by Mr. Wm. Butler and worked by steampower. It contained the best improved machinery of the day and had a thriving business.

John Thompson First Editor

The Grand Junction Railway complete from Belleville to Hastings passed through the village establishing an important market for the shipment of grain, cheese and all products of the farm. Another epoch in the history of the village was the management of a weekly newspaper "The Stirling News Argus"—Mr. John H. Thompson was first editor and proprietor. The village was well supplied with first class drygoods stores, groceries and mechanic shops of all kinds. A great improvement has taken place of late years in its buildings. Stirling suffered greatly by fire but each time the buildings were replaced by more substantial.

Its church accommodation was ample being six in number—Anglican, Presbyterian, Canada Methodist, Episcopal Methodist, Baptist and Roman Catholic.

At that time stages ran twice a day to Belleville—8 a.m., and 2 p.m. Once a day to Marmora 1 p.m., and on Monday, Wednesday and Friday to Campbellford, at 1 p.m.

Village Officials in 1879

Municipal Council in 1879 was Reeve: R. Parker, Councillors: William Martin, Hiram Smith, Phillip Conley and J. H. Bradley.

Village Officers—Clerk F. B. Parker; Treasurer, Jas. Milne; Collector, S. N. Wescott.

Board of Education 1879, Chairman, A. Chard; Treasurer, Ira Williams; Members, G. H. Boulter, M.D., M.P.P.; Jas. Boldrick; R. Parker, M.D.; G. W. Faulkner, M.D.; Jas. Milne; Wm. Martin, F. B. Parker, Uriah Wright; Anson Wright and L. G. Parker; R. Finch, Secretary. Principal of Public School, E. D. Sutherland and assistants, Miss E. Hawkins, Miss Brydon and Miss Houston.

Issuer of Marriage Licenses, Chas. Butler; Post Office, Miss Mary Judd; Montreal Telegraph, Jas. Boldrick; Rector of St. John's Anglican Church, Rev. Thos. Godden; Minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian, Rev. J. Gray.

Electrical Workers Vote to Strike Jan. 1

New York, Dec. 15 (AP)—C.I.O. electrical workers across the United States, following the pattern set by C.I.O. workers in the steel and automobile industries, voted almost five to one in favor of a country-wide strike, nearly complete balloting returns showed.

The vote authorized a walkout of a union-estimated 200,000 workers after Jan. 1 in plants of three of the largest manufacturers of electric appliances — General Electric, Westinghouse and the electrical division of General Motors.

The National Labor Relations Board said 86,794 workers in plants from coast to coast voted in favor of a strike to back up their demands for a $2 daily wage boost: 18,216 balloted against.

Figures released by the C.I.O. United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers agreed with the N.L.R.B. ratio, but showed 86,229 for a strike and 17,225 against. A spokesman said these figures represented 86 per cent of the vote.

The union said official and complete tabulations were expected to be completed later.

The Electric Workers, third largest C.I.O. Union, thus voted to join the United Steelworkers and the United Automobile Workers in taking strike action, but U.E. spokesmen have said no walkout will be called before the first of the year.

About 700,000 steelworkers, asking a $2 daily pay increase, have voted to strike Jan. 14 and 213,000 auto workers walked out of their jobs last Nov. 21 in an effort to win a 30-per-cent wage boost.

COLLEGE CLOSED

Kingston, Dec. 14 — (CP)—An influenza epidemic today forced closing of Regiopolis College, Jesuit-operated boys' school here, until Jan. 8. Officials said 20 students and several masters were ill and decision to close the school was made to prevent further cases.

Light Snow Falls Across Province

Toronto, Dec. 15—(CP)—Light snow throughout Ontario during Thursday night brought some districts their first noticeable fall of the season. Sunshine and moderating temperatures followed Friday in many parts.

The Meteorological Bureau reported the heaviest fall in southwestern and southern Ontario, with as much as three inches recorded. Eastern Ontario generally had little more than a trace, although continuing light snow was forecast.

Residents of Chatham, where about three inches fell, and Galt, with an inch or more, awoke to see their first snow-blanket of the season. In Toronto, about three inches covered the city with thermometers registering about 28 degrees.

The weather continued cold in Northern Ontario with only a trace of snow in the main. Colder weather was forecast for Saturday.

Kitchener, Brantford, Sarnia, London and Stratford all had an inch or more of snow with milder temperatures following.

Highways were slippery in some parts. In Welland, a truck loaded with limestone skidded across a street intersection and crashed into a store window.

82 INJURED IN WRECK

Chicago, Dec. 13 (AP)—Eighty-two passengers, most of them negro sailors, were injured, several seriously, when a two-engine 10-coach Pere Marquette train bound for Grand Rapids, Mich., rammed the rear of an Alton railroad troop train carrying more than 250 naval personnel late yesterday.

VICTORIA AVENUE BAPTIST CHURCH

A beautiful Christmas concert was held Friday evening by the Sunday School of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church. A welcome was sung by the nursery beginner, and primary departments with recitations by Joyce Blackburn and Bobby Waite. Mrs. Lloyd's class presented a colorful and beautifully executed drill and chorus, followed by a recitation "Daddy's Present", by tiny Miss Marilyn Cook.

In "Christmas Bells" by the primary chorus ,the children's voices blended sweetly in the merry little song.

Following a reading "Pillow Fight" by Donald Lockyer a beautiful pantomime was presented by Miss Nora Hale's class while Miss Muriel Jobson sang "Hark the Herald Angels Sing." A recitation "Christening Dolly" was given by Miss Eleanor Blackburn followed by a primary chorus "Glory to God."

A very novel Christmas exercise was presented by the Explorer group. As readings and carols were presented, beautifully colored slides were projected on a "Christmas Book".

Following the singing of carols, led by the C.G.I.T., Trail Rangers and Senior Group, Mrs. Paul Landon, of Ottawa, told the beautiful story of "The Youngest Thief." Mrs. Landon a former pupil of the Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, was welcomed by Rev. H. O. Eastman and presented with a gift from the Sunday School.

ALLIANCE TABERNACLE

The pupils of the Alliance Tabernacle Sunday School held their annual Christmas Concert Friday evening in the Alliance Tabernacle with a capacity crowd in attendance. The program was under the direction of Mr. Roy Atyeo, superintendent of the Sunday School.

Rev. W. M. Willoughby opened the program with prayer. A group composed of Allen Sills, Louise Pitt, Bobby Esmley, Paul Millard, David Freeman, Catherine Millard, Terry Bridle, Joan and Billy Dickey and John and Dorothy Milligan rendered a delightful Christmas song entitled 'Baby Jesus'.

Arnold Conley played a guitar solo "Holy Night" which was followed by another Christmas song "In the Manger" by Carol Garrison, Shirley Pitt, Joan Shindell, Barbara Wickett, Eleanor Rothwell and Marilyn Freeman.

Mrs. Ruth Millard sang "The Holy City", and the quartet, Eunice and Grace Veley, Eleanor Baragar and Margaret Benn. — "Nowhere to lay His Head". This was followed by a piano solo by Grace Veley.

The main feature of the program was the showing of colored slides by the pastor, Rev. C. V. Freeman. The slides depicted the life of Christ and were taken from Tissott's famous paintings.

Prizes for attendance were presented by Mrs. Mary Baragar to Luella Fraser, Lorna Fraser, Shirley Pitt, Eleanor Baragar, Bill Emsley and June and Billy Whittaker.

The Rev. C. V. Freeman closed the program with prayer.

UNIVERSITY WOMEN'S CLUB

The Women's University Club of Belleville held their December meeting on Thursday, December 13th, in the collegiate, and packed a number of boxes of excellent used clothing. These are to be shipped to the president of the University Women's Clubs of Holland for distribution in that country. The members of the club had refreshments later at the home of Mrs. H. T. Turley, Bellevue Apts.

W.C.T.U.

The Christmas meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union was held at the home of Mrs. W. Sharpe, Highland Ave. on Dec. 11, at 3 p. m. A very interesting program was provided with Mrs. M. Denton presiding. Mrs. E. Farnsworth had charge of the devotional and in her usual fine manner presented to all the true meaning of Christmas. The singing of Christmas carols at this time was much enjoyed.

Prof. Hunt then gave a very fine address on the life of Handel and his famous oratorio "The Messiah," known and sung around the world. In conclusion he rendered "The Hallelujah Chorus."

Rev. Donald C. Amos, Bridge Street Church, brought a beautiful Christmas message centred around the star, the guiding light of mankind. The star of Bethlehem will guide the human race through life and only as we follow the star will we enter the port of glory in safety. He spoke of the value of the work of the organization as a union and commended it in its efforts to curb the evil of intemperance.

Mrs. N. Montgomery gave a reading "A Christmas Story of God's Dream," after which Mrs. Arnold Dilts sang "Silent Night." Rev. Farnsworth closed this part of the program with prayer.

Refreshments were served with Mrs. N. Farley and Mrs. H. B. Fairfield pouring tea.

Golden Wedding Anniversary Is Observed

Wooler — Relatives here recently received word of the "Golden Wedding Anniversary" which was observed on November 6th, 1945, at Coleman, Mich., of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Mainprize.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Huber, their son-in-law and daughter (Mabel) entertained in their honor, all members of the family to a dinner on the Sunday previous. The table was attractively decorated with lovely autumn flowers and centred with a wedding cake. Beautiful mums were placed in various parts of the dining room. Following the dinner, pictures were taken of the four generations present. They were: the guests of honor, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Mainprize, their son, Ray of Sanford, Mich.; his daughter, Mrs. Laura Anderson and her son, Jimmy of Wayne.

At Home to Friends

Mr. and Mrs. Mainprize were "at home" to their friends and neighbors on Tuesday, November 6. During the day, approximately thirty-five guests paid calls to the honored couple. They were recipients of many lovely gifts, including several floral bouquets, house plants and cards. A beautiful bouquet of golden chrysanthemums with gold edged ribbons was presented from members of the East Geneva Ladies' Aid and other neighbors. Another much appreciated gift from their children was a new Phil-gas stove.

Those to attend the Sunday dinner from a distance included Mr. and Mrs. Ray Mainprize of Sanford, Mich., Mrs. Robert Bowman and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Anderson with their children, Jimmy, Larry and Diane, all of Wayne; Mr. and Mrs. Ross Walter and son of Freeland, Mich. Places were set for seventeen.

49 Years in Coleman

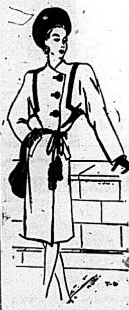
Mr. and Mrs. Mainprize have been residents of Coleman Mich., in Geneva township for the past forty-nine years. Prior to that time they resided in Canada. Mrs. Mainprize is the former Miss Louise Hennessy, daughter of the late Mr. Isaac Hennessy and his life, Miss Chloe Sharpe of Wooler and Mr. Mainprize, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Mainprize (nee Sarah Vermilyea) also of Wooler. Both Mr. and Mrs. Mainprize are very active for their years, he is seventy-five and his wife is seventy-seven years young. Since going to Michigan they have conducted farming activities and always have taken an interest in their home, family and community affairs. They have three children Ray of Sanford, Mich., Harry of Saginaw and Mrs. Henry Huber (Mabel) of Coleman, Mich. There are also fourteen grandchildren and seven great grandchildren. Their marriage was officiated in Frankford, Ont., on Nov. 6, 1895.

Mr. and Mrs. George Chard and son Allan were Sunday guests of relatives in Frankford.

Mr. Evan McAlpine of London Ont., has returned home after a few days visit with his great uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Arnley Masters.

Mrs. Charles Sharpe is recuperating from an attack of a nervous heart disorder.

Unfurred Flattery



Pale beige Winter coat

CHIC, WARMTH and distinction mark many of the newest fabric coats that manage to achieve such distinction without benefit of fur trimming. This smart coat of pale beige, heavy pile wool has a deep armhole accented by bands of black braid. The corded belt has tassled ends and three large black braid covered buttons.

For Debutante Doings

By PRUNELLA WOOD.

This is the first December in many a year that the pretty girls will make formal bows to society with many of the traditional trappings. It is safe to say that few will have parents heartless enough to spend the price of a yacht on one evening's entertainment, even if they have the price. The world has too much need of money just to live.

But there is no reason why simpler parties which mark the debut will not be widely planned. The dressmaker suit (here broadcloth with Persian trim) and a chic hat, is what the girls' mothers will choose to wear often. That hat is a high black pillbox with overlapping brim sections, each section edged with a swirl of orchid green clipped ostrich, heavy mesh veil.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Sailor's Best Girl Elopes With A Soldier.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have a very difficult letter to write to my brother, and just what to stay I don't know. He is in the Navy, and at present somewhere near Japan. Last Christmas he was "serious" with a girl and sent me quite a large sum of money to buy her a friendship ring. I spent hours looking for the loveliest ring that could be bought for the money, and, come Christmas Day, I gave it to her in the name o' my brother. We were astounded and shocked when she flew into a rage, demanding why I hadn't chosen a sapphire with diamonds, instead of a ruby with diamonds. She was weeping when she left, banged the front door after her, and of course I was heart-broken that she did not approve of my choice.

A while later she came back to apologize, but then and there I realized that she was not the girl for my brother to marry, for he is so good and fine and thoughtful. She is only eighteen, is at times (as you see) cruelly outspoken, and thinks only of having a good time. She and her mother never could get along together, and as her mother said, she is unmanageable and they were always quarreling. Still the girls always told us that she could hardly wait for my brother to come home so they could be married. Last summer, when he was home on leave, I told him not to rush into marriage until he was out of the service, could go back to college or take a business course, and so prepare himself to support a wife. He is a smart boy, agreed with my point of view, and heeded my advice.

Now, Mrs. Beeckman, here's what happened. Lately a rumor came to us that the girl had married a soldier. I wrote to the City Hall, and they verified the rumor. The girl eloped, was married without her mother's knowing it, and is now on her honeymoon. What can I write to my brother. and how can I write it? I'd rather he got the news from me than from his friends. Will you help me, please?

Mrs. M. W.

Your brother is a very fortunate young man, as you know now, and as I'm positive he'll realize soon. Her mother's description of her as "unmanageable" is apparently grimly true, and her cruel treatment of her mother, in not confiding to her her plans to marry, is indicative of her lack of character and regard for anyone but herself and her own immature desires.

If I were you, I would in the letter to your brother, write him only the briefest outline of the news. . .that you had heard the rumor that she had married a soldier, and that the City Hall record verified this; that she had eloped and that she had not told her mother until after she had been married. Please don't make any comments about the marriage, and please make no comments about the girl. He'll appreciate your taste and restraint and he'll need and welcome your words of love.

Ottawa (CP) — When you thought of gathering a supply of Christmas goodies this year you may have decided that candy was still out of the question, that while the present sugar ration was maintained the family would have to make do with the small quantities of commercial sweets available.

But the children especially love their Christmas candy and varieties which make large use of popcorn are a treat—as well as being easy on small digestions and also on the sugar and butter supply.

Popcorn balls, made with molasses, require 1-3 cup of light molasses, 3-4 cup of sugar, 1-4 cup of water, 1-4 teaspoon of vinegar, 1-4 teaspoon of salt, 1 1-2 tablespoons of butter and six cups of popped corn.

Combine molasses, sugar, water, vinegar and salt. Cook slowly without stirring until a small quantity will separate into heavy threads when dropped into cold water. Remove from heat and add butter, stirring only enough to mix. Pour over the popped corn, stirring constantly and shape quickly into balls.

Butterscotch may be used instead of molasses taffy recipe but it requires more sugar.

For butterscotch balls, yielding about twice as much as the previous recipe, you need one cup of sugar, 1-4 cup of firmly packed brown sugar, 1-2 cup of butter, one tablespoon of vinegar, two tablespoons of boiling water, a pinch of salt and 10 to 12 cups of popped corn.

Combine the sugars, butter, vinegar, water and salt. Cook slowly stirring constantly, until the mixture boils, then boil slowly, stirring until heavy threads will form when a small quantity is dropped into cold water. Pour over the popped corn and form into balls. Commercially prepared puffed cereals may be used in these recipes instead of popped corn.

When you are shopping around for Christmas confections keep your eye out for peanuts, says the Nutrition Division. The nuts take high marks as providers of protein and niacin, the anti-pellagra vitamin. A round tablespoon of peanut butter, contains a third of the protein contained in an average serving of meat, and the regular 1 1-8 ounce package of roasted peanuts contains one half. Peanuts are listed in Canada's Four Rules as a meat alternate for this season.

After the paper doll fanciers have finished with your scissors they are bound to be pretty dull so keep a piece of sandpaper in your sewing basket to tide you over this emergency. To sharpen the scissors cut through the sandpaper several times..and sew through it too if the needle on your machine seems blunt.

Keep a clothes pin or a marble in the sewing catch-all for mending holes in the fingers of gloves.

Sew jersey seams with tissue paper backing to prevent puckering or stretching..you can pull the paper away easily afterward.

The government-sponsored bill to increase the sessional indemnity of Members of the Commons and the Senate from $4,000 to $6,000 was given third and final reading after a two-hour debate. The measure now awaits approval by the Senate.

Only two members in the 245-man House opposed the measure—Angus MacInnis (CCF — Vancouver East) and H. W. Herridge (People's CCF—Kootenay West). Mr. MacInnis felt it was an unwise move at a time of declining wages; Mr. Herridge objected to the fact the increased allowance would be tax-free.

Defended by Prime Minister

Prime Minister Mackenzie King who sponsored the measure defended it vigorously, contending that the financial burden placed on parliamentarians, in living away from their homes during the session and abandoning their businesses, was preventing some of the best men from standing for election.

Mr. King was supported by the leaders of the three opposition parties and the membership of the House generally.

The debate-stirring Bretton Woods monetary agreements, object of a five-day Social Credit filibuster which carried over last weekend, hurdled their last barrier in the Commons when the House formally ratified Canadian adherence to the proposals by a 169-9 vote.

The division was forced by the Social Credit group as it carried its vigorous opposition to the bill to the last step.

The vote was preceded by considerable debate with John Blackmore (SC—Lethbridge) and Solon Low, Social Credit leader, continuing their arguments against the proposals and Gordon Fraser (PC—Peterborough West), J. M. Macdonnell (PC—Muskoka-Ontario), Hughes Clever (L—Halton) and William Irvine (CCF—Cariboo) speaking in favor of them.

Division in Senate

The bill also resulted in a division in the Senate, the first and only one of the session, when the Upper House voted 28-9 against a motion by Senator John Haig, Progressive Conservative leader, to adjourn the debate until Monday. He complained against a matter of such importance being laid before the House the night before prorogation of parliament, terming it "indecent haste."

The Senate then placed the final stamp of parliamentary approval on Canadian entry into the agreements.

Another House committee was proposed when J. P. MacNicol (PC—Toronto Davenport) suggested the establishment of a committee of Commons and Senate members to study the question of Indian affairs.

Mr. Glenn, whose department also administers Indian affairs, expressed agreement with the proposal and said the committee could hear representations from the Indians themselves and perhaps draft a new Indian affairs act which might largely embody the desires of the Indians.

Basement Classrooms Will Have To be Utilized to Accommodate Public School Pupils Board Told

Want City Council to Set Up Reserve Fund Which Will be Matched by Department of Education

Lack of sufficient accommodation in Belleville public schools will necessitate the opening of two and possibly three basement class rooms by June, 1946, it was brought out at the last regular meeting for the year of the Board of Education held at the Collegiate on Friday evening.

That principals in Belleville schools would be forced to this procedure to provide accommodation for a growing number of pupils was brought out as result of the recent school survey which was conducted in the city in an effort to ascertain what school accommodation might be needed in the city within the next few years.

With schools in some instances, notably Queen Mary and Queen Victoria, already badly overcrowded, the survey showed that all four public schools in the city would have a considerably greater enrolment by 1950 when there would be an estimated 220 additional pupils attending public school. Present enrolment is 1,777.

Facilities Only to June

Preliminary conclusions drawn by the special committee appointed to arrange for the school survey, were that present school facilities are sufficient only to provide the obligatory and minimum program of the elementary school system until June, 1946. After that date lack of accommodation will force discontinuing of home economics and shop classes for Grade VIII and will prohibit any necessary expansion for opportunity classes. At the same time there will be the necessity of accommodating two or three classes in school basement rooms.

Confronted with the above conditions regarding insufficient accommodation in public schools, board members in a recommendation which will be passed on to city council stressed the necessity for additional class room space in the city public school system and with the view of possible future expansion suggested that a reserve fund be set up through the levying of an additional two or two-and-one half mills. This would provide from $20,000 to $25,000 per year, an amount which would be matched by the Department of Education.

Matter Tabled.

Installation of a traffic light on Dundas Street to control traffic passing in front of Queen Alexandra School during the period when children may be crossing the street to and from their homes came up for considerable discussion during the meeting with correspondence from the city clerk and police department being read. Upon advice from the city council that the highways department would have to be consulted regarding what type of traffic light could be installed, the matter was tabled until further information was forthcoming.

That the operation of the two city playgrounds in the east and west ends of the city during the two holiday months was a success was indicated with the reading of a report from J. E. Shortt showing that a total of 14,650 children had used the facilities during the two-month period. The playgrounds had been closed for the season late in August with the staging of a special field day when the children participated in competitive sports.

Salary Adjustments.

Recommendations regarding salary adjustments for members of the teaching staff of the Collegiate Vocational School were ratified in committee as a whole, the recommendations having come from a joint meeting of the Advisory Vocational and Collegiate Management Committees. Salary adjustment recommendations from the public school management committees regarding salaries of public school teaching staff were also ratified by the board.

The resignation of Miss E. A. "Betty" Earshman as public health nurse for the schools was accepted with the secretary ordered to express to Miss Earshman appreciation for her services over a period of years as school nurse.

In the report of the high school principal, George E. Currie, the total enrolment in evening classes at the Collegiate was 240 with an average attendance of 81.8 per cent. Three Department of Education officials had visited the school during the month with resultant complimentary remarks regarding the work of teachers. The director of music considered Mr. Maybee's work to be outstanding while the assistant director of physical education paid tribute to the work being done by Miss Morton, stating her duties were very heavy. Mr. Townsend's program was also considered by the officials as being heavy.

Attendance Normal

Public school attendance during the month of November continued approximately the same as for October, according to the report of Inspector-Administrator, L. A. Kells, the only decrease being at Queen Mary School.

Efficiency was stated to be fractionally above November of last year with a total of 15 classes in all four schools having over 95 per cent efficiency. Arrangements had been made to assist in the training of five student teachers in the public schools.

The nurses report showed that 665 children had been inspected individually with findings recorded in the nurse's office. The second treatment for diphtheria and whooping cough immunization was given by Dr. Cronk, medical health officer with 21 more children being added to the list. An extra clinic will be held for those who had their first treatment in November. Only four cases of communicable diseases had been recorded during the month.

In closing business for the year board members voted to again hire Mr. Fred Wiggins as truant officer at the same salary of $1,000 per annum, while Chairman Crosby considered it the duty of every member of the board to attend the annual commencement exercises at the collegiate. Exercises will be held on January 18th it was stated by Principal George Currie, with Dr. Wallace, of Queen's University to act as the guest speaker.

Members present at the board included Chairman Crosby, McCulloch, Harrison, Wishart, Shortt, Finkle, Cushing, Fetterly, Sisler and Geen.

Canadians Send Help To Thirteen Countries

To collect old clothing from all over Canada and ship it to thirteen distressed European countries was the bulky and rather awkward task faced this Fall by the Canadian United Allied Relief Fund on behalf of UNRRA.

The drive was a great success, amassing 12,000,000 pounds and more to come, writes I. N. S. in The Ottawa Journal. We know how local collection committees drummed publicity and worked voluntarily to put each town and city in good stead. We have not heard much about the national organization that handled the stuff once the local committees boxed and shipped it holus bolus to one of twelve national warehouses.

The answers were given me this week in one of those drab Wartime Temporary buildings by the Supreme Court, in the offices of the Canadian Mutual Aid Board. The Board set up a special department to do the job, the Warehousing and Baling Division. A duller title could not be found, nor a more modest crew. But penetrate their barriers of wall charts, push-pins, shipping schedules and unrevealing statistics and you find a very human story based on good will and good organization.

• •

It began with the distress in Europe. UNRRA saw that liberated countries would need clothing. UNRRA knew that new clothing was unavailable even in America. The United States put on a drive in the Spring of 1945 and from 132,000,000 people collected 110,000,000 pounds. Canada undertook to follow.

Canadian objective was 10,000,000 pounds, and the national organization (Warehousing and Baling Division) established 12 regional warehouses to receive the unsorted material from every town, city and hamlet in the country.

The aim was to handle the stuff quickly and get it overseas for use this Winter if at all possible. Chances had to be taken. Shipping space had to be ordered in advance, even without assurance the boots and coats and nighties would be there to fill the space. And since different articles require different type of handling there had to be some guess made as to what clothing would be received.

A meeting was called of the bosses, secretaries, stenographers, office boys and what not. Each was asked what he would have to give. The estimates were translated into national figures. I have seen these printed estimates under September date and I have seen the final results. Here are some—estimate first and actual percentage of gross intake second: Men's heavy clothing, 22½, 21; women's heavy clothing, 25, 18.7; underwear, all kinds, 4, 5.6; infants' clothing, 1, 2.6; shoes, 5.5, 14.4; hats, 5, 9.

• •

The drive opened October 1 and was to close October 20. As enthusiasm was slow starting in some places, the campaign was continued to October 30.

The stuff began pouring into warehouses as early as October 2. There it had to be sorted and placed into 100-pound bales, 34 by 17 by 17 inches in size. Each country was sent the right mixture of clothing, women's, children's, men's, heavy, light, shoes, coats, etc.

The bales were then addressed to one of the following countries: China, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, France, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Yugoslavia, Russia, Greece, Italy, Austria—and to some displaced persons.

On each bale were stamped three large maple leaves with the word Canada stencilled alongside. Planted among the clothing, in pockets or lying on loose material were tiny cards bearing the maple leaf and the inscription: "From the people of Canada, one one of the United Nations."

First bale was produced in a warehouse October 3, or one day after the first material arrived. By October 11 over 100,000 pounds of material were coming in daily, and by October 12 over 100,000 pounds were being baled daily.

• •

Today's figures show the gross clothing receipts at something over 12,000,000 pounds, more than 2,000,000 beyond the objective. Of these 11,864,580 pounds have already been baled and are either in the countries to which they were assigned, on the high seas, waiting at ship-side or waiting in warehouses for shipping space. First load to leave Canadian shores was for Belgium and the Luxembourg, November 3. By the end of November 6,426,425 pounds had been loaded on ships.

That paragraph is heavy with statistics, but it is a natural source of pride to the men behind the job that they were in fact able to handle their goods almost as quickly as they were received. No stalling about, no high rental fees, no delay to needy people. Democracy moved.

And moving was not easy. Coordinating train and warehouse and ship space these days takes a bit of doing. Nor was it simply a job of handing the whole thing to the C.P.R. or C.N.R., the easy way. Ships of all nations were used: The Sofie Bakke to Poland, the Van der Helst for The Netherlands, the Prince Andrej, for Yugoslavia, and so on.

• •

Are 12,000,000 pounds of clothes a lot? Think of it this way. Half of that amount was heavy clothing. We wear about five pounds of heavy clothing each — not counting the light underthings, etc. Thus a million and a quarter people will be given an outfit of heavy clothing. There were one million pairs of shoes, only three and one half percent of these being unmated.

It was impossible to count the items of each class of clothing, but the statement that half the weight was in heavy clothing is revealing. That means suits, coats, skirts, sweaters, raincoats. Officers were astounded at the high quality. Plans were made for elaborate cleaning and de-lousing operations but proved virtually unnecessary. Most clothing arrived freshly laundered. No de-lousing was necessary.

A good deal of the clothing seemed hardly used, perhaps sent because it didn't fit well or was out of style. Some folks sent money with a few bits of apparel, explaining they regretted they hadn't more clothing to send. Many sent letters in the pockets, greetings to the destitute peoples. These were left in the clothes, as were bars of soap, and little presents. Food was removed or anything which if crushed might spoil the materials.

• •

Some very expensive articles were received, fur coats and hats, scarcely used heavy riding boots and shoes. The general range was wide: Army tunics, including one from the Boer war, ecclesiastical robes, policemen's uniforms, waiters' jackets, R.M.C. blazers, fireman's hat. All insignia was taken off uniforms and the materials were dyed.

The Warehousing and Baling Division often encountered humanity itself. One lady called to say she had left her diamond ring in a garment. It had been received from the local committee in a large shipment of clothes to be baled by the national warehouse. The third parcel opened produced the ring, traced by date and source.

An Ottawa Army nurse had two parcels—one her tunic for the cleaners and the other her old clothes for the drive. You know what happened. They recovered her tunic. Volunteer workers on the Brantford committee found at night's end that in their enthusiasm they had packed their own coats and hats. They were recovered from the Toronto warehouse.

Odd and kindly notes came with clothes. One or two sending un-mated shoes labelled them as such to save hunting. Many packages were neatly laid out like Christmas presents with ribbons. Some merchants gave crates of out-of-style garments, corsets and the like.

• •

As is so often the case — the small towns and villages did better on a per capita basis than the large cities. British Columbia was the leading province, Quebec the tail-ender. The Canadian officials are rather proud of their cost figures—an over-all estimate of charges from donor to ship's hold of less than $850,000, all paid by UNRRA, comes to something around seven cents a pound for clothes. Try going to a second hand store to buy ten pounds of clothing—or one complete outfit —for 70 cents. Try to buy the kind of clothing given in this campaign at a second hand store at any price!

In fact, it all went so well, so cheaply, so quickly — that they may do it all over again next year.

Toronto Named by Governors Of National Hockey League To be New Home of Loop

Head Office in Montreal Will be Moved to Queen City as Soon as Suitable Quarters Can be Found

By FRED KERNER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Dec. 15 — (CP)—The National Hockey League is going to have a new home — Toronto.

Loop president Mervyn (Red) Dutton said today the governors of the 28-year-old circuit have approved the change, and Canada's Queen City has been selected to house the N.H.L. head office. The move, Dutton added, will take place lock, stock and barrel, as soon as suitable offices can be obtained in Toronto.

"It's not that we don't like Montreal and the comfortable layout we have in the Sun Life building," the league head said, "but the governors feel that with the league expanding in the near future, Toronto is going to be much more central."

Art Ross, congenial mentor of Boston Bruins, chimed in with: "Besides, it's much easier to get overnight train reservations to Toronto. Just try and get a berth out of Boston to Montreal — you either sit up all day or sit up all night."

Three Applications

Talking of expansion, Dutton added that the league governors considered three applications for franchises at their meeting yesterday. The trio of new bids all came from west coast United States cities — two from Los Angeles and one from San Francisco.

"Of course nothing will be done about these applications until the annual meeting in July," he said. "At that time they will be fully considered along with about six others we have received during the war years."

"I can see this league expanded to 14 or 16 teams inside of three years, probably divided into three sections — one of them a west coast division. With air travel improving so rapidly, by that time weather will be no hindrance to flying and the teams will be playing an 80 to 100 game schedule.

"We've only scratched the surface with regard to hockey's possibilities. Despite depression years, the league's figures show a financial gain yearly for the last 15 seasons."

Dutton and Ross were pleased with the "new deal" approved by the governors whereby players will get a larger share of play-off money. The arrangement calls for total receipts, less expenses, for the initial four games in each series to be shared by the players on the teams concerned.

The league's five per cent usually taken henceforth from the fifth, sixth and seventh games of post-season series if they last that long. They felt it added incentive for a player to help his team get into and win the Stanley Cup series.

Sharing of the "new deal" money will be discussed at the February meeting of the governors, but Dutton felt the system where proportionate sharing depended on final loop standing and play-off standing will prevail as it has in the past.

Refereeing came in for lengthy discussion at yesterday's meeting and the governors passed a motion expressing appreciation for the "fine work the referees have done."

Hockey Sidelights

By ED FITKIN

Toronto—Recently Bill Tobin, manager of the Chicago Black Hawks, received a wire from Kansas City which read, in effect: "Doc Romnes in hospital with infection—send us a coach."

Tobin scouted around, discovered that there was no one immediately available, so he decided he'd go to Kansas City for a week end masterminding fling. Bill was doing okay, too, until he suddenly hit the roof over one of the decisions and invaded the ice to protest.

Invading the ice, as you may know, is a costly business. If a manager does the trick, he's fined $100. If a coach is guilty of the infringement, the fine is $50.

But Tobin's official status had the league fine-collectors baffled. So they asked him whether he was coach or manager of the Kaycees. Wily Bill, always quick where a buck is concerned, snapped right back: "I was the coach, of course!"

TOMMY GORMAN, who keeps Montreal hockey conscious during the winter and summer, claims that Floyd Curry, former Oshawa junior and Toronto Navy star, is not only a second Charlie Conacher but will be even greater than the Big Bomber of the ice lanes.

Well, if Curry, who is on Canadiens' negotiation list and is currently operating with Montreal Royals, does turn out to be better than Conacher, no one but Charlie himself will deserve the credit because it was Conacher who took Curry aside when he was with Oshawa and taught him all the tricks of the trade. Charlie liked young Curry and was never too busy to help him. Apparently Floyd was an attentive pupil because he is little short of sensational with the Royals and is ticketed for early delivery to Canadiens.

Speaking of Canadiens, the Habs have a new name for Dick Irvin. They call him Eddie— and Irvin explains it this way: "Ever since Eddie Shore had that fuss at New Haven the boys have been calling me Eddie Shore. It's just a joke." Bill Durnan, who happened to be close at hand, scoffed: "Joke nothing. This Shore — this Simon Legree—drove us for an hour and forty-five minutes in practice the other day. So it's Eddie Shore now on and no joking."

WHEN HAL WALKER of the Toronto Globe and Mail was on the East Coast with the RCNVR, he decided to look up Gord Drillon. But he could find no Drillon in the phone book in Moncton. Puzzled, Hal looked up a pal. "Oh," said his friend, "you mean Lefty Drillon—sure his name is in the phone book." He gave Walker Drillon's address and the phone number. "Say," Hal ribbed Gordie when he finally reach him. "I thought you were Moncton's white-haired boy—why they don't even know how to spell your name. They've got it D-r-i-l-l-e-n in the phone book." Gordie laughed. "The joke is on you," he said. "That's the proper way to spell the name. You Toronto sportswriters started spelling it o-n, so I let it go. It looked all right to me. But it is e-n."

Fancy that! All these years a star and his name spelled wrong!

HIS MAPLE LEAF mates now call Mel Hill—Mel Nobody—which derives from the fact that Andy (Star) Lytle recently wrote that Apps and Stewart were okay but they had nobody on right wing... Bob Davidson, Gus Bodnar, Bob Goldham and Teeder Kennedy of the Leafs recently went duck-hunting... Davidson and Bodnar bagged two birds each but Goldham and Kennedy fired blanks... Which leads Satchell Seezall to remark: "What's so odd about that? Them Leafs allus did have trouble tryin' to bag birds—speshully the Wings and Hawks."... Wide Mike McMahon apparently still harbors a grudge against his teammate, Maurice Richard. In pre-season training, McMahon and Richard came to blows. McMahon later asked Elmer Ferguson what the Herald advertising rates were. "I just want to advertise," explained Mike, "that I'm going to run this guy Richard right out of the league—because he can't take it." ...In a recent Canadien practice, according to report, McMahon took exception to a check by Richard that injured young Leo Gravelle, former St. Mike's star, so Mike went out of his way to bop Maurice the Magnifique... Result: Richard was on the limp for several days ... Herb Goran of the New York Sun spins a tall one...He says Lester Patrick asked $100,000 for Charlie Rayner when the Leafs recently made overtures for the Ranger goalie... Then says Goran, Patrick asked the Leafs how much they wanted for Apps... "Well," was the reply, "200,000 sounds like a good price."

THAT MAN'S HERE AGAIN

The habitual smile on his face and with twenty-two pounds of excess avoirdupois tucked under his belt, Ken. J. Colling, sports editor of the Great Family Journal strolled into the editorial rooms of this newspaper yesterday afternoon. A big cigar slanted at a forty-five degree angle (whereinell does he get 'em) from his mouth. His hat was tilted back on his head, (he got the idea from a wood cutting of a newspaperman of the early nineties) and his infectious smile had the slaves on their feet.

Seems as though K. J. C. who has held down a popular berth in the Hamilton San for the past few months decided to give the east a break and accordingly got himself transferred to the Kingston General Hospital where he will hold forth until the gentle Spring zephyrs blow after which he will come back to his native bailiwick and put the sports picture of this city and district back into the old familiar frame.

Ken will remain in the city until Monday when he takes off for the Limestone City and his address from this point on will be in care of the Kingston General Hospital.

ONE FOR THE REDS

The Kingston scribe who "Mike-ro-phones" daily anent the doings of the Van Horne hockey series appears to think highly of our galloping Redmen. He has the following to say about the game the other night when the scarlet-sweatered gang from the Bay of Quinte drew into a three-way tie for league championship.

"As a team Belleville carried too much class for the Vimys to match and their strength is so well divided that they are at least even favorites to win the championship.

"This team boasts potential strength that cannot be lightly regarded by the other occupants of that top rung. However, they will have no easy task remaining up there as two of their last three games will be waged against Locos and the Bears. Locos have a game in hand over Barriefield and Belleville and at the moment are logical favorites to finish in first place.

* * *

"The Meagher brothers, Bernard and Allen, were the outstanding forwards in this game, accounting for seven of Belleville's fifteen points. Bernard, smallest of all the competitors, scored two goals and had as many assists while Allen got a counter and two assists. They were very persistent and efficient and mighty fine junior artists in senior company.

Mike Kerluk, chunky Vimy defenceman, bowed to no other player on either team and was given a hand by the fans when he scored the tailenders' first goal and aided in the registering of the last one. Goalkeeper Somerville also played brilliantly and repeatedly deprived visiting marksmen of goals after they had eluded all other opponents.

* * *

"So stubbornly did the lowly Vimys battle that it was not until over eight minutes of the opening period had been played that Bernard Meagher scored after "Speedy" St. Louis and Allen Meagher had done some smart passing. Fifty seconds later Barrett, helped by the Meagher boys, raised the Reds' total to two.

"Early in the middle round the Meagher brothers struck again with Bernard doing the firing, and four minutes later the slippery Leo Goyer went in alone to lengthen the lead. The session was almost over before Bernard Meagher got his next counter, with Vernon Goyer figuring in the attack. Two penalties to Moher handicapped the Reds but the Soldiers failed to take advantage of these opportunities.

"Nothing daunted, the courageous Vimys came out "skating" in the final period and their joy was great, indeed, when Kerluk, aided by McDonnell, whipped the puck into the cords. This achievement signalized other attacks which were launched with determination but one of these backfired when Timothy "Eaton" Williams broke away and passed to Baldwin who hit the twine.

"The Vimys renewed their rushing tactics immediately and Goalkeeper Cook was kept busy stopping their shots. Midway through the period Smith, Kerluk and Gaw got several shots in quick succession at the cage before Gaw finally outguessed the acrobatic Cook. The Reds then did a bit of rallying on their own account and at the 10.30 mark Wardaugh took a pass from Leo Goyer and brought the scoring to a close with a wicked shot from close range."

Toronto, Dec. 15 — (CP)—It's all a complicated matter of thoroughbred bloodlines calculated to make any two-buck bettor scurry for cover behind the nearest stud book, but if a horse by Boswell out of Zip Zip wins the Kentucky Derby along about 1950 the triumph will carry with it the sweet tang of romance, mint juleps and moonlight among the shedrows.

A beautiful blond, her sentimental suitor from the blue grass and a martinet father who drowned on horse players weave their personalities through this fiction-like tale about the mating of a Titan of the turf and a plodding mare that won two races in four years against the shoddiest steels extant.

That's the buildup and this is the story, as told by Joe (Toronto Star) Perlove:—

Long years ago before the starting gate was invented and with the totalizator still a dream, Jack Keene went to Memphis with some yearlings, developed a tender romance with a golden-haired girl and broke it off because the girl's father objected. At final parting, the girl suggested Keene someday name a filly after her.

So for 15 years Keene sought a chestnut, with flaxen mane and tail, good enough to name for Jean Bowdre of Memphis.

Finally he found one and the filly came up to a big race at Churchill Downs. In a grandstand box that day as guests of Keene sat Jean Bowdre of Memphis and the husband of her father's choice. The filly flashed across the wire in front and Keene to his dying day insisted that Jean Bowdre, the filly, wrung the last ounce from her thoroughbred heart because Jean Bowdre, the girl, was in the stands.

The story switches now to modern times and Canada, where John Clark of Lexington, Ky., arrives in search of broodmares. Clark, one of Keene's old associates, immediately buys Zip Zip, slow-moving mare reaching the end of an unpretentious Ontario racing career.

Behind the purchase of the broken-down racer by the man from thoroughbred-wise Kentucky is the knowledge of her foaling some years ago on Keene's farm and one other nostalgic touch — Zip Zip, bless her homely hide, is a grand-daughter of Jean Bowdre!

Not only that but Jean Bowdre through another daughter Fantine has a lineal connection with Lord Boswell, one of North America's outstanding two-year-olds and a stablemate of Maine Chance farm's Star Pilot, voted two-year-old colt of the year. (Clark takes a rain check on that one; he thinks Lord Boswell will strangle Star Pilot next year).

The sire of Lord Boswell is Boswell, recently leased by Palmer Wright of the Ontario Jockey Club and now standing at Gil Darlington's farm in Trafalgar, Ont.

And so the picture is complete. Zip Zip will be one of 37 mares mated to Boswell next season and if the romance of racing means anything the product of that mating will be a glistening chestnut filly, with flaxen mane and tail.

In his appeal for remission of the one-year suspension for alleged doping of Magnific Duel at Jamaica Nov. 1, trainer Tom Smith last night told the State Racing Commission and Jockey Club at New York he had never drugged an animal in his long turf career. He admitted, however, he had sprayed horses of Maine Chance farm with a mild solution of ephedrine which he did not consider a stimulant.

Dr. Harry Gold of Cornell University told the hearing that ephedrine was not a stimulant unless an enormous quantity was used.

President Will Harridge of the American Baseball League yesterday announced the resumption of the majors' all-star game next season, the 13th renewal of which was scheduled July 9 at Fenway Park, Boston. It was called off last summer because of war traffic.

The first round yesterday of the Fort Worth $10,000 Golfing Open brought in E. J. Harrison of Little Rock, Ark., and Joe Zarhardt, Norristown, Pa., with 695 to tie for first place. A stroke behind were seven pros and two amateurs. Course par is 71.

Jean Pusie, well known Montreal athlete, was booked last night at police headquarters there on a technical charge of being in possession of a revolver. Police declined to reveal details of the arrest, but said investigations are continuing.

Cleveland Indians finally announced the much-reported deal yesterday, outfielder Jeff Heath being trade to Washington Senators in a straight exchange for outfielder George Washington Case, with no money involved.

University of Western Ontario Mustangs went down to a 52-31 defeat before University of Detroit in an exhibition basketball match last night at Detroit. Chief scorer for the winners was Gino Sovran who formerly performed for Windsor's Assumption College, his total being 14 points.

The senior basketball squad of University of Toronto lost a 50-25 exhibition tilt to undefeated Wayne University at Detroit last night. Capt. Gord Wallace and coach Roy Dilworth failed to arrive in time from Toronto when their plane was delayed by bad weather.

Doncaster, England — (CP) — Alderman E. Wilburn, Chairman of the race committee, told a meeting of Doncaster Town Council that it is hoped to resume racing here next year.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

LESSON NO. 668
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

A handful of good rules is better for you than a big load of ideas that confound you in action. The only few bridge rules you need are compactly assembled in the Horse Sense system.

In a few days, I will start you off on a long series about leads. It may be some time before we get back to bidding again. Therefore, clip the summary you see here today and keep it for reference.

An opener promises five tricks (high cards and shorts), four of which are high cards (aces, kings, queens), two of which are sure. Before responding, partner is assumed to have two tricks.

Bids follow T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump. A takeout to a new suit forces for one round. An increase in number shows another suit trick. A voluntary no-trump bid shows another high card.

Apply the meaty rules in the last two breaths and you can handle expertly 90% of all the bridge hands in the world. Use them in any pair of hands and you will get by in good company.

Make yourself comfortable in this pair:

SOUTH
♠K J 5
♥A Q 6
♦6 2
♣A K 8 6 4
NORTH
♠7 6 3
♥K 8 4
♦A Q J 9 7
♣Q 9

The bidding will go like this:

SOUTH	NORTH
1 C	1 D
1 NT	2 D
2 NT	3 NT

Being forced by the new suit takeout bid of one diamond, south's one no-trump did not show another high card. It was not a voluntary no-trump bid. So, up to there, south showed only four high cards.

When north rebid diamonds, south was not forced to bid. His bid of two no-trump, therefore, was voluntary. In that case, he admitted having another high card with his other four.

Many players know this instinctively or by a series of complex guides. Confusions shun and you have more fun.

BRITISH CONSOLS PLAYDOWNS TO START NEW YEARS

Winners Will Represent Province in Play for Macdonald's Brier Tankard

Montreal, Dec. 15 (CP)—Dates for the British Consols playdowns, winners of which will represent the province in play for the Macdonald's Brier Tankard, were announced yesterday by officials of Quebec and Ontario Curling Associations. Play for the Tankard, representing the Canadian single rink curling championship, is being revived in Saskatoon March 4-7, after being suspended in 1942 for the war's duration.

Quebec curlers will start the playdown parade at the annual bonspiel of the Quebec Curlers Association Jan. 21-26, at Quebec City.

Divisional games for the Ontario Association will get underway the week of Feb. 4 at Kingston, Chatham, Midland, Orillia, Toronto, Peterborough, Port Elgin, Guelph, Hamilton, Kitchener and Galt, actual dates for these elimination competitions will be set by divisional umpires.

Finals will be played in Toronto Feb. 14.

Consols play for clubs in the Temiscamingue and Northern Ontario Association will begin Feb. 9, with the annual bonspiel scheduled to follow up two days later.

CHUCK CORRIGAN AGAINST SHORE

Toronto, Dec. 15 —(CP)—Chuck Corrigan, suspended along with five other players from the Springfield team of the United States Hockey League by Eddie Shore, said Friday that "I would sooner never lace on another skate than return to Springfield."

Corrigan charged that Shore, who has an interest in several teams including Springfield, "wants too much for too little." The mass suspension came for what Shore termed "indifferent playing" and commenting on this Corrigan said:

"When you sign a contract with Shore he figures he owns you body and soul. He tries to tell you what to do 24 hours a day."

Reds Meet Queens On Monday Night

The Belleville Redmen journey to Kingston on Monday night where they will meet the Queen's University hockey squad in a scheduled Van Horne series fixture. The Reds at present are in a three-way tie for the league leadership with Kingston Locos and the Barriefield Bears.

The players bus will leave the Hume Arena here at 6.30 on Monday and there will be room for at least ten fans who care to make the trip. Players and others are requested to be at the arena at 6.30 sharp.

St. Thomas, Dec. 13 (CP)—Mayor Thomas Curran of St. Thomas yesterday announced that a committee will be appointed to investigate financing and operation of municipal recreation centres in Owen Sound, St. Catharines, Stratford, Galt and Waterloo. Such a centre has been proposed for St. Thomas.

Wrexham, Wales — (CP)—The Welsh department of the Ministry of Education is making final preparations for opening in Wales two emergency colleges to train teachers.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN OPENED 20 YEARS AGO

House That Tex Built Had Hockey Game for Its Curtain Raiser

By JOHN D. HAMILTON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York Dec. 15—(CP)—Madison Square Garden—the house that Tex built—tonight celebrates its 20th anniversary and hockey fans of the roaring twenties recall that Canada's national sport provided the curtain-raiser for the lavish athletic emporium better known as the throne-room of Fistiana.

The kaleidescopic arena — which sees everything from political rallies to circuses in the course of a year—opened Dec. 15, 1925, with a hockey game between the rollicking New York Americans and Montreal Canadiens.

More than a touch of nostalgia was felt today by elder hockey fans when they remembered the Montreal squad that brought the ice game to New York included Howie Morenz at centre, Aurel Joliat on left wing and Billy Boucher on right wing.

The story of hockey's invasion of Manhattan bears the slightly wacky touch that surrounds all big-time sport of the twenties. Few remember a conference in a swimming pool was largely responsible for the game's entry into the hard-headed world of fight promoters and managers.

The whole thing started back in 1922 when the late Tex Rickard, builder of the new garden and entrepreneur extraordinary of prize fights, was taking a swim in the old garden—which really was near Madison Square in midtown Manhattan.

He was losing money on his tumble-down establishment at time and had ambitious plans to erect such an indoor sports palace as the United States had not seen before.

As he contemplated his schemes in the pool, Col. John S. Hammond, one-time United States military attache in Argentina and later sports promoter, joined him. The colonel outlined a rosy story of a fine new game he had seen in Canada—ice hockey.

Rickard—perhaps because of the years he spent dealing black jack in frozen Nome, Alaska—was cool to the idea. But Hammond persisted and when plans for the new garden were drawn up, hockey had been included on the agenda of sports to take place there.

Two franchises were let—to Tom Duggan, described by his associates alternately as a Canadian sportsman and a curb-stone promoter, and to big Bill Dwyer, noted gambler, promoter and beverage dealer of the twenties.

Dwyer brought the Americans to New York, purchasing the entire Hamilton, Ont., N.H.L. club.

Duggan's plans for a team never materialized, but the vacant franchise was let in 1926 to Les Patrick, who organized the Rangers and still operates them.

TORONTO LEAFS TO PLAY TWICE

(By The Canadian Press)

Clarification of the tight race for National Hockey League leadership may develop from a five-game weekend program in which all teams except New York Rangers and Chicago Black Hawks will play two games.

Only a point now separates each of the four leading teams, with Montreal Canadiens first, Chicago second, Detroit Red Wings third and Boston Bruins fourth. Toronto Maple Leafs are five points behind Boston in fifth place and two points ahead of the trailing Rangers.

One highlight will be a Montreal plan to use bus travel for the hop from Montreal to New York after their Saturday night game at home against Boston. The Canadiens play in New York Sunday night and it is understood the Montreal management plans to use buses to carry the players at least part of the way.

The game in New York will be one day late for a Madison Square Garden anniversary. On Dec. 15, 1925, Canadiens defeated New York Americans 3-1 in the first game ever played on Madison Square Garden ice.

HAMILTON TIGERS PLAY LIKE CHAMPS IN WINNING 11-2

Defeat Owen Sound Mohawks and Take Game Lead in Senior O.H.A. Race

(By The Canadian Press)

Hamilton Tigers played like their championship selves in a senior O.H.A. fixture on home ice last night when they administered 11-2 trouncing to Owen Sound Mohawks to take their fourth straight game without loss. The Bengals assumed a clear lead in the race, one game ahead of Toronto Staffords and Hamilton Pats.

Dillon Brady went on a scoring spree to collect four goals while Johnny Conick turned in a pair as his share. Five other marksmen contributed a tally each. Stratford's scorers were Bowen and Smith.

In the senior fixture at Stratford the Hamilton Patricias defeated Indians 7-2 for their third win of the campaign against three reverses to shove them into second-place tie with Toronto. The Pats forged ahead, scoring six straight goals until within 10 seconds of the finish of the second period when the Indians found the target for their initial counter. Grasser of Pats was good for three in this contest and Dyuira snared another two.

The junior tilt at St. Catharines saw the Falcons turn back Barrie Fliers 9-2 to share third place in the standing with Oshawa. Zamick was the ace performer with three goals while Tom Smelle and Peterson both accounted for two. Barrie's Snipers were Wilkes and Jordon.

In Manhattan

By MICHAEL O'MARA
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 15. (CP)—Disappointment has been the keynote of Broadway's 1945-46 theatrical season, now nearing its half-way mark, and most of it has centred about playwirghts who turned in excellent work in other years but this Autumn have produced a record flock of turkeys.

A partial recapitulation shows these upsets on the dramaturgical form-chart:

Tennessee ("The Glass Menagerie") Williams dramatized a D. H. Lawrence short story, and, in the resulting confusion, "You Touched me" still is running only by virtue of the fine acting of Edmund Gwenn in the central role.

Robert E. ("There Shall Be No Night") Sherwood, heretofore noted for the timeliness of his themes, was caught far off base with his dated war drama, "The Rugged Path," which the box-office appeal of Spencer Tracy has kept open so far.

Irwin ("Bury the Dead") Shaw came back from army service in North Africa with the script of "The Assassin," a drama based on the murder of Admiral Darlan. It was a muddled, pretentious piece which folded swiftly.

The list was lengthened by two recent openings, "The Mermaids Singing" by John Van Druten and "The French Touch" by Joseph Fields and Jerome Chodorov.

Mr. Van Druten, who has been turning out good ones since his "Young Woodley" of 20 seasons back and currently has the neatly-executed bedroom comedy, "The Voice of the Turtle," and the study in effective nostalgia, "I Remember Mama", both in the midst of long, remunerative Broadway runs, got a bad one out of his system when he wrote "The Mermaids."

Messrs. Chodorov and Fields accounted for the violently-amusing "My Sister Eileen" a few seasons back, and followed it up with the better-than-average "Junior Miss" of last winter. But "The French Touch" lacks the charming spontanaiety of its predecessors, and involves itself in a grand guignol ending entirely unsuited to the play's initial scenes.

AT THE CAPITOL — Evelyn Ankers and Richard Fraser, featured players in "The Fatal Witness," Republic's exciting mystery melodrama, opening next at the Capitol. On the same program "Up in Mabel's Room," starring Marjorie Reynolds, Dennis O'Keefe and Mischa Auer.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma said to pop, William, I've got something to show you, a priceless orginal drawing.

Yee gods, have you been to those auction rooms again? pop said, and ma said, Not at all, this drawing didn't cost me a cent, in fact it was left to me by the artist, in a manner of speaking. Here it is right here in my purse, she said.

In your purse for Peet sake? pop said, and ma said, It's rather small.

And she showed pop a little hunk of paper with lead pencil marks on it, pop saying, What the dooce, it looks like a man in a derby hat drawn by a 3 year old child with the cramps.

Whatever it looks like, it's actually an original doodle drawn by Darcy Clive in a telephone booth, ma said. Can you imagine me the proud possesser of an authentic doodle by one of the highest priced and most popular movie actors on the screen? I don't know what induced me to go into the station to make a telephone call to Maud Hews about nothing in particuler. It must of been sheer intuition. Anyway there he was in one of the booths, Clive Darcy in person just off the train on his way to a personel appearance at the Narcissis, and somebody must of left this scrap of paper on the shelf of the booth and Clive Darcy was doodling away on it while he was talking. So I camped right there and waited. An overly officious porter pointed out to me that there were several empty booths, but I soon sent him about his business. And my patience was finally rewarded, and here is the doodle, ma said.

But yee gods it's not even signed, how is anyone to know? pop said, and ma said, Because I'll tell them, how else would you expect them to know for land sakes?

Pop not saying, making it the end of the subject.

The World is Like That

By Kathleen Norris

CHAPTER 16

"We're at Santa Barbara," the man said. He carried her bag to a taxi; the sun was rising over the sleeping city; it was twenty minutes past six o'clock.

During their desperate search at the dance for Norma, Charles had told her it was the plan of the runaways to go to the big hotel which fronted on the ocean. Jocelyn went there at once.

When she asked at the desk to register the reservation of a suite for Miss Fordyce, it was after a little reflection. The decision to use Norma's name was made because Jocelyn felt instinctively that there must be no attempt to a secrecy that could not possibly be preserved. Burlingame would know of this, and what Burlingame knew the whole world would know, for Norma's name was world news. The fact that Norma's chaperon was there with her, that Norma was expected, that a change of clothing had been provided, were all important.

She was immediately glad that she had taken this course, for as she mentioned Norma's name the clerk remembered that a reservation had already been made for Miss Fordyce; by telephone, about half an houz ago from Santa Maria. The rooms were ready; Jocelyn took possession then and waited, and everything had the unreality of a drama.

At eight o'clock Jocelyn went downstairs and had coffee at a dining-room window commanding the driveway at the front of the hotel, and a few minutes before nine, when she had taken a chair on the veranda, the party arrived and she went down to meet it.

Ponny Sears was driving, Larry Bickford beside him. The girls were huddled into the back seat. Peggy Wilson, a big, bold, overdeveloped girl, with a very white skin and very black hair, looked frightened as she saw Jocelyn. Larr, had jumped out of the car, and he and Peggy helped Norma out. Norma, in her draggled evening attire and big white fur evening wrap, looked white and bewildered. She had evidently been asleep. Her eyes fell on Jocelyn, concerned and serious, and she began to cry.

The others, all in their early twenties, were young enough and scared enough to show relief at the appearance of authority, and to begin their apologies at once. Some feeble attempts at laughter died away; they surrounded Jocelyn, in their fantastic attire, with the men's overcoats striking still another incongrous note in an unbelievable scene, huddled after her into the hotel and up to the warm comfortable, orderly rooms to collapse into chairs and onto beds with all the frankness of exhausted children.

Norma, pale and quiet, confessed in a whisper that she had been "damn fool enough to be sick in the car. And they wouldn't go to the hotel in Santa Maria," sobbed Norma, "because they said the people there didn't know them, and Peggy's uncle knows the man who owns this hotel!"

"It was all a sort of joke," Peggy Wilson began impressively. "We were fools to try it, but it sounded like so much fun to leave a New Year's party and go swimming in Santa Barbara! We were going to telephone for clothes...." Her voice died away; no one was listening.

"I think you boys had better go into the next room; there's a bath there, too," Jocelyn said quietly. "I want Norma to get into bed for awhile. I brought you a change," she said to Norma, "and I brought something Peggy can wear. Now the first thing is a bath."

Norma submitted meekly to Jocelyn's ministrations. To Peggy, Jocelyn did not speak at all, and Peggy was silent, too: she evidently was feeling the same physical sensations that had attacked Norma earlier in the morning.

Norma made a rapid recovery. A warm bath, a change into fresh suitable morning wear, a cup of hot coffee resuscitated her at once, and after breakfast she lay down and slept peacefully during the entire morning of New Year's Day.

It was a queer morning. The young men, appearing unshaved and in rumpled fancy-dress clothes at about nine, had mumbled some awkward apologies and departed in the car. They observed that if they needed sleep they'd stop at some auto camp on the way. Peggy remained, to nurse her headache, and mutter at intervals that she felt "like hell."

At three o'clock the Fordyce car with two drivers arrived; the girls and Jocelyn started on their long drive home. Norma was subdued, friendly and almost timid in manner. Eventually, at about nine o'clock in the evening, still without a word of reproach or cross-examination from Jocelyn, Peggy was deposited at her own door, and the others went on to Hill Acres.

"I didn't know exactly what I was doing," said Norma. It was as near to an apology as Jocelyn would ever have from her. "I'm glad you came," she said. "I was sick of them all. I hated them all! I didn't know what to do."

"No more liquor, Norma."

"Oh, it wasn't the booze; it was everything!" said Norma.

Her father and grandmother were in the latter's room. Mrs. Fordyce was in bed, recovering from too many drinks. She explained that some fish she had eaten the day before had been poisoned.

"Have a lovely time, lovey?" she said to Norma. "Another time let your father know when you're going to Santa Barbara. You might have told them to let us know," she said to Jocelyn.

"What was the idea of driving down there so late, Miss Britton?" Philip asked, quiet and unsmiling.

"Those crazy boys weren't half sober," said the older woman. But indifferently, and snipping at her nails with a microscopic curved scissors as she spoke.

Norma gave Jocelyn a quick glance. "We were so hot, Dad," she said.

"I think I'd discourage that sort of idea another time, Miss Britton," Philip said coldly. "Well, those pills will be making you sleepy Mother," he added, kissing his mother's hair when he got up to go. "Get a good rest."

He was going downstairs for a man's poker party a few minutes later when he met Norma and Jocelyn in the hall.

"No more of those night runs, Norma," he said seriously. "I'm surprised that Miss Britton permitted it. And I don't like that Sears boy, or any of that lot! It was all right; I got your telegram when I got home here, before dinner, Miss Britton, and my mother knew only what I told her of it. But I think a party is enough excitement for a sixteen-year-old, and I don't like night driving, especially by drunken boys."

Jocelyn said nothing. Just how far to protect Norma, just what to admit and what not to admit puzzled her for a second, and in that second Philip had turned and started to descend the stairs, and Norma had given a triumphant caper and giggled in delight.

"He thinks you were with me all the time!" the girl had exulted. "Oh, what luck!"

"I don't know what he could do even if he didn't think that!" Jocelyn said, betrayed into ill temper. "It doesn't seem to me that what anyone says has much effect on you! I don't know what Miss Sanderson would have done in my place last night. Had you sit in her lap all the time? Held your hand while you were dancing?"

"Poor Britty!" Norma crooned pityingly, still with her triumphant giggle.

"I think you let me down," Jocelyn told her.

"I never let anyone down!" It was Norma at her worst again, self-confident, arrogant, childish. "I don't see why they all make such a fuss about me," she went on complacently, as they reached her own room. "Loads of girls have money! Anyone can have money! It's only stupid dirty people who haven't got sense enough to work and save that are poor. Miss Wykoff said so, in our political-economy class."

"I don't know or care who Miss Wykoff is," Jocelyn said warmly, "but that's not true. A great many fine and splendid men are poor, and their wives are working all day washing and sweeping and caring for children, and they never earn even enough to be comfortable...."

"Why, look at my grandfather, darling," Norma yawned. "He was the stupidist man that ever lived. I don't think he could do more than write his name! He had a little bicycle-tire shop fifty years ago, and what did he do? He loaned Jim Forestque three hundred dollars to start the Lockey car, and now look at them. Miles of factories and sheds and a town called Foresque and thousands of employees who always give me a darling car when I go to the plant, and Lockey libraries and hospitals and memorial parks and I don't know what all! And a statue of my grandfather in blue jeans with an oil can. If you call that hard to do!"

"Ze poor dwess!" said Mattress, displaying a ruin of striped gauze and gold and black ropes.

"Throw it away," said Norma. "I adored it, too," she said vexedly. "Damn everything!"

She sat down, drawing the telephone toward her.

"If you telephone people," said Jocelyn firmly, "I'd go very light on what you did last night. It's not at all to your credit. It's not funny. Don't say more than that all of you and Miss Britton had breakfast at the hotel, and you and Peggy were so tired you rested all day and came home in your own car."

Norma, telephone in hand, looked a little dashed.

"I hate them all anyway," she said, as if in partial exoneration of herself.

"You'd hate them more if you'd gotten into deeper trouble."

"Ah, but you see I don't get into trouble!" Norma gave a confident laugh. Immediately her face clouded. "Dad'll know when he gets the bill for the plane," she said anxiously, "Did you tell them to send him the bill?"

"I did."

"Well, I'll telephone tomorrow morning and send someone over with the money." She eyed Jocelyn uneasily, as Jocelyn settled herself in a chair with a magazine. "You don't have to stay," she said sweetly but rudely. "I'm going right to bed."

"I think I'll see you into bed," Jocelyn said grimly. "And if your father really expects me to keep an eye on you," she added in her thoughts, "I think I'll have my bed moved in here."

After a moment of annoyance Norma began her telephoning. But what had evidently been intended for a long period of gossip and giggling about last night's party turned out to be a rather flat failure. It was New Year's night, repetenance and fatigue and satiety had set in everywhere; family parties and early good nights were the rule, and after a few attempts Norma gave it up, and somewhat disconsolately decided to go to bed.

Again Jocelyn went to her room exhausted. But not to sleep. She was reading in bed, when Lena came softly tapping at her door.

"It's Miss Norma, Miss Britton. Mr. Fordyce asked me to call you."

Jocelyn sprang out of bed, reached for a dressing gown, groped with her feet for her slippers, and was flying after the maid within a minute of the alarm. She heard Norma's voice, screaming, sobbing, hysterical. It ceased for a second, and she could hear Philip's accents, stern and commanding.

"Stop it, Norma! Stop it. Damn such fools as that Wilson girl, anyway!" And then more gently, "Ah, don't dear. Quiet down, Spotty. Talk to Dad about it."

Jocelyn went in, her face colorless with terror. Norma was sitting up in bed; her father, on the edge of the bed, had his arm about her.

"Come in, Miss Britton," Philip said quickly. "I'm glad you've come! See what you can do for this poor little girl here. That Wilson idiot has just telephoned—at eleven o'clock! It seems—it's too bad—terrible thing, but those boys have had an accident, coming back."

"What boys?" Jocelyn whispered, sitting down weakly. "Pon and Larry!" Norma whispered back, beginning to heave with wild sobs again, "and Pon was killed! Peggy said so. Larry's been all smashed up and Pon's dead! Oo-oo-oo- he's dead! And we all had breakfast together and it was my fault—" And Norma began to sob and twist again, writhing against her father's shoulder and trying to free her hands from his grip.

"You never should have gone down to Santa Barbara," said Philip. "It was a mistake. But I can only thank God that you weren't with them. I congratulate you, Miss Britton," he added, with a glance for Jocelyn, "that you telephoned for the car. Otherwise—"

Nazi Pets in Horror Camps

From "Newsweek" Magazine, New York

Newsweek's Stockholm correspondent sends this tale of horror in reverse in a Nazi concentration camp—how camp politics allowed some internees to lead the life of Riley.

The story was told to me by a 21-year-old Norwegian student, Erling Bauck, who has just returned to Stockholm en route to his native Oslo, after spending three years at Auschwitz concentration camp. Bauck admits he was one of the "trusties." He says that none of the horror stories told about Nazi concentration camps was exaggerated, but he himself landed by chance, and otherwise, in a position where he had his own shoe shiner at his service, another man to mend his socks, a third to do his laundry, and so forth. He obtained clean bed sheets, smoked fat Havana cigars and procured a watch, fountain pen, and other articles. The ordinary fare, consisting of a quart of cabbage soup and a half pound of stale blackish bread, he disdained.

The reason for Bauck's favored position was that he managed to get put in charge of the Elite Guard canteen. He diverted to his own use cigarettes, brandy, and other merchandise destined for the Elite Guard trade. With these he paid for his privileges and favors.

Bauck was not the only one to enjoy these privileges — out of 16,000 internees in Auschwitz some 500 were in key positions where they were not only enjoying material favors, but were also safe from gas chambers and crematories. These 500 formed a camarilla preying on newcomers who were promptly stripped upon arrival of watches, rings, jewellery, food, parcels, and so forth on the pretext that they were making a contribution to a non-existent underground welfare fund for internees. The plunder permitted camp racketeers to obtain anything they wished by means of barter. For lads who could pay in kind, there were movies, cabarets, concerts and brothels. Even Nazi guards lent their talents to these events and establishments in return for food, drink, and so on. Meanwhile the camp crematory handled 500 cases per day—physical unfits sorted out for gas chambers by the Elite Guard.

Two Cagey Diners in Swank Hotel

By BENNETT CERF
in Omnibook Magazine

When Omnibook gave a "literary party" to celebrate the inauguration of its new weekly radio program, I found myself on the terrace with a very pretty young lady (sheer coincidence), looking down on Central Park and the sun drenched hotels that faced it. Into my head there popped a story that I could have sworn came from O. Henry, but I can find no trace of it in his collected works. I set it down here because it's an intriguing yarn, and because I hope that some reader can locate its true source for me.

Two rather handsome grey-haired men, neatly but unostentatiously garbed, found themselves occupying the same park bench one summer midday. In front of them towered one of New York's most famous hostelries. The man on the left smiled wistfully. "Beautiful hotel, isn't it?" he asked. "You know, I'd rather like eating a good lunch in its roof garden today. There's a slight drawback however, I haven't a single penny in my pocket!"

"That's odd," said the other. "Neither have I." A moment later he added, "Let me offer a suggestion. Both of us make a decent enough appearance. Let's go up to that roof garden and order the fanciest food and wines on the menu. Just before the check comes, we'll borrow a coin from the waiter, and toss to see who walks out a free man, and who stays to face the music." "Done and done," declared the first man promptly.

The luncheon was an unqualified success. The food was delicious, the conversation sparkling. The demitasses were already on the table when one man, after considerable hemming and hawing, said, "Look here, old man. I'm afraid I'm guilty of a bit of deception. When I told you over in the park that I didn't have a cent with me, it was God's honest truth. But please stop worrying about this lunch check. I'm worth a mint. I simply forgot to transfer my belongings when I put on my new suit this morning. Fact is, I must confess. I occupy the most expensive suite in the place."

"I guess that makes us even," laughed the other. "I should have recognized you. You see, I own the hotel."

Increase of Serious Crime In Ontario and B.C. Not As Widespread as in United States

Robberies Have Been of Epidemic Proportions and Crimes of Passion Prevalent

By FRED KERNER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

A disturbing increase of serious crime in two Canadian provinces—Ontario and British Columbia—as an aftermath of war, has not been as widespread as the crime waves in the United Kingdom and the United States. A survey by The Canadian Press indicates most Canadian provinces show a reduction of criminal incidence from 1944.

The increases in Ontario and B.C. are attributed to youthful transgressors, whom police term "post-graduates of crime in the post-war era." Yet official figures show many former offenders are equally responsible.

Robberies have been of epidemic proportion and crimes of passion prevalent. Police are contending, too, with a new type of armed thuggery, gunmen using the Sten gun — a Canadian contribution to Allied victory.

Homicide Shows Gain

Ontario's crime wave gathered impetus during the initial months following the war's end and reached adnormal proportions in October and November. Homicide figures particularly show a substantial gain. In Toronto, city courts are weeks behind schedule in criminal cases and county and district jails throughout the province are overcrowded.

Windsor has three unsolved killings in the period from July to September, 1945, with housebreaking and theft on the increase. Juveniles contributed to a 150 per cent increase of burglaries in the North Bay area. Similar offences run high in the London and St. Thomas districts.

A bank robbery at Bath, near Kingston — involving some $350,000, most of it in registered bonds—was most serious in Eastern Ontario. It was one of the largest robberies in the history of Canadian banking.

Vancouver, with its population increased about 65,000 by the war, is centre of the upsurge of crime in British Columbia, police say. Compared to a year ago, breaking and entering showed a considerable increase as have robberies with violence, petty thefts and automobile thefts.

Jail Population Doubled

Chief offenders at Winnipeg are said to be men with pre-war criminal records. Manitoba provincial jail has had its population more than doubled since war ended, some 300 offenders being housed compared to 120 in 1944.

Fernand Dufresne, director of Montreal police, said he is "satisfied with the situation" there. Figures show a decline of major criminal activity, though small increases are recorded for burglary and armed robbery. Homicide records reveal a complete decrease, none reported from July to September compared with 11 in the same months a year ago.

In the Maritime provinces, crime has shown no pronounced trend this year compared with last. There is no indication of any important change and none is expected by police "despite the return of servicemen to civilian life," J. A. Macdonald, Nova Scotio Deputy Attorney - General said.

A peak in crime activity at Halifax was reached toward the end of 1943 and during the early months of 1944, but has fallen off considerably. A similar decrease is recorded for most New Brunswick municipalities.

Dominion authorities are making attempts to "stiffen" the criminal code so that more effective steps can be taken to curb crime, a move acclaimed by police throughout Canada.

No Quick Cure

Authorities agree there is "no quick cure" — the solution is not immediately apparent. However, though the wave of crime is described as an aftermath of war, officials say it must not be concluded that nothing can be done to combat it.

The war cannot be set forth as the root cause, but it has supplied the immediate impetus to influences which have been building up for years. Many social agencies' workers agree the home has neglected "its fundamental duties of enshrining virtues."

"We live in an age of flippancy and over-sophistication," one juvenile court Judge said. "It now is considered old-fashioned to cling to orthodox morality. And this drift is endangering our whole social structure."

The great number of juveniles committing serious crimes in recent months has been ascribed to lack of sufficient accommodation for training and recreation of youth. Yet some assert that youth today should be congratulated "that the criminal budget is not higher ... due to the fact so many have been able to rise above the level of their surroundings."

Ottawa, Dec. 15 —(CP)— If the House concludes its business this weekend many concede it will be largely because of the activities of that rough, tough Liberal ginger group known as "Little Chicago."

They occupy a block of five rows of government benches farthest from Mr. Speaker and they acknowledge good-humored Jean T. Richard, Liberal member for Ottawa East, as their ringleader.

This band of young backbenchers have led the division singing, have shouted order to curb long-winded questions, have banged their desks loudest in approval of any sign of efficiency in procedure, have called time when anybody started to trespass beyond the 40-minute limit, have been noisiest in demands for approval of the increase in parliamentary indemnity and have provided some of the wittiest and sharpest heckling heard in the House in years.

They have created barn-yard cries for appropriate occasions and have a way of letting the lips of their desks bang emphatically when they disapprove of anything.

The Other Foot: The shoe is on the other foot for a select number of liberated Canadian airmen prisoners of war. After many months in German camps where they learned the language and saw the final collapse, they have been enlisted on the interrogation staffs of certain prison camps in Canada.

Three Years Needed To Make Champagne

Paris—Despite hail storms, shortage of sulphates and trained workers, the wine grapes of the provinces of Burgundy and Champagne have been harvested successfully.

Grape harvesting is governed by age-old traditions in various provinces. For example, grapes are collected in wicker baskets known as "vendangeots" in Burgundy, they are piled in little wooden barrels or "caques" in Champagne. Wooden baskets are used in the Bordeaux region, buckets in Provence, wicker in Medoc, and panniers in the Cote d'Or. In some provinces grapes are cut by pruning knives, in others, with pruning shears or scissors.

When fine wines are to be bottled all the flasks are rinsed out first with a little brandy. It takes three years to make good champagne. Bottled at the end of the first year, it is subjected to varying temperatures during the second to make it fit for shipping. At the beginning of the third year the bottles are stored heads down. After the sediment has settled in the neck it is drawn away and a small quantity of a special liquor made of sugar and another fine wine is added to fill the bottle and give the champagne its distinctive flavor.

During the occupation, the Germans requisitioned 70 per cent of the French champagne production—480,000 bottles per week or one bottle every three days for every officer in the German army.

NEED MORE CITIES IN SOUTH AFRICA

Cape Town (CP)—In 10 years there will be another 2,000,000 people in South Africa's cities This is the estimate given by the Social and Economic Planning Council in a report on regional development.

The council urges that any new industries should be sited in new areas and not in the existing few industrial centres which are becoming congested and are tending to become economically unsound from the national aspect.

Busy Parliament in High Gear on Peace Problems

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa (CP)—Administration of the affairs of the country kept Canadian legislators busier during 1945 than in practically any other of the war years, mainly because of the problems arising out of the end of the war and the need for orderly reconversion.

Early in the year a pre-election session was called to approve of the sending of a delegation to the United Nations security conference in San Francisco. Sufficient money was voted to carry on the administration until the end of August.

This done, Parliament was dissolved April 17 and preparations made for a general election June 11, with Prime Minister Mackenzie King reshuffling his cabinet and filling 18 Senate vacancies before polling day.

When results of the election became known definitely with the counting of the service vote June 19, the Liberal party was back in power with 126 seats, compared with its previous strength of close to 170. Progressive Conservatives increased their representation from 40 to 66, the C.C.F. boosted theirs from 10 to 28 and the Social Credit party from 10 to 13.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King was defeated in his Saskatchewan riding of Prince Albert, but later easily won a by-election in the Ontario constituency of Glengarry. Gen. McNaughton, defeated in a February by-election in Grey North, was defeated again and resigned as defence minister. He was appointed co-chairman of the Canadian-United States permanent joint defence board.

Revenue Minister MacLaren, brought into the cabinet in the pre-election shuffle, also was defeated. He resigned and was named Lieutenant-governor of New Brunswick.

Mr. King named Navy Minister Abbott to take over the defence department with that of naval services. War Services Minister McCann was named revenue minister.

Dominion-Provincial Parley

The Prime Minister's next big task was presiding at the preliminary Dominion-provincial conference. The premiers from all nine provinces gathered with Mr. King at the conference table and expressed their agreement that some changes must be made in the constitutional rights of the provinces and the Dominion.

The government sought the right to retain the income and corporation tax fields, taken over from the provinces during the war. In return, the federal government would pay a large proportion of the cost of a national health insurance scheme. A national old age pension plan under which everyone over 70 would get $30 a month regardless of means was proposed by the federal government.

The provincial premiers studied the proposals and drew up counter proposals for presentation at a later meeting.

While the study was going on, Mr. King called Parliament and early approval was given the United Nations charter. A committee was set up to choose a design for a distinctive Canadian flag and the speculation was that the Canadian Red Ensign, with the Union Jack in the upper left hand corner and the coat of arms in the fly, likely would be chosen, possibly with minor alterations.

A bill to give Canadians the legal right to call themselves Canadian citizens was introduced but later the government announced it did not intend to proceed with the measure immediately.

Income Tax Reduced

Finance Minister Ilsley brought down a long awaited budget and announced a 16 per cent decrease in personal income tax and reductions in the corporation tax field. Mr. Ilsley later served as acting Prime Minister while Mr. King went on a fact finding tour to Britain and to Washington for discussions on the use of atomic energy and other matters.

The task of premiership was not made easier by the strength of the opposition in the Commons. John Bracken, appointed Progressive Conservative leader in 1942, was elected in the general election. J. M. Macdonnell, former president of the National Trust Company, was elected member for Muskoka-Ontario. Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, V.C., former officer commanding the Pacific Command, came in as member for Nanaimo to take a seat alongside Lt.-Col. Cecil Merritt, winner of the Victoria Cross at Dieppe. Col. Merritt was elected in Vancouver Burrard.

Mr. Bracken set up a cabinet within the party and selected men to criticize legislation the government brought down. This lightened his burden as leader.

Parliament and Canadians in general welcomed the appointment of Sir Harold Alexander, Supreme Allied commander in the Mediterranean area, as governor-general to succeed the Earl of Athlone, retiring after a five-year term.

Besides going to the polls in the federal general election, the people of Ontario, Manitoba, Nova Scotia and British Columbia voted in provincial elections and returned to power the administrations that had held the reins at dissolution.

Premier George Drew's Progressive Conservative party scored a sweeping victory in Ontario and the Liberals under Hon. Angus Macdonald won all but two seats in Nova Scotia. Coalition governments were returned in Manitoba and British Columbia.

Old-Time Cinnamon Stick Candy Best Yet

(By H. P. A. in Windsor Star)

During the sugar starved war years I have often wished I could buy some cinnamon candy, like I used to pay a penny a stick for at Pegg & Wilson's drug and grocery store in Morenci, where it made a mouthwatering show in a glass jar along with peppermint, horehound, anise, and licorice sticks in other jars. And alongside these would be colored sugars, red, yellow, blue and green, and the little red cinnamon drops, white on the inside. These were kept together, because Morenci's cake bakers used them when the occasion called for a decorated cake. I do not remember any among them who knew anything about making designs in frosting by means of pastry tubes, but colored sugars could be judiciously sprinkled on the frosting when it was still soft, and your name could be done in cinnamon drops on your birthday cake, along with a border design. This had its advantages, because the pungent drops gave that deliciously different taste you craved in cake.

And I still have a hankering for those hard, white peppermint drops that were always kept in a jar on the counter, along with pink wintergreen drops, which I did not like nearly as well, as the flavor was just a bit too sharp. You got a generous lot of those for a nickel, 50 years ago, and I am inclined to think that Grandma Pooler would spend as much as a quarter at a time for them, as she never was without them, and I could count on being well supplied every time I went to see her.

Conversation Starters

A variety of candy that found high favor at parties was the Lozenge with a motto on it. These were thin, heart-shaped or round or with scalloped edges and strong with peppermint or wintergreen, but in this case the flavor did not count as much as the wording, which might be "I love you truly" "My heart is yours," or the more possessive "You are mine," with an occasional flippancy couched in the slang of those days. Rev. Harry Nobles of Temple Baptist Church tells me that back in his native New Brunswick they called them "conversation lozenges" and that they played a vital role in the weekly meetings of the Sons of Temperance lodge in his home town, where boys and girls attended.

We did not have any special name for them in Morenci, but the purpose they served was the same. They made conversation easy at parties where you didn't know what to say to the lovely creature you drew as your partner. You simply asked her to pick a lozenge, sight unseen, and if what both of you read from it would not start a conversation with plenty of laughs and giggles thrown in, nothing else would. Sometimes you found your partner that way, drawing lozenges from a bowl and matching them.

Molasses Candy

Later on, at the party, you might pull molasses candy, a custom dating back from the pioneer days, when everything in the food line had to be made at home, including sugar, which Great-Grandfather Snow made from the maples on his farm, a year's supply every time the sap was running in the early edge of spring. Fifty years back all the mothers of the kids who gave parties knew how to make molasses candy, as they had learned it from their pioneer mothers. It was fun to watch it, slowly bubbling on the kitchen stove over a low fire. But there was more fun after it cooled a bit and you pulled it. You put warmed butter on your hands to keep it from sticking, besides which the generous amounts of butter you used improved the flavor. Your partner always helped and there was much laughter when the stuff would stick as it was very apt to in the early stages of the pulling.

Molasses and white taffy are pulled these days by machines such as you see at fairs and carnivals and in some candy stores. But the stuff you get from these mechanical marvels never tastes like that which you and your girl of the evening used to pull after all of you got tired of playing post office, blind-man's buff and pinning the tail on the donkey, blindfolded. Nor are the fancy popcorn confections you get in movie theatre lobbies these days nearly as good as the homemade popcorn balls which were always on the table at one of the oldtime kids' parties.

Christmas Candy

Always, as Christmas drew near Pegg & Wilson and Morenci's other stores would have Christmas candy on display, along with candy canes, one of which you might expect to find in your stocking on Christmas morning.

They have Christmas candy these days, but it has had too much to do with test-tube flavors (made, the chemists say, from coal tar), to be as good as the kind that came in wooden buckets. These buckets made good water pails after they had been emptied of their sweets. In those days drinking water came from wells and in the summer it kept cool longer in a wooden pail or sometimes a brown one made out of glazed fibre.

Christmas candies in those days ran to the simpler flavors, but they were all real; peppermint, anise, cinnamon and wintergreen were a few. The big kick in the Christmas candies for us kids was the bewildering variety of designs and colors in which it was made, stripes on the outside of the broken up stick candy and designs like hearts and anchors and half-moons in a contrasting color in the centre of the stick. And, at Christmas time, you had so much of the stuff, along with nigertoe nuts and almonds and pecans and oranges and malaga grapes which came all the way from Spain, that you had to be careful in order to save space and digestive capacity for turkey, dressing, mashed potatoes, squash, cranberries and pickles and pie which came later when dinner was ready.

MR. EMPLOYER—
Consider Service Craftsmen For That Job!

Service Personnel are rapidly being discharged from the Armed Forces—

Thousands of them are skilled and semi-skilled in many occupations.

There are: Draftsmen—stationary engineers—mechanics—accountants—office workers and countless service trades that have civilian equivalents. These service trades are listed with local offices of the National Employment Service.

Also, many excellent ex-service personnel without specific trade qualifications have gained valuable experience in the Forces, and—

They will prove their worth in civilian employment.

Employers, we know you wish to aid Canada's fighters to get back to Civvy Street—so place your order with the local office of the National Employment Service, specifying the type of ex-serviceman or woman you require.

WORLD GOVERNMENT MAY BE NECESSARY TO MAINTAIN PEACE SAYS PRIME MINISTER

Hard to See a Solution In Anything Short of Some Surrender of Sovereignty

Ottawa, Dec. 17 —(CP)— Some form of world government may be necessary to maintain peace in a world where the use of atomic energy is known, Prime Minister Mackenzie King said today in the Commons.

He made the statement in his first public report on the recent Washington conferences at which he, Prime Minister Attlee and President Truman agreed that information on the use of atomic energy for peaceful purposes should be exchanged among nations.

"The more deeply one ponders the problems with which our world is confronted in the light . . . of the implications of the development of atomic energy, the harder it is to see a solution in anything short of some surrender of national sovereignty," said Mr. King.

"For a limited surrender of national sovereignty, there must be substituted some form of world government restricted, at least at the outset, to matters pertaining to the prevention of war, and the maintenance of international security."

U. N. O. Not Sufficient

He believed it would be an error to contemplate the control of the use of atomic energy in commodity and police terms, as if atomic energy was some new and dangerous drug.

"It would, I believe, be criminal folly to allow ourselves to imagine that the peace and security of mankind can be attained by any scheme of commodity control.

"As political problems affecting the relations of governments, the solution of the problems presented by atomic energy must be sought in the realm of world politics.

"The United Nations Organization is not a sufficient answer to the problems of peace and security which the world now is seeking. It is a first step, and an all-important step, in the direction of that co-operation between nations which is essential to the survival of civilization. It is not however, the only, much less, the final step.

"The United Nations Organization is an indispensable medium and channel and forum through which the peoples of the world can work our new institutions and arrangements which their peace and security now require.

"It is devoutly to be hoped that the nations will not delay too long in welcoming, albeit in the form of some self-denying ordinance upon individual national sovereignties, a measure of world sovereignty sufficiently effective to maintain international security and to end all possibility of war.

Celebrates 71st Birthday

"If we are agreed on the ultimate necessity of some measure of world government to maintain world security, we should, by every means of our power, support and strengthen every agency of international co-operation and understanding which can help to make the world community a reality.

"The peoples of all nations must address themselves to the task of helping to devise and shape institutions and relationships which will enable mankind to ensure, if not its salvation, at least its survival."

Mr. King, celebrating today his 71st birthday, recalled in his 5,000-word report how Canada, Britain and the United States had agreed at the Washington Conference that the secret information on the construction of the atomic bomb would not be shared with other nations until it was possible to devise reciprocal and enforceable safeguards acceptable to all nations.

It was agreed at the conference that the discovery of the atomic bomb had placed at the disposal of mankind "means of destruction hitherto unknown, and against which there could be no adequate military defence, and in the employment of which no single nation could, in fact, have a monopoly," said Mr. King.

"In a word, it was agreed that civilization could not survive an atomic war. It was also recognized that it was impossible to isolate the problem of the atomic bomb from the problem of the use of other weapons of destruction. The atomic bomb was seen as the latest word in destructiveness, but not necessarily the last."

Steps to Rescue World

It should not be supposed that the control of the raw materials now enjoyed by Canada, the United Kingdom and the United States would, for any length of time, prevent developments in other countries. Neither should it be

Three-alarm Fire In Toronto Causes Heavy Damage

Toronto, Dec. 17 — (CP)—A three-alarm fire in bitter weather early today gave Toronto firemen their worst battle in months when more than 30 small business establishemnts were damaged by either fire or water in a three-storey brick block on Richmond Street in downtown Toronto. Damage was estimated at $100,000. Firemen said no one was in the building.

With an icy wind blowing and water freezing as it fell, it took men and equipment from all parts of the city nearly two hours to bring the blaze under control. Flames shooting 50 feet into the air brought crowds of shivering spectators.

High aerial ladders reached from the street to well above the top of the building but so hot was the blaze that in some instances the nozzles at the top of the ladder could not be operated by firemen and were guided by ropes from the street level. At one time firemen were formed to scramble hurriedly down ladders when flames burst out at the top of the building.

The block held a large number of small businesses, including sign shops, photographic stores, printing shops and others which contained inflammable materials. As the fire continued it threw a red glow over much of the downtown area.

Stay of Execution Is Granted Gen. Yamashita

Washington, Dec. 17 (AP)—The United States Supreme Court today granted a stay of execution to Japanese LT.-Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, sentenced to death by an American military commission in Manila.

The tribunal acted at a conference after leaving the court room at the completion of its regular session for the day. The action was taken a few minutes after arrival of an airmailed petition from Yamashita asking review of a decision by the Philippines Supreme Court in his case.

War Secretary Patterson earlier had ordered Yamashita's execution stayed pending final decision by the Supreme Court on his petitions. The Philippines court denied Yamashita's contention that the military commission was illegal and that Philippine civil courts should take jurisdiction.

The Supreme Court also has under consideration petitions in which Yamashita challenged the authority of the military commission to try him. He asked to be brought to Washington for a hearing before the court or one of its justices.

Prairie Citizens Shiver as Cold Wave Spreads

Winnipeg, Dec. 17 —(CP)— Hardy citizens of the Prairie Provinces shivered in parkas and fur lined boots during the weekend as thermometers fell as low as 30 degrees below zero.

McMurray, in northern Alberta, had a 30 below temperature early today with a high yesterday of minus 16. Dafoe, in central Saskatchewan, recorded 27 below with Regina 28 and Saskatoon 25.

Winnipeggers were greeted with 16 below as they arose this morning. Warmest yesterday was minus nine.

Edmonton, Lethbridge and Calgary fared better with temperatures of three and two below and six above respectively.

Masterly Seamanship by Trawler Captain Saves Lives of 17 Fishermen

Boston, Dec. 17 (CP)—With her superstructure coated down with a white sheath of ice, the fishing trawler, Breaker sailed into Boston harbor this morning after one of the most remarkable rescues in the history of the North Atlantic. Aboard the Breaker were 17 fishermen, survivors of the wrecked trawler Gale which went aground on Sable Island, N.S., Dec. 12 in an area known as the "Graveyard of the North Atlantic."

On the deck when the Breaker came in were nearly 50 wives and relatives of the shipwrecked men. Tears of joy filled the eyes of everyone as the seamen clambered onto the fish pier and embraced their families.

After resting in the company office while waiting for transportation to their homes, the sailors told of their "miraculous" rescue from the Breaker when they thought their ship would be smashed by the huge waves before help could reach them.

The Gale went ashore Dec. 12 in a driving wind. Apparently beyond reach of help from seaward the trawler sent out distress calls which were answered by the trawler Breaker. In order to avoid the same fate that had overtaken the Gale, Capt. Halley of the Breaker made a 70-mile sweep around the northeast tip of Sable Island and came down with the storm. About 100 yards from the wreck, Capt. Halley held his ship against the wind with the force of the engines and for 48 hours, jockeyed in a masterly seamanlike manner to hold his position.

When the storm abated somewhat, a small boat from the Breaker went over and carried a line to the Gale. By means of this line small boats made hazardous trips through the mountainous seas until all 17 crew men were taken off the Gale. Capt. Halley then swung about into the teeth of the Gale and fought his way out to sea and safety

During the time the Gale was aground the crew members feared that at any time the ship would break and they could be hurled in the water. It was impossible to make any contact with the bleak shore and no answer came to their rockets.

Three of the rescued crewmen were bitter in their criticism of Nova Scotia authorities. They said that rockets were ignored and no attempt was made by the Canadians to rescue them.

(Government port officials at Halifax today denied that the government was lax in their efforts to give every possible assistance to the disabled Gale. The superintendent of Cape Sable Island with a boat crew directed rescue operations at the risk of their lives. When the rescue was completed the Sable Island employees were unable to get back to land and had to be helped board the Canadian corvette H.M.C.S. Petrolia and taken to Sydney, N.S.)

48 INCHES SNOW IN BUFFALO AREA DURING 51 HOURS

Mayor Proclaims Emergency Closing All Schools and Many City Offices

Buffalo, N.Y., Dec. 17. (AP)—Buffalo was under a state of emergency today after a paralyzing blizzard, one of the worst in the city's history, had deposited as much as 48 inches of snow in 51 hours

No relief was in sight. The United States Weather Bureau predicted light to moderate snow today and continued cold weather. Drifting snow, borne by a 30-mile-per-hour wind, was blocking roads almost as soon as they were plowed open.

In proclaiming an emergency, Mayor Joseph J. Kelley ordered all schools and most city offices closed, suspended city court, limited use of telephones to leave all available lines open for emergency calls, and requested citizens to remain at home and take precautions against fire.

The blizzard spent its fury on South Buffalo where 48 inches of snow was deposited. Downtown Buffalo had at least 30 inches, while North Buffalo had only five and Niagara Falls, N.Y., two.

In nearby Cheektowaga, where the weather bureau is located, 33 inches of snow fell in a 51-hour period. The average temperature yesterday was six above, and the mercury was expected to hover around the 10-degree mark today.

The International Railway Company reported all busses and trolleys were at a standstill and was unable to say when service would be restored.

Crews were working to free trolley tracks of long lines of stalled street cars, busses and automobiles. Snow plows were hampered by automobiles which had been abandoned in downtown streets.

State police reported highways blocked as far east as Batavia.

Railroad officials said freight traffic gradually was being tied up in Buffalo yards. Passenger trains were getting through after some delay.

Long-distance telephone calls, except emergency calls, were being refused out of Buffalo because the few operators able to get to work could not handle the unusual volume of calls.

Meanwhile, 30 inches of snow fell in Watertown where two feet of snow was already on the ground. All roads are blocked.

The rest of the State experienced cold, clear weather.

PRINCE KONOYE COMMITS SUICIDE BY TAKING POISON

Left Note Accepting Responsibility for China Conflict but Defended Action in War

Tokyo, Dec. 17. (AP)—Prince Fumimaro Konoye, 54, three times Premier of Japan, committed suicide by poison Sunday to escape trial as a war criminal.

Joseph B. Keenan, special prosecutor of the top war crimes cases, issued a statement telling the Japanese people there is nothing to fear from American justice if they are innocent and their consciences clear.

A written statement in which Konoye rejected the "humiliation" of facing trial was disclosed several hours after Princess Konoye found his body on his bedroom floor at 6 a.m. The statement accepted responsibility for the China conflict, but defended Konoye's part in the Tripartite Pact and the preludes to the Pacific war.

Konoye was named as a war criminal suspect Dec. 6, and was instructed to surrender at Sugamo Prison by midnight Sunday.

Sunday night he gave a dinner for close friends and relatives at his lavish suburban home, talking with them for several hours afterward. They reported him "normal", when the party broke up about 11.30 p.m., although his secretary later recalled that he had appeared depressed at intervals.

Referring directly to the suicide, Prosecutor Keenan said: "No person confined as a suspect need fear unless his own conscience insists on or emphasizes his own guilt.

"It has been made abundantly clear that no person will be convicted unless convicted by a judicial process which has proved its outstanding fairness for generals by and among one of the foremost of civilized nations."

Konoye's farewell statement was written during a final conference with his second son, 22-year-old Michitaka. He handed the single sheet of pencilled characters to his son before bidding him goodnight at 2 p.m. Three hours later the Prince swallowed poison, which apparently gave him a swift and relatively painless death.

Tomohiko Ushida, family secretary and spokesman, who apparently did not know of the existence of the note until it was announced at a press conference by Lt.-Col. B. E. Sackett, chief investigator for Mr. Keenan, said that at last night's dinner "the Prince was greatly concerned about the future of the Emperor, particularly in connection with the general policy which is being adopted by the Americans."

COMMONS FAILS TO CLEAR DECKS FOR PROROGATION

Saturday was Tentative Date but Parliament Faced Imposing Mass Of Estimates

By JACK BRAYLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Dec. 17—(CP)—The Commons today knuckled down to a heavy day-long schedule in a drive to clear up business of the House in time for prorogation and the accompanying speech from the throne tomorrow.

First time on the agenda was the address by Prime Minister Mackenzie King sponsoring adoption of the three-power atomic energy declaration which followed the recent conferences he attended at Washington. This declaration was approved by the Senate Saturday.

Then, without pause for the usual luncheon recess, the tough Commons' schedule called for consideration of departmental estimates in the following order: external affairs, fisheries, labor public works, finance, transport, reconstruction and revenue.

The tentative prorogation date was Saturday, but the deadline passed the House still struggling against that imposing mass of estimates at adjournment just before midnight.

Saturday's highlight was Senate confirmation by a vote of 39-11 of the bill boosting sessional indemnities from $4,000 to $6,000 for both Houses of Parliament, which previously had been passed in the Commons.

Members crowded a wide range of topics into Saturday's morning to midnight Commons' sitting, covering veterans affairs, agriculture, health and welfare, the National Film Board, state department and labor.

Rising for a Sunday break of nine-hour-a-day sessions tired members paused to chuckle sympathetically with Rev. E. G. Hansell (SC—McLeod) when he said he didn't like the possibility of missing an item in which he was most interested while he was away getting something to eat. "And we must have nourishment," he added.

Toronto, Dec. 17 —(CP)— Loss in a fire which early today swept through the interior of a three-storey brick commercial block—housing 30 establishments on Richmond Street East caused damage which firemen said may run as high as $500,000.

Surprise Attempt To Charge Meyer With More Crimes

Prosecution Must Establish He Was in Command at Time

By ROSS MUNRO
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aurich, Germany, Dec. 17—(CP Cable) — Prosecuting officers at the war crimes trial of Maj.-Gen. Kurt Meyer today made a surprise attempt to bring before the Canadian military court evidence of an atrocity for which the defendant has not yet been charged.

After a 30-minute adjournment to consider the admissibility of new evidence which the prosecution said was confirmed only yesterday, the court ruled "provided the prosecution can establish the fact that the accused was a responsible commander at the time this incident is alleged to have occurred, we will be prepared to listen to this evidence."

Victims of the atrocity about which the court will be told this afternoon are believed to be an officer and a non-commissioned soldier of the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, captured while on patrol.

Wounded Near Abbey

Evidence will be produced to show they were wounded about two miles from the ancient Abbey at Ardenne and the body of the officer, a lieutenant found and buried by a Canadian just outside the Abbey July 17 after the 3rd Canadian Division captured this area in the attack on Caen.

The argument will chiefly be over the question Meyer was at that time commanding the 25th S. S. Panzer Grenadier Regiment with headquarters at the Abbey.

He is understood to claim he was elevated to command the 12th S.S. Division June 15.

There is other information held by the prosecution to the effect he became a divisional commander about July 17. However the prosecution is likely to contend Meyer was responsible for further atrocities, whether commanding the regiment or the division of which it was part.

A prosecution source said it was eager to present details of this newly-found incident but should the defence request adjournment which would hold up the trial any appreciable length of time the evidence would be dropped.

Enters Second Week

Earlier today, as the trial entered its second week, it was stated in evidence that Lieut. Tom Windsor of the Sherbrooke Fusiliers — later shot by the Germans at the Abbey — was struck by his captors during interrogation following his capture July 6.

An affidavit by Pte. Marcel J. Dagenais of Montreal, a crew-member of Windsor's tank which had been abandoned after heavy shelling, said his lieutenant was searched by three German privates and a young sergeant-major.

After Windsor gave his rank, there were some other words by the Germans and the sergeant slapped the lieutenant, Dagenais said.

An affidavit by Lieut. Ian A. Maclean of Montreal, captured about the same time and taken to the Abbey, said that when officers' paybooks and documents were returned the next day they included Windsor's, but Windsor was missing.

Dagenais said he never saw Windsor after the incident at the Abbey. He described how he himself had been questioned at Caen about a new 17-pounder gun on the Sherbrooke's Sherman tanks.

He also related that when he was being taken from the place of capture to the Abbey he saw "several German soldiers shoot and kill several of our soldiers who were wounded and could not walk."

Another affidavit read into evidence by the prosecution was by Pte. Ernest Peters, a former member of the North Nova Scotia Highlanders from Cape Breton Island.

Seen Canadian on Street

Peters said that in the town of Authie he had seen a Canadian lying on the street. He thought the man dead, but "Jerries came up in a group of 10 and one put a bullet into his head . . . perhaps they were trying to frighten us and bring out morale down."

Another section of the Peters' affidavit said the private had no evidence that prisoners were mistreated by Germans under Meyer's command. He had heard a "lot of rumors but most of them were just lies."

Adjournment then followed the argument over admissibility of evidence of the new atrocity. Defence contended a murder purportedly committed June 16, 1944, could have no relation to the charges on which Meyer is being tried, which date back only to July 7 and 8.

The possibility was seen the prosecution would not complete its case.

Documents Reveal German Plans To Starve Millions of Russians

By WES GALLAGHER

Nuernberg, Dec. 17. (AP)—German plans for systematic mass starvation in Russia would have virtually wiped out the cities of Moscow and Stalingrad had they been captured, American prosecutors charged today at the war crimes trial of 21 top Nazi leaders.

Reading from captured German plans for the conquest of Russia, the prosecution named Hermann Goering, sitting uncomfortably in the prisoners' box, as the instigator of a calculated starvation plan that would have caused the deaths of "many tens of millions" of Russians.

"This document reveals a program of mass murder to stagger the imagination", one prosecutor told the four-power tribunal.

The plan, drafted by Goering's economic ministry in 1941, called for export to Germany of every ounce of food in the Ukraine and other areas. In the food-deficient north, the army was to seize all food for its own use.

Another defendant, Alfred Rosenberg, administrator of the conquered Ukraine, was quoted as saying in a speech in 1941 that "the job of feeding the German people falls on the east. . . . we see no reason for feeding the Russian

Also introduced as evidence was a Rosenberg decree ordering his subordinates to disregard Hague convention rules for treatment of captured peoples because, he said, the rules "are not applicable to the Soviet Union."

Just before the Court Session opened, Defendant Ernest Kaltenbrunner, who took his place in the prisoner's box after the trial began because he had been in hospital with a cerebral hemorrhage, was taken from the courtroom. Kaltenbrunner, former chief of the Bread Security Police, complained of a headache and medical authorities decided he needed to rest.

As the fifth week of the historic trial began, virtually all 21 Hitler leaders were losing their nonchalant courtroom air and apparently becoming resigned to death as punishment for Nazi crimes.

The mounting pile of evidence—taken from the Germans' own records—that the Hitler regime was responsible for the enslavement of nearly 7,000,000 foreigners and the extermination of 6,000,000 Jews has virtually unnerved many defendants, according to their prison guards.

Jail attendants said only Hjalmar Schacht, former minister of Economy, holds grimly to the hope of acquittal. Schacht has maintained he had little connection with Hitler's machinations, despite his letters introduced in evidence declaring he was rebuilding German economy so it would support a large military machine.

MEMBERS ENTHUSED REGARDING PROGRAM

With the coming of winter and the resultant wide range of interesting topics available, members of the local camera club are highly enthused regarding the program for the next few months. It is expected soon that a suitable winter's program will be arranged through lecture materials from leading film companies.

To increase the list of books on photography within the club, members are being asked to list their books which will be filed with the secretary. Members' books, plus the list of books at the Library, will make a comprehensive reference library available.

Winner of the first prize in the autumn competition sponsored by the local club was N. F. Tonkin, with H. C. Aitken taking the second prize. Mrs. Howard won the prize for third place.

CAR ACCIDENTS REPORTED TO POLICE

Considerable damage to truck and auto resulted Saturday night when Ronald Hedger of West College Street, attempted to turn a Burford truck at a Station Street intersection, only to be in collision with another auto driven by Morley Smith, Geddes Street.

Driving east on Station Street, Hedger attempted to make a complete turn when the following vehicle driven by Smith crashed into the truck. The fender, grill and front axle of the Smith auto were damaged, while the truck engine hood was badly bent.

Robert Juby, R.R. 6 Belleville, had the bumper torn off his auto on Saturday night when as he was driving on McAnnany Street, Roy Lashbrook, Victoria Ave., backed away from the curb and struck his vehicle. Damages were amicably settled between the parties.

PORTABLE GRAMOPHONE STOLEN FROM HOUSE

Apprehension of more than the usual number of inebriates produced the major part of activity in police circles over the weekend. Seven drunks were taken to the station and charged under the Liquor Control Act.

Mrs. Hugh Brant, Coleman Street, reported to police that some one had stolen a portable gramophone from her apartment some time on Friday evening. John Halikos, no given address, was apprehended at the local Snack Bar and was held at the police station on suspicion of entering the country illegally. Unable to speak English, the man secured the services of a local Greek as interpreter and this morning after giving a satisfactory account of himself was permitted his liberty.

ARGYLLS TO HOLD ANNUAL PAY PARADE

The Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) regiment is holding a parade on Tuesday night that few of its members will miss.

It is the occasion of the annual "pay parade" at which officers and other ranks draw a Christmas advance on their yearly accumulation of militia pay.

The hardest working man on that night will be the regimental paymaster and his assistant who will distribute the Christmas currency cheer to the troops on parade. The pay parade usually ends with a regimental party for the troops.

The 84th Field Battery, R.C.A., held their annual pay parade at the beginning of the month.

PLUGGED STOVEPIPES SMOKE OUT WORKERS IN CHINESE LAUNDRY

Plugged stovepipes, which the proprietor claimed had been cleaned "only last week," resulted in the employees of a Chinese laundry on East Bridge Street at the lower bridge being smoked out this morning. With the alarm turned in as a fire, members of the local fire department made a quick run to the scene and found the premises full of smoke. Investigation revealed the stove pipes were completely plugged with soot. Result was that new pipes were recommended by department officials.

On Sunday the fire department was called to Buckley's meat and grocery store at the corner of Victoria Ave., and Front Street, where smoke was seen rolling from the basement. It turned out to be merely a smoke investigation as no flames were in evidence.

Christmas Concerts

EMMANUEL CHURCH BIBLE SCHOOL

The annual Bible School Christmas program of Emmanuel Church was given on Friday evening, Dec. 14th., by the members of the school.

An encouraging congregation greeted the efforts of the children and young people of the school, and all seemed to enjoy the evening.

The program was centred in th Christmas Story itself, and was characterized by simplicity and clarity throughout. It was presented in three main sections; the children of the Primary Department presented their version of the Christmas Story of the birth of the Savior, firstly, in song and recitation. This was followed by the presentation by the older children of the Junior Department who gave recitations, and finally, the Young People of the school, the Senior Department, came forth to offer a Candle Lighting number in which some of the various names applied to the Saviour in the Bible were emphasized; and a tableau presentation of the Biblical Christmas Story. This consisted in the forming of three important scenes of that story by the young people in costume. No words were spoken, but appropriate carols were sung to interpret each scene.

The program was concluded after the benediction in the presentation of gifts and candy to the members of the school.

Grateful thanks are given to all who had a part in the program, and to all who helped with the preparations for it. There were many who did so help.

The scenery for the Manger Scene was done in chalk by two of the young men of the parish, Russell Vandervoort and Ronald Buskard. There were a number of favorable comments concerning this chalk work. The teachers of the Bible School gave freely of their time in the training of those having parts, and in the preparations. Special mention should go to Mr. Wilbur Wright, Mrs. John Rigby, Miss Berteel Gannon and Mrs. Telford Russell. Miss Ida Worrell, who has always been one of those most actively interested in the Emmanuel Bible School Christmas Program, was not able this year to take an active part, and was greatly missed, though her presence and interest were a great help to all.

72 Extra Employees Required To Handle Christmas Mail Here

Preparatory to what is expected to be the biggest Christmas rush ever experienced in the history of the local post office, a total of 72 temporary employees have been taken on to assist in handling the Christmas mails, it was announced today by Postmaster J. V. C. Truaisch.

Although the entire 72 have not yet reported for work, all have been sworn in and are receiving instruction relative to the particular job they will be required to handle in the five days' rush before Christmas. Twelve temporary employees who will act as assistant letter carriers reported for duty today and in an observational capacity went on their routes. Tomorrow they will be "on their own" on the various routes to which they have been assigned.

In addition to the dozen assistant letter carriers, one for each of the carrier routes in the city, there will also be twelve "inside" carrier assistants, who will help sort mail for the different carrier routes. With the first appearance of the annual "Christmas rush," 50 temporary distribution sorters will report for duty to assist in the post office.

"When I first entered the post office service more than 45 years ago, the department was advocating early mailing at Christmas," lamented Postmaster Truaisch to a newspaper representative this morning. "The public is still being asked to mail early, but we still have our annual Christmas rush."

"Approximately 75 per cent of the mail handled at Christmas time is made up of Christmas cards — cards which could just as easily be sent out a week or so ahead."

Third Stamp Wicket.

With expectancy of long lineups of people waiting to purchase stamps, arrangements have been made at the local post office to open a third stamp wicket, supplementary to the two already in existence. Also to assist in more rapid sorting special boxes for the dropping of "city" mail will be provided, both in the lobby and at the Pinnacle St. entrance.

This business of the Christmas rush is not just a short seasonal affair with members of the postal staff. On the contrary, plans for increasing the efficiency of sorting departments are started fully two months in advance. This procedure is characteristic with the Belleville office with a key employee for the past eight weeks being engaged in directing the erection of more efficient sorting boxes which are now set up ready for operation.

Just to indicate the tremendous volume of mail which is expected to be handled during the annual "rush," Postmaster Truaisch stated that this morning more than 11,000 letters and cards had been received for delivery to "outside" points. But this was merely a "preliminary," it was stated.

Decision of the postal department to conduct no mail deliveries on Christmas Day is expected to add to the rush if all mail is to be handled before the holiday. Carrying out a principle started at the beginning of war, there will be no delivery by street letter carriers on New Year's Day.

"From now on the office will be operating full 24 hours per day," stated the postmaster. "Our additional staff this year will enable us to continue working throughout the entire day."

Just as a point of side interest it will cost the postal department $1,800 for the temporary staff required to assist with the Christmas mails in Belleville.

245 O.S.D. STUDENTS LEAVE FOR CHRISTMAS

En route to their homes in far-flung sections of Ontario 245 of the 270 students enrolled at the Ontario School for the Deaf here will leave the city on Tuesday evening and Wednesday for the Christmas holidays. The school reopens on January 3.

Some of the children have long tedious journeys ahead of them before they reach the warmth of their home firesides. Two small girls will make the long trip to Hurst, Ont., which is situated between Cochrane and the Manitoba border. Others will go to Fort William and North Bay while yet others will journey to closer points in the province.

The twenty-five students who will remain here for the holiday will enjoy an old-fashioned Christmas dinner with turkey and all the "trimmin's; a well-decorated Christmas tree and entertainment provided by the faculty and staff of the school.

The majority of those remaining in school are doing so due to the inaccessibility of their homes to railway lines. The number of students spending Christmas here is the smallest in years, Superintendent W. J. Morrison said today.

The bearers were Messrs. Walter Belair, Howard Aselstine, Harry Flagler, Stafford Halpin, H. A. Bertram and Dr. Gordon Caldwell.

CHARLES W. FERGUSON
(Hillier-Ameliasburg)

After an illness of six months' duration Charles W. Ferguson died at the home of his son, Mr. Rae Ferguson, in the 6th concession of Hillier Township, Prince Edward County, on Thursday, Dec. 13th.

The late Mr. Ferguson, who was in his 81st. year, was born in Rawdon Township, Hastings County. At the age of five years he moved with his parents to Prince Edward County and resided in Ameliasburg Township until four years ago when he went to make his home with his son, Mr. Rae Ferguson in Hillier Township. During the years he lived in Ameliasburg Township he was engaged in farming and took an active part in municipal affairs, being a member of the township council and he also served as road superintendent for some years. In the community he was well known and highly esteemed.

Mr. Ferguson was one of a family of thirteen children, ten of whom grew to manhood and womanhood. Of this number there now survive two sisters, Mrs. Anna Wilkinson of Rose, N.Y., and Mrs. Thomas Archer of Elm Creek, Manitoba; two brothers, Mr. Stintson Ferguson of Clyde, N.Y., and Mr. Rowe Ferguson of Sonningdale, Sask.

One daughter and two sons also survive, the daughter being, Mrs. Ralph Dyer of Detroit, Mich., and the sons are Mr. Keith Ferguson of Toronto, and Mr. Rae Ferguson of Bowerman's, Hillier Township. Also four grandchildren, Bruce, Vivian, Kathryn and Laird Ferguson of Bowerman's.

The funeral at which many friends were present took place from the home of his son, Mr. Rae Ferguson, to Salem United Church where an impressive service was conducted by the pastor. Interment was in Salem cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. C. L. Carnrite, Neville Gooding, Edward Hamilton, Percy Chase, Fred Morton and C. L. McFaul.

Christmas Seal Fund Still Needs Your Support

A healthy young boy, symbol of the youth of Canada, is depicted on the 1945 Christmas Seals which have been distributed throughout the county by the Belleville and District Shrine Club. The distribution is part of a nation-wide campaign to raise funds for the control of tuberculosis.

"Funds raised throughout the city and county," President D. L. Storey of the Shrine Club, stated, "will be used principally to support local health progress. All but ten per cent is spent within the district in which it is raised. This ten per cent is forwarded to the Canadian Tuberculosis Association, parent body of more than 100 voluntary tuberculosis associations and Christmas Seal committees.

"The Canadian Association was organized in 1900 by a group of laymen and physicians who, alarmed by the tuberculosis mortality in this country, banded together to plan a campaign against the disease. At that time, T.B. was the leading cause of death. It has now fallen to seventh place, but still kills more persons between 15 and 45 than any other disease," he said.

The 1945 Seal in the traditional colors of Christmas, red and green, shows a bright young lad carrying home a holiday wreath. A white house with a tall picket fence is in the background and opposite the youth is a red double-barred Cross emblem of the crusade for health.

Donations to the Christmas Seal Campaign here can be made at the Shrine headquarters, Campbell Street, or direct to Mr. Harry Rollins, treasurer of the campaign here. Next year the Shrine Club plans to extend its mass survey by X-Ray throughout Hastings County. The examinations will be free and findings are confidential.

Commercial Rentals Regulations Relaxed by the Administrator

Ottawa, Dec. 17—(CP)—Relaxation of commercial rentals regulations to facilitate the termination of leases by landlords was announced last week by Owen Lobley, Rentals Administrator for the Prices Board.

The relaxation takes the form of a "rentals code" of 12 principles affecting commercial rentals in Canada. Arrangements have been made for landlords affected by the new code to apply to their nearest Prices Board office and receive speedy individual investigation.

The new code applies only to rentals for business purposes and does not affect the individual householder.

The Rentals Administrator or his deputy now may consider applications from landlords to terminate leases under provincial law in any of these circumstances:

1. If the new occupant will give permanent employment to substantially more persons than the existing tenant.

2. If suitable alternative accommodation is available for the tenant.

3. If the landlord is a hospital, educational, charitable or religious institution and requires the tenant's accommodation for its own purposes.

4. If vacant possession of the accommodation is required in order than the landlord may make substantially higher and better use of the land.

5. If the tenant's need for the accommodation as a place in which to conduct his own business has ceased as evidenced by his having assigned his lease or having sublet the whole or a substantial portion of the accommodation to another.

6. If the landlord or his son or daughter formerly conducted a business in the accommodation and gave up the business because of the war, renting the accommodation to another, and if the landlord or his son or daughter now desire to re-establish the former business in the accommodation.

7. If the accommodation is held vacant.

8. If it is in the public interest that a public utility with a franchise requires possession of the accommodation for its own purposes.

9. If the landlord, prior to Feb. 1, 1945, obliged himself to give possession to another tenant at some future date, and the tenant, at the time of making the present lease, has been so informed.

10. If the displacement of the tenant is necessary to enable the landlord to comply with a requirement of any duly constituted governmental authority.

11. If the tenant is obliged to sell products of his landlord to the exclusion of similar products of another.

12. If, before Dec. 1, 1945, a landlord purchased any commercial accommodation for his own business he was under an obligation to vacate or had vacated a commercial accommodation by reason of a notice to vacate given to him under certain rental regulations.

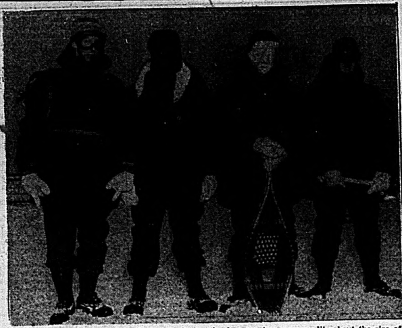
Mr. Lobley also announced a further relaxation of commercial rental regulations.

This is in cases where the existing tenant of commercial accommodation is willing to lease the accommodation for a period of at least five years subsequent to Dec. 1, 1945. The rental reserved in such lease will automatically become the lawful maximum rental of the accommodation, provided such lease does not contain a sales clause or other similar provision for its pre-determination.

"The elementary need for rental ceiling and eviction control of commercial accommodation was the acute shortage of commercial space," Mr. Lobley said. "If we have faith in our country, we must believe that, as time passes, the shortage will be overtaken, and, when this happens, the need for rental-ceiling and eviction-control will disappear."

EARLY STEEL RESEARCH

A French physicist, Reaumur, first tried to make steel by melting cast and wrought iron together.



Various forms of face masks and goggles have been isued to members of the force which will make up Exercise Muskox. Left in the picture are ordinary plexiglass goggles, as supplied to air-force personnel. These are used as eye protection. The second man in the picture is wearing a canvas face mask, under which is a breather mask similar to that on the extreme right. Third, is a chamois face mask issued for patrol work to enable the trekker to keep his face warm. Cut into the face are two narrow slits about the size of a pencil point for eye pieces. The last face piece is goggles, anti-dust, which have a nose breather on them that filters the cold air. Cold air has a nasty habit of freezing the lungs. The eye-pieces are also replaceable. A quick push removes them and either one of four types of lenses can be quickly inserted — a polaroid for anti-glare, an orange color for horizon and sky separation in haze, an all-around filter to stop undue snow reflections, and a normal clear one.—(Canadian Army Photo.)

COMMONS FAILS

Lunch in Shifts

Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Pension Minister, thought this situation could be overcome by agreement with party leaders and arrangements made for lunch shifts and relief.

The pay bill, which found only two dissenters in the Commons, passed the Senate when 39 Liberals and Progressive Conservatives joined to outvote 11 Liberals who opposed the idea.

The increase, earmarked as expenses, will be exempt from income tax for members of the Commons, but will be taxed for members of the cabinet, the leader of the opposition and members of the Senate. It will raise the pay of members of both Houses to $6,000 for the session now ending.

Senators generally agreed that the increase—the first for parliament in 25 years—was justified. It might serve to attract men to parliament who now would not consider it.

The Senate adopted the three-power Washington atomic energy declaration after hearing Senator Arthur Roebuck (L—Ontario) say that the responsibility for seeing that no more atomic bombs fell belonged to the world. It was folly to reply on secrecy to prevent use of the discovery by other powers.

Many Discussions Heard.

The Commons, meanwhile, heard a discussion on everything from increased pensions for veterans and free hospitalization to the value of the National Film Board and a statement on the number of men going into the labor stream.

Mr. Mackenzie's piloting the veteran's department estimates, said suggestions by Col. A. J. Brooks (PC—Royal) on an adjustment in veterans pensions to cover the current high cost of living and kindred matters, were good and would be considered.

Health Minister Claxton, speaking on his departmental estimates, said acceptance by the provinces of financial arrangements in connection with public health eventually would see complete free hospital care throughout Canada in four or five years.

A discussion of the value of the National Film Board cut across party lines with Mr. Hansell finding support from both Progressive Conservatives and a C.C.F. member for his concern that government-produced films might be used for political advantage.

Labor Minister Mitchell, replying to a request for a statement on unemployment, said conditions were generally much more favorable than had been predicted by some "agents of gloom."

Extensive Work of Deloro Red Cross Summarized in Review

Marmora, Dec. 15 — Activities of the Deloro Red Cross Circle were officially discontinued at a dinner and social evening held on Thursday. Succeeding an appetizing meal served by Mrs. H. J. Neath and her staff at the Royal Hotel adjournment was made to the staff dining hall at Deloro where cards and games were enjoyed by the members. A summary of the activities of the circle since its inception on Sept. 25th, 1939, will be found interesting.

At the inaugural meeting 44 ladies were present and the executive elected comprised: President, Mrs. S. B. Wright; Vice President, Mrs. R. A. Elliott; Secretary Treasurer, Mrs. A. V. Yates. A meeting every two weeks was decided. As a result 140 meetings have been held with an average attendance of 20 members. Meetings were held in Deloro hall until January 21st., 1943, when the company house was suggested as a more comfortable meeting place.

Tea was served at each meeting, the members working in groups. The silver collections, taken at every meeting, have resulted in a substantial sum being obtained to help with the circle's expenses. On February 5th., 1942, upon the resignation of Mrs. A. V. Yates, Mrs. W. Mumby was elected secretary treasurer, the committee remaining the same until January 4th., 1945, when owing to the departure of Mrs. S. B. Wright and Mrs. R. A. Elliott from the village, Mrs. L. K. Crawford was elected president and Mrs. C. R. Whittemore, vice president.

3,340 Knitted Articles

With the exception of knitting for ditty bags and the packing of overseas parcels, all work has been turned in to the Belleville Red Cross branch from whom the supplies were obtained. The Voluntary Workers Club of Deloro made several large donations of children's clothing and knitted afghans, all of which were also sent to the Belleville branch. The following work has been completed: 3,340 knitted articles including 17 large afghans; 1,704 articles of sewing, including 25 large quilts; 125 parcels sent to boys and girls serving overseas at an average cost of five dollars; 52 parcels sent to boys and girls serving in Canada.

Each year a supply of ditty bags obtained from Navy League to be distributed among members who supplied the contents themselves, the Red Cross in most cases supplying knitted articles.

135 ditty bags filled by members; 30 bags filled by the Circle at an average cost of four dollars each; 7 cartons of new and used clothing canvassed for by members, shipped to Aid to Russia headquarters on January 21st 1943. Members of the Circle also assisted in the distribution of ration books in the village of Deloro.

With this splendid record having been achieved, the Circle at the close of its activities, is most appreciative of the assistance which was readily forthcoming for the carrying on of its work.

DAISY MISSION BAND

West Huntingdon—The Christmas meeting of the Daisy Mission Band was held at the home of Miss Marilyn Fitchett on Saturday afternoon with a large attendance. Miss Marjorie Wright presided, with Geo. Post and Gerald Cook giving readings. Several Christmas carols were sung. Marilyn Fitchett favored with a solo. Mr. Kenneth Stewart gave a Christmas address. Donnie McCurdy read the story of "Peter's Christmas." Muriel Ashley announced the officers for 1946. Mrs. Fitchett served dainty refreshments.

VETERAN AND WIFE AS GUESTS

Columbus, O., Dec. 15 (AP)—An unidentified war veteran and his wife who expected to become parents soon, will become guests of Gov. and Mrs. Frank J. Lausche in the governor's mansion during the housing shortage. Arrangements are being made—and are practically completed—to have a family of two—in truth a prospective family of three—to live in the governor's home during the unavailability of housing," the governor announced.

CIVIL WAR VETERAN, 113, DIES

Cincinnati, Dec. 17 (AP)—"Cap" William D. Welsch, whose 11—3 years made him the oldest civil war veteran in Cincinnati and perhaps in the the States, died here Saturday. Welsch was wounded while fighting with the Union army at Antietam and again at Gettysburg. His army discharge dated May 31, 1865, lists his age at that time as 33.

for CATARRH,

BRONCHIAL ASTHMA, ANTRUM, SINUS ALSO CATARRHAL AND BRONCHIAL COLDS!

What is LANTIGEN?

Lantigen is a specially prepared dissolved vaccine and has been used successfully in the treatment of various diseases. Lantigen is not a patent medicine. Lantigen is a bacterial vaccine in a dissolved state, is devoid of drugs and safe to take. Lantigen is a natural aid. It is produced from the bacteria which are peculiar to the particular disease requiring treatment. In the preparation of Lantigen the organisms are destroyed by a process of dissolution thus releasing the active principles from the bacterial bodies. Being in a completely dissolved state the vaccine is operative locally by absorption into the tissues of the tongue, tonsils, throat, and the intestinal tract and is further operative by means of its distribution throughout the system. More than 150,000 people in Australia have enjoyed relief from the distressing affects of catarrh and allied conditions.

Writing in the "British Medical Journal," speaks as follows in the issue of January 15, 1936: "In my experience, the oral antigens have been mostly employed for cases of Catarrhal infections, rheumatic conditions and catarrhal enterocolitis. Clinical response has been quite definitely marked." This important statement, however, heralds the dawn of a great release for Catarrhal sufferers.

Pre-Christmas Week

Only one week remains before the greatest of festivals. The season so far has been marked by heavy buying and Saturday crowned the volume of trade of the past week. Thousands of shoppers jammed the shops and bought a great volume of the offerings on local counters and shelves.

Businessmen have been very busy for a considerable time. Now is the busiest time for the postal staffs. The mail and parcel trade of the post office at this season exerts annually a heavy pressure against which the staffs, augmented by large numbers of additional help have to contend. The volume of mail this year is expected to reach very high proportions, but the postal departments are well prepared.

Into the present week a great share of the trade of Christmastime will be carried on. Though there will still be a day, Monday next, which will be Christmas Eve, the real volume of business will have been done by Saturday.

Care With Decorations and Lights

With plans going forward for the first peacetime celebration of Christmas since 1938, it is well to draw attention to the exercise of care in putting up decorations and means of illumination. With evergreens and flimsy inflammable materials as decorations there is a fire hazard, against which people should protect themselves and others. If one is using old electric wire connections with lignts, these should be examined to see that there are no bare wires which might cause short circuits. Open flame such as from wax candles should not be allowed near an evergreen or decorations. Non-inflammable decorations can be secured which would remove risk.

In the unrestrained merriment and joy of this hallowed time, it is well that every care be exercised to see that there is no fire danger. Should it exist it should be removed. It pays to play safe because flame or fire can make havoc of property and endanger life.

Annual warnings are given with the thought of placing all possible safeguards about the family hearth.

At Winter's Beginning

Winter has made itself felt so far this winter though in Belleville area there has not been any deep snow. However other parts have not escaped so lightly, Prince Edward County being an exception to the light precipitation. A heavy fall was reported on Sunday in the Buffalo area where traffic was blocked by the volume of snow.

Actually winter is not yet here but winter weather always prevails long before winter sets in. In fact Saturday morning, a few minutes after the midnight hour is the first of actual winter. At that time the sun will enter Capricorn and usher in the season.

With the return to standard time after the reign of fast time during the latter part of the war periods, the mornings have appeared lighter, but that condition is due to the fact that standard time is one hour later than daylight time. In the afternoon however the difference is noted the other way, it seems darker an hour earlier due to the change of time.

Help for Refugees in U.K.

Estimates published in 1943 showed that the help, in money or kind, given by private organizations and individuals in the United Kingdom to refugees from German Europe amounted to £9,500,000 ($38,000,000). In addition, the United Kingdom Government helped, not only by giving every facility to the voluntary bodies, but also by providing funds in aid. In 1938, the Government set aside £4,000,000 ($16,000,000) to help Czech refugees. Following the outbreak of the war, the Government decided to subsidize private organizations caring for refugees. At first 50 per cent of the cost was given, and this was later raised to 100 per cent. Over £1,200,000 ($4,800,000) had been spent by the Government in this manner by May 1943, not including the Ministry of Health expenditure on refugees.

Eradicated Mediaeval Plague

The "number one ratcatcher" of the United Kingdom, Mr. McAuley Gracey, Director of Infestation Control at the Ministry of Food, has successfully controlled the outbreak of bubonic plague in Italy. He flew to Taranto in a plane loaded with British plague vaccine and the latest type of poisons for a mass destruction of rats. The local population were dusted with DDT and given instructions on rat destruction. Mr. Gracey is expected to go to Germany also to organize pest control there.

Everything for Speed

(Ottawa Journal)

A start is to be made early in the year, so it is announced, on a "super-highway" from New York city to Buffalo and thence southward to the Pennsylvania State line. It is to be a six-lane "express" highway 486 miles long, costing $200,000,000, for both commercial and passenger vehicles, and a speed up to 70 miles per hour will be permitted. "Unhampered by traffic lights," writes an enthusiastic reporter, "cross traffic or grade crossings, with opposing three lanes safely separated by twenty-foot malls, travellers on such a Road of Tomorrow seem to have ahead of them a motorist's dream come true."

It is a grand scheme, and no doubt those who like to drive in a speedway will find it simply perfect. The motorist can't see the scenery at 60 or 70 miles an hour, he is liable to instant extinction if a tire blows out at that speed or if the car ahead pulls up without warning, but he is moving across the countryside at a terrific speed for whatever satisfaction there is in that process.

The fact is that mighty few drivers are competent to drive at 70, or anything like it. That is a job for a trained race-track driver. The new speedway will be costly, and fast, but it will not be a pleasant place for the average circumspect motorist.

The Example of Sweden

(Saint John Telegraph-Journal)

In Sweden, forestry for decades has been on a "perpetual crop" basis with the cut regulated by what nature, with scientific help from man, was capable of producing. The Swedes have no shortage of big logs even though lumbering has been the keystone of their economy for such a long period. With a land area of only 173,000 square miles they cut about 1,600,000,000 cubic feet of wood annually, while Canadians, with 2,003,000 square miles (the Northwest Territories and Yukon excluded) only are able to harvest about 3,825,000,000 cubic feet of wood a year. The way the Swedes have "farmed" their forests accounts in a large measure for their country being able to support, at living standards as high as any in Europe, 40.77 persons to the square mile. The fact that we have only 16.65 persons to the square mile in New Brunswick, and that a very large proportion of all our land is forested, emphasizes how important our forest resources can be if we put them to the most efficient use.

Jan Sibelius who has reached the age of eighty years and has in his long life made a world-famous contribution to music has been given a pension by his native land, Finland. In the world of music today, Silebius ranks very high and seems assured of a perpetual fame among lovers of music. While his music is intensely Finnish in its inspiration, it has a universal appeal.

LETTER IV

Beloved, the gossips already
 Have started their vicious campaign
And this time the story is: "Eddie
 Is soon to be married again."
At table, my darling, 'tis said: "Ed
 Of somebody's widow is fond."
Downtown she's "a glorious redhead!"
 Uptown she's "a marvelous blonde!"

Beloved, I'm certain it's better
 At gossips to laugh than to cry
And so I am penning this letter,
 The twinkle of old in my eye.
There's someone named Charley or Harry
 With money's he's willing to bet
That shortly I'm planning to marry
 A redhead, a blonde, or brunette.

Beloved, the gossips are busy,
 As often we've known them to be,
Insisting this altar-bound Lizzie
 Is also the mother of three.
Time was you and I wondered whether
 To laugh at such stuff or to cry.
Then, often we chuckled together.
 Alone now, to chuckle — I try.

Looking Ahead in Ottawa

(By The Ottawa Staff of The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, Dec. 17 (CP)—A showdown in the labor movement between the extreme leftists and other groups—moderate leftists and supporters of the old line parties—appears to be approaching and expectations are that it will come at the latest when the Canadian Congress of Labor and the Trades and Labor Congress hold their 1946 conventions.

The two groups, representing the bulk of Canadian organized labor, had to cancel their 1945 meetings because of travel restrictions; but meantime there has been evidence of a growing struggle between those of different political views.

The most recent development was the action last week of the International Association of Machinists (A.F.L.) in suspending four high ranking officers of the big Montreal Aircraft Lodge for supporting communism and reportedly trying to transfer the Lodge membership to the United Electrical Workers (C.I.O.). Robert Haddow, one of the four, promptly denied the charges which are to be heard by a special investigating committee.

The United Electrical Workers is an affiliate of the C.C.L. while the machinists union is affiliated in Canada with the T.L.C. within the C.C.L. ranks.

The Ford workers are members of the United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.) which is considered as having a membership fairly well divided between extreme lefts and moderate lefts. Clarence Jackson, Canadian Director of the United Electrical Workers, was considered the leader of the extreme leftists while Pat Conroy, C.C.L. Secretary Treasurer, and Charles Millard, Canadian Director of the United Steel Workers (C.I.O.), were looked on as heading the moderate leftists. The three leaders went to Windsor as members of the C.C.L.'s Ford strike committee.

Echoes of both the Montreal and Windsor situations are likely sooner or later to provide fireworks within the two big labor groups.

Parliamentary plans: A move to bring about greater efficiency in the handling of parliamentary business is under way.

With the session following its usual pattern and ending in a last minute rush and swirl, party leaders and whips have tentatively discussed the possibility of introducing the British system of putting limits on the length of debate and adopting other features.

"Planned debate," it is felt, would result in a more even division of time for the more important topics, some of which are sped through in the last hours of the session.

For instance, in the session just ending, the Speech from the Throne occupied several weeks. The same debate in the British House of Commons is usually completed after three days by general agreement among parties and a selected speaker's list is chosen. In Ottawa the list of speakers in a debate can be endless and argument can be monotonously repetitious.

Besides organizing the debate, party leaders and whips also have discussed the possibility of accepting the Speaker's decision on a "yea" and "nay" vote and not carrying the matter further to a time-consuming called division.

Mackenzie's Column

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

Dublin, Dec. 17 (AP)— Sean O'Kelly, President of the Republic of Eire, is as Irish as shamrock, and an altogether delightful gentleman who is one of the foundation rocks upon which this new state is built.

Mr. O'Kelly and I have been friends for 27 years and it was good to see him again. You would hardly suspect such a quiet, scholarly man, whose face habitually wears a friendly smile, has a jack-the-giant killer record. But he has, for he was one of those who fought the British troops in Dublin during the "bloody Easter week rebellion" of 1916, and was imprisoned so many times for defiance of Britain that he likely would have trouble remembering all the cells he occupied.

The first time I met Sean O'Kelly was during the peace conference in Paris after the first Great War. He was just a young fellow then and his business was to try to catch the attention of the powers and interest them in applying the Wilsonian ideal of self-determination to Ireland. He was having a tough time when I arrived on the scene and gave him an idea—not I must admit, without selfish motives.

Shortly before that Eamon de Valera had made a sensational and mysterious escape from Lincoln prison in England, and newspapermen of many countries had been trying to get the details. Mr. O'Kelly had the story but declined to publish it because he thought the same method might be used again for the rescue of other imprisoned Sinn Feiners. I advanced the argument that if he gave me the story it would serve to attract the attention of the peace conference to the republican movement. He finally agreed and here on thumbnail is what he told me:

Mr. De Valera's Sinn Fein colleagues in Ireland, having decided to try to rescue him and several companions, sent to Lincoln a fat and affable Irishman who leased a plot of ground beside the grim old prison and proceeded to cultivate vegetables. He was a happy sort, and as he worked he sang Gaelic songs. These had tremendous fascination for Mr. De Valera, since they voiced both encouragement and instructions as he exercised in the recreation yard.

Finally one day the gardener's lyric tenor told Mr. De Valera to get an impression of the big lock in the gate of the yard. This was achieved and Mr. De Valera threw it over the wall to the gardener. From the impression a key was made and the day of delivery was set.

At this juncture there appeared on the scene, two beautiful Irish girls—both college women from Dublin—who played a siren role to British sentries at the gate. At the appointed hour the rescue was made while Mr. De Valera and his mates were in the yard. The girls drew the sentries away. The relief party rushed up and unlocked the gate with the key made from the impression, Mr. De Valera and his friends raced out and were whisked away in several fast automobiles which sped in different directions, confusing pursuers.

That's the story of Mr. De Valera's escape. There are other versions, but I like this one—especially the touch about the singing gardener and the beautiful girls. That's water over the dam, but it's worth knowing because it represents the stuff of which the present government of Eire is built.

TONSILLOTOMY OR TONSILLECTOMY, WHICH?

A boy had suffered painful attacks of quinsy at about yearly intervals for several years. Sometimes the abscess around the tonsil would break of itself after days and nights of great discomfort, and relief and recovery would quickly follow. Sometimes it was necessary to lance the abscess—an incision into the centre of the swelling of soft palate or pillar (in quinsy the pus collects around the tonsil, not in the tonsil). Such lancing, by the way, is usually the best treatment for quinsy, if the patient wants immediate relief.

Then after several such attacks the boy suffered one of the recognized sequels of tonsilitis or peri-tonsillitis (quinsy), namely, chorea (St. Vitus's dance). It was more than a year before he got over the chorea. The quinsy attacks came nearly as often as ever. When the boy was well along in his 'teens he consulted a new doctor about his throat. The new doctor advised tonsillotomy.

Now tonsillotomy means literally cutting the tonsil, slicing off a portion of tonsil, or, as the layman sometimes calls it, "clipping" the tonsil. The boy accepted this advice. So the doctor explained it would hurt for a jiffy, like lancing the quinsy or extracting a tooth—the boy was game, the doctor ringed the tonsil with his cunning little snicker-snacker (tonsillotome), went phtt! on one side, then repeated the trick on the other side, and the seance was over.

This happened long ago, but at the time I considered it inadequate treatment. I believed then that if any tonsil surgery was indicated in such cases the only proper procedure was tonsillectomy, which means literally removing the entire tonsil or at any rate an attempt to "get all of the tonsil."

The boy never had another attack of quinsy or severe sore throat. That may have been coincidence, or on the other hand it may have been because the gadget just happened to slice off the portion of tonsil that contained the septic focus or nidus where the germs (pneumococci, streptococci, staphylococci) responsible for the quinsy were harbored.

Anyway here is what I believe to be good, sound, and above all SAFE policy:

Tonsillotomy under light anesthesia is the method of choice for enlarged (hypertrophied) tonsils in children.

For infected tonsils (or for eliminating the possible source of infection in any case of focal infection) diathery (electro-coagulation) treatments by a physician skilled in this difficult technique.

For enlarged tonsils and-or adenoids causing any impairment of hearing or middle ear inflammation X-ray treatments to shrink adenoids and tonsils.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

How to M. C. and Win Friends

We tried your method of making coffee this morning and it was delicious. Thanks for the recipe. (A Reader)

Answer—This is the first anonymous communication I have printed or answered—I print it now just because I wonder why such characters. I have no recipe. Chapter in red book deals with good and bad coffee and the effects thereof. For copy of the red book "What to Eat and Why" send twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope. You must ask for it. A clipping will not do.

"Neurasthenia"

In your article "The Neurotic in the Consulting Room" you said there are four lowgrade chronic diseases that masquerade as "nerves" or "neurathenia". Kindly name the four diseases. (Mrs. M. W.)

Answer—I doubt that would be kind, but I'll mention one — incipient pulmonary tuberculosis. Now for Pete's sake don't try to make something of this indiscretion on my part. If you are concerned at all, undergo a careful physical examination and get the physician's assurance.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What Presidents have been Masons?

Thirteen of the 32 men who have held the office of President of the United States from Washington to Truman are known to have been affiliated with the Masonic order.

They have been: George Washington, James Monroe, Andrew Jackson, James K. Polk, James Buchanan, Andrew Johnson, James A. Garfield, William McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt, William H. Taft, Warren G. Harding, Franklin D. Roosevelt, and Harry S. Truman.

No evidence has been produced to substantiate the oft-repeated story that Millard Fillmore was once a Freemason and that he recented after the anti-Masonic excitement that followed the mysterious disappearance of William Morgan in 1826.

Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, John Quincy Adams, John Tyler, Zachary Taylor, Abraham Lincoln, Ulysses S. Grant and Benjamin Harrison are other Presidents who have been classed as Masons by one writer or another but whose Masonic affiliations have never been substantiated.

Fourteen of the 34 Vice Presidents from John Adams to Harry S. Truman are known to have been affiliated with the Masonic Order. They are: Aaron Burr, Daniel D. Tompkins, Richard Mentor Johnson, George M. Dallas, William R. King, Andrew Johnson, John C. Breckinridge, Schuyler Colfax, Adlai E. Stevenson, Garrett A. Hobart, Theodore Roosevelt, Charles W. Fairbanks, Thomas R. Marshall, and Harry S. Truman. Three of these—Johnson, Theodore Roosevelt and Truman — became Presidents.

In the administrations of Monroe, Polk, Buchanan and McKinley, and the fourth administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt, both the President and the Vice President were Masons.

Foreign Ministers Begin Talks In Fine Amosphere

By REMBERT JAMES

Moscow, Dec. 17 — (AP) — In an atmosphere of cordiality enhanced by an informal preliminary meeting Sunday night, the foreign ministers of the Soviet Union, the United States and Great Britain turned today to the serious business of bringing their countries closer together in the interests of world peace.

A British Embassy spokesman said the foreign ministers would meet for the second time this afternoon and observers expected they would embark at once on discussion of the momentous issues which had brought them together — including the vital question of international control of atomic energy.

Today's meeting was to start at 4 p. m. (9 a.m. E.S.T.)

Their first meeting last night took place in brilliantly-lighted Speridonifka Palace, the resplendent green stone building in which the Soviet Union usually stages important diplomatic conferences, and lasted about 2½ hours.

Foreign Commissar Molotov, as the host, presided over the proceedings — his first joint meeting with State Secretary Byrnes and Foreign Secretary Bevin since the unsuccessful conferences of the Foreign Ministers' Council in London last September.

United States Ambassador W. Averell Harriman and British Ambassador Sir Archibald Clark Kerr, as well as other members of the British and American delegations, were present. The terse official announcement of the initial meeting gave no details, but an atmosphere of good feeling and friendly co-operation was apparent. Mr. Molotov was described as warmly cordial and hospitable.

It was presumed that the conferees limited their talk to a discussion of procedural routine — perhaps touching on the hours for future conferences and what matters should be taken up first.

The only American press representative permitted to enter Speridonifka Palace while the foreign ministers were there was Emil Reynolds, a representative of the Americans News Picture Pool, who said the three statesmen were in excellent humor as they posed for pictures.

With an experience of the Arctic which began in 1936, behind him, tall, pipe-smoking Lt.-Col. P. D. Baird of Montreal, is the Commander, Exercise Muskox. Col. Baird was a member of the British-Canadian Arctic Expedition in 1936-39 which conducted a general scientific exploration for two winters. He went along as a geologist and surveyor with the expedition, led by T. H. Manning, mapped some new country. When war broke out in 1939, Col. Baird was at Pon Inlet but he came out on the Scorpia landing at Halifax. He joined the army as a gunner and spent four years overseas with the 7th Field Battery. He was also a member of 14 Commando Unit in 1942-43 — a mixed force of British, Canadian and Norwegian, formed to do raids on Norway. "Unfortunately," said Col. Baird, "the raids never came off." He returned home in December, 1943, trained the Lovat Scouts at Jasper during 1944 after which he did operational research at Ottawa before being selected to lead Exercise Muskox. Col. Baird is married, has three children and wife overseas. His father lives in Scotland.—(Canadian Army Photo.)

Konoye's Suicide Seen as Blow To Emperor's Prestige

By RUSSELL BRINES

Tokyo, Dec. 17—(AP)—Prince Fumimaro Konoye's suicide yesterday—a new and powerful blow to the prestige and position of Emperor Hirohito—may have profound repercussions in the Imperial household as well as in political circles.

The prince himself, in his final hours, expressed concern for the future of the Imperial House as discussions of possible abdication were revived. Some Japanese said the suicide might be the final factor in precipitating the Emperor's resignation.

Doubtless, Hirohito personally felt the blow deeply. Konoye long was his close confidante and it generally was believed the Mikado placed great authority in "the dangerous prince."

Konoye's death was a swift parallel blow to Gen. MacArthur's recent directive against Shinto. That directive struck deeply at Hirohito. Before that, the widespread network of Gen. MacArthur's war criminal lists had stripped from around the throne all but two of the principal and still active court actors in the tragedy of the past 15 years. The Imperial household of Prince Morimasa Nashimoto. had been invaded by the arrest

Yesterday, a few hours after Konoye's pre-dawn suicide, Marquis Koichi Kido, until recently lord keeper of the Privy Seal and another close adviser of the Emperor, surrendered as a war criminal suspect.

It may have been with design, then, that a few days ago newspapers suddenly blossomed anew with stories about Crown Prince Akihito, whose 12th birthday is Dec. 23.

After the surrender, all of the Tokyo press carried stories about Crown Prince. It is known now abdication was discussed before the occupation and Akihito was being groomed as ruler under a regency. The plan was abandoned when the Allied attitude indicated relative leniency toward Hirohito.

Diet sessions have revealed several indications that the wall of the Imperial household is cracking.

Record-Setting 'Pusher' Bomber Crashes, Crew Safe

Washington, Dec. 17 (AP)—The United States War Department disclosed Sunday night that the XB42 plane, known as the Mixmaster, which last week set a transcontinental record, had crashed at nearby Oxen Hill, Md.

The War Department reported that three men aboard the ship had bailed out and landed safely nearby. They were identified as:

Lt.-Col. E. J. Ascani, the pilot; Lt.-Col. J. M. Laney, and Major C. L. Hayduk.

The plane had taken off from Bolling Field, Washington, at 4 p.m. E.S.T. and the crash occurred about 30 minutes later. The War Department said the mishap was attributed by the crew to an engine failure.

The plane was destroyed.

The Douglas army bomber, propelled by twin propellers in its tail, flew eastward across the United States, Dec. 8, in five hours 17 minutes, which the National Aeronautic Association is recognizing as a record between Long Beach, Calif., and Washington.

The plane averaged 432 miles an hour for 2,295 miles. It was handled by two army pilots who reported the trip was without incident and smooth.

SHIP TURKEYS EAST

Montreal, Dec. 15 (CP)—More than 180,000 western Canada turkeys will be shipped to eastern Canada in time for Christmas over Canadian National Railways lines, officials of the company said yesterday. Total weight of the turkeys will be about 2,250,000 pounds. They will be sent to Halifax, Moncton, Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto and Hamilton.

SAILOR UNAWARE OF TRAGEDY

New York, Dec. 17 (CP) — Sailor Rudy Gustafson, believed en route home today to join his family for Christmas, does not yet know his two-year-old daughter, Noreen, and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary Munbrauer, 50, were burned to death in a fire at their Bronx home yesterday.

Ford Strikers To Take Vote On Govt. Plan

Windsor, Dec. 17. (CP)—For the second time, a government-sponsored back-to-work plan is to go before members of Local 200, United Automobile Workers of America (C.I.O.), whose decision Tuesday and Wednesday may end the Union Security strike which has kept 10,000 Ford workers idle since Sept. 12.

The ballot will call for a "yes" or "no" vote on the question, "Do you favor the government plan to end the strike?"

The formula has been slightly modified since 5,000 Union men rejected it by a 52-48 vote. The plan provides for negotiation plus arbitration on Union demands, chief of which are Union shop and check-off, and the modification adds that the arbitrator will give his decision within five days, if possible, on points not settled by negotiation.

Polling will take place Tuesday and Wednesday from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., each day at Union headquarters and at sub-offices near the strikebound automotive plant.

About 5,000 members of Local 200 gave almost unanimous approval yesterday to take the second ballot.

Eligible to vote are all members of Local 200 who paid July Union dues as well as ex-servicemen who were Union members when they enlisted and who have since held military membership cards. The latter provision applies to members who joined the armed services following signing of the first Union contract between the company and Local 200 early in 1942.

Recommendations for the vote arose from complaints that some members did not have a chance to vote last time because the meeting was called on such short notice.

Woman's Body Found in Snow

Kincardine, Dec 17 (CP)—Police pressed their inquiry today into the death of 53-year-old Mrs. Angus McDougall, whose blood-stained, frozen body was found huddled against a barbed wire fence near her home.

Her grandson stumbled over the snow-covered body as he made his way across a field to Mrs. McDougall's home. He ran home to tell his father, John Small, of the discovery.

Provincial Police were called and found the woman's head and face covered with congealed blood. Inspector Charles Wood, of the Provincial Police, Toronto, and Dr. J. H. Fisher, of London, Ont., provincial pathologist were summoned to this town, 45 miles southwest of Owen Sound.

A storm had wiped out all footprints around the body which was lightly clad in a cotton dress. The woman wore house slippers but no stockings and in the kitchen of her home police found bloodstains on the floor and some pieces of broken china along with indications other fragments had been removed.

Police said Mrs. McDougall resided alone until recently when her son, Vernon returned from overseas. He was not home during the weekend and did not know of his mother's death until informed by police.

The woman's husband, a railway section man has not lived in Kincardine for several years.

Paris Still City Without Food

By MURIEL PENN

Paris, Dec. 17—(Reuters)—Paris today—15 months after liberation— still a city with a food shortage so acute that fathers of families must join their wives in the daily search to find enough to eat. Rations are insufficient to maintain health and the tremendous rise in prices has upset the whole balance of the family budget.

A couple with one child with an income of 5,000 francs per month (about $1,200 per annum) —the wage of thousands of French workmen and many black-coated workers — must spend at least 753 francs weekly to get what is merely a starvation diet. They get coffee and dry bread for breakfast every day, no meat for dinner except on Sundays, vegetables and bread for a third meal in the evenings. Their menu includes no dessert except on Sundays. The butter and fats ration is used entirely to make vegetables palatable for the main meals.

The professional worker who earns 10,000 francs a month supplements this diet with black market purchases and spends a minimum of 1,638 francs per week on food. This means a scraping of butter with bread at breakfast, meat four times a week, some eggs and cheese and a dessert three or four times a week.

French rations are much less than those in Britain.

Christmas 1945

THIS is a special kind of Christmas—the first in seven years without the darkness of war.

At last we are free to celebrate the season in the old-time way.

Our loved ones are home. The candles will gleam brighter now, the balsam boughs will breathe a more pungent fragrance, and more sweetly than ever will carols ring . . . as if in answer to a world's prayers for peace.

But none will forget—now or ever—those fallen sons who sacrificed their lives that we might know the joy of Christmas again.

In their honour and to their glory we worship at home and shrine. And in our hearts shall we resolve to do those things which keep us strong and in the right—the best way of all to banish war forever.

In this, we shall be men who think of tomorrow—men of good will, making sure of ever better Christmases to come.

WEDDINGS

COOKE—MacINNIS

A quiet wedding was performed in Caledonia, Queen's County, N.S., on the evening of December 3rd, when Elizabeth Marguerite MacInnis, Caledonia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew MacInnis, became the bride of Charles Edward Cooke, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Cooke, of this city. Rev. C. L. Chute was the officiating clergyman.

The young couple were attended by the bride's brother and sister, Colin and Burdette. A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The wedding trip was to Belleville, where the young couple will take up residence. The groom was recently discharged from the Royal Canadian Navy.

Red Cross Branch Wants Helpers To Complete Work

In an appeal issued today, the chairman of the Belleville branch of the Women's Work Committee of the Canadian Red Cross Mrs. W. C. Mikel stated, "the war work of the Red Cross is not over." "The Belleville Branch of the Red Cross Society has 325 children's garments to be made and sent by the end of March, 1946. These consist of 18 boys' suits, 40 boys' and girls' coats, 200 boys' combination underwear besides girls' pantie dresses and bloomers. This clothing has to be shipped so as to be in Toronto by the above date as they expect to close their ware rooms soon after that time."

"Besides this," said Mrs. Mikel, "the Ontario Division has sent out an appeal for layettes. Thousands are needed and each layette contains 23 articles. The Belleville Branch is considered one of the larger branches and for this reason, we feel compelled to accept a quota. Before these can be made, the 325 articles of clothing must be finished. The boys' suits and boys' and girls' coats seem to be the hardest to get done so we would be most grateful to anyone who will make one at home. They will be cut out and ready to sew."

"After Christmas, the women of the Belleville Branch are requested to do all they can so that this work can be completed. Please help us out."

Women Teachers Hold Meeting

The regular supper meeting of the Belleville Association of Women Teachers held at the Y.M.C.A., Wednesday, Dec. 12, took the form of a Christmas party with the staff of Queen Mary school in charge, of the program.

During the short business period conducted by the President, Miss Olive Elson, the student teachers from Peterborough Normal School, doing practice teaching in the city, Misses Price, McPherson, Frawley and Coulter, were introduced and welcomed.

Everyone joined in the singing of carols. Then the story, "Why the Chimes Rang", was beautifully read by Miss Daisy Young, Queen Alexandra. Miss Hillis delighted everyone with a solo, "The Birthday of a King". The Christmas quiz conducted by Miss Clara Wilson tested the general knowledge of all. To wind up the party Santa Claus in the person of Miss Bernice Blue, presented everyone with a gift from a generous pack.

Women's Activities

FOXBORO W. A.

Foxboro—A pleasant time was spent in the S. S. Rooms on Thursday afternoon when the three groups of W. A. ladies met and held the last meeting of the year.

The president, Mrs. W. Scott presided. The group lists were read with approximately twenty-seven names on each list, and the group treasurer's reported $97, $117 and $127 already in for this year. Rev. L. Shorten spoke on the "Crusade" in relation to W. A. and he also voiced his appreciation of efforts put forth to pay for the improvements in the parsonage. Different sums of money had been donated for this purpose. Mrs. Hastie rendered a pleasing solo and Mrs. Percy Kilpatrick gave a reading. Mrs. Shorten read the "Black Madonna" and a special tribute was paid to Rev. L. Shorten for his work. Mrs. W. Simmons and Mrs. C. Sherry poured tea and refreshments were served.

MOIRA W. A.

Moira—The December meeting of the Moira W. A. was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Charles Ketcheson. The president, Mrs. Angus Mumby presided. It was decided to hold election of officers at the January meeting. Ten dollars was donated to W.M.S. and ten dollars to Church Missionary Fund. A reading was given by Mrs. Farrell. Mrs. Nelson Welsh gave a talk on Christmas. A vote of thanks was tendered to the hostess and refreshments were served.

MARMORA W. I.

Marmora—The December meeting of Marmora Women's Institute was held on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. F. R. Wells. Mrs. L. R. Green presided over a fair attendance of members. The Red Cross took the form of the presentation of Christmas gifts which later in the evening were disposed of by sale. Under general business, it was decided to send a donation of five dollars to the Salvation Army and a similar donation to the Navy League. Also it was decided to buy a quilt from one of the Circles of St. Andrew's Women's Association. Tickets will be sold on this to help the Branch funds. The address on Social Welfare was given by Mrs. E. M. Cadigan, who in an able manner told of her experiences as a social worker among children in Cleveland, Ohio, and other parts of the States. The sale of Christmas gifts took place at this juncture. The next period was devoted to the singing of Christmas carols which opened with a duet, "Like Silver Lamps in a Distant Shrine" in which Mrs. L. R. Rundle and Mrs. P. Gray took part. After this the members joined in the rendition of familiar Christmas carols. Refreshments were served. The January meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Eugene Brady.

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S.

Gilead—The Christmas meeting of the Gilead St. Andrew's W.M.S. was held on Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Orland Bertrand.

The President, Mrs. Bertrand opened the meeting by the singing of Christmas Carols and reading of a Christmas story.

A letter was read by Mrs. E. Yorke from Mrs. C. Myers thanking the society for flowers sent to Mrs. Wesley Badgley.

The members chose the months they wished to have the meeting in the year 1946.

The program was under the leadership of Mrs. Wilmot Clare and Mrs. Guy Leavens.

A reading by Mrs. James Huffman "What Does Christmas Mean to You." Solo by Mrs. E. P. Yorke. Reading by Mrs. Wilfred Clare, "A Cold Christmas", this told the hardships of a missionary in the far north. Solo, Mrs. Fred Yorke. Reading by Mrs. Balcanquel, "Legends of Christmas" and a Xmas quiz. One question was "What kind of a Christmas have we been dreaming about for four years? The answer was, "A white Christmas" but one lady said it should be "a peaceful Christmas."

The Baby Band under the leadership of Mrs. Orvil Rollins then held a meeting in a room decorated with Xmas decorations and a lighted Xmas tree. The little ones seated on small chairs around the tree with the W.M.S. members in the back. Carol, "Away in The Manger". The Xmas story was read by Mrs. Rollins. Recitation by Edward Hayter. Song by Helen Bertrand. Recitation, Barbara Hayter. Recitation, Glen Rollins. Song, Mary Bertrand. An exercise by Douglas and Glen Rollins.

The Mite Boxes for the Baby Band and W.M.S. were brought in at this meeting.

A short Ladies' Aid meeting was held, discussions were on a supper to be held at the annual congregational meeting in early January. It was decided to hold some social evenings during the winter months.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Bertrand for her hospitality to which she responded by thanking the members for their loyal support during the year.

A present to each little child was given them from the tree. The 15 ladies and 7 children did ample justice to the delicious refreshments served by Mrs. Bertrand.

Belleville Women's Club

The Christmas meeting of the U.P.E. Belleville Women's Club, held at the home of Mrs. C. Earle, 224 Ann Street on Wednesday afternoon, took the form of a gift shower for the Home for the Aged.

The program and business were dispensed with and the whole time spent in wrapping and labelling scores of gifts, cups of homemade candies and oranges tied in Santa paper.

Two large decorated baskets filled were presented to the older people, when the club visited the Home on Friday evening.

After a Christmas quiz by Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. Earle invited the guests to the dining room for yule-tide refreshments, with Miss Jones pouring coffee and Mrs. Weese assisting.

The table centre was frosted trees, red candles and a striking and unusual room decoration was a replica of "The Little Town of Bethlehem" which filled one whole corner.

Expressions of sympathy were extended to Mrs. Osborne in the loss of her brother, Mr. Frank Eaton, to Mrs. Thomas in the loss of her nephew, to Mrs. Trumpour in the loss of a loving husband and to Mrs. Fred Cory, who so recently lost her granddaughter in Kingston.

Before closing, a hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Earle for the lovely afternoon, and for the donations of paper, seals, serviettes, etc., and Miss B. Jones kindly invited the club for the January meeting.

BURR'S W.A.

The December meeting of the W.A. was held at the home of Mesdames Bride and Clifford Hough on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Frank Burkitt and Mrs. Leon Caughey were guests at the meeting. As this was the annual meeting and election of officers the program was dispensed with Mrs. Floyd Huffman resigned as president with Mrs. Don Parks being elected. Mrs. Don Osterhout, was elected secretary.

Mrs. Murney Parks asked to be relieved of her office on program committee with Mrs. Richard Hall being elected in her place. The other officers of the past year remaining the same. The January meeting is invited to the home of Mrs. Floyd Huffman. The Secretary, Mrs. Don Parks, and Treasurer, Mrs. Gerald Brooks, presented their annual reports.

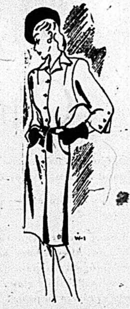
WEST HUNTINGDON Y. P. U.

The Young People's Union held their Christmas meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Morley Haggerty on Friday night. Mr. Russell Sills presided. Mr. Don Runnalls read the Christmas story and Miss Muriel Thompson conducted the singing of many old carols. Reports from the Young People's Union Rally which was held in Tabernacle United Church Belleville, were given by Jean Haggerty and Joan McCurdy. Readings were given by Marjorie Wright and Melbourne Moorcroft. Miss Margaret Wright of Ivanhoe was the guest speaker and chose as her subject "Christmas Customs". Margaret Haggerty and Joan McCurdy sang a lovely duet. Piano solos from Miss Shirley Elliott and Mr. Don McCurdy were much enjoyed. Mr. Kenneth Stewart conducted the election of officers, resulting in all the 1945 officers being reinstated for 1946. Marion Hammond thanked the hostess for her hospitality.

ONLY 3 HOUSES FOR ZUNI GODS

Gallup, N.M., Dec. 17 (AP) — Post-war housing shortages are a little rough on the Zuni Gods as well as mortals. Pueblo Indians have been able to prepare only three homes for the Shalakos, Gods of Good Fortune, whom they welcomed last night with feasting and all-night dancing. Normally they have six houses built, but material and labor problems made it impossible this year.

Soft Lines



Dusty blue wool and rabbit's hair dress

By VERA WINSTON

LITTLE SOFTENING touches temper the classic lines of this dress of dusty blue wool and rabbit's hair mixture. Tiny brown buttons close the bodice to the waist and part way down below that line. The loose armholed sleeve is slit below the elbow and buttoned with three buttons. The set in belt has a brown suede tied section in front. Slit pockets are at the hips of this most wearable and useful dress.

Comfort and Convention

By ALICE ALDEN

These two outfits are made of flannel, of spun rayon and wool. The cosy yellow shirt has an angle closing, with a self-covered button at the neck. The cummerbund-waisted slacks are in yellow and grey plaid. The bare midriff top is attached to the black slacks. The brief little cap-sleeved bolero is piped in coral or blue. It comes with a dashing tunic, finger-tip length, and flaring sleeves. There is a self belt in blue or coral, piped in black.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Little Daughter, Longs to be Pretty

Wise is the mother who takes her small daughter by the hand, leads her along the path of pulchritude. The impressions gained in childhood last through life. Teach a child to be fastidious about her person and you will be doing a good and noble deed. You will oil the wheels of life for her. Sloppiness of appearance has been a curse to many career girls and wives.

Time was when children had no say about what they wore. And very unhappy some of them were when put into ugly clothes or the kind of garments that other little girls didn't wear. Trifles can be tremendous in childhood. We understand these matters now. Children can be made happy without being spoiled. They crave love and loving attentions, the same as adults. They can't have too much affection or consideration.

The mother's task is to guide the good-looks program without seeming to. She should, first of all, set a good example by her own fastidious grooming. 'Baby see; baby do." She must inspire the child with respect for cleanliness. Daughter should love to bathe, should take pride in her appearance. Pride in appearance does not mean vanity, for without it one is inclined to be lacking in self-respect.

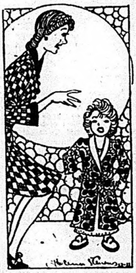
In infancy, the child always has a daily bath. This practice should be continued, not only for the sake of cleanliness, but also for the sake of health.

A child of three or four may protest against having her hair washed. The way to get around that is to make a game of it. Put on a protective shampoo halo, so the soap will not get in the child's eyes.

"There now," says mama, "you are a little flower growing in the garden. And along comes a rain storm." (You turn on the spray.) "And the rain turns to snow." (Rub in the melted soap.) "Ah, here comes the rain again. It will make the little flower grow"—and so on, with variations. Or, you can play barber shop. Baby knocks on the bathroom door. Mama says "Who's there? Oh! You want a shave and a shampoo, don't you?" Mama chucks baby in the bathtub, pretends to shave her cheeks when washing her face. Think up ideas of your own. They"ll save a lot of bawling and kicking, if your child is a protester.

Give little daughter an orange-wood stick, so she can keep her nails clean. Teach her to wash her hands thoroughly, using a brush when they are extra dirty. She must have her own comb, brush, towels and washcloth, learn to put them in place after using. The reasons for emphasis on personal toiletries are obvious, not the least of which is protection against wandering infections.

Some children learn to arrange their hair at quite an early age; this habit should be encouraged. It saves mama considerable time when getting the kids off to school. And it makes small daughter feel grown up and efficient.



A child of three may protest against having her hair washed.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Christmas Comes But Once a Year

Let's make Christmas a special feast of rejoicing this year. The most frightful war in history has ended and our country has been pre-eminent in victory.

Even if our heads are bowed from the loss of loved ones, we shall be carrying out what they would have wished, in making Christmas a real festival of thanksgiving for what they did for us.

As soldiers of the spirit we must keep on, even if our hearts are heavy. We've a job to do, to try and help pull an agonized world into something it was before greed and brutality made it what it is today. We read and hear that we've more money in our pockets than we had ever before. Let's hope it's true, although the count doesn't show after we've paid our taxes.

To make Christmas happier for some little children who've lost their fathers and for widows who know that Christmas can never be the same again, will help us all. Whatever may have been our loss, let's try to forget on this feast day, in the impulse to be truly generous.

For even a dime something can be bought to make some less privileged child happy— a youngster perhaps whose name has been given you by some organization which tries on this one day of the year to make things brighter for him. Children who press their faces against the windows of some toy-shop, or those whose Christmas fun doesn't go much farther than a visit to a department store to look at the synthetic Santa Claus—the old gentleman dressed in red, false whiskers, a white wig, and a phony stomach.

Our day-to-day philosophy is the only thing that can keep us going in this time of dismal forecasting. We're like people walking along a trestle and hearing the rumble of the oncoming train —let's hope we make a happy landing and remember "sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

Already correspondents have begun to write asking for that recipe for "Poor Man's Fruit Cake". Thousands of these have been sent out during the last ten or twelve years. Perhaps the cake may cost a few cents more this year, but nothing quite replaces the delicious aroma which takes possession of the house when a Christmas cake is baking. Here's hoping that you will bake two this year, instead of one—one for the family and one for some boy in a nearby camp, some young soldier too far away to hang up his Christmas stocking at home. In the words of Charles Dickens' "Christmas Carol", God bless us everyone.

Holy Name Society Holds Regular Meeting

Marmora (Special)—The regular monthly meeting of the Holy Name Society was held on Wednesday evening in Marmora Separate School with the president, C. T. Nicholson in the chair and a good attendance of members on hand. The meeting opened with prayer by Rev. Father H. J. Farrell. Following adoption of minutes, J. A. Paquet introduced George Lee of the Knights of Columbus of Belleville who in turn introduced the two guest speakers of the evening, Ted Boyle and Peter Neal of the Squires Club. The former chose as his subject, the life of John Henry Cardinal Newman. Mr. Neal spoke on "A Call to the Youth of Canada." James Black contributed a character sketch of a Jewish wedding. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded the speakers following which Father Farrell gave a splendid address and in his concluding remarks, wished the members a happy and holy Christmas and asked for God's blessing on them. Refreshments were served at the close of what proved to be a most inspiring meeting.

BOSTON DESIGNER MAY HAVE OLDEST CHRISTMAS CARD

Believes Card Published at Albany, N. Y. in 1839 Three Years Older Than Design in British Museum

Boston (CP)—Ernest Dudley Chase, greeting card designer, publisher and collector for 40 years, has found the world's earliest Christmas card—maybe.

Published in Albany, N.Y., it will take the honor away from England, if he can verify the date, believed to be 1839.

"An 1842 design by W. M. Egley, Jr., of London, now holds the record," said the 67-year-old dean of American card designers. "It was discovered in the British Museum just before the Second Great War. Up to then J. C. Horseley's card, published in 1846, was supposed to be the first."

An executive of Rust Craft Publishers, where his office walls bulge with enlarged replicas of old Christmas cards, Chase displayed the treasured find for which he paid $150.

Sketched by Forbes and lithographed by R. H. Pease, Albany, the little rosy-tinted card has five panels of festive scenes. Beneath Christmas and New Year's greetings are lines for the names of sender and recipient. Across the top is a head of Santa Claus and the words:

"Pease's great variety store in the Temple of Fancy."

A good detective like all collectors, Chase tracked down Pease to 1839, at which time the Albany directory listed him as an engraver but is still not sure when the "Temple of Fancy" was founded.

"If only he'd put the date on," the card connoisseur sighed, adding: "But I'm quite sure it's the earliest American Christmas card."

In 24 Colors

Chase considers the late Louis Prang, also a Bostonian, "the world's greatest greeting card publisher. Prang, in business in nearby Roxbury from 1874 until 1890, was, Chase said, "a genius in his own way. He printed Christmas cards in 24 colors. We do well nowadays to use five or six."

England, oddly enough, was Prang's first market and he was as successful there as in this country. His custom of offering annual prizes of $2,000 and $1,000 for designs attracted famous artists.

The Prang cards of 60 and 70 years ago were fringed and frosted and sometimes scented, so that lucky recipients could use them as sachets.

Christmas cards suffered an artistic decline when he died, Chase recalled and were brought back in the early 1900's by two other Bostonians, Alfret Bartlett and A. M. Davis.

Among Bartlett's designers were such great artists in type design as Fred Goudy, Bruce Rogers and W. A. Dwiggins. Poets Edwin Markham and Henry Van Dyke wrote Christmas greetings for Davis.

A publisher who lived to see the tremendous growth of the Boston-born greeting card industry is Chase's colleague, Fred Rust of Rust Craft, who came to Boston from Kansas in 1908.

In the intervals of tracking down old Christmas card designs, Chase found time to write an authoritative book on the subject, "The Romance of Greeting Cards."

He is frankly critical of many of his own innovations. The large poster Christmas greetings which he published 30 years ago, he dubbed "a flat failure."

POINT TRAVERSE

Lighthouse Tenders Removed From Posts

Point Traverse, Dec. 17—Lighthouse tenders from the Main and False Duck Islands have closed down their beacons, and they have been removed from their posts by the Canadian lighthouse ship Grenville.

Lighthousemen W. E. Thomas, Picton and Kenneth McConnell, Black Creek, had no difficulty in getting off the Ducks as the lake was tranquil at the time.

The Grenville, which is the first Canadian civilian ship to be equipped with a radar set, was under command of Captain Murray Barry of Prescott. Navigation aids were removed from shoal water surrounding the Main Ducks and the ship has returned to its winter base at Prescott.

Season Closed

Commercial fishing operations at the Point Traverse fishing colony have terminated for the season. All fishing craft have been removed from harbor waters, and fishing gear has been made ready for the winter.

Catches of herring taken from waters at the eastern end of the lake were only fair this fall, according to the fishermen. Prices paid by local buyers were low, as compared to last fall's quotations.

He paved the way for the Electric Age

The son of a blacksmith, Michael Faraday (1791-1867) went to work at thirteen. As an apprentice in a book bindery he read scores of volumes, especially those on scientific subjects. He attended some lectures given by Sir Humphry Davy, and wrote to him and asked for—and obtained—a job in his laboratory. He carried on research in chemistry, investigated the alloys of steel, and produced several new kinds of optical glass. His most important research work was in electricity and magnetism. His discoveries paved the way for the development of electro-plating and the widespread use of electric power today.

BECAUSE of Faraday's discoveries, the great electrical industry has grown up in modern times. Because of discoveries about Nickel made in research laboratories, the Canadian Nickel industry has grown into one of the world's great industries.

Well equipped Nickel research laboratories in Canada, United States and Great Britain will continue to co-operate with scientists everywhere in developing new uses and markets for Nickel.

Canadian engineers, designers and metallurgists have free access to the scientific and technical data gathered together by International Nickel from the whole field of metal research.

As industry gets to know more about Nickel and its uses, the demand for Canadian Nickel will increase still more. Canada will benefit accordingly.

Toronto Leafs Take 3 of 4 Possible Points Over Weekend Beating Detroit, Tying Bruins

Canadiens Remain at Head of League Tying Boston Saturday and Beating Rangers Sunday; Hawks Come From Behind to Beat Red Wings

(By The Canadian Press)

Just when it looks as though any one of three teams might topple Canadiens from their lofty perch, the National Hockey League champions muster enough strength to turn back any threat to their leadership.

It happened again this weekend as Canadiens took three of a possible four points in their 2 games to bound a full game ahead of the pack. Before the weekend started Montreal had three teams baying closely at their heels in Chicago Black Hawks, Detroit Red Wings and Boston Bruins.

The only other team to fare as well as Canadiens in the five week-end N.H.L. games was Toronto Maple Leafs, who defeated Detroit 3-1 at home Saturday and played Bruins to a 3-3 draw in Boston Sunday. That record left Toronto undefeated in their last three starts and convinced supporters that the Stanley Cup champs may finally be rolling after a shaky early start.

For Boston the 3-3 Sunday deadlock against Leafs was their third straight draw. At Montreal Saturday, they held Canadiens to an identical count behind brilliant netminding by Frankie Brimsek in his second N.H.L. game after a long stretch in the services.

Canadiens trounced Rangers 4-2 in New York Sunday. Chicago, idle Saturday, came from behind to trounce Detroit 6-4 at home in the other Sunday contest.

Taylor, Apps Prominent

The two Toronto games appeared to indicate that two bright stars of the pre-induction period —Billy Taylor and Syl Apps — finally are rounding into top form. Taylor scored a goal in each game and Apps, after missing half a dozen chances against Detroit, clicked for two counters against Bruins. Boston goals in that game went to Milt Schmidt, Terry Reardon and Bill Shill.

Gaye Stewart and Gus Bodnar shared scoring efforts with Taylor in the Saturday triumph over Red Wings, whose only goal came on a screened shot by Hal Jackson in the third period.

Against Canadiens the Boston snipers were Murray Henderson, Woody Dumart and Jack McGill. Two of the Montreal goals went to Maurice (Rocket) Richard and the third to Billy Reay.

Reay Scores Two

Reay picked up Sunday where he left off Saturday, scoring two against Rangers while Montreal's other counters went to Elmer Lach and Bobby Filion. Rangers, behind 3-0 at the end of the first period, swarmed all over Canadiens in the last two frames and succeeded in getting two goals through Lynn Patrick and Grant Warwick.

But they couldn't beat Durnan for the needed goals and went down to their 12th defeat in 17 starts to sink more deeply into the cellar five points behind Toronto.

Chicago, rallying to victory on a four-goal, third-period spree generated by Doug Bentley, Pete Horeck, George Allen and Bill Mosienko, remained in second place, two points behind Canadiens. Boston edged into third place, a game behind Chicago and one point ahead of twice - defeated Detroit.

Doug Bentley and Red Hamill scored the other Chicago goals. Murray Armstrong with two goals and Adam Brown and Bill Quackenbush provided the Detroit counters.

Canada to Have Representation At Next Olympiad

(By The Canadian Press.)

At a meeting in Montreal Saturday, the Canadian Olympic Committee, headed by P. J. Mulqueen of Toronto, decided upon full representation by Canada in the Olympiad planned to be held in London in 1948, the winter program being scheduled for St. Moritz, Switzerland. It was stated support for the Canadian team had been assured by Maj. Ian Eisenhardt in behalf of the National Physical Fitness Council, Ottawa.

Among those attending the meeting were Prof. J. Howard Crocker of the University of Western Ontario, London, and Dr. A. S. Lamb, William Northey and Oscar Pearson all of Montreal, in addition to Chairman Mulqueen.

First baseman Phil Cavarretta of Chicago Cubs yesterday was named National League batting champion of the year after compiling .355, three points better than Tommy Holbes of Boston. Goodie Rosen of Brooklyn was third with .325. Chicago Cubs earned team hitting honors with a .277 average.

After granting permission for an ephedrine test on Magnific Duel, the Main Chance Farm horse involved in the case, turf authorities at New York reserved decision Saturday in the hearing of the appeal of trainer Tom Smith from a year's suspension.

After winning the U.S. Women's championship from Miss Pauline Betz following a four-year retirement from the game, Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Cooke of Boston was awarded No. 1 rating by the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association Saturday. In the men's division, Sgt. Frank Parker was again given top ranking.

Byron Nelson won his 19th tournament of 1945 yesterday when he finished with an 11-under-par 273 in the $10,000 Fort Worth, Tex., Open after taking a two-months' rest.

Jimmie Demaret of Houston was second with 281, one better than Harold (Jug) McSpaden.

Regarded as the finest steeplechaser in the world, Prince Regent, the Irish horse owned by J. V. Rank, won the Bradford steeplechase Saturday in his first start in England. Prince Regent is already the favorite for next year's Grand National.

Ray (Sugar) Robinson of New York was banned from the ring in California Saturday by the alleged failure to fight Chester Slider at San Francisco Dec. 10. The commission asked for his suspension in other states.

Cleveland Rams nosed out Washington Senators 15-14 yesterday at Cleveland to capture the National Pro Football Championship before a crowd that was cut to 32,178 by bad weather. Bob Waterfield pitched two touchdown passes for the winners.

Jockey Don Meade who was suspended from the Mexican turf last March because of alleged remarks reflecting on the people of that country, again has been licensed to ride in Mexico, it was announced Saturday by the Mexican Racing Commission.

Following a similar wage dispute in England where soccer players gained upward pay, Scottish professionals held a meeting at Glasgow yesterday when it was decided to stage a one-day strike Jan. 1 unless their demands are met.

The Football Writers Associatio of America selected Coach Bo McMillin of the undefeated Universiay of Indiana team as football's man of the year.

The Assumption College five defeated University of Toronto 57-39 in an exhibition basketball match at Windsor Saturday night for the second Varsity setback in as many nights. At Buffalo, Geneva College swept aside London's Western Mustangs 57-40 in an international contest.

Seven Teams Enter Junior Group With Belleville, Trenton Given a Junior 'B' Rating

Bay of Quinte Junior Hockey Association Formed With Jerry Quinn, Tweed, the First President

Representatives of teams of the city and district which will participate in Group 1, Ontario Hockey Associations junior series this winter, effected organization and paved the way for what appears a successful 1945-46 season, at an enthusiastic meeting held here on Sunday.

Seven squads will play in the junior wars here it was announced, including Belleville, Trenton, Picton (Prince Edward County Combines), Stirling - Marmora, Hastings-Norwood, Stirling and Campbellford. All teams were represented with the exception of the Hastings-Norwood Combines.

Some serious discussion took place anent the groupings of the various squads. Picton, Campbellford, Stirling, and it was learned, Hastings-Norwood, stated that their teams would go definitely in a "C" grouping. Belleville officials stated that their team was grouped in "B". Tweed was undecided at first, but later decided to go into the "C" group. Trenton, it was learned was forced by regulations to enter the "B" group because of the population regulation that calls for towns with over 5,000 people to automatically go into a "B" grouping.

Play Double Schedule

However, the question was settled when the meeting endorsed a motion that all seven squads play a schedule with playoff arrangements laid over until later in the season, pending a ruling from the O.H.A.

It was pointed out, however, that a "B" group squad must win the loop here in order to enter the playdowns. In this case, playoffs could be arranged with the leading "C" squads to decide a playdown representative in that group.

Appointed convener of meeting by O.H.A. executive member S. R. Burrows, Bill Dennis, president of the Belleville Junior Hockey Association, handled the meeting in an efficient manner. He suggested that a new organization called the Bay of Quinte Junior Hockey Association be formed to handle various matters affecting the loop which might crop up from time to time.

Form New Association

Accordingly, and with the unanimous approval of the team representatives present, Jerry Quinn, Tweed, was elected president of the new association, Charlie Stain, Trenton, vice president and Albert Wells, Stirling, secretary treasurer. It was decided to hold a league get-together of players and officials at the end of the playing season at a place to be decided upon.

A single schedule of home-and-home games will be played with the Prince Edward Combines playing their home games in the Wellington Arena. First games of the loop see the Prince Edward team entertaining Stirling on Wellington ice: Hastings-Norwood visiting Tweed and Campbellford playing against Belleville here. All three games are scheduled for Wednesday, January 2.

In an effort to prevent any disagreement cropping up regarding ice officials the meeting endorsed a motion that team managers with two referees appointed by their organizations hold a special meeting in the Hume Arena on Friday evening December 28 to acquaint them with rules and regulations of the league and to discuss other matters. Financial regulations regarding ice officials will be the same as last year.

Goal Average to Count

In determining the position of the teams at the end of the schedule the meeting decided that two points for a win and one for a tie will be allowed. If at the end of the regular schedule, teams are tied for points, the goal average for and against will determine the top team. In event of a tie, in any regularly scheduled game at the end of the sixty minutes, the regulation O.H.A. rules will govern overtime.

Postponed games, due to weather conditions will be arranged for at the discretion of the managers of the teams involved.

During the regular schedule the visiting team will supply the referee and the home team, the linesman. The home club will reimburse the referees.

Will Draw Schedule

The regular playing schedule will be drawn up today or tomorrow and copies forwarded to the various team managers and league officials.

At the conclusion of the meeting Convener Dennis asked that the same co-operation and good sportsmanship that characterized the junior grouping last winter, be in evidence during the coming season.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By GEORGE H. CARVER

JUNIOR REPS CONCLAVE

The good fellowship and ability to see one another's arguments; the camaraderie and willingness to concede a point, that characterized the meeting of the combined Junior O H A "B" and "C" teams here over the weekend augurs well for the success of the loop. Representatives of Belleville and Trenton, both "B" squads and Tweed, Campbellford, Stirling-Marmora, Picton (Prince Edward Combines) sat in earnest conclave around the table and got the 1945-46 edition of the junior loop off to a good start. There were lengthy discussions and some arguments, but everything was ironed out to the satisfaction of all concerned and the loop takes off on its winter trip on January 2.

• • •

Stirling generously consented to play their first game against Picton on Wellington ice, to give Lou Yanover's "Spanish Commandos" a break. It was the same throughout the meeting. There was a sincere desire on the part of all concerned to get the loop off on the right foot, and that in itself is worthy of emulation in any man's league.

• • •

There was some lengthy discussion as to the status of Belleville and Trenton squads. This city's entry is definitely "B" grouping and, it was pointed out, that due to the OHA clause regarding population, Trenton would have to go in "B" as well as that town is now well over the 5,000 population mark. However, the "C" squads decided to join with the "B" and play out the proposed schedule letting playoff arrangements wait until some sort of ruling is received from the O.H.A.

A COMER

Roy Polmanter, classy young flyweight boxer of this city is now in Chicago where he has been going great guns and where he will meet Milton Dockin for the open flyweight championship in the finals of the 15th Catholic Youth organization in the Chicago Coliseum tomorrow night.

Although only 18 now the fast moving youngster has boxed since he was 8 years of age. A former student at King George School here he started boxing with brother George, who throws a mean right hook himself. The duo became so good that they appeared at an exhibition match when they were 7 and 8 years of age respectively.

At Hamilton the other night, Roy polished off Jimmy Bryden, highly touted scrapper from Guelph, while brother George lost a decision to Jimmy Carere on the same card.

SAME OLD STORY

The smoke of hockey battle is curling over the hockey camps down Kingston way, and it looks as though the O.H.A. arbiters might have to be called in before the pipe of peace can be smoked by the verbal participants.

It seems that charges were laid against the Kingston Victorias junior "B" squad now participating in the Van Horne series, that Scrutton and Snider two of their ace players are over age and are not eligible for junior play. Max Jackson, Vic Manager, readily admitted the fact but added that he had no intention of letting the lads play in the junior series.

In the meantime the Kingston Saints another junior squad who are scheduled to play against the Vics, Gananoque and Kingston Falcons in the junior loop have, in the past, been a player feeding ground for the Vics, and it is alleged that the Vic management require the services of some of their players this winter. The Saints management says no, and the fat is in the fire. Supporters of the Vics squad are not soft-pedalling their opinions of the team officials who kept the ages of players a deep dark secret until the fact was aired by other squads. Twas ever thus.

DOWN MEMORY LANE

Remember when—Murray Murdoch, the Lou Gehrig of hockey, played his 500th successive National Hockey League game with New York Rangers 10 years ago tonight. He performed in six exhibition matches with the New Yorkers in October, 1937, bringing his streak to 600 before he was sent down to Philadelphia Ramblers.

FIRST OF THE SEASON

Hockey fans hereabouts will get their first view of the fast-moving Redmen here on Friday night at the Hume Arena when the scarlet-shirts from the Moira banks will meet the Kingston Locos in an exhibition tilt. The Locos at present are dividing a three way tie at the top of the Van Horne series standing with the Reds and Barriefield Bears. The game will start at 8.30 sharp and should be productive of some good hockey as both squads will go all out to win at least a moral victory.

Incidentally the Redmen travel to Kingston tonight to take on Queen's U while Locos tangle with Vimy in the curtain raiser of the senior doubleheader. According to the dope Locos and the Reds should win handily but you can never tell in these days of upsets. The Reds' bus leaves the Arena at 6.30 so any of the fans who care to go should be on hand. There is still room left for a few extra bus passengers.

JUNIORS PRACTISE

Officials of the Belleville Junior "B" hockey squad announced today that the first practice will be held in the Hume Arena tonight at seven o'clock. All players twenty and under desirous of trying out with the squad are requested to be at the Arena ready to step on the ice at that time. Manager Bill Dennis and Coach Toots Holway will be on hand to put the lads through their first workout in an effort to ready them for their first game scheduled against Campbellford here on Jan. 2.

HORNETS MOVE IN SECOND PLACE BEHIND CAPITALS

Cleveland Barons Had Perfect Weekend and Bears Edge Out St. Louis

(By The Canadian Press)

Pittsburgh Hornets gained 3 points in their two weekend games and crept to within two points of the Western Division leaders in the American Hockey League, Indianapolis Capitals, who earned a split in their fixtures.

Hornets defeated the Caps 4-2 in a Saturday game and drew 6-6 with New Haven Eagles last night while Indianapolis whipped St. Louis Flyers 7-1. Cleveland Barons made it a perfect weekend by shading Providence 7-4 last night after their 2-0 victory over Buffalo Bisons the previous night. Only other contest saw Hershey Bears, top club in the eastern section, edge St. Louis 2-1 Saturday. Hershey's scheduled game at Buffalo last night was postponed because of the heavy snowstorm in the New York city.

Don Metz scored what proved the winning goals in Pittsburgh's 4-2 triumph against Indianapolis. Tony Bukovich had given Caps an early lead with a first period counter and Bobby Walton tied it up for Hornets in the second session before Metz connected twice in 40 seconds early in the third stanza. Johnny Mahaffy scored again for Pittsburgh while Jim Conacher tallied the final goal of the game for Indianapolis.

Joe Bell's three goals sparked New Haven to their 6-6 deadlock with the Hornets last night. It was the second game in a row that Bell had completed the hat-trick and his final counter earned the draw for Eagles late in the last period. Hornets' Gar Boesch also picked up three markers to pace the Pittsburgh attack.

Rossignol Stars

Rosy Rossignol turned in a standout performance for Indianapolis last night, scoring four goals as the Caps swamped St. Louis 7-1. It was the Caps' sixth straight over the Flyers and broke a three-game losing streak for the Western Division leaders. Norm and Jud McAtee and Jim Conacher rapped home the other Indianapolis goals while Hec Pozzo scored the lone Flyer tally.

Lou Trudel was the big gun for Cleveland last night as the Barons romped to a 7-4 victory over Providence Reds when he collected three goals and two assists for his night's work. Ants Atanas scored two for the Barons and Roger Gagne registered twice for Providence. Saturday Cleveland won their ninth straight home-ice game when they blanked Buffalo 2-0 before a capacity crowd. Barons got their goals late in the final period, Earl Batholome and Tom Burlington being the marksmen. Goalie Johnny Kiszkan was given an assist on Burlington's goal when he fed him the puck over the Cleveland blueline.

Hershey's 2-1 victory over St. Louis Saturday was marked by several fist fights and rows with the referees. Doug McCaig of the Flyers and Frank Mario of the Bears tangled in the first period, Mario drawing a minor and McCaig a major. The battle followed the Flyers' only goal by Oscar Aubuchon which gave them an early advantage. Gino Rozzini and Ken Smith allied for Hershey in the second session to sew up the verdict.

TIPPING ON DECLINE

Toronto, Dec. 15 — (CP)—Tipping is on the decline in Toronto, a poll among porters, bellboys, hat-check girls and waiters indicated last night. The 25-cent gratuity which had become a wartime commonplace is getting scarcer. Now most of those who depend on tips for income have to settle more often for dimes — if they can get that.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By ALAN HARVEY

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Dec. 17 (CP)— The most surprising statement of the surprising National Hockey League season concerns Ted (Teeter) Kennedy, the blockily-built centre of Toronto Maple Leafs who was one of the circuit's outstanding wartime developments. Last season, at 19, Kennedy was the player whose performance in the Stanley Cup play-offs drew predictions that he might become another Howie Morenz.

At one stage in Toronto's drive to the championship over Montreal Canadiens and Detroit Red Wings, the Port Colborne, Ont., youngster was compared with Montreal's Maurice Richard.

This season Kennedy slipped. Not badly, perhaps, but enough that General Manager Conny Smythe felt prompted to make the amazing declaration that Kennedy, just turned 20 this month, "isn't fast enough for the rest of the league's centres."

First to take exception to Smythe's remark was centre Murray Armstrong of Detroit, who put it this way:

"I can't string along with Smythe, who hinted that Kennedy might not be of major league calibre yet. If Kennedy isn't a major leaguer—none of us is after the way he whistled through us in the play-offs."

That seems a more reasonable view. Of all the wartime prospects on display last season, Kennedy looked more like the genuine article than any of his competitors. Let's wait a while before passing judgment on his future possibilities.

N.H.L. attendance figures are soaring, but the critics still are taking pot shots at the style of play. Assorted comments:

Vern (Toronto Globe and Mail) DeGeer, after Chicago Black Hawks trounced Leafs 9-2: "If we must go down through the years watching this kind of hockey, where pattern plays, stickhandling and good, old bodychecking are nothing but memories, then woe is me."

Len (Kitchener Record) Taylor, after the same game: "Frankly, we thought it was a pretty poor substitute for that grand old game they used to call hockey."

Weekend Stars

(By The Canadian Press)

Syl Apps, Toronto, who notched two goals as Maple Leafs tied Boston Bruins 3-3.

Max Bentley, Chicago, who figured in three goals as Black Hawks defeated Detroit Red Wings 6-4.

Doug Bentley, Chicago, who tallied twice in the Black Hawk-Detroit game.

Bill Reay, Montreal, who chalked up three goals in two games.

Murray Armstrong, Detroit who scored a pair of goals as Red Wings bowed 6-4 to Black Hawks.

LESSON NO. 867
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Bemoan the fate of Kate X. Pands when playing any tricky hands. She ferrets out the cards in east and suits in which west holds the least. But when she puts it to a test, what should be east she finds in west.

When you watch an expert play a hand, you marvel at his ability to read who has what unseen cards. Most of such card reading skill is acquired, subconsciously or otherwise.

The best place to start learning it is by knowing the meaning of every lead and discard. That will be the subject my column will begin in a few days. Take my hunch and keep a scrap book of them.

Meantime, let's finish this deal:

NORTH
♠7 6 3
♥K 8 4
♦A Q J 9 7
♣Q 9

WEST
♠A Q 8 4 2
♥J 7 5 3
♦10 3
♣J 3

EAST
♠10 9
♥10 9 2
♦K 8 5 4
♣10 7 5 2

SOUTH
♠K J 5
♥A Q 6
♦6 2
♣A K 8 6 4

Sit south and make three notrump. West leads the spade four. East puts on the nine. Unless you take that trick, east will come back in that suit and west will croak you right there.

So, go with your jack and keep the lead out of east. Continue to avoid a spade from there until your nine tricks are in. Seven more cinches are three solid hearts, three top clubs, diamond ace.

All you need is one more trick. Plenty of them are in diamonds. But if east has the king, opponents will wreck you too soon with the spades. So, first look at your chances in clubs.

The six unseen clubs should be expected four and two in the opponent hands. Therefore, anticipating losing the fourth round of clubs to take the fifth south club as your ninth trick.

In losing that fourth club, make sure it does not go to east. With that in mind, win the queen of clubs and lead the nine from dummy. If east does not cover, let it ride to west.

When west wins with the club jack, a spade lead from there will not ruin you. And by that time you can take all remaining clubs.

A program well taken will bring home the bacon.

3 UPPER TEAMS MOVE UP GAME IN JUNIOR RACE

St. Michaels, Oshawa and Galt Red Wings Win Over Weekend

(By The Canadian Press)

The three upper teams of the O.H.A. Junior "A" series all moved up one game in Saturday's fixtures to retain their positions in the standing.

In the double at Toronto, St. Michaels handed Marlboros a 5-2 defeat to continue atop the group with 18 points while Galt Red Wings whitewashed Toronto Young Rangers, thus holding to second place two points below the students. At Oshawa, the third-place Generals took Hamilton Lloyds into camp 10-6 in the night game.

Ken Naylor of Marlboros was the scoring star in the keen clash with the collegians, leading all players with a two-goal effort which enabled his team to take an early lead. It was not until the third period that McLean notched the winning counter for St. Mikes.

Two-goal displays by Lyall Wiseman and Billy Adamo accounted for Galt's triumph over Young Rangers to give the Red Wingers their eight successive decision.

Pacing the Generals' attack against Hamilton were Ross Lowe and Eric Pogue with three tallies apiece, followed by Jack Marshall with a brace. Savicky of Lloyds also bagged two counters.

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.)

Cleveland, Dec. 17—(AP)—That double zero at the pro football play-off yesterday wasn't just the number worn by Washington's Steve Bagarus. You could have seen it on any convenient thermometer. . . The unusual weather was responsible for one fine gesture of sportsmanship. . Before the game both teams tried out regular cleated footwear and basketball shoes and decided to wear the cleats . . . Between the halves, coaches Adam Walsh and Dud Degroot held a confab about changing and Degroot decided that since Walsh was going to continue using cleats, he would do the same—just so there could be no question of the game being decided on merits. . .

Monday Matinee

The newly organized boxing promoters of America plan to open a New York office in the same building where Mike Jacobs has his headquarters. Cleveland's Larry Atkins says it will serve as a reception centre for out-of-town promoters and managers "where everybody will feel at home.". . .

Cleaning the Cuff.

Chicago writers are raising the question of whether the Cubs still owe the Yankees some money or players on the Hank Borowy deal and Boss Jim Gallagher's replies indicate that maybe some dough still is due. . The absence of fumbling in yesterday's snowbound grid game, according to coaches, was due to the players' consciousness of the danger of committing a $500 or $1,000 error. . . The worst error was just going into the joint on a day like that.

GAME POSTPONED

Buffalo, N.Y., Dec. 17 — (AP)—Buffalo record breaking blizzard caused the postponement last night of the American Hockey League game between Buffalo Bisons and Hershey Bears. The game will be played Wednesday night.

In New Haven, league president Maurice Pdoloff said the postponement will necessitate the following schedule changes:

Indianapolis instead of Hershey at Pittsburgh Dec. 19, and Hershey instead of Indianapolis at Pittsburgh March 6.

A.N. (Bo) McMillin Voted Coach Of Year by Coaches

New York, Dec. 17 — (AP) — Alvin Nugent (Bo) McMillin, who guided Indiana University to its first Big Ten football championship in the season just closed, was voted the coach of the year by 155 of his fellow-mentors in a poll conducted by the New York World-Telegram, the newspaper announced today.

McMillin will be awarded a scroll at a banquet at Bear Mountain, N.Y., tonight. Among the guests will be Col. Earl (Ed) Blaik of Army and Lou Little of Columbia. They finished second and third, respectively, in the voting.

Carroll Widdoes of Ohio State, whose team annexed the 1944 Big Ten crown, was the winner of the award last year.

Kansas City Holds Three-Game Edge

By The Canadian Press

A 4-3 victory Sunday night over their erstwhile closest rivals, St. Paul, gave Kansas City a three-game edge over Omaha for first place in the United States hockey league.

More than 4,000 Pla-mor fans saw the locals win their ninth straight home game as Wingy Johnson, recent acquisition from Chicago Black Hawks, fired the winning goal to rout the Saints.

The losers had travelled from Omaha for the tussle after squeezing out a 4-3 overtime victory over the Knights Saturday. The locals led 3-0 in the first period and then faded as the Saints turned on their pressure. Ray Powell, was the whole show, scoring thrice as the Rangers turned back cellar-dwelling Minneapolis, 3-2. The Millers were victimized again Sunday afternoon when Dallas rang up a 5-2 verdict, coming from behind a 2-0 Minneapolis margin.

Weekend results left the Pla-mor with 27 points for 19 games. Omaha, with 21 points for 17 games, held a half-game lead over St. Paul, which has played 19. Fort Worth has two games back with 16 points for 19 games; Tulsa and Dallas were tied at 14 points although the oilers had played 17 games, one more than the Texans. Minneapolis had won six of 17 games for 12 points.

Hockey's Big Seven

(By The Canadian Press)

Scoring leader Max Bentley of Chicago Black Hawks set up three plays last night as his team defeated Detroit Red Wings 6-4 to increase his National Hockey League total to 30 points, 17 goals and 13 assists. Teammate Bill Mosienko earned a goal and an assist to retain his second place position with 10 goals and 14 assists for 24 points while Toe Blake of Montreal earned two assists in weekend games to take third place with 19 points. Hot on Blake's heels are Doug Bentley, Alex Kaleta and Clint Smith, all of Chicago, who each have 18 points. Last spot in the big seven is held by Elmer Lach of Montreal with 16 points. Gaye Stewart of Toronto and Bill Cowley and Don Gallinger of Boston dropped behind the leaders during the weekend.

The Leaders:	G	A	Pts
Max Bentley, Chicago	17	13	30
Mosienko, Chicago	10	14	24
Blake, Montreal	12	7	19
Doug Bentley, Chicago	8	10	18
Clint Smith, Chicago	10	8	18
Kaleta, Chicago	7	11	18
Lach, Montreal	5	11	16

Three More Local Veterans Return Home

Marmora — (Special) — Three more local soldiers returned to Marmora this week. Thomas Dickson of the Canadian Railway Operating Group, whose four years overseas were divided between England, France, Belgium and Germany. He arrived back on the Queen Elizabeth and spent a few days in Toronto, commencing last Saturday, before returning to the village. His wife and three children met him in the city and spent the time with him there. He is well and happy to be reunited with his family. Early Thursday morning Corporal Harry Harris, who returned on the Mauretania was reunited with his wife and young daughter and the same afternoon Spr. James A. Cross, who returned on the same ship reached his home in Deloro. These two men also arrived home in good condition after a good length of service in Europe.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was on the living room floor reeding my new lyberry book, By Jet Plane to the Moon, and pop was home early on account of Saturday, saying, What's the idea of sticking in the house on a day like this? If it was damp or drizzling outside you'd probably be begging me to let you go out, he said.

Well jimminy, pop, this book is exciting as anything, I said, and pop said, When I was your age no book was ever as exciting as the Great Outdoors.

G, that's right, pop, anything is libel to happen when us fellows get together, I said. Do you remember the time the men were laying the big new pipes under the street and us fellows crawled through one end of them and came out the other end all oily and black? Oh boy, pop, you got off the bus just in time to see me coming out the other end of a pipe and you didn't even hardly know me at first, and you took me home the back way so nobody would see me, and when I looked in the mirrer I had all the sensations of being a colored boy, and all my clothes had to be sent to the cleeners. Do you remember that, pop? I said, and pop said, I'd prefer to forget it.

And how about the time we had the contest puntching ourselfs in our own noses to see who could puntch themself the hardest without making their nose bleed, and nobody won because we all got bluddy noses and ran home with them? I said. And how about the time we played we were stranded on a desert island and we ate leaves and gress and stuff with nothing else on them except salt to give them a little better taste, and everybody got sick but I got the sickest? Do you remember that, pop? I said.

Painfully well, pop said I admit you've got me into a state of morbid apprehension, but I'm a man of iron will and I still insist that you get out of the house, he said.

Which I did feeling against it.

The World is Like That

CHAPTER 17

"Larry badly hurt?" Jocelyn asked.

"They say so. They're bringing poor Sears home, but they've taken the other boy to a hospital in Watsonville. It's too bad. It's too bad. They slept all day, it seemed, and started back about six."

"Larry told them that I was with them, and Peggy too, and Peggy's mother fainted, and she said that she was going to put Peggy into a convent in Belgium," Norma gibbered. "And Peggy said two reporters telephoned from Watsonville, and they said that Miss Britton flew down and got there before they did—"

"What's that?" Philip said sharply. "What are you talking about?"

"I suppose the papers will have the whole thing tomorrow, if Larry Bickford has been talking," Jocelyn said. "You see, the children went down to Santa Barbara without me," she explained, turning to Philip. "They got away from the dance and went down in Pon Sear's car. I didn't know it until they were gone. I'd seen Norma dancing with Charles van der Liop--"

"Oh, if I'd only stayed there!" Norma moaned.

"You mean you weren't with them? You mean—Spotty, you didn't go down there alone with that lot?"

"We were just fooling," Norma murmured, tears beginning to run down her face again. "The boys were kind of edged, and we all felt so hot, it was so hot in there! And so we said what fun it would be to go swimming at Santa Barbara—I'd never been there, Dad," she interrupted herself with trembling lips. "And I wanted to see it. And so we sneaked off in Pon's car— oh, poor Pon! Poor Pon!"

"Go on, Spotty. You went off in his car."

"Yes, and Pon was plastered, so Larry wanted to drive, but he was sort of silly, too. And they went so horribly fast, and was sick—"

Philip and Jocelyn exchanged glances; Jocelyn faintly shook her head. The thought of the little befuddled heiress being rushed over the dangerous long roads by a pair of irresponsible half-drunken boys had haunted her all day.

"How'd you get there?" Philip demanded, looking at her.

"I flew," Jocelyn answered simply.

"You flew?"

"I telephoned for a special plane."

"At what time was this?"

"About—around half past four."

"And you joined them there?"

"I got there before they did."

"She had rooms and clothes and I had a bath and went to sleep," Norma said. The leaned weakly against her father's shoulder, shut her eyes.

Philip's eyes met Jocelyn's. "I owe you an apology," he said. Jocelyn flushed brightly.

"That's all right," she said uncomfortably.

"You were there, and you took charge," he said. "And the boys started home ahead of you?"

"They were in their costumes. They were both sleepy and upset."

Philip shook his head, slowly. "Well, you've had your lesson, Spotty. You might have been in that car; you might be dead tonight. Now try to quiet down and get to sleep. I was up all night myself, and I feel groggy. I'm going to break up that poker party downstairs—none of the fellows will feel much like going on with it. I'll look in on you again in a few minutes."

He went away, and Jocelyn sat for a while with Norma. Having recovered her self-control, Norma was in a manageable mood, broken and mild. Jocelyn sat beside her and held her hand and found her for the first time a simple, natural, scared and honest little girl.

"Can't we—isn't there any way we can keep this out of the papers?"

"I'm afraid not, if Larry talked."

"They can't print it! Dad can stop them. I mean—everyone can't be talking about me." Norma said feverishly, her hands tightly holding Jocelyn's. "And my mother—my mother'll be wild. Mother said that Dad couldn't take care of me, and now, she'll think he can't, and I want to stay here, and now they'll all get started arguing—they're always talking about what to do with me—!"

Poor little thing, Jocelyn thought, as Norma gradually relapsed into drowsiness, into sleep.

Jocelyn overslept and guiltily rang for her breakfast at nine o'clock. Philip had gone; Norma was still asleep, but Mrs. Fordyce was walking about her room in great agitation, and her two callers, Nita Royce and a handsome efficient-looking woman of perhaps forty, who was introduced as Mrs. Verrinder, stared hard at Jocelyn as she came in.

"You sent for me?" Jocelyn asked.

"I've been lying awake practically all night," Mrs. Fordyce said sharply. "I suppose you've heard of the perfectly terrible thing that has happened? Miss Britton, I hold you—and everyone holds you—largely responsible."

"Holds me responsible!" Jocelyn echoed, proudly and angrily.

"The idea," said Norma's grandmother, "of permitting that child to start for Santa Barbara at that hour of night! She had been drinking, too, Phil tells me, which never should have been allowed!"

"But you were quite right, Bert," Nita Royce said soothingly, "She was much too young to go to that party. Poor kid! It isn't right that she should be submitted to all this miserable publicity."

"You knew that I didn't know they had any such plan, Mrs. Fordyce?"

"My dear Miss Britton, I don't know anything. I ate some poisoned fish at the club, and I was desperately ill at Mrs. Royce's house; how could I protect my own grandchild? We'll hear from Janet about this," Mrs. Fordyce went on ruefully to the other women, "and of course I'll get the blame. All I can say is that if Miss Sanderson had been on the job it couldn't have happened. Because, I mean, it simply never did."

"It was just a wild idea of the poor youngsters," Mrs. Royce said. "Larry Bickford was telling Tom last night that he doesn't know why they did it, they just did it on the spur of the moment. "Oh, come on, let's go swim at Santa Barbara!" You know how it is. Like that awful party years ago when the men and women all changed clothes—"

For some reason this recollection did not appeal to Norma's grandmother, and she said hastily, "That was all nonsense. But at least we all—they all— were grown up! The thing is that Sandy never would have let Norma get into a condition when she would have considered such a thing. Mrs. Foster telephoned this morning—Sandy was with Doris and Yvonne until they got married, and she asked me why I hadn't kept Sandy, and why we'd given Janet a chance to criticize our way of handling Norma. It's just about killing me, the whole thing. And the Sears funeral tomorrow—that glorious big strong boy—"

"You don't think," Jocelyn put into the tearful pause, "that Norma was at all to blame? For drinking when she had been forbidden to drink, for letting them talk her into such a thing?"

"No, I don't!" snapped her grandmother, and Mrs. Verrinder shook her lovely, smoothly curled head and said in gentle reproof, "I think we can hardly blame a child that age for a piece of folly, Miss Britton."

"No, we can hardly blame Norma; she's full of fun like the rest of the kids," Mrs. Royce added. "You've nothing to reproach yourself with, Bert," she added, to her hostess.

"I reproach myself for ever letting Sandy go! Poor Sandy, in a hotel on Post street that advertises that it has baths!" Mrs. Fordyce lamented. "Well, Miss Britton, we sent for you to discuss this with you. We don't think it's wise to keep Norma here for several days—possibly a week. She ought to go to New York and have a lot of opera and concerts, but her mother's there, and that would mean trouble for poor Phil. He's simply wild about the whole thing, says he doesn't know what to do—"

"A telegram, Mrs. Fordyce," said a maid.

"Would you please read it, Miss Britton?"

Jocelyn took it, ripped it open. "It's signed 'Janet,'" she said. "'Absolutely horrified at this disgusting scandal,'" she read. "'Must insist that Sandy be given full charge of poor darling Spotty and if necessary both placed in some good school. Dull for Sandy but I will make it up to her. Otherwise I will come at once to California to take charge which will upset my plans here. Am sending Spotty two hats which she can return if she wishes. Please inform me at once of what steps you take and get her out of the headlines'."

MILLIONAIRE VOWS VENGEANCE
MRS. SUPER AT HO

THIEVES ENTERED THE PALATIAL HOME OF JASPER B. INGOTS LAST NIGHT. NOTHING WAS STOLEN EXCEPT A PACKAGE OF CRISP DELICIOUS GRAPE-NUTS FLAKES.

"I'LL HUNT THE CRIMINAL DOWN IF IT TAKES EVERY CENT I HAVE" SAID MR. INGOTS. MR. INGOTS POINTS TO THE SPOT WHERE THE GRAPE-NUTS FLAKES ARE KEPT.

"How does that scoundrel expect me to swing a big deal this morning without my oh-so-lovely, malty-rich Grape-Nuts Flakes?

"My efficiency will be cut 'way down without that big dividend of two-grain nourishment in Grape-Nuts Flakes: carbohydrates for energy; proteins for muscle; phosphorus for teeth and bones; iron for the blood; and other food essentials!

"And I must have something easy to digest. That's another reason why Grape-Nuts Flakes are my favorite pantry stock. They're specially blended, baked and toasted for golden-brown crispness, gilt-edged flavor and easy digestion.

"I've instructed Jeeves to get more Grape-Nuts Flakes from the store immediately—a couple of those big economy-size packages!"

Crowds Cheer When Big Bomb Made Harmless

Croyden, Surrey, England, Dec. 17 (C.P. Cable) — One of the most bombed areas of the war received its last all clear today —six months after European hostilities ceased.

A signal given by cheery words of police and civilian volunteer workers, rather than by a siren, told Croyden's residents that Satan—the 4,000 pound German time bomb—finally had been rendered harmless after five years' burial in a local timber yard.

Laughing and shouting, 95 families returned to their homes concluding a 24-hour eviction. Traffic restrictions were lifted and buses and trams resumed their normal routes.

It was 4 a.m. here when 26 Sappers finished sterilizing the 3,000 pounds of solid TNT after working 21 hours without a break. They returned at 8 a.m. to remove the fuse pocket—the only remaining piece of bomb mechanism—and by noon Satan was disembowelled. Somewhat battered it was raised by a crane from a 40-foot shaft.

Painted eggshell blue, the bomb's over-all length was about 18 feet. Extra-long fins were still attached when the bomb slowly emerged from the hole where No. 2 Bomb Disposal Squad had labored for 200 days.

Crowds gathered outside the timber yard raised lusty, ironical cheers as the monster was taken away on a heavy army lorry to its last resting place in Richmond Park, Surrey—once hunting grounds of English kings.

Lieut. G. A. Frake, 24, in charge of the disposal squad, said the bomb contained 3,000 pounds of TNT. When this had been removed there still remained about two pounds of explosives in each of the two fuses in the end of the bomb.

All last week Frake has been much photographed in British newspapers and has received many letters from admirers acclaiming him a "post-war hero." With his weary assistants he staggered back to barracks for a long-deferred sleep, soon after noon.

Families, including 50 children who spent the night at corporation rest centre said they received every kindness and comfort—and free meals without coupons. Some elder people and the infirm returned home by ambulance and car.

"Thank God it's all over," sighed Mrs. Emily Brooker, 84-year-old invalid, as she left the centre on a stretcher.

Automobile Hit By Passing Train, Passengers Safe

Although his automobile is almost a complete wreck as result of it being struck by a Canadian Pacific Railway locomotive, Michael Prevost, R. R. 3 Tweed, still considers himself a fortunate man.

Saturday night as he was taking his family home from Tweed after a shopping tour, he heard the whistle of an oncoming locomotive as he neared the Black Creek crossing and applying his brakes his auto stalled directly on the track. He just had time to get his wife and six children, with two other adults, out of the car when it was carried away by the onrushing locomotive.

Passengers in the vehicle besides Mrs. Prevost and the six children were Theresa Courneyea and Raymond Goulah, both of R. R. 4, Tweed. The auto was carried 50 yards down the track before the twisted wreck rolled off into the ditch.

Heavy Snowstorm At Owen Sound And Fort Erie

(By The Canadian Press)

Heavy snowstorms at Fort Erie and Owen Sound, with below zero temperatures in Northern and Western Ontario featured Ontario's weather today. Clear and cold weather prevailed over most other parts of the province.

Fort Erie apparently was the only Canadian centre to be affected by a freak blizzard which buried Buffalo, N.Y., under a fall of 40 inches of snow. Fifteen inches fell at Fort Erie but new civic snow-removal equipment and reinforced work squads managed to keep main highways open, although the bus service to Buffalo was disrupted.

However, a number of automobiles were reported marooned on side roads in the Fort Erie area. One party had to be towed to the Peace Bridge by a team of horses after being stuck in the snow for several hours. Nearby cities and towns which missed the storm but reported high winds and low temperatures included Niagara Falls, Welland and Port Colborne.

Snow was still falling today at Owen Sound as a three-day storm continued in the district. Twenty-two inches of snow have fallen since Friday night but there is little wind and although highways are heavy, plows have not had to fight heavy drifts.

Western Ontario experienced its coldest weather of the winter as temperatures sank to three below zero early Sunday at Stratford and to six below zero at Galt. Stratford had two inches of snow overnight, bringing the total to seven inches since last Monday. Some 20 plows were out on Stratford district highways. Considerable drifting was reported but all highways were open.

London reported cloudy and cold weather with temperature at seven above zero and Guelph's temperature hit zero Saturday night and stood at two above today.

Zero temperatures also hit Eastern Ontario with Cornwall reporting that figure with a biting wind. Cornwall had little snow and all district roads were open but icy. Kingston and Brockville recorded cloudy and moderately cold weather.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 17 — (CP) — Stocks were weak in the early period on Toronto Stock Exchange today and losses of a half-point or more in the index were taken by both mining groups and industrials. Western oils had a minor decline. Trading volume tapered off to 824,000 shares for the first hour.

Declines of 10 to 15 cents were boarded in the gold group by Cochenour Willans, Colomac and East Sullivan and smaller losses came out for Trans-Resources, Little Long Lac, Donalda, Wright-Hargreaves, Shawkey and Perron.

Nickel, Labrador Mining Corporation, Falconbridge and Steep Rock were soft spots in the base metal list. Calgary and Edmonton, down 20 cents to 1.90, was the weak western oil.

Brazilian, Industrial Alcohol A, C.P.R., Fanny Farmer, Ford A, Loblaw A and Canada Cement were definitely weak issues in the interlisted list. Hiram Walker declined 4 points to 104 1/2.

WALL STREET

New York, Dec. 17 —(AP)— Stocks generally broke one to seven points in today's market before timid support arrived and stemmed the slide.

The ticker tape speeded up after a quiet opening and volume for a while was relatively heavy. While extreme declines were reduced a shade here and there near the fourth hour, dealings slowed on recovery attempts. Steels, motors, rails and aircrafts led the retreat.

Prominent on the reaction were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Packard, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, Eastern Air Lines, Douglas Aircraft, Boeing, Eastman Kodak, Du Pont, Anaconda, American Telephone, Electric Power & Light, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward and International Harvester.

Liquors led a widespread decline among Canadian issues at mid-day. Distillers Seagrams and Hiram Walker each dropped 2½. Canadian Pacific and Lake Shore were off 1 and ⅝ respectively while Dome Mines eased ½.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Dec. 17 (CP)—Cattle trade was active with prices steady on steers and 25 cents cwt. higher on heifers, cows and bulls, up to mid-session on the livestock market here today. Hogs were 10 cents cwt. higher. Sheep were firm and calves and lambs steady. Receipts reported by the Dominion marketing service were: Cattle 3,400, calves 400, hogs 600, sheep and lambs 700.

Prices in the trade included:

Cattle: Weighty steers $11-$13.50, butcher steers $10-$12, heifers $11.75 down, butcher cows $7.75-$9.75, canners and cutters $5.50-$7.50, bulls $7.50-$9.50, fed yearlings $12-$13.75. Calves: $15-$16 choice, plain vealers downward to $9, grassers $7.50-$8.50.

Lambs: $14.50-$15 with a few choice southdowns up to $17 for good ewes and wethers, bucks $1 cwt. discount and culls $9-$12.50.

Sheep: $9-$9.50 good light ewes, culls downward to $3.

Hogs: Dressed grade A $18.25, grade B1 $17.85, sows $15.50.

Thefts of Merchandise Not as Great As in Other Years Merchants Report

Time was, when the annual bugbear of department and other store managers, the Christmas shoplifter, was in his or her heyday.

And it is not so long ago that the Yuletide members of the light-fingered fraternity furtively removed merchandise from counters in a quantity that was amazing.

Whether a wave of honesty is sweeping the city or perhaps it is a readiness of the coin of the realm in the pockets of the hitherto "get-it-for-nothing" brotherhood, the fact remains, according to merchants, that the perennial shop-lifter has eased up on his annual forays on Christmas counters.

This year, it is stated, thefts have been reduced to a minimum. True, merchants as yet have not had the opportunity of checking on small items, usually the "victims" of the shoplifter, but store supervision and "inside employees" have not caught any great number of the brotherhood to date.

Some small boys have been caught in the act of removing toys, etc., from counters, but swift parental retribution followed, and the youngsters were wiser, sadder and "sorer" after the application of the old-fashioned family remedial punishment.

Summing up, merchants feel their annual losses through this medium will be far less than those of the past few years.

imagined that the processes in manufacturing atomic bombs — now secret — would prevent, indefinitely, similar developments in other countries.

"Even with international measures of supervision and control, it will be but a matter of time before all processes are known to practically all nations," he said.

"The truth is that no system of safeguards that can be devised will of itself provide an effective guarantee against production of atomic weapons by a nation bent on aggression. Nor can we overlook the probability of the development of other major weapons of mass destruction, or of new methods of warfare which may constitute an ever greater threat to civilization than the military use of atomic energy.

"At Washington, we were therefore called upon to consider not merely the elimination of the atomic bomb as a weapon of war, but also the kind of world order which is necessary in an atomic age, if civilization is to survive. In our deliberations we were seeking to take the first step in an effort to rescue the world from a desperate race in weapons of mass destruction.

"We were prepared to concede that the progress our three countries had made in the development and use of atomic energy demand that our countries take the initiative in an international effort to prevent the further use of atomic energy for destructive purposes. We felt an equal obligation on the part of our countries to promote the use of recent and future exchanges of scientific knowledge, particularly in the utilization of atomic energy for peaceful and humanitarian ends.

"At the same time we sought to make very clear that the responsibility for devising means to ensure that the new discovery should be used for the benefit of mankind, instead of as a means of destruction, rested not on our nations alone, but on the whole civilized world."

Mr. King asked the Commons to approve the Washington declaration, which called for the establishment of a commission under the United Nations organization to study means of preventing the use of atomic energy for destruction purposes and of fostering its use for peaceful purposes. In requesting support of the declaration, he said:

"Apart from other positive advantages, such approval would serve effectively to meet the criticism that the prime minister of Canada in joining with the prime minister of the United Kingdom and the president of the United States in the discussions at Washington and in signing the declaration 'either assumed that parliament and the Canadian people had no views on the atomic bomb question or that their views didn't matter; that it was within his sole right and power to determine what should be done.'

Criticism Meets Rebuke

"I am happy to say that this uncalled for criticism seems to have met only with the rebuke it so obviously deserves."

Mr. King reviewed the early research work into the use of atomic energy and told how Canada, Britain and the United States had agreed to share information on developments. He disclosed how Hon. Winston Churchill, former British Prime Minister, and the late President Roosevelt signed an agreement in Quebec in 1943 which bound the two countries to collaborate with the object of producing, as quickly as possible, a military weapon for use in the war.

Canada had accepted an invitation to have a representative on a combined policy committee set up under the agreement. That committee had guided the development of atomic energy for war purposes. Now a body was needed to control its use to peaceful purposes.

The Washington declaration had called for the setting up as quickly as possible a commission under the United Nations organization. The first session of the organization's general assembly would meet in London Jan. 10.

"On the exact procedure to be followed in bringing up this vital matter for consideration by the United Nations organization, I am unable to say anything at present," said Mr. King.

The Washington declaration had suggested that the commission should make specific proposals:-

Specific Proposals

1. For extending, between all nations, the exchange of basic scientific information for peaceful ends;
2. For the control of atomic energy to the extent necessary to ensure its use only for peaceful purposes;
3. For the elimination from national armaments of atomic weapons and of other major weapons adaptable to mass destruction;
4. For effective safeguards by way of inspection and other means to protect complying states against the hazards of violations and evasions.

"Under the Charter of the United Nations the signatory powers have pledged themselves not to use force except in support of the purposes and principles of the Charter," said Mr. King. "At Washington, we expressed the view that by whole-hearted support of the United Nations Organization, and by consolidating and extending its authority, thereby creating conditions of mutual trust in which all peoples will be free to devote themselves to the arts of peace, there would be found the most immediately available means of maintaining the rule of law among nations and of banishing the source of war from the earth.

"We declared it to be the firm resolve of our three countries to work without reservation to achieve these ends.

Must Banish War

"Nothing can be truer than that without unremitting cooperation and the united efforts of nations there will be no enduring and effective protection against the atomic bomb. Nor without this cooperation and united effort can there be protection against the indiscriminate use of poison or against the latest refinements in gas warfare, and no protection against bacteriological warfare, all of which are more frightful methods of human destruction than the atomic bomb.

"To ensure civilization from destruction it is not enough to banish atomic or gas or bacteriological warfare, we must banish war itself."

Mr. King paid tribute to the foresight of President Roosevelt who had called for the settling up of the United Nations Organization before the end of the war was in sight. If it had not been for that foresight, the United Nations Organization would not be available today to help solve the problems created by the atomic bomb.

Hastings Holstein Club Elects Officers for '46

The annual Hastings County Holstein Club meeting was held in the Department of Agriculture Office, Stirling, on Friday, with thirty-five breeders in attendance.

Mr. F. Roy Ormiston, Brooklin, district fieldman for the Holstein-Friesian Association addressed the meeting. He spoke on the general situation regarding dairy cattle. He discussed selective registration and stated that most of the Holstein herds in Ontario have now been graded. He complimented the Hastings Holstein Breeders on the fine type of Holstein cattle in their herds. He stated that 13 per cent of the cows graded in Hastings graded "Very good" which compared favorably with the gradings in other counties. He also announced that the Holstein-Friesian Associations of Great Britain will now accept, for the first time, Canadian cattle for registration in their Herd Books.

Mr. F. R. Mallory, secretary of the Stirling Fair, addressed the meetinb and invited the Holstein Club to hold the Black and White Show at Stirling Fair in 1946. The Holstein Club was very pleased to accept this invitation and the Black and White Show will be held at Stirling next year, the dates will be announced later.

Mr. A. J. Tamblyn addressed the meeting regarding the selling of cattle. Mr. Tamblyn feels that the export market for pure bred Holstein cattle to the United States will be good for some years.

Mr. Tamblyn was appointed salesman for the Hastings Holstein Club.

Mr. Earl Burnside and Mr. M. C. Reynolds were appointed representatives to sit in on a meeting to be held regarding a proposed district sale of Holstein cattle for the Bay of Quinte District.

It was decided that the Holstein Club would hold a banquet next Fall. All the arrangements for this banquet were left in the hands of the executive.

It was decided to hold a Field Day early in June. It was also decided to hold a Barn Meeting. decided to hold a barn meeting. Mr. E. Masse, Belleville, No. 3, invited the Club to have the Barn Meeting at his farm. This invitation was accepted and the date was sent for Saturday afternoon, January 26th.

Mr. F. Roy Ormiston took the chair for the election of officers, which resulted as follows:

Hon. President—Kenneth Caskey, Madoc.
President, Herb. Watt, Foxboro.
Vice President, Ronald Longwell, Foxboro.
Sec. Treasurer—H. L. Fair, Stirling.
Directors:-
Rawdon—Jas. Eagleson, Harold; Allan McComb, Bonarlaw.
Huntingdon—Phil Carr, Stirling, No. 2.
Hungerford—D. J. Hunt, Tweed; Malicka Cassidy, Tweed.
Marmora—Harry Neal, Marmora.
Madoc—Earl Burnside, Madoc; Max Burnside, Madoc.
Sidney—Fred Campbell, Foxboro; E. Masse, Belleville No. 3.
Thurlow— Chas. Treverton, Plainfield; Clifford Ketcheson, Halloway.
Tyendinaga—J. E. Walsh, Shannonville.
Auditor—Earl Burnside, Madoc.
Director to Hastings County Agricultural Committee — Herb. Watt, Foxboro.

15 SOLDIERS HURT

Chicago, Dec. 17 — (AP) — At least 15 soldiers were injured and 30 to 40 others were shaken up or slightly bruised when a single light Diesel locomotive and a troop train collided on Chicago's northwest side last night, the army reported.

W. Meens Named President Thurlow Ratepayers

For the tenth consecutive year, Mr. W. Meens was again chosen president of the Thurlow Ratepayers Association at their annual meeting held in Prince of Wales School on Friday evening last. Other officers elected were, Vice President, Mr. H. Thompson; Treasurer, Mr. C. Colclough; Secretary, Mr. P. W. Murray; Executive Committee, Messrs. F. Tulk, W. Turner, H. Doolittle.

Following the election of officers the president thanked his committee and Past Vice President, Mr. W. Turner for their fine co-operation, assistance and untiring efforts in working for the benefit of the people. He also thanked the reeve and members of the township council for their fine co-operation during the past ten years in bringing about harmony and good-will between them and the association of ratepayers. Mr. W. Turner in reply thanked the president, and said he considered it his duty and democratic spirit to work in co-operation with the president in the interest and benefit of the people.

Well Attended.

The meeting was well attended and many interesting subjects were discussed. President Meens occupied the chair. Much discussion was centred around the City of Belleville's proposal to expand to include College Hill, Herchimer Avenue, part of Sidney and Stoney Lonesome.

The chairman approached the Reeve, Mr. MacDonald on this vital subject. In reply Mr. MacDonald expressed the opinion of the council in as far as to say that they were not in favor of the City of Belleville taking in this area, and that they would give their full support to any action that the ratepayers Association took up to eliminate this threat. Mr. MacDonald gave the meeting a brief, but very interesting address and assured the president that in any matter pertaining to the benefit of members of the Ratepayers Association, it would receive the full co-operation of all members of the council. He also mentioned that he was fully in accord with the association's activities. A vote of thanks was tendered by the president to Mr. MacDonald for his fine democratic spirit of recognition of the association's efforts.

Resolution Passed.

A resolution was made by Mr. W. Turner and seconded by Mr. H. Thompson, that a petition be drawn up to obtain the views of all ratepayers on this subject. This resolution was unanimously carried. It was also moved that this petition be drawn up and be presented at the next meeting.

It was moved that the president approach the council in regard to the water being a detriment to Mr. A. Lloyd's property owing to poor drainage.

Mr. Doolittle asked that the ditches be opened up in front of his property as water was causing considerable damage and inconvenience.

Mr. A. Miles gave a very illuminating address on school expenses during the past ten years. Many other important matters were brought before the members and discussed.

A short address was given by the president to members in regards to the principals of such an association, as he considered that as lawyers, doctors, merchants and labor can organize, he thought it quite fit that it was time the ratepayers organize to protect their homes and property through such an association, on the principals of integrity and democracy.

It was moved and carried that the next meeting be held at the Prince of Wales School in the third week of January which will be advertised through the courtesy of the Ontario Intelligencer.

Deaf Students Present Annual Christmas Pageant

The senior pupils of the Ontario School for the Deaf staged their annual presentation of their Christmas pageant on Friday afternoon last. The pageant was under the direction of Miss Helen Keeler and was in five scenes. Mr. Arthur Clare was the narrator, and Mr. Alec Gordon with a chorus of teachers provided the incidental music.

The pageant portrayed in simple form the events leading up to the Nativity as told in Holy Scripture. The boys and girls in the cast acted their parts with dignity and sincerity from the humility of the lowly shepherds to the haughty arrogance of King Herod. As the lights on the closing scene grew brighter and brighter, and the voices of the chorus rose to a crescendo, a feeling of awe and wonder crept over the faces of the audience. Thus, in visual form, the story of the birth of Christ was told once more to the students of the School for the Deaf.

Although the pageant is presented mainly for the benefit of the students, visitors are welcome. Several found their way in on Friday and were loud in their praises of the excellence of the performance of the young deaf actors.

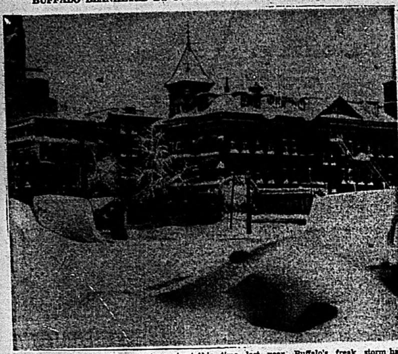
BUFFALO BLANKETED BY ONE OF WORST STORMS IN HISTORY



Reminiscent of Ontario's big snowstorm about this time last year, Buffalo's freak storm has blanketed that city with over 60 inches of snow, creating an all-out emergency. Milk and food shortages are feared. Foreground of picture above shows cars completely snowed under.

Details of Nazi Program To Exterminate Jews, Wipe Out Church Influence Outlined

By NOLAND NORGAARD

Nuernberg, Dec. 18 —(AP)— Seeking conviction of thousands of minor Nazi party officials as war criminals along with Hitler's top leaders, Allied prosecutors today outlined details of an alleged Nazi plot to exterminate the Jews and wipe out the influence of Christian churches in Germany and the rest of Europe.

Orders for anti-Jewish pogroms and confiscation of Christian church properties were carried out through the 600,000 members of the Nazi leadership corps who spread Hitler's anti-religious doctrines throughout Germany, it was alleged in evidence laid before the International Military Tribunal.

The score of top Nazi leaders on trial for war crimes listened intently as prosecutors also demanded the conviction of members of the leadership corps and five other Nazi organizations for carrying out the orders of Hitler's inner circle.

For the second consecutive day, Security Police Chief Kaltenbrunner, complaining of violent headaches, was absent from the prisoners box. Medical authorities allowed him to rest to lessen the danger of complications from a cranial hemorrhage that had kept him out of the courtroom for the first three weeks of the trial.

Wished to Avoid Responsibility.

Relating how Nazi party leaders secretly inspired anti-Jewish pogroms, the prosecution read a directive from party headquarters at the Munich Brown House that "the party should not appear outwardly as the originator of the demonstrations but in reality should organize and execute them."

The Tribunal indicated some doubt that minor Nazi officials shared in war guilt responsibility with their leaders. Lord Justice Lawrence yesterday questioned the prosecution's evidence that Heinrich Himmler's Gestapo was ordered to co-operate with gauleiters in staging anti-Jewish demonstrations.

Lord Justice Lawrence remarked that this seemed to him to be a police, rather than a party affair.

Turning again to evidence that Nazi gauleiters led the campaign to confiscate church property, the prosecution produced an Elite Guard (S.S.) report that "all real estate owned by the churches is being claimed by the local 'gau' administration."

Rosenberg, Bormann Leaders

It was charged that defendant Alfred Rosenberg, official philosopher of the Nazi party, and Martin Bormann, Hitler's missing deputy who is being tried in absentia, were the leaders in the Nazi attack on the church.

The prosecutor produced a directive from Bormann to Rosenberg for closing 11 Catholic Theological schools.

The prosecution introduced orders to gauleiters from Robert Ley, German labor front boss who committed suicide to avoid trial, to show how the Nazi party methodically proceeded to swallow up labor unions and make them "safe for Nazilism."

Rosenberg was named as the leader in the looting of art treasures from European museums "for the cultural impoverishment of virtually every community in Europe and enrichment of Germany."

Other prominent figures in the art looting named by the prosecution were Goering, Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel and Hans Frank, Nazi governor of Poland. Introduced was a Goering directive, ordering the air force to transport art treasures from the Louvre in Paris to Germany.

Christmas Programs Will Be Featured

Toronto, Dec. 18. (CP)—A special series of Christmas programs will be carried on a combined Trans-Canada and Dominion networks hook-up of the CBC from 8.30 a.m., E.S.T., to midnight on Christmas Day.

Commercially sponsored programs will not be heard during the day, the CBC said. Features carried on other Yuletide series programs will be repeated this year including the Empire broadcast, uniting peoples throughout the Commonwealth by radio, a greeting from The King and a service of a small country church.

Selected for the church program is the 160-year-old Mohawk chapel near Brantford, Ont., only royal chapel in Canada. Service will be conducted by Rev. W. J. Zimmerman.

68-IN. SNOWFALL IN LACKAWANNA TIES UP INDUSTRY

Seven Deaths Have Been Caused by Storm in the Buffalo Area

Buffalo, N.Y., Dec. 18 —(AP)— A paralyzing blizzard that choked the Buffalo area with a 68-inch snowfall and took seven lives in five days ended today.

The blizzard tapered off into light snowfall as transportation lines battled to restore normal operations.

The weather bureau announced: "Blizzard conditions have ended as the snow belt, which moved south of Buffalo early last night, continued with diminished intensity during the night to extend as far west as Perry, Ohio."

Alfred Shonkwiler, Bethlehem's assistant plant superintendent, ordered all iron and steel production suspended at 1 a.m. today. Mr. Shonkwiler said the record-breaking snowfall had made it impossible for workers to get to work. The plant's railroad system was paralyzed by frozen switches and snow-covered sidings.

Other plants in the Buffalo area were experiencing difficulties.

The state of emergency proclaimed Sunday by Mayor Joseph J. Kelley was continued.

Railroad officials reported a few freight trains were moving eastward, but that operations were slow and spotty. Thousands of workmen were struggling with pickaxes and shovels to clear tracks and thaw switches.

Fred S. Deacon Prominent In Business and Church Life Of City Dies in Miami, Fla.

Fred S. Deacon died this morning about one o'clock in the Jackson Memorial Hospital in Miami, Florida, and this city mourns today the loss of a native son, who occupied a high place in the regard of all citizens. For some time he was not in good health and fearing the winter he left here about six weeks ago to spend some months in Florida. For a time he seemed to feel much better, but the improvement was not for long and he failed to combat a recurrence of his illness which came upon him about a week ago. His wife and nephew Mr. John W. Deacon, were with him at the time of his death.

The late Fred Sierichs Deacon, who was in his 74th year, was born in this city and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Deacon. He received his education in the local schools and on graduation from the Ontario Business College he accepted a position in the office of Downey & Preston, coal and grain merchants, with offices on Bridge Street East. After being with this firm for some time he decided to seek a larger field of endeavor and went to New York City. It was not long before he established himself in a responsible position with a wholesale hardware firm in Newark, N.J

Fine Business Ability.

He possessed business ability which won for him quick advancement. Much interested in the life of the large city, Mr. Deacon took advantage of all opportunities to improve himself and gain useful information. He became associated with the Y.M.C.A. and the church and took part in their activities. His vacations were spent by a visit to "the old home town," and if any man loved his native place, it was Fred Deacon. Each visit here made firmer his attachment for his old home, his friends, his church and the Bay of Quinte District as a whole. Finally he decided that he would live where he loved to be and although he was offered tempting inducements to remain with the firm, he came back to Belleville in 1904 to join his late brother, W. B. Deacon, in business.

Immediately upon taking up his old life here Mr. Deacon became interested in all undertakings for the advancement of the city and the benefit of its citizens. His chief interests, however,

KONOYE MEMOIRS SAY MATSUOKA STALLED FOR TIME

Held up for 8 Days Jap Reply to U.S. Plan to Preserve Peace in Pacific

This is one of a series based on the memoirs of Prince Fumimaro Konoye, Premier when Japan and the United States were seeking to avert war in 1941. Konoye, who committed suicide Sunday to avoid arrest as a war criminal, has claimed that Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka's "bad mood" prevented Japanese acceptance of a United States compromise plan to solve differences eight months before Pearl Harbor. That plan, Konoye says, was based on United States promise to help obtain Chungking's agreement to peace in China.

By MURLIN SPENCER

Tokyo, Dec. 18 — (AP)—Japan's answer to a United States plan to preserve peace in the Pacific was blocked for eight days in the spring of 1941 while Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka sought to learn Germany's attitude toward the negotiations, Prince Konoye wrote in his memoirs.

To gain time, Matsuoka proposed a neutrality pact with the United States, a suggestion summarily rejected by State Secretary Cordell Hull.

Pressed by political, army and navy leaders to quit stalling — they saw in the United States plan an opportunity to pull Japan's chestnuts out of the China fire — Matsuoka forwarded his answer to the United States May 12.

Reply from Germany

Shortly thereafter he received from Germany a reply which sought to use the negotiations as a means of preventing the United States from convoying goods to Britain, under threat that such action would force Japan to enter the war.

The Associated Press obtained Konoye's memoirs three days before his suicide. They are being translated, and copies have been given to Joseph B. Keenan who will prosecute Japan's leading war criminals.

Matsuoka told the Emperor May 8 that if the United States should join in the European war, "Japan would naturally have to stand on the side of Germany and Italy," the former Premier wrote.

Earlier Konoye had asked Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto, then Commander-in-Chief of the combined Japanese fleet, "What are the chances if there should be a Japanese-American war?"

Yamamoto replied:

"If they say it must be done, we will run around at will for about half a year or a year. But if it stretches into two or three years, I have no confidence in a successful ending."

Alarmed by the navy attitude, Konoye related his excitement at receiving the United States plan for an understanding between the two countries, an excitement that prompted him to meet Matsuoka at Tachikawa airfield when the latter returned from Europe where he had conferred with Nazi chieftains.

The plan was explained to Matsuoka on the drive back from the airfield, but Konoye noted: "It is said that as expected, Matsuoka was in a bad mood and assumed the attitude of having almost no interest in the plan."

Later that night, April 22, Matsuoka waxed "loud and fiery on his visit to Europe and when the problem shifted to the important American plan he showed excitement and especially stressed the problem of Germany's trust of Japan" under the Tri-partite Pact.

"He also declared he understood this American plan as having 70 per cent evil will and 30 per cent good will," Konoye noted.

Matsuoka then stalled. But he did go so far as to draft his own revision of the United States plan and his revisions were approved by the Japanese cabinet May 3, or 12 days after he returned from Europe.

However, Matsuoka balked on assuring the United States that Japan would not "carry out an armed advance southward" into the Southwest Pacific. He deleted a provision that neither country would base its fleet where it could threaten the other.

Matsuoka Inserts Provision

He also inserted a provision that the United States and Japan would mediate between Britain and Germany in an attempt to end the European war at a point when Germany was victorious.

With Matsuoka's revisions ready, the cabinet urged that they be sent to the United States. Again Matsuoka stalled. He told Ambassador Nomura in Washington to give Mr. Hull an interim answer and, while acting as if it was Nomura's own idea, to suggest the neutrality pact.

Liquor Rationing In Ont. May End By December 31

Victoria, Dec. 18 (CP)—Reliable sources here last night said that liquor rationing will cease in Ontario at the end of December.

The source said the Ontario Liquor Commission accumulated a two-year supply before German U-boats began their raids on Allied shipping and federal authorities placed restrictions on manufacture of spirituous liquor in December, 1942, and with regular buying since that time feels rationing is unnecessary.

THREE DROWNED AS TRUCK PLUNGES INTO OIL TANK

Twenty Employees Work More Than Four Hours to Recover Bodies

Petrolia, Dec. 18—(CP)—A truck's plunge into an oil-filled storage tank late yesterday brought death to three construction workers who drowned in the oil before rescuers could reach them.

More than 20 Canadian Oil Company, Ltd. employees worked more than four hours to recover the bodies. They pumped oil from the 15-foot deep tank and lifted out the first body around 10 P. M. They removed the other bodies at 15-minute intervals.

Two of the victims were identified as Dan Sullivan, 39, and Basil Parsons, about 40. The third man, said of Danish extraction and aged about 35, has not been identified. The three men came to the Petrolia area recently from Nova Scotia, but their home town addresses have not been established.

One report said Sullivan was unmarried and came from Sarnia, and Killaloe, Ont. This could not be confirmed last night.

The men were employed by the Sarnia branch of the Carter-Hall-Aldinger Company of Toronto in installing storage tanks for the Polymer Company of Sarnia on Canadian Oil Company grounds.

Sullivan was a foreman of the construction gang and Parsons a laborer. Driver of the truck was a substitute driver known to fellow workers as "Dal."

The three men had finished work for the day. They had driven 60 feet when the truck plunged through a wooden guard rail surrounding the storage tanks. The covering collapsed and the truck disappeared into the oil.

Six other men had been standing nearby, waiting to board the truck for a ride home to Sarnia. When they saw what had happened they summoned all available men at the plant for a rescue job.

They soon realized it would be impossible to save the lives of the three men in the submerged truck.

Oil workers set about to pump the liquid out of the tank to enable rescue crews to enter the tank and get at the truck.

Work of pumping oil from the tank was slowed for a time because the truck in its fall had snapped two of three suction lines. A second line was rigged for lifting the oil, which was dumped into receptacles.

Skirmish Occurs At Brown's Bread

Toronto, Dec. 18 — (CP)—Violence again flared briefly today in the 24-day-old strike for union recognition at Brown's Bread, Ltd. here as police passed 37 persons through massed picketers at the company's eastern Toronto plant.

Police arrested Ralph Mabley, 18-year-old picket of Dumbarton, Ont., who was alleged to have engaged in fisticuffs with a worker attempting to enter the plant. He was charged with obstructing a police officer and was remanded until Jan. 8 when he appeared before Magistrate Tupper Bigelow.

Police Inspector William Evans warned strikers that mass picketing would not be permitted. Earlier Albert Hearn, business agent for Local 847, Bakery Wagon Drivers' Union (A.F.L.) said mass picketing during shift changes at the plant would be maintained daily.

This morning's skirmish followed a clash last night between about 100 picketers and 25 police when two picketers were arrested but later released.

After today's disturbance the picket line was reduced from 60 to six.

FULL RECOGNITION ON INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS EXPECTED

Mr. King Says Canada Must Share in Any Matters Regarding Affairs of Peace

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 18 — (CP)—Canada expects and will continue to expect that she be given full recognition along with other powers that may have to do with international matters which affect the future, Prime Minister Mackenzie King told the Commons yesterday.

"I cannot emphasize too strongly the right of this country to be one of the principals in any matters that relate to the drafting of the peace and that have grown out of the war," said Mr. King, pounding his desk to drive his point home.

The statement was one of several made while the Commons, in a pre-prorogation bustle, studied the estimates of various departments, and approved the principle of sharing with other nations information on developments in the peacetime uses of atomic energy.

With only 58 items in seven departments still to be dealt with, it appeared that prorogation, originally expected last Saturday, definitely would come today.

John Bracken, Progressive Conservative leader, and Veterans Minister Mackenzie both expressed belief that prorogation by 5 p. m. E.S.T. was possible. Estimates passed yesterday included those for labor, transport, fisheries, post office, munitions and supply and external affairs.

Speaking during external affairs estimates, Mr. King made these points:—

1. He believed the British government had every desire to see that Canada gets her full representation in important international negotiations, but to some extent the matter has been beyond their control.

AIRCRAFT CARRIER BRINGS 474 OVERSEAS PERSONNEL

Halifax, Dec. 18—(CP)—Military authorities announced today that the Canadian-manned aircraft carrier H. M. S. Puncher will arrive here Friday with 474 overseas personnel. This group will be the last to reach their home across Canada before Christmas.

On completion of the voyage the Puncher will be returned to the United States Navy, the original owners.

German Captain Tells of Rumor Prisoners Shot at Headquarters

Aurich, Germany, Dec. 18. (CP Cable)—In the closing hours of the prosecution's case on the first five charges in the war crimes trial of Maj.-Gen. Kurt Meyer, a member of the German Field police testified today that a prisoner was shot at the ancient Abbey of Ardenne, June 17 or 18, 1944.

The witness said he was serving at the 25th Regiment headquarters of the 12th S.S. Division which was at the Abbey at that time.

"We slept next to our vehicles and a sentry who was on guard between 0400 and 0600 said he heard shots," the German told the military court which is trying the S.S. General on charges involving the execution of 41 Canadian prisoners of war in the Caen area.

"In the morning a comrade went to the regimental headquarters building and when he returned said a prisoner had been shot."

The witness said he did not know the rank of the prisoner.

The evidence was offered to wind up the prosecution's testimony on the new alleged atrocity at the Abbey June 17.

Cross-examined by Lt.-Col. M. W. Andrew of Stratford, Ont., defence counsel, the witness said he was at regimental headquarters for ordinary "drill" and for the handling of prisoners. He saw prisoners picked up by a Field police corporal from either Meyer or his adjutant and taken to divisional headquarters.

The shooting he mentioned having heard about occurred after Meyer had assumed command of the division. Orders for the shooting of prisoners, he said, would have come from the regimental commander or a staff officer.

Questioned by Maj-Gen. Harry W. Foster of Picton, Ont. and Halifax, court president, the witness said he did not know personally of any such orders having been given. Asked why he had suggested the possibility, the witness said "because I knew no one else had the power to give such an order."

A German captain who commanded the third battalion of the 25th regiment, 12th S. S., at Buron early in July when the 3rd Canadian division recaptured the town, testified that when he was at regimental headquarters on his way to take over command of his battalion, a fellow officer told him he had heard that prisoners had been shot at the headquarters.

Replying to Gen. Foster, the captain said he did not have the authority as a battalion commander to order the shooting of prisoners of war.

Capt. Ben Wagman of Toronto told the court of making a pathological examination of the body of a Canadian lieutenant in Berniers - Sur - Mer Canadian military cemetery. The body was identified by pips on the shoulders. "Glengarrian" flashes also on the shoulders and sky-blue patches on the sleeves. Capt. Wagman said he had concluded there was no other obvious cause of death than a head injury.

Col. MacDonald read to the court a statement quoting Meyer as saying prisoners were not interrogated at length at his headquarters, the chief interest being in the names of units. The statement added that Meyer was usually well forward and read reports of the interrogations on return to his headquarters and without his having seen the prisoners.

On completion of the prosecution's case Gen. Meyer stood directly in front of the court president, who told him, "You will now proceed with your defence."

Claims Germans Aimed at Revolt Through I.R.A.

Mystery Death on U-Boat Upset Plan Says Lahousen

By GEORGE TUCKER

Nuernberg, Dec. 18 (AP) — German intrigue to stir up revolution in Ireland through the Irish Republican army failed largely because of the mysterious death of an Irish revolutionary agent on board a U-boat in the English Channel, says Maj.-Gen. Edwin Lahousen, one time German intelligence officer.

Lahousen, surprise witness for the prosecution at the war crimes trial here, said in an interview yesterday that death of the agent also foiled plans to sabotage British industries from Irish bases, and that other sabotage agents were nabbed the moment they set foot on British soil.

He said the operation bore the code name "Pidgeon," and was considered politically so important by Joachim Von Ribbentrop that it was taken over by the foreign office.

The key revolutionary figure was described by Lahousen as an Irish-American in the outlawed Irish Republican army who worked his way from New York to Genoa, Italy, as a crew member of a United States ship, and was brought to Germany after making contact with Nazi intelligence officers through an intermediary.

"There were two different parts to the plan to harm the British by using the Irish," Lahousen said. "The first part provided for the use of agents to work with the I.R.A. and use Ireland as a base for sabotage operations against British war industries. The second provided for collaboration with the I.R.A. through the key agent, who was to be sent to Ireland to work for an uprising to take place stimultaneously with a planned invasion of Britain."

Soon after the I.R.A. man arrived in Berlin he was taken to see Ribbentrop, Lahousen said.

"Shortly after this meeting our agents began to go over. After things were ready this man was put aboard a submarine," he continued.

Lahousen's diary says the submarine left from Wilhelmshaven on Aug. 6, 1940, for an undisclosed point on the Irish coast. A radio transmitter and special sabotage equipment were to be dropped by parachute at a pre-arranged rendezvous.

"The U-boat had just left a very few hours when it sent a radio message that the agent had suddenly died. The message came through normal channels of the navy and we were informed they buried him at sea," Lahousen said.

"His death practically ended all enterprises in Ireland. With regard to other agents that went to Ireland, then to England, with the help of the I.R.A., I believe we succeeded in getting four or five of them across by using a submarine in one instance and an airplane in another. . . . But I must say on the whole the enterprise was a failure because they were all caught."

Lahousen was asked: "What was the chief satisfaction Germany obtained from Ireland during the war?"

"There was no satisfaction," he replied. "The Irish Republican Army was of course concerned with their own political ends and would make trouble for (Prime Minister) De Valera instead of making trouble for England. The Foreign Office had every interest in keeping De Valera in a good mood and thus an order was given to cease operations."

Hijackers Seize 240,000 Stogies

Toronto, Dec. 18 — (CP) — Police spread a dragnet over the Toronto area today for a transport truck which hijackers last night drove from its owners' yards with a shipment of $15,000 worth of Christmas cigars.

The loot is 240,000 stogies — packed in 98 cartons of 2,500 each.

The transport company had hauled the cigars from Montreal to Toronto for delivery to a tobacco company (Imperial).

A few minutes after the company driver stepped out of the two-ton truck, thieves believed to have concealed themselves at the rear of the warehouse jumped into the cab of the truck and drove the load out of the yard.

The thieves took a chance on getting past the watchman at the entrance to the yards, but their gamble succeeded.

The watchman later told police he saw the truck pulling out of the yard but believed it was driven by one of the regular drivers.

MRS. R. CHURCHILL GRANTED DIVORCE

London, Dec. 18. (CP)— Mrs. Randolph Churchill, charging that the only son of Britain's wartime prime minister "seemed to prefer a bachelor existence," was granted a divorce decree nisi today.

Mrs. Churchill, the former Pamela Byrl Digby, won court costs and custody of the couple's young son. Suing on grounds of desertion, she charged that Maj. Churchill once walked out of their apartment at midnight and in October, 1942, wrote that their marriage was a failure and he was not going to live with her again.

NO TURKEYS FOR SALE ON MARKET

Turkeys were still so scarce as to be absolutely non-existent on the Tuesday market this morning when only approximately one half dozen vendors offered chicken and eggs for sale on the inside market. The answer to the non-appearance of Christmas turkey was that farmers had "promised" their birds to regular customers and therefore had no necessity of attending market.

Christmas trees again were plentiful on the outside market, however, with prices from 75 cents to $1 being asked by the four or five vendors in attendance.

GUESTS OF HOTEL COMPLAIN OF NOISE

Purveyors of a good brand of anti-freeze might do a fairly good business at a certain motor transport company who have their local headquarters on upper Pinnacle Street, according to complaints being received at the police station.

Hotel guests at the Crystal Hotel have complained to police that they cannot sleep because of the continual racket made by transport motors which are being left running all night. Investigating police officers were told that only water is carried in the truck radiators and they are left running to prevent them from freezing. Police ordered the practice discontinued.

Auto thieves apparently were active in centres both to the west and to east of Belleville, last night. Trenton police reported a 1937 Ford coach bearing licence 67A28 having been stolen, while Napanee police stated a 1936 Ford coach with licence 5R538 having been taken.

OVERHEATED PIPES SET CEILING ABLAZE

Overheated stovepipes are blamed for a blaze which caused damage shortly after nine o'clock Monday evening, at the residence of Mr. Henry Salisbury, 217 Station Street. Pipes in the downstairs hall are reported to have become overheated with result the ceiling caught fire with the flames eating through the bedroom floor immediately above. Fortunately the blaze was discovered before it got too great a headway and firemen with the aid of the booster hose were able to confine the blaze to the ceiling and floor. Furniture suffered by little damage, it was reported.

POLICE COURT

"You know what the penalty is, I presume?" was the question put by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan to John White, local restaurant employee, when the latter pleaded guilty in police court this morning to a charge of being in possession of liquor not purchased on his own liquor permit.

"Yes, Sir," was the prompt reply, "It is $103, or three months in jail."

The prospective penalty daunted the accused but little, however, and White promised Magistrate T. Y. Wills he could have the money by Friday. "Just in case you don't have the money, the alternative is three months in jail," warned the magistrate.

Three Months' Term.

Only one other case was heard in court when Harry Schneider, Pembroke, pleaded guilty of stealing $56 from Gerald Hagerman of Rawdon township and was sentenced to three months in jail. Schneider had been apprehended by Kingston police following suspicions being aroused in a restaurant when he tendered a $20 bill in payment for a 90-cent meal.

In court today it was revealed that on the weekend of December 8th, Hagerman had befriended Schneider when the latter was "broke" and had kept him in his hotel room. During the night Schneider had disappeared with $56 from Hagerman's wallet and had hired a local taxi to take him to Kingston.

Eight inebriates paid the conventional $13 fine and costs out of court, while one motorist paid $12.50 for not being in possession of a driver's permit. Two others paid fines out of court for disorderly conduct and four motorists paid $2 each for violations of traffic regulations.

J. Owen Herity Borne To Rest as City Mourns

Representative Public Pays Reverent Tribute at Funeral Service

In the snow-swept hallowed ground of Belleville Cemetery, part of the county he loved and in which he was born, the late J. Owen Herity, manager and secretary of the Chamber of Commerce and Industrial Commissioner of the City of Belleville, was laid to his final rest on Monday afternoon.

The seventy-five-year-old dean of district service clubs, who was the epitome of all that represented county and city life and its betterment received as his requiem, tributes of a far-flung representation of those who knew and loved him.

Rarely, if ever, in the history of this city and Hastings County has the population, represented by all phases of life, been welded into such a reverent sympathetic whole to pay final tribute to an illustrious native son whose life and efforts merit the greatest tribute of all, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

All Districts Represented.

From all parts of the district he loved and in which he lived they came to do final homage to a man and a friend.

From the snow-rimmed hills of Huntingdon, the township in which he was born, and in whose little red schoolhouses he taught the three "R's" came the scions of well-known pioneer families who knew him as a boy. Mature farmers and their wives, the flush of outdoor life enhanced by the inner feeling of sorrow at the loss of a personal friend, filed slowly by the flower-banked casket in the chapel of the Martin Funeral Home to bid a last farewell to the man who grew up with them.

Executive and business men sat in silent sympathy along with civic, municipal and industrial dignitaries, parliamentary representatives and those of lesser government bowed sorrowing heads with workers of office, shop and factory in final tribute to a common friend.

Bells Toll Requiem.

In the reverent hush of Bridge Street United Church, its silence ruffled by the gentle organ intonations of "Going Home," played by Professor V. P. Hunt, the flower-draped casket and mourners slowly wended their way to the altar shortly after 3 o'clock. From the church belfry, bells periodically tolled a slow requiem.

Down the left aisle of church auditorium, the cortege, headed by the Rev. Donald Amos, officiating minister, and official bearers slowly made its way to the front of the church.

Insignia-garbed members of the Masonic order from all parts of the district and province quietly paraded down the centre aisle to their allotted places. With heads bowed in reverent silence, those present in other parts of the church, stood as if welded by a common bond of sorrow and sympathy until the service got under way.

Large Representation.

Agriculture, industry and business, labor and government were present. Members of the Belleville Rotary Club, of which the late Mr. Herity was a former district governor, held high in the esteem of international service club authorities, attended the funeral in a body. Rotary Governor of District 168, Tom Hetherington, was represented by President A. D. McLean, of the Belleville Club. The Belleville Kiwanis and Kinsmen Clubs were represented by their respective presidents, Mr. Lorne McDougall and Mr. Harry Rollins. Members of the Masonic Lodges from Belleville, Picton, Wellington, Trenton, Napanee, Frankford and other county and district centres were present. Rotary and other service clubs from outside points were also represented.

Outside officials who paid their last respects to a friend, included Mr. Mervin Maxwell, Chief of Development, Canadian National Railways, Montreal, and W. G. Murr, industrial agent, Canadian National Railways, Toronto, who represented Mr. J. F. Pringle, vice-president, of the railway, Toronto.

A Revered Citizen.

In a simple, yet impressive service, its passage interspersed by the slow tolling of the bells, the minister read four passages of the Holy Scripture.

In eloquent eulogy to the late Mr. Herity, Mr. Amos stated: "We are gathered in this place to pay our last offices of honor and esteem for the late James Owen Herity, beloved and highly revered citizen of this city and the County of Hastings, who passed away last week at the age of 75.

"The summary of his life," Mr. Amos went on, "written in a tribute paid to him in the press at the time of his death, bears repeating: 'In the death of Mr. Herity, a life of usefulness; a life of giving and receiving friendships, and a life of industry and intrepidity of spirit has run its course and leaves a void in the civic, social, fraternal and educational life of the city which will remain unfilled for a long time to come'.

Worthy Son of County.

"Hastings County," the minister said, "has always been proud of her sons, and J. O. Herity was one whom she delighted to honor and whose life and efforts have brought honor to his home county. Perhaps his worth to his city and county was never better recognized than in a public affair some time ago at which his colleagues and friends in industry, business and other phases of life honored him with gifts and other tributes.

"He exemplified the two-fold aspect of good citizenship by serving with his very best, his own city and district and at the same time keeping abreast of trends and actions as far afield as the League of Nations so that he could bring an informed opinion to bear on civic, national and international matters and thus help to inform and mould the attitudes of others.

"He was a man of plain tastes who loved high thinking and had a quiet faith in the God of wisdom and reasonableness, the God of mercy and forgiveness, the God of order and beauty. His ability to command the attention of his hearers made him responsive to the messages of others and more than once in our short acquaintance, it has been my pleasure to hear him speak of preachers and sermons that have helped him."

Set Noble Example.

"It behooves us," Mr. Amos said "as we gather to honor his life in memory, to acknowledge the God who is Father to us all and to link our tribute to an esteemed fellow citizen with a recognition of our humble dependence on God and a beseechment of His tender mercy on us all—on the family and immediate circle of friends who mourn the passing of a counsellor and confidante of intimate understanding—on the clubs, lodges and organizations, members whose lives have been helped and stimulated to nobler endeavors by his example and his exhortation—on the citizens of this city and county, whose community life is the poorer with the departure of a sterling gentleman and a prince of a common man.

At the conclusion of the church service, the funeral cortege slowly filed through the auditorium to Church Street between the lines of a Masonic guard of honor.

Headed by a staff car of the Ontario Provincial Police the funeral cortege slowly wended its way through crowded streets to the Belleville cemetery where interment was made. In silent tribute to a well-known beloved citizen, crowds of people on the main city thoroughfares stood with bared heads, or paused in the rush of the day, as the procession went by. The flag on the City Hall fluttered at half staff.

Masonic Service.

At the graveside, following a brief committal service conducted by Mr. Amos, members of the Masonic Order offered the beautifully impressive rites of that fraternity. The Masonic service was conducted by Wor. Bro. C. E. Meyers, of Eureka Lodge, assisted by Rt. Wor. Bro. R. D. Adams, Wor. Bro. C. D. Crosby and Bro. E. C. Wood.

The bearers were members of city Masonic lodges, of which the late Mr. Herity was an esteemed brother, and included: Rt. Wor. Bro. A. L. Hill; Very Wor. Bro. F. G. Chamberlain; Wor. Bro. W. M. Barlow; Wor. Bro. H. C. McElrath; Wor. Bro. H. J. Andrews, and Bro. F. S. Follwell.

Rt. Wor. Bro. O. M. Newton, Trenton, and other Past District Deputy Grand Masters were present.

UNUSUAL THIEF SOUGHT

Hamilton, Dec. 18 (CP)—Police are looking for a thief with an unusual taste in loot. The robber has taken 20 bronze wash basin stoppers from five floors in a downtown office building. What the thief would do with the stoppers is a puzzle, as office workers say there is not enough metal in them to make them worth stealing.

Candlelight Vesper Service Held by C.G.I.T.

The annual Candlelight Vesper Service of the Canadian Girls in Training was held in Holloway St. United Church on Sunday afternoon. There were approximately 105 girls participating in this lovely and impressive service. The altar was decorated with white candles and bows, with blue and white crests. The centre pews, occupied by the girls themselves were marked off with white ribbon.

The choir of thirty girls was directed by Mrs. Fred Houston, and sang several carols.

The service was in charge of Lois Greenleaf and Mary Potter, both camp councillors. The Scripture lesson was read by Mary Potter and Merle Burlanyette led in prayer. The Christmas story was read by Marilyn Seldon. The responses and prayers, read in clear, girlish voices were both beautiful and touching.

Following the service, Lois Greenleaf lit her candle at the centre table and passed the light to the three girls on the platform, who in turn lit the candles of the girls in the pews. A beautiful and inspiring picture was formed as the girls, their young faces serious above the tiny flames, walked silently up the aisles and out of the church.

Armstrong Given Reformatory Term On Theft Charge

Found guilty in a previous court of theft of government property while he was serving as equipment officer with the R.C.A.F. at Mountain View Air Station, WO. 1 Armstrong, formerly of Toronto, was sentenced to eight months in the reformatory when he appeared before Judge Wilfred S. Lane of Picton on Monday.

Armstrong was charged with the theft of over $2,000 worth of government property, including 7,000 feet of lumber and five truck loads of plumbing fixtures. The case was heard at the annual fall sitting of Prince Edward county court in Picton when after taking of evidence which lasted for one week Armstrong was found guilty of theft. Fixing of sentence was deferred until Monday of this week.

Investigation into the alleged irregularities at Mountain View were commenced last July by officers of the local Provincial Police under the direction of Constable Ernest Keays following which charges of theft by virtue of office were laid against Armstrong.

Louis Lont, of Ameliasburg, Prince Edward County, has been charged with receiving goods stolen by Armstrong and his case is expected to be heard in Picton court this week. Armstrong resided with Lont at Ameliasburg and it is charged by police that the Lont residence was renovated with materials stolen from the R.C.A.F. at Mountain View.

In addition to the eight months' definite sentence, Armstrong was sentenced to four months' indeterminate.

Speedboat Regatta Will be Sponsored By Rotary Club

The Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon in the Hotel Quinte on Monday voted by a substantial majority to sponsor a speedboat regatta here next summer. Members in a ballot vote decided also to operate the regatta on a Wednesday afternoon rather than on Civic Holiday.

Rotarian Lloyd Hicks, an ardent speedboat enthusiast and who has driven his speedster in many regattas throughout Canada and the United States will be named as chairman of the Regatta Committee. It is expected the regatta will be held in close proximity to that being sponsored by the newly formed Prince Edward Yacht Club of Picton.

Outstanding speedboats of the famous 225 class which rip through the water at nearly eighty miles an hour and their drivers from all parts of the United States and Canada will be invited to participate in the regatta, as well as boats of other classes.

ECLIPSE OF MOON TONIGHT

Washington, Dec. 18 (AP)—The moon will be seen in eclipse in parts of North America where weather permits tonight.

The earth's shadow will begin passing across the satellite at 7:30 p.m., E.S.T. and will clear it at 11:03 p.m.

Even during totality—from 8:40 p.m., to 10 p.m.—the moon will be visible, with a dull, coppery hue.

Scientific studies reveal that among the best-read advertisements are those in comic strip form, those containing recipes, and those with a war message.

Rotary Enjoys Musical Program

Departing from its regular custom of guest speaker at the weekly luncheon in the Hotel Quinte on Monday the Rotary Club relaxed, sat back on its collective haunches and enjoyed a high class musical entertainment. The meeting was the final one for the year.

Miss Leona Riggs, Mrs. Ken Bird and Mrs. William Burgoyne, rated as one of the cleverist vocal trios in the city delighted the club with trios and solos. Miss Riggs also played the piano accompaniment.

The trio gave two outstanding selections with Mrs. Burgoyne offering "He Shall Feed His Flock" and Mrs. Bird, "The First Christmas Morn" in solo.

Rotarian Dr. Arthur Locke displayed marked ability on the violin in his rendition of "Cavatina."

The artists received a splendid ovation at the conclusion of the program with club appreciation being ably expressed by Rotarian Russ Hachborn.

Prior to the concert Rotarian Bert Howard paid sterling tribute from a Rotarian point of view to the memory of the late Rotary district governor, J. O. Herity.

"The world's finest ideals emanate from such great common men as the late Owen Herity," he said. "He exemplified the ideals of Rotary and became a member of the club not because of office but because Rotary and its work was a challenge to his life, and it gave him an opportunity to serve."

"For twenty-one years he was a good constant servant of Rotary and what it stood for," Dr. Howard said. "Today we pay our respects to a fellow Rotarian who was a Rotarian in every sense of the word."

At the conclusion of Dr. Howard's remarks, the clubmen and guests stood in one minute silence in tribute to the memory of their late fellow member. President "Mac" McLean was in the chair.

FRED S. DEACON

were his church and the cause of education, and to both of these he rendered valuable service. Since childhood Fred Deacon was a member of Bridge Street Church, first as the Methodist Church and later as the United Church. For the past seventeen years he filled in a highly capable manner the office of recording secretary and also as a member of the church library board. He was a member of the Presbytery and a representative to the Bay of Quinte Conference, and also a church trustee. In his younger days he was superintendent of the Sunday School and for some years he taught a Sunday School class for older boys. When health permitted he was a regular attendant at the church services and strangers always received a gracious welcome from him. By the officials and the members of Bridge Street United Church he will be much missed and long remembered for the great services he rendered.

Interested in Y.M.C.A.

In the work of the Y.M.C.A., Fred Deacon was much interested and was generous in its support. He was the first treasurer of the Association and a member of the Board of Directors when the Association was incorporated and the new building on Campbell St., opened in 1911. He was also chairman of the Y.M.C.A. Endowment Fund Committee for a number of years.

In educational matters Fred Deacon took a deep interest and he was a member of the Board of Education from January 1908 to Dec. 1923. During the years 1918 and 1919 he was chairman of the Board and for a considerable time he was chairman of the Sites, Buildings and Repairs Committee. He was also a member of the Advisory Vocation Committee, representing employers' interests, from 1924 to 1938 and he served several terms as chairman of the committee. He was an ardent and undaunted advocate of providing a collegiate and vocational school in this city and it was a great source of pleasure and satisfaction to him when it became an accomplished fact. He was a member of the Advisory Committee at the time the Collegiate and Vocational school was built and opened in the Summer of 1928.

Over a term of many years he was most actively engaged in the affairs of the Deacon Shirt Company, with his brother, the late W. B. Deacon, and at the time of his death he was secretary-treasurer of Deacon Brothers Limited.

Fred Deacon was interested in people and it was always great pleasure to him to welcome former residents of Belleville and often the stay of visitors was made pleasant when he motored them about the city and showed them the old sights they were anxious to see.

Friend of Many People

In the Old Boys' Reunions of past years he took an active part. The early days of Belleville were of great interest to him and he could tell of many interesting people and happenings here in days gone by. Former residents of this city, now living in many distant parts will regret to learn of the death of their old friend, Fred Deacon.

Fraternally he was a life member of Eureka Lodge No. 283 A F. & A. M. and a life member of Moira Chapter R. A. M. No. 11. He was a member of the Chamber of Commerce and a popular member of the Kiwanis Club.

Love of country, love of friends, love of home, all three were marked characteristics of Fred S. Deacon. He possessed many fine traits of character his pleasing personality, friendly disposition and cordial manner attracted many close friendships; he was generous and sympathetic and to many in sickness and trouble he was a friend in deed. He was in every way a good citizen and this city is richer by his life here and in his death loses a loyal and honored son.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Louise Howell, and one sister, Mrs. Charlotte Finkle, Belleville.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Most Provinces Have Adequate Stocks of Liquor

By TIM DICKSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

This Christmas may not equal the rousing Yuletide celebration with brimming cup and wassail bowl featured in old prints, but it should come close because for their first peacetime Christmas since 1938 Canadians have adequate stocks of liquor.

Most provinces have either increased or eliminated rations, and the Christmas rush already is under way in liquor stores across Canada. A prescription-plus-permit system this year facilitates the legal purchase of liquor in previously "dry" Prince Edward Island.

Queues have appeared in Winnipeg and Vancouver, and in the west coast city extra police kept crowds in order as Christmas liquor went on sale.

In provinces where rations were boosted to take care of the extra holiday demand, liquor purchasers took added cheer from word that the increase will remain in effect after the Christmas tree is consigned to the ash heap.

Most plentiful potables are rum and gin. Whisky supplies are less abundant, imported Scotch hard to find, but, in general, beer, ale and domestic wines are available in quantities considered "adequate."

Buying Christmas liquor started early in Ontario. Crowds which appeared at retail outlets around Dec. 1 had disappeared in most cities by mid-December.

The Ontario monthly ration allows four 26-ounce bottles of Scotch, rye or gin, but only two bottles may be imported Scotch. Ontario residents may also buy 24 pints of beer a month. Wine drinkers are entitled to two 25-ounce bottled of imported wine each month and to one bottle of domestic wine a week.

Ontario's hard liquor ration is figured on a half-monthly basis. A permit holder at the beginning of the month can purchase two quarts of domestic Scotch, rye or gin, or one bottle of imported Scotch and one of Canadian liquor. But when he has bought the two bottles, he cannot legally purchase any more spirits until the second half of the month.

ONLY ONE FROM DISTRICT ON SHIP

Only one M. D. No. 3 representative of the Canadian army personnel returning on board the "Duchess of Bedford" expected to dock at Halifax on December 29, is Pte. J. H. Grant, of Baptiste, Ont.

Private Grant who is a member of the North Nova Scotia Highlanders, will disembark with his regiment and attend a homecoming parade and reception in the Maritimes before coming to Ontario for discharge.

SWEDISH CUSTOM

The yule log had its beginning in Sweden, when at Jul or Yule, guests originated the custom of bringing a log and carrying it into the house with them when they visited.

LIFE can Begin AFTER 40, IF..

Around 40 our energy lessens. But, experience has taught us to do our work with less effort. The years ahead should yield the greatest accomplishments, the most enjoyment and happiness. They can, too, if we avoid the kidney and bladder disorders such as Backache, Headache, Rheumatic Pains, Lassitude, Loss of Sleep and Energy which so often attack those around 40. For over half a century Dodd's Kidney Pills have been helping men and women to keep kidneys and bladder in good order. If you are nearing 40, or past it, for the sake of your health and a happier future use Dodd's Kidney Pills today! 125

More than 500 former servicemen now employed by Dow Frontenac, Black Horse and Boswell breweries and other units of National Breweries Limited gave the management a handsome "character reference" in the course of a company reception for them in Montreal on December 15. The veterans, who comprise more than a third of employees, all signed their names in a book in appreciation of the "justice, understanding, sincerity and cordiality" which has always marked the relations of the management with veteran employees. In recent months several hundred service personnel who have received their discharges have joined the company in addition to former employees who have returned to their jobs. President Norman J. Dawes, extreme right, holds the illuminated scroll of testimonial under his arm while he receives from Patrick "Paddy" O'Brien, World War I amputation casualty and spokesman for the veterans of both wars, the sealskin-bound volume of signatures. Beside Mr. O'Brien is Miss Huguette Schmidt, formerly of the Canadian Women's Army Corps, representing women veterans.

Six Persons Lose Lives When Trains Collide in South

Kollock, S. C., Dec. 17—(AP)—The death toll in the wreck of two of the seaboard air line's luxury trains packed with many holiday travellers and homeward bound soldiers was revised downward today.

The division headquarters of the railroad at Norfolk, Va., said a recheck disclosed that six persons lost their lives when the Florida-bound "Silver Meteor," streaking through the morning mists, plowed into the northbound "Sun Queen" here early Sunday.

Previously, the S. A. L. had reported seven killed, but a duplication was discovered in the names of a serviceman.

More than 60 persons were in hospital at a half-dozen towns. Many of them were released later, however. Scores of others received first aid treatment. The trains were loaded to capacity and carried about 400 passengers each.

The wreck occurred as the Sun Queen was pulling into a siding. All the cars had not cleared the main track as the Silver Meteor sped out of the frigid darkness, slicing the northbound train in two.

Friends will be sorry to learn that Mr. Frank Goodfellow is still on the sick list.

Weekend Crimes Include Holdups And Robberies

Toronto, Dec. 17 — (CP) — A holdup, a robbery with assault, housebreakings and purse snatchings featured Toronto's weekepd crime news.

Three men, two carrying revolvers, held up Edward Walker in his northwest Toronto drug store Saturday night and escaped with $25 from the cash register. Mrs. Rose Blake, Toronto, who entered the store just as the bandits were leaving, was struck in the face by one of the intruders when she refused to hand over her purse.

Four young soldiers, wearing battledress and black berets, assaulted William Burgess and Sam Bouvier of Toronto as they walked along a central Toronto street Saturday night and robbed Burgess of $27. Both men suffered facial lacerations and were taken to hospital.

Kenneth W. Charters, secretary of the Morris Charters Co., was told to throw his wallet on a table and lie on the floor when he interrupted a six-foot prowler's ransacking of the Charters' stock-room on Saturday. After taking $8 from the wallet, the robber ran from the building.

Forcing a milk chute at the home of J. Willis in North Toronto Saturday afternoon, thieves got away with a lady's coat, a suit of clothes, luggage and other articles.

William Pryor told police his East Toronto home was entered Saturday night by thieves who stole $300 in bills and jewelry. Three watches, jewelry and a radio were stolen from the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Hill in East Toronto.

Mre. Fred Thompson reported her purse, containing a small sum of money, was snatched on the street Saturday evening. Miss Clare Haynes lost her purse the same way within a stone's throw of police headquarters on College Street.

Meanwhile, Bruce Davis, 33, and Glen Harewood, 32, both of Toronto, were arrested Saturday on a charge of attempting to rob Stanley Powell of Toronto on December 15.

Nine Injured When Trolley Hits Car

Toronto, Dec. 17 —(CP)— Nine persons were injured and rush-hour traffic on three transportation services was tied up for 45 minutes today when two street cars and an automobile were involved in a collision at Broadview and Danforth Avenue in east-central Toronto.

Police said the accident happened when a westbound trolley hit a stationary auto and the impact hurled the car against a standing street car. Passengers in the standing trolley were hurled to the floor and four were injured, none seriously. Three passengers in the other trolley were shaken up. The motorist involved was thrown against the steering wheel and suffered shock and body bruises. A bystander, Miss G. Knight, suffered minor bruises when hit by the fender of the motor car.

J. Owen Herity

This community and district which have known James Owen Herity as fellow-citizen and have felt the influence of his life and known the character and quality of his work mourn him in death and will long remember this kindly and able man who gave so freely of his time and effort for the improvement of the city and the countryside. He had the satisfaction of many achievements in industry and in other spheres and he has left behind him an inspiration for the community in the years ahead.

The late J. Owen Herity was a man of great breadth of interest and of broad culture. Everything he did bore the evidence of his kindly interest and his thoroughness and devotion to whatever task he assumed in matters relating to the welfare of the people of the community. He was interested in the city and country and in the men, women and children of the city and countryside and everything that community life stands for, its people, its history, its spirit and its aspirations. He had a profound faith in Belleville and in his beloved countryside where he spent his early years in Huntingdon Township because he knew the foundations on which they were built. He possessed a sane, broad and optimistic vision of life and a knowledge of life which justified his high hopes and his zeal for the betterment and development of the community in every phase of the community's life.

While he was a student of books, he was a greater student of the life of those around him and of nature. Posssesing this broad outlook he was able to apply this knowledge and to impart it to others. Instinctively, no doubt, he chose teaching as his profession and those who have heard him refer to those days of instruction in the old red schoolhouse and to his pupils of other days know how deeply that period impressed itself upon his heart. Nor is it difficult to understand that he was very popular with his scholars for if ever a man was sincere and devoted to his work, that man was Owen Herity. In his native township he put himself into his teaching as he later put his personality into journalism with the Markham Sun and the Daily Ontario. Later again when entering the field of municipal service as Industrial Commissioner he was able to use his great fund of knowledge and his spirit of enterprise and service in the important post he then assumed with the Chamber of Commerce and the Industrial Commission. What this office has meant to the city and to the people who live here and will come here was the important thing in the eyes of the late Industrial Commissioner.

His life was devoted to his work and to his wide friendships. He found an intense reaction in the friendships that he always enjoyed with his fellowmen. His associations with the public and with various fraternal, civic, social and industrial organizations were many and in these he rendered a service of no mean importance. His advice and information were inspirational and the information he left with those who listened to any of his addresses was not of the kind that was forgotten but such as lingered with his friends and hearers.

He was a great admirer of great men and especially of Abraham Lincoln. With the character and life of the great emancipator and martyred President of the United States he was deeply impressed and he became a treasure-house o finformation about that great figure. The lessons he drew from the lives of Lincoln and others he passed on to others.

He knew the country life of Canada from actual participation and contact with the life on the farm. His observations on rural scenes and events were true to life for he knew whereof he spoke. By his knowledge of the life of the countryside and of the people of the towns and cities he was able to interpret one to the other. This made it possible for a complete mutual understanding which has been of inestimable advantage to this district. His interests were not limited to the country and the county's capital city for he was likewise at home in matters of provincial and federal importance.

With such a foundation and background and with his high sense of duty, his wide experience and understanding of problems he rendered invaluable service to the development of the industrial life of the city and also to the benefit of the county. In the work of the Commissionership he had been given the highest praise by those who knew the qualifications required for this office and how well he filled his post. Honors came to him not of his seeking but as the reward of unselfish service.

The deepest impression he has left upon others is undoubtedly that of his noble personality. This was felt in every contact he made in his useful life.

He has passed, leaving a memory of a true, honest and generous man who had set his ideals high. He possessed rare gifts of mind and heart, he was alert to every need and call, he had an unusually keen sense of duty and honor, he was ready to sacrifice his time and energy in whatever cause might help his fellow-men, he was tireless in doing good. He was truly "one of nature's gentlemen" whose life and career adorned what was precious and true and good, and his influence will abide in the lives and deeds of those who knew him, in efforts he championed and in undertakings to which he set his heart and hand. He had faith in the right and stood with every just cause.

The last tribute of farewell paid by citizens and members of service clubs, civic bodies and other organizations at the public religious service at Bridge Street United Church was a fitting tribute to one who was a pattern of service and citizenship.

Restoration in England

(Windsor Star)

Judging by the scale model recently shown in a news photo, the city of Coventry is to arise from its ashes closely resembling something straight out of a Hollywood set designer's nightmare. What London proposes to do with bomb-damaged Guy's Hospital remains to be seen, but the £2,000,000 rebuilding scheme briefly described in a cable item indicates the historic institution will be bigger and better all around.

Founded by Thomas Guy in 1721, the hospital just before the war contained 647 beds, departments for providing treatment in all branches of medicine and surgery, and an excellent medical school. The Wills Library was built in 1902, the Gordon Museum in 1905. In 1910 new laboratories were erected for the study of physics and chemistry; new departments of pathology and pharmacology were established in 1912 and '13. Among the distinguished teachers have been Asterly Cooper, Richard Bright, Thomas Addison and William Gull. Hodgkin was a lecturer at Guy's, and Keats at one time was a student there.

His Seven Cities

(New York Times)

General Patton and the poet Homer are now on an equal footing. Seven Greek cities claimed the author of the Iliad. Seven French cities claim General Patton, or, if preferred, General Patton claims them. In a single day, recently, the former commander of the Third Army became an honorary citizen of Metz, Verdun, Toul, Sarreguemines, Epernay, Reims, and Chateau-Thierry. Actually he collected one more city, Luxembourg, which we choose to overlook, because it would have made eight cities in all and so interfered with the Homeric parallel. We can plead some legal justification in the fact that Luxembourg is not in France.

WARNING

Little fellow, well I know
  What you're asking cannot be.
'Tis a hope you must forego.
  So this year is it with me.
Oft in life it must befall
  That our courage will be tried
When the dearest thing of all
  We are wishing is denied.

When you wake on Christmas Day
  There'll be missing at the tree
What we've often heard you say
  You are hoping you will see.
You have set your heart upon
  Something Santa can't provide.
Of your wishes there is one,
  For some reason good, denied.

So it is will all, my boy.
  So it is this year with me.
Each of us is asking joy
  We must know is not to be.
Let us both beneath a smile
  Signs of disappointment hide,
And be brave the little while
  When our wishes are denied.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

DEC. 18TH, 1925

Prime Minister King celebrated yesterday the 51st anniversary of his birth. He was born at Berlin, Ontario, now Kitchener, on Dec. 17th, 1874.

Turkeys are selling at 50 cents to 60 cents per pound; geese 30 cents per pound; ducks $1.50 to $2.00 each and chickens 23 cents per pound.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. Reid motored to Kingston today.

Mr. John Dolan of this city has left for Florida where he will spend the winter months.

The Rev. Father McCarthy of Read was a visitor in town today.

A pleasing event took place last evening at the Oddfellows' Temple, when during a social evening Mr. R. H. Ketcheson was called to the front by Mr. Grant Way, and presented with a handsome pair of gloves and a box of cigars. It was Mr. Ketcheson's birthday and he was heartily congratulated by all present. After the presentation a large cake, bearing sixty lighted candles was brought in and presented to him.

30 YEARS AGO

DEC. 18TH, 1915

Professor Ernest Wheatley has been advised from England that he has been granted the University degree of Musical Bachelor. The degree which is the recognition of ability shown by written examination, will be conferred "In Absentia" on Dec. 23rd.

Mr. L. B. Cooper of this city, Grand Master of the I.O.O.F. for Ontario, spent yesterday in Brockville.

Mrs. Robert Anderson, Hillside Street, has returned home from Flint, Mich., where she visited friends.

Mr. J. G. Carter Troop, M. A., will give an address on Kipling at an open meeting of the Women's Canadian Club here in the assembly room at the high school on the evening of Dec. 20th.

40 YEARS AGO

DEC. 18TH, 1905

Mr. and Mrs. H. Wills of New York City are visiting friends in the city.

Mr. Percy Pitney, who has been in Detroit, Mich., for some time, has returned to his home here.

Mr. J. H. Davison of Mount Forest, Ontario, is visiting his brother, Mr. J. C. Davison, in this city.

Smallpox has been discovered in the village of Foxboro. Dr. Faulkner, Medical Health Officer for Thurlow Township, informed us that some five or six cases exist, the cases being confined to two families. The usual precautions have been taken and the Foxboro schools and churches are closed. The disease is prevalent in other parts of the province and the Provincial Department of Health is taking steps to cope with it and have called the attention of the public to the law calling for vaccination.

Jack Marks, formerly of this city, will play hockey with the Brockville Federal League team again this season.

Belleville's junior hockey team will open the season in Cobourg on New Year's night. The boys are said to be in good condition and will make the best of them go some.

50 YEARS AGO

DEC. 18TH, 1895

Captain Muir will give a talk this evening to the non-commissioned officers of the 15th Battalion on their qualifications and duties.

The Rt. Rev. Monsignor Farrelly of St. Michael's Church spent yesterday in Kingston.

Mr. W. R. Carmichael has arrived home from Montreal to spend Christmas with his family.

Mr. R. H. Hart of Ridgetown, formerly of Belleville, is in town on business.

Mr. C. J. Bowell has been appointed temporarily to a clerkship in the Belleville post office.

Russell and Allan Chown entertained a number of friends last evening at the home of their parents, Corner of Church and Hotel Streets.

YOU'D BE SURPRISED

By GEORGE W. STIMPSON

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What King of England could speak no English?

George I, King of England from 1714 to 1727, could neither speak nor write the English language.

He was the son of Ernest Augustus, Elector of Hanover, and Sophia, granddaughter of James I of England.

This German Prince became the heir to the English Crown on the theory that the blood of James II in the direct line was corrupted. When at the age of 54 he succeeded Queen Anne as Sovereign of England he exhibited no desire to learn the language of his new kingdom and never made any attempt to do so. In fact he took more interest in his German principality than he did in the British Empire.

His son and successor, George II, who reigned from 1727 to 1760, spoke English very imperfectly. The fact that George I spoke no English and that George II spoke the language imperfectly had an important influence on the development of the British cabinet system. King William III and Queen Anne presided over the meetings of the cabinet and personally directed its deliberations. But George I and George II, unable to speak English and to understand their ministers, stayed away from cabinet meetings and took little part in the administration of state affairs. When George III became King in 1760 the practice of independent deliberations of the cabinet was so firmly fixed that it was taken as a precedent that has never been departed from since.

William of Orange, who reigned jointly with his wife Mary from 1689 to 1699 and as sole Sovereign from 1699 to 1702, was Dutch in nationality and knew very little English. "William," says Macaulay, "was not sufficiently master of our language to address the Houses from the throne in his own words; and on very important occasions, his practice was to write his speech in French, and to employ a translator."

French, of course, was the native language of the English kings for many generations after the Norman Conquest in 1066. Edward II ordered the use of the English language in the British courts in 1362, but the laws of England were written in French until the 18th century.

Stood Guard Over Sacks Of Uranium Ore

Edmonton, Dec. 18 (CP)—Malcolm Campbell, veteran northern prospector who arrived here yesterday, realizes now that he stood guard for two years over thousands of sacks containing enough potential atomic energy to make "quite a mess" of the world. The sacks contained uranium ore being shipped from Eldorado mines, Great Bear Lake, east to Port Hope, Ont., and Campbell was the watchman on the Northern Transportation Company docks at Fort Smith.

Mackenzie's Column

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

Dublin, Dec. 18 (AP) — The comparativery new republic of Eire has come through the vicissitudes of birth well and not only is enjoying greater prosperity than southern Ireland has known before, but the signs seem propitious for even better times.

The way things loow now the

The way things look now the and mild climate—a paradise for golfers and fishermen—may become a favorite holiday resort for countries of both hemispheres. This possibly lies in the fact that it is a major strategic stop on the northern air route between North America and Europe. Eire now is energetically developing her own airline to the big British airport of Roydon, from which other lines radiate to the continent, making Ireland an easy place to reach.

I realize the reader may be remarking that Eire owes part of her better times to the fact that she was neutral in the war, despite Allied pleas for naval bases. It's true that Eire did profit economically by her neutrality, and I shall deal with that in another article.

Now in speaking of greater prosperity for Eire I dont want to give a wrong impression. She is vastly better off than she was, but its only a dozen years ago that the poverty in many areas was appalling. Thousands lived on potatoes and salt, and were happy if they had a bit of bread as well. Starvation swept wide areas when the potato crop failed.

I fished in Ireland ~~many sum~~ many summers and generally employed the same gillie (guide). He had several young children and about the only meat or white bread they ever saw was that he brought home in the form of sandwiches left over from my lunch, or from the lunches of other fishermen whom he guided. I used to carry double lunches so he would have food for the family. And he was better off than many little tenant farmers who battled the boggy soil for existence.

The privations of the peasants were multiplied in the cities. The slums of Dublin were held to be the world's worst.

In the few years that the government under the leadership of Eamon De Valera has been in power, there has been a reorganization of the country's economy. Southern Ireland used to depend mainly on cattle-raising for its income. Meantime it imported two-thirds of its foodstuffs and much of its fodder.

I visited Dublin in 1932, when Mr. De Valera was starting his reform, and studied his program. The country then grew only 31,000 acres of wheat. Now it produces 660,000 acres—the entire requirement of the country—and grows all its fodder besides. Manufacturers also have been started, though the war has interfered.

The cleaning-up of slums has gone forward, and when the war made rebuilding impossible, the government continued to remodel slum buildings with the existing materials. Nowadays, too, the under-privileged, the unemployed, widows with children, and aged persons get help from the government. I was told in official quarters that there no longer is destitution in the country. This doesn't mean that there isn't privation, but that everybody has food. The government assistance isn't maintenance, but is limited to the removal of destitution.

Official quarters tell me that the country is on its feet economically. It is, they add with pride prepared to meet the post-war stresses and take advantages of opportunities.

JAPANESE POLICY

Must Recognize Part

2. Canada expects to have all powers recognize the great part which the Dominion played in the war.

3. One of the reasons for his recent trip to the United Kingdom was to discuss with British officials the part Canada wished to play in international affairs.

4. Labor Minister Mitchell has been given authority by order-in-council to direct the deportation of certain Japanese.

5. The government has not yet decided whether it would be advisable for Canada to become a member of a proposed regional council for the Pacific.

Accepts Invitation

6. Canada has accepted a United States invitation to attend next spring a conference which will discuss the possibility of reducing trade barriers and expanding world trade.

7. Canada would support the United States suggestion that a world trade and employment conference be called by the United Nations organization for next year.

Earlier, Mr. King had obtained approval of the Washington declaration in which he, Prime Minister Attlee and President Truman offered to share developments of atomic energy for peaceful purposes with any nation which would reciprocate.

Mr. King, Mr. Bracken and Angus MacInnis (CCF—Vancouver East), leader, pointed to the possible need of a world government to maintain security in a world where the atomic bomb was known.

Solon Low, Social Credit leader disagreed and called for international co-operation on the part of Canada without surrender of sovereignity.

May Disappear Next Month

Probably the most noteworthy announcement during study of Labor department estimates, was Labor Minister Mitchell's statement that the last vestige of National Selective Service the wartime agency which directed labor into those industrials where it could do the most good for the common effort, likely will disappear next month.

Mr. King swung into his statement on external affairs after Howard Green (PC—Vancouver South) had asked a series of questions about Canada's future in international affairs.

In tabling the orders-in-council dealing with the deportation of Japanese in Canada, Mr. King said the Labor Minister was given authority, without directly ordering him, to have removed from Canada Japanese nationals who have applied for repatriation; Japanese persons who have become naturalized Canadians and who applied for repatriation and had not revoked their applications up to Sept. 1, and of Canadian-born Japanese who expressed a desire to go to Japan and who do not renounce their request before a deportation order is issued.

A three-man commission will be set up to investigate the loyalty of Japanese who wish to remain in Canada.

Noisy Exchange

The noisy exchange between Alistair Stewart (CCF—Winnipeg North) and Liberal members reached its height when he singled out Thomas Reid (L—New Westminster) as one of the worst strife-raisers. Mr. Reid retorted: "You are raising up hatred of class against class, and you know it."

Mr. Stewart then quoted as "an example of racial intolerance from a Liberal" Veterans Minister Mackenzie as having called on his British Columbia constituents to support him in a campaign to rid the Province of Japanese.

"Take them to Manitoba if you want them," Mr. Mackenzie replied.

Before the noisy exchange was over, Mr. King and Labor Minister Mitchell had both been drawn in and it ended with a request by the Prime Minister for a withdrawal of Mr. Stewart's remark that the Liberal "government" was an "organized hypocracy."

Mr. Stewart said he should have said "Liberal Party."

THE USE OF POWERFUL ANTISEPTICS

I began experimenting when I was a medical student, continued the habit when I was an intern, but by that time I experimented on patients as well as on myself. Well, the patients were getting free hospital care and my services too—it was only fair that I should get something out of it.

One day I wanted to demonstrate to some fellow interns and some nurses the most effective antidote for carbolic acid. I filled a basin with pure liquefied phenol (carbolic) and immersed my hands in it—maybe only one hand I can't remember just how reckless I may have been—for a minute by the watch. Then I removed the hand or hands from the carbolic acid. The skin was white and the hand or hands quite numb. Then I immersed the hand or hands in a basin of pure grain alcohol. After a minute or two I took the hand or hands out of the alcohol. Now the skin was normal, the numbness was gone and there was no further effect.

Some physicians (including Doc Brady) believe the pure liquefied phenol ("carbolic acid") is the best agent for cauterizing a wound, say a bite inflicted by a dog, or any wound by any animal or fowl that may possibly contaminate or infect such wound with the germs of lockjaw. When the pure phenol has done its work (say in ten seconds) it may be neutralized by applying pure grain alcohol to the whitened tissue cauterized by the phenol, for an equal length of time. In a report on Landry's (ascending) Paralysis following administration of Pasteur treatment Dr. C. R. Thomas (Tenn. State Med. Ass't Jour, July, '45) states that "pure phenol destroys the virus of rabies—a hypothetical virus, since no one has established the cause of rabies in animals and, in my judgment, therefore, it is absurd for a physician or other presumably informed person to assert that this or any other substance applied to a wound "destroys the virus" of rabies. But then I'm just a plodding country doctor and maybe if knew better I'd defer politely to the eminent medical authorities who are never so good as when they are pulling some such trick as that on the gullible public.

It is probably futile to try to explain in a paragraph the difference between antiseptic and aseptic surgery or treatment of wounds. Your dictionary will tell you that asepsis means "state of being aseptic; the methods or processes of making or keeping aseptic." And then aseptic means "free or freed from pathogenic microorganisms" (disease germs), "preventing sepsis, or not involving sepsis; as aseptic surgery, characterized by the sterilization of instruments and other precautions for the constant exclusion of bacteria." In ideal aseptic surgery or wound treatment no antiseptic, germicide, disinfectant or cauterant is applied to the wound. The normal healing of any wound is best assured by (1) absolute cleanliness and (2) absolute rest.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

He Who Doctors Himself

Will you be good enough to describe the symptoms of bursitis and the symptoms of neuritis.

(E.P.)

Answer—He who attempts to doctor himself has a fool for a patient. There are no specific symptoms which would distinguish one trouble from the other. I advise you to leave the diagnosis to your physician.

Vite by the Package

Please let me know where I can get the Vite you recommend. We have read your writings and we get lots of health as well as enjoyment. (W.L.C.)

Answer—From the farmer who grows it, or from the miller, or the feed or seed store, from the milkman, the fruit and vegetable market, the corner druggist, from the park, the swimming hole, the outdoor skating rink, the bowling green, tennis court, golf links, baseball diamond, garden etc. Send ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope and ask in writing for booklet "V.I.T.E. Spells Youth."

Memorial Chapel And Health Centre

Toronto, Dec. 18 (CP)—Lt.-Col. Sidney E. Lambert, Dominion President of the War Amputations of Canada said yesterday the association plans to build a Memorial Chapel to the war dead of Toronto and district besides a proposed health, training and recreational centre for amputation cases. Robert Wilson, Chairman of the Association's Building Committee said a drive by the Toronto branch is more than $100,000 short of its $500,000 objective. The drive will close Jan. 15.

TWO MEN ATTACKED BY SNOW OWLS

Port Arthur, Dec. 18 (CP) — Allan Hegelberg, worker on the fish docks, says he used a pike pole to kill a large snowy owl that attacked him about midnight one night recently. Another owl is said to have attacked a policeman on boxcar inspection, but the officer beat it off with his fists.

Council Turns Down Motion to Appoint McLean Haig as Temporary Industrial Commissioner at Salary of $250 Monthly

Last Session for Year One of the Lengthiest Of the Term; Delegations Heard, By-Laws Passed and Other Business Transacted, Tribute Paid to Late J. Owen Herity By M. Maxwell of Montreal

The City Council in its last regular session of the year completed the agenda for the term in one of the longest sessions of the year and left the slate clean for the incoming council, which will be inaugurated on January 7th. A number of delegations were heard during the evening with Mr. M. Maxwell of the Industrial Department of the C.N.R. being introduced to members of the council. Mr. Maxwell paid sincere tribute to Mr. J. Owen Herity, whom he had known since 1934.

"He was a man of sincerity and above all—one of integrity", said Mr. Maxwell. "The city of Belleville has suffered a great loss because he was a man who went about doing good. His work was most thorough and he was meticulous in keeping his records and I could say they were models of industrial records." Mr. Maxwell told of the offices in Montreal, New York and London, which were open at all times to the Commission of Belleville and also the industrial offices in many cities of Canada. Mayor Follwell thanked Mr. Maxwell for his fine tribute of the late Industrial Commissioner and told the council that the C.N.R. Industrial Department had given the city of Belleville every assistance.

Wanted New Commissioner

Robert A. Pringle suggested that a Commissioner be obtained at the present time because there were a number of leads that had to be looked after and as the Industrial race was a competitive one, the City should have a man out right now contacting the several firms. Mr. J. B. Boyce stated that Belleville was ideally situated as a distributing point but must have facilities for deep draught vessels. He stated that Mr. Herity had done a tremendous amount of work for the city and the Corporation should not fool around with an appointment of a Commissioner. "The Commission is not trying to get a man for the job but trying to do a job for the city," said Mr. Boyce.

Motion Fails

At this juncture a recommendation was introduced "That the council employ A. McLean Haig as acting Industrial Commissioner on a month-to-month basis beginning January 1st., at a salary of $250 per month on the understanding that he devote sufficient time as is necessary to dispatch the duties of that position and that the Solicitor prepare the necessary by-law". This motion was introduced by Ald. McDougall, who corroborated the sentiment expressed by the two previous speakers. Ald. Woodley was of the opinion a permanent Commissioner be appointed but Ald. Butler wanted Mr. Haig to take over and give the council ample time to pick the right man. Ald. Thompson strongly opposed the motion stating that Mr. Haig had no experience in this line of work and that the city was only spending money to train a man, who did not want the position as a permanent one.

A Lot at Stake

Ald. Clapp stated there was a lot at stake and the city should have a man out tomorrow to contact the several leads now open. Ald. Allin stated that the council should not debate the ability of the man and that the members were out of order. "This is new business and should be brought before the committee before any decision is made", said the Alderman. Ald. Follwell was sure Mr. Haig did not need the job but was only prepared to help the city out for the time being. Ald. Allin wanted coupled with the motion that advertisement be made for a permanent man. Ald. Armstrong thought the job should be a full time one and that the city should endeavor to get the best man and pay him the proper salary. It has been said there have not been enough contacts made and I think that we have not spent sufficient money on this department of the city's business. The vote was taken and lost by the narrow margin of one vote.

Delegation Heard

A number of ratepayers from the Henry and Everett Streets district headed by Everett Liddle came to the council asking that the motion to allow Mr. "Mac" Hawley proceed with the renovation of his property at the corner of Henry and Everett Street be rescinded. After a lengthy discussion it was unanimously passed "that the building permit issued to Mr. Hawley for construction be rescinded and the matter be referred to the City Solicitor regarding the legal aspect of our by-law as regards location and if the Corporation can restrict the present business from operating and council be advised accordingly". It was shown in the discussion that although the recommendation allowing Mr. Hawley to proceed was passed by the council in committee on Thursday night it was not passed in open council to make it legal and between Thursday night and the regular meeting on Monday evening a permit had been issued to allow Mr. Hawley to proceed with the work. Mr. Liddle stated that the petition which he tables contained the names of 55 ratepayers of that district and they were strongly opposed to having a warehouse built in that neighborhood on account of the noises, the trucks working at late hours and the rats that infest buildings of that nature.

"We had that once", said Mr. Liddle, "and we do not want it again. The transports block traffic and we understand this company intends to run trucks from this warehouse where a fruit business is to be carried on.

Ald. Allin: "Was the motion passed by the committee?"

Mayor Follwell: "Yes".

Ald. Allin: "Was it legal before being passed in council?"

Mayor Follwell: "No."

Why Allowed to Start

Ald. Clapp: "Why was Mr. Hawley allowed to start the work the next day after the committee meeting and who authorized the permit to be issued? I said in committee there would be a petition because I would not want it there if I lived in that vicinity."

Ald. Woodley: "The council acceded to the request because there was no protest on Thursday night but the opinion of the council could change. I understand the permit has been issued."

Ald. McDougall: "I understand it is to be a cold storage plant and it was said there was no objection to it being placed there."

Ald. Thompson: "I was a member of the committee and I felt that if $6 000 was to be spent and there was no objection that it would help the city". The Alderman reviewed a cast that was before the council some time ago and suggested that the delegation go to the proprietor."

Mr. Liddle: "No matter what kind of a building it is we don't want it."

Ratepayers Strongly Object

Mr. Fairman: "The ratepayers in that district strongly object to the warehouse being placed here."

Ald. Clarke: "I was a member of the committee and we went over there and as there were no objections the council in committee passed the motion. The application for a permit was refused at a previous time."

Mayor Takes Objection

Ald. Butler: "He got his permit before being passed by the council.', Someone remarked that the council was passing the buck but the Mayor took strong objection to the remark and after more discussion when the same subject was rehashed many times a vote was taken and the amendment to the motion was carried and the original motion lost.

When the motion to give the market to the present lessee Ald. Follwell objected requesting that tenders be asked for this position. Ald. Woodley stated that Mr. Arnott was an experienced man and that the time was late and there would not be time to advertise for tenders. "Last year we advertised," said the Alderman, "and got one tender." Ald. Allin stated there were a lot of men back from overseas and they should be given a chance to tender if they wanted to. Ald. Follwell then introduced an amendment "that tenders be called for the leasing of the market but it was defeated and Mr. Arnott got the market at the same price as last year."

To Teach Children Safety

The Mayor announced that a start would be made on safety control when the police officers would start classes the first of the year in the schools. This announcement was made when members debated where the traffic light would be placed at the corner of William Street and Dundas Street or at the corner of Ann and Dundas. The former position prevailed although Ald. Clapp was much against this corner claiming that the children should come out of the front door of Ann Street school instead of the west and south doors. The snow plow equipment came in for some discussion and the following recommendation was passed.

Recommended that the city engineer, city comptroller and foreman proceed forthwith to make necessary alterations to one of sidewalk snow ploughs received, which is otherwise according to specifications as ordered, to make same available for immediate use.

Further that immediate contact be made by city engineer or comptroller, with the manufacturer of the plough received which was not according to specifications, and ascertain if the error in specifications can be rectified. In the event that error cannot be rectified that the original snow plough committee be reconvened with full power to act and deal with whatever situation may arise in connection therewith also road plowing equipment and truck.

Resolution Passed

Another recommendation was passed respecting the business of carrier of passengers and was unanimously passed. The resolution read—

"Whereas the business of carrier of passengers by public busses has become an international business on this continent

"And whereas passengers are taken on and discharged at street curbs resulting in congestion and impeding the normal movement of traffic and creating a hazard particularly to pedestrians.

"And whereas the carrier of passengers by public busses has increased until it has become the principal rival of the business of carrier by rail.

"And whereas for the safety of the public and the normal movement of traffic as well as in the best interests of the bus operators, passengers in urban municipalities should be taken on and discharged only at established terminals in such municipalities

"Therefore it is recommended that the department of highways grant licences or for the operation of busses for the business of carrier of passengers to such bus proprietors only as have provided bus terminals for the convenience of their patrons wherever it is proposed to take on and/or discharge passengers within the limits of urban municipalities that a copy of this recommendation be forwarded for the approval of the councils of all urban municipalities in the Province of Ontario for consideration and adoption

"That when adopted (a) a copy thereof be placed in the hands of the local member of the legislature for the district

(b) That the original thereof be forwarded to the Premier of Ontario and a copy to the Minister of Highways."

Comprehensive Report

A very comprehensive and concise report was given by Ald. Clapp, chairman of Regional Planning on the progress made on the Riverside Drive during his term of office and moved the payment of $600 for the City Solicitor for extra work done on this project.

The report is as follows:—

December 17th, 1945.

J. Wilfred Holmes, Esq.,
City Clerk,
City Hall, City.
Dear Sir:

Re: Proposed Riverside Drive

Pursuant to Council's instructions we have personally interviewed all owners of property along the proposed right of way as shown in the "List of property owners from whom the City requires a portion of their property for the development of "Riverside Drive" as prepared by the City Engineer. A copy of said last mentioned list is hereto annexed and marked Schedule "A".

So that the Council may have ample time at its disposal to make the necessary plans for the establishment of the highway and the consequent improvements the Options may be accepted at any time until the First day of July, 1946, and from and after the date of acceptance The Corporation of the City of Belleville shall have an additional 60 days in which to investigate and pass the titles.

As you are aware a number of the property owners, who are sympathetic towards the project, were prepared to grant to the City sufficient land for the right of way adjacent to the East bank of the River Moira and in that connection Options have been executed and are in our possession from the following property owners, namely:-

J. N. Yanover, pt. 54 & 55 (City No. 310).

Annis & Paulos pt. 54 (City No. 304).

Chas. L. Hyde pt. 52 (City No. 292).

Sam Pappas pt. 37 (City No.).

Can. Dept. Stores pt. 47 (City No. 270).

R. J. Wray pt. 54 (City No. 306).

J. B. Boyce Island.

Mrs. L. Allore pt. 63 and all of 64.

Mrs. Mary Jones pt. 52.

Mr. S. G. Robertson pt. lot 43.

The properties hereinbefore referred to may be acquired without the payment of consideration.

The owners of the properties listed in this paragraph have consented to give the land necessary for the right of way across their respective properties but for the reasons assigned opposite their respective names the Options have not yet actually been completed by delivery to this office-

1. Imperial Oil Limited—pts. 53 and 54; In this case the local Manager gave his assurance that his Company was favorably disposed and agreed to submit the Option to the Head Office of the Company, from which we hope to have a report in the near future.

2. The Thompson Estate—pt. lot 50; In this case Mr. Thompson intimated that he was interested in the promotion of the right of way and gave assurance that the Option would be forthcoming but the completion thereof will await a conference between Miss Thompson, Mr. John Thomoson of St. Catharines and Mr. T. C. Thompson. Mr. Thompson was of the opinion that the parties would meet before the end of the present year.

3. S. S. Kresge Co. Ltd—pt. lot 44; In connection with this property after interviews with the local Manager and considerable correspondence with the Head Office in Detroit an interview was arranged with Mr. John B. Hollister of the Company's Real Estate Department. Mr. Hollister was interested in the scheme and said that he believed his Company would be ready and willing to co-operate and after examining the premises with us returned to Detroit and promised to lay the matter before the Directors at their next meeting. Mr. Hollister assured us that he believed that fortified by the general information which we gave him that he would experience no difficulty in obtaining the consent of the Board of Directors to the Option.

Those property owners dealt with in this paragraph occupy rather unique positions in as much as the proposed right of way will interfere with revenue producing buildings on their property—hence to secure the proposed land payments will be necessary as follows, namely-

1. Chancey Ashley Estate—pts. 33 & 34—price quoted $20,000.
2. Joseph Legault—pts. lots 33 & 34—price quoted $20,000.
3. John W. Cook—pts. 35 & 36—price quoted $2,000.
4. Mrs. Effie Cummins—pt. 36—price quoted $5,000.
5. Blake Bedell—pt. 40—price quoted $7,000.
6. H. T. Adams—pt. 48—price quoted $2,800.
7. Joseph Rapino—pt. 2—price quoted $6,000.

In connection with the Domenico Estate property, upon part of which buildings have been erected, the Representatives of the Estate have suggested releasing the necessary land for the right of way for the 2 laneways leading to Front Street past the respective properties owned by the Estate, namely—parts of lots 39 and 49, and for which the Option has been executed.

It was not without considerable effort that the Options were secured, involving as it did much more time than was at first anticipated.

For co-operation and assistance we are grateful to the members of the Council and particularly to His Worship the Mayor, and to the Chairman of the Committee, and the City Engineer was always available and ready to give a helping hand and his contributions were most valuable and thankfully appreciated.

Respectfully submitted,
A. B. Collins,
City Solicitor.

Institute Mock Council.

Ex.-Mayor W. C. Mikel wrote a letter to the council asking that the Mock Council be again instituted so that young boys in the city could learn the procedure of council and take an interest in civic affairs. The letter speaks for itself and is as follows:—

Dec. 6, 1945

His Worship Mayor Follwell and Aldermen of the City of Belleville
Gentlemen,—

Some years ago at the request of a number of Citizens I formed a Mock Council of young lads about twelve to sixteen years of age, residents in Belleville for the purpose of training them in Municipal Matters and Procedure. The effort was quite successful in numbers and dissemination of knowledge, in fact, the present Mayor is a graduate of the Mock Council. Requests have again been made to establish a Mock Council to meet once a week on Friday nights

I would be glad if you would pass a resolution approving of this effort and giving the privilege of the City Building for this purpose.

Yours Sincerely,
W. C. Mikel.

Committee Reports.

The special committee appointed to investigate the offer of Mr. J. Goodman respecting the sale of lots on McDonald Avenue and Dufferin Avenue reported to the council as follows:—

Belleville 13th., 1945.

Alderman H. J. Clarke, B.A.,
Chairman of Finance and Special Property Committee,
City Council,
Belleville, Ont.
Dear Sir:—

Re: Sale of Lots to Mr. J. Goodman and Proposed Construction of Sewer on MacDonald Avenue.

As requested I beg to submit a report on the manner in which a sanitary sewer could be constructed to provide sewer facilities for the five lots, 46, 47, 48, 49 and 50 on the west side of MacDonald Avenue, which Mr. Goodman has offered to purchase from the Corporation. Lots 49, 50 and 51 on the east side of Dufferin Avenue are already served by the Dufferin Avenue sanitary sewer.

As there are 19 lots on the west side of MacDonald Avenue between Dundas and Bridge Street that do not have sanitary sewer facilities at the present time, plans could be laid out for the construction of a sanitary sewer on this street by constructing an outlet sewer across the lands between MacDonald and Dufferin Avenues, due to the topography of the land in this area, to empty into the Dufferin Avenue sewer. As the Dufferin Avenue sanitary sewer is drained by an outlet sewer across the lands into the Bleecker Avenue sanitary sewer, these existing main sewers and outlets would also serve to handle the sewage from the 19 lots on the west side of MacDonald Ave. The Bleecker Avenue sanitary sewer in turn empties into the Dundas Street trunk sewer. The cost of constructing the outlet sewer across the lands between MacDonald and Dufferin Avenues would have to be charged as part of the cost of the main sanitary sewer on MacDonald Avenue and assessed to the abutting frontage of the lots on the west side of MacDonald Avenue under the provisions of the Local Improvement Act.

This undertaking would have to be approved, first, by the Ontario Municipal Board and, secondly, by the Provincial Department of Health. The Municipal Board holds to the rule that either one lot in every four must have a dwelling already erected thereon or there must be a satisfactory guarantee that the required number of dwellings will definitely be erected immediately. I am quite certain we would have no difficulty in obtaining the approval of the Department of Health for this new sanitary sewer construction.

In order to construct the outlet sewer a 5' right-of-way would have to be obtained across two of the lots between MacDonald and Dufferin Avenues. These lots could be two of those included in the Goodman sale, as they are in the most adaptable location. The main sewer on MacDonald Avenue could be constructed just far enough along the street to serve the Goodman lots at the present time and then extended in both a northerly and southerly direction as the owners of the remaining lots requested sewer facilities. This suggestion would depend on the ruling of the Ontario Municipal Board. By constructing the main sanitary sewer all along MacDonald Avenue from a point in front of Lot 56 to a point 100' south of Bridge Street it would provide sewer facilities for the whole 19 lots along the west side of the street. As the east side of MacDonald Avenue is in Thurlow Township it is prohibited from connecting to the MacDonald Avenue sewer by resolution of the City Council passed this year. A petition would greatly assist the construction of this new sewer.

Another point that should be given consideration by this Council is the fact that a natural storm water course in the form of an open ditch crosses the property which Mr. Goodman has offered to purchase. This water course must not be stopped up by filling in. It may be tiled with pipe of sufficient size and laid on a proper grade to adequately handle the average maximum flow of surface water which is forced in this direction, and then filled in, if desired. If this property is sold to Mr. Goodman or to any other party the agreement of sale should contain a clause pertaining to this natural water course that will protect the Corporation's interest.

The attached sketch shows the location in red of the proposed new sanitary sewer on MacDonald Avenue and the outlet sewer across the land to the Dufferin Avenue sanitary sewer and the lots Mr. Goodman has offered to purchase.

Yours respectfully,
Charles A. Mott,
City Engineer.

Report Tabled.

The report by Jamieson Bone, representative of the city on the Suburban Roads Commission, for the year 1945 was tabled without discussion.

The report follows:—

December 14/1945

The Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Belleville,
Ontario.

Re: Hastings-Belleville Suburban Roads Commission

Dear Sirs,—

As your commissioner of Suburban Roads I beg to report for the year 1945 as follows:

We estimated that the amount required would be 7500.00, but, owing to shortage of labor and materials the amount spent was $4575.15. We also tried to do nothing but necessary maintenance and repairs. I understand that you already have received your bill from the County Engineer and that your share is $1233.04.

I would like to draw the attention of the Aldermen to the road on the north side of the C. N. R. track running from the Corbyville Road to the Round House. Many of you will remember that this road has been a constant source of complaints for at least 25 years until taken over by our

For them... A REAL HOLIDAY!
Our friends from the States have always enjoyed fishing the waters of Ontario . . . 73,000 angling permits were bought by them in one year. When they return, let's give them a great welcome!
WHAT CAN I DO?
Those who deal directly with tourists, such as hotelkeepers, guides, know what visitors appreciate. They might suggest:
1. Find out all about what your neighbourhood offers, and become a booster.
2. Write your friends in the States about Ontario . . . show them when they come you're really proud of it.
3. Try to make any visitor glad he came.
4. Take time to give requested information fully and graciously.
5. In business dealings, remember our reputation for courtesy and fairness depends on you.
6. To sum it up, follow the "Golden Rule."
IT'S EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS . . . it's good business!
Worth his weight in gold! Actually, the Province of Ontario, in pre-war years, profited to almost the same extent from tourist business as it did from the much publicized gold mining industry. It is up to each of us individually to see that this business goes on growing.
This diagram, based on figures supplied by the Hotel Association, shows how everyone benefits from the Ontario tourist income. Every tourist dollar is shared this way . . . 1. Hotels; 2. Retail stores; 3. Restaurants; 4. Taxes, etc; 5. Amusements; 6. Garages.

WEDDINGS

SHERIDAN—VANCE

A pretty wedding took place in Stirling, on Dec. 15, at 11 a.m. when Father LeSage united in marriage Phyllis Jean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Vance, and John, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sheridan.

The bride was radiant in a gown of traditional white satin with net overskirt and satin appliqued bows. Her veil fell in soft folds to her fingertips and she carried Talisman roses. She was attended by the groom's sister, Mrs. Adrian Murphy, Port Hope, who wore a gown of baby blue moire silk with white net overskirt and blue fingertip veil. She carried pink roses.

The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Arthur Sheridan, Kingston.

The wedding dinner was held at the home of the bride's parents, which was decorated with pink and white streamers and mauve 'mums. The bride's mother wore a dress of black mesh crepe with an overpattern in pale blue. The groom's mother wore an ensemble of mauve crepe. Frank Harding sang "My Task" and "All Joy Be Thine" accompanied by Margaret Bateman.

For the wedding trip by car to Detroit, the bride donned a suit of airforce blue with brown accessories.

Out-of-town guests present were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sheridan, Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Murphy and Anne, Port Hope, Mr. Arthur Sheridan, Kingston, and Miss Margaret Bateman, Belleville.

Something different always attracts attention, so, instead of the time-honored black with snowy ermine, one designer created afternoon-into-evening suits of navy or brown wool with ermine trimming. Very, very attractive and smart!

Women's Activities

ROSLIN W.I.

Roslin.—The December meeting of the Women's Institute was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. Chisholm with ten ladies present.

The President was in charge. Plans were made to sell tickets on a basket of groceries.

Mrs. F. C. Beazer gave a paper on the Spirit of Christmas.

Mrs. C. Chapman gave a reading.

Mrs. H. Sills gave a report of the Officers' Rally, which was held in the Front Road United Church recently and which several of the members attended. Refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants and a social time was enjoyed.

CANNIFTON W.A.

The Dec. meeting of the Cannifton W.A., was held in the Sunday School rooms. The dinner was in charge of Mrs. Holgate and Mrs. Rogers. After a bounteous repast the meeting was opened with the President, Mrs. Harry Farnham in charge.

Mrs. Trumpour gave an interesting talk on Stewardship. Mrs. Furmidge sang a solo, "Holy Night", accompanied by Mrs. H. Empson at the piano.

The Treasurer's report was given for the past year by Mrs. F. Putman. Rev. Mr. Trumpour then took charge. He thanked the ladies for their help and assistance in the work of the church and conducted the election of officers for the New Year, which are as follows:

President, Mrs. H. Farnham.
Vice President, Mrs. H. Empson

Rev. Mr. McCallum installed the officers and offered prayer. A vote of thanks was given to Mrs. R. Thrasher for her splendid leadership during the past two years.

The program for the afternoon, under the leadership of Mrs. Thrasher, was a candlelighting service and was most impressive, with Mrs. Kelley reading an appropriate poem, and above the gaily Christmas-decorated fireplace candles were lit. Scripture readings were given by Mrs. MacDonald, Mrs. D. Thrasher, Mrs. R. Hart, and Mrs. M. Nobes, interspersed with singing by Mrs. P. Sutherland. Mrs. S. May also gave a reading. The hostess assisted by her daughter, Anna, served dainty refreshments and a social half hour enjoyed. Many comments were heard from members, of the good fellowship, that prevailed during the meetings, and all were optimistic of a very successful happy time in the year 1946.

ALBURY W.I.

Albury.—A number of ladies attended the Institute meeting at the home of Mrs. Henry Montgomery on Thursday evening. Everyone enjoyed the lovely Christmas program. Mr. and Mrs. E. McKay played a lovely duet on the piano. Exchange of Christmas gifts was enjoyed.

Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants. Collection was taken going for the British Junior Christmas Cheer Fund, $5.90. A vote of thanks was extended to the hostess for opening her home.

CENTENARY W.A.

Centenary.—The W.A. held the December meeting at the home of Mrs. J. Ray with an attendance of 23. The meeting was opened with the singing of two Christmas carols.

Mrs. B. Roblin led in the devotional period bringing a splendid Christmas message.

The President, Mrs. Harry Roblin turned the meeting over to Rev. Mr. McCallum for election of officers. The convener of the Nominating Committee, Mrs. E. Ray, read the names of the officers chosen for 1946. These names met the approval of the members, and the following were elected for 1946:

Hon. Pres., Mrs. H. Roblin
President, Mrs. L. Hall
1st Vice Pres., Mrs. E. Ray
2nd Vice Pres, Mrs. H. Blakley
Secretary, Mrs. R. Edmondson.

Assistant Organist, Mrs. F. Aikens, Mrs. R. Hart.
Press Reporter, Mrs. R. Edmondson.

Mrs. J. Kelley moved a vote of thanks to the retiring president for her years of faithful service as president of the society.

Rev. Mr. McCallum and Mrs. H. Roblin welcomed the new president and wished her a successful year.

Christmas Concerts

Bridge Street United Church

ON Friday evening Bridge Street United Church Sunday School held its annual Christmas Concert under the chairmanship of Mr. Taylor Franklin. The greeting was extended by Marion Rowland followed by a chorus "Christmas is Coming," sung by the school. Readings were given by two pupils, "It Wouldn't Do At All" by Jimmy Dolan, and "A Timely Wish" by John Tate. "Upside Down" was presented by the following pupils, Richard Bird, Jimmy Campbell, Charles Rowbotham, Thomas Reid, Melville Semain, Mary Catherine Clare, Patricia Rowland, Douglas Heard, Beverley Faulkner, Barbara Ireland and Morris Huddleston; "Blackbird Pie" by the Beginners' Department was greatly enjoyed. "Ten Little Christmas Bells" were Donald Cathers, Doreen Embury, Edward Delleuw, Judith Anderson, Carol Osborne, Lois Parnell, Diane Martin, Sandra Randall, Freddy Hagerman and Patricia Brearley.

A Santa Claus number was presented by the following, Sydna Vermilyea, Patsy Ireland, Margaret Ann Robbins, Bobby Anderson, Frances Dickens, Beth Follwell, Gwethelyn Cathers, Donald Deacon, Nancy Osborne and Barbara Joan Fairman. Lois Kemp, Barbara Joan Fairman, Carolyn Franklin, Sharon Thompson, Donna La France, Judith Anderson, Barbara Joan Bird, Cynthia and Penelope Grills sang "Bye Baby". A Christmas drill was given by Douglas Heard, Carol Rowland, Donna LaFrance, Barrie Riddell. Nancy Sherman, Arnold Barclay, Kenneth Smith, Frank Chick and Nancy Osborne.

Soldiers in a colorful soldier drill were Bobby Miller, Robert Brearley, John Tate, Frank Chick, Freddy Hagerman, John Sherry, Jimmy Mather, Jimmy Murphy, Freddy Deacon, Jackie Hill, Douglas Walters and Larry Langlois. Following a reading, "Bundles" by Margaret Arnott, a group of pretty little "Mechanical Dolls" performed. Included in this group were Willow Wilkes, Carol Osborne, Sharon Hunter, Dearma Mansfield, Pauline Hall and Gloria Read.

The highlights of the evening's entertainment was the skit entitled "The Tale the Fir Told." The following parts were played: Story teller, Suzanne Smith; Virgin Mary, Shirley Stewart; Joseph, Morris Huddleston; Wise Men, Lionel Bovay, Freddy Deacon and Robert Brearley; Child, June Scott; Angels, Patsy Mairs, Willow Wilkes, Pauline Hall, Gloria Read; Shepherds, Larry Farrar, Freddy Hagerman, Jimmy Campbell.

The evening was closed by a visit from Santa Claus, who had a well-filled pack and a gift for everyone.

HOSPITAL AUXILIARY

The Hospital Auxiliary held its regular meeting on Thursday, Dec. 13, with Mrs. H. Wray, the president, in the chair. After the usual reports, Miss Horton, superintendent of Nurses, gave an account of the Indigent Fund. It was decided to continue the notice of meeting cards to members and interested friends. A letter was read that is being sent out to the women's organizations of Belleville and district.

Plans were started for the annual bridge with Mrs. J. Galloway being appointed convener. Mr. Barclay told of the finishing of the rooms on second floor and the members of the auxiliary were taken to see the pleasing results. Mrs. Galloway reported for the committee on the gifts bought for indigent patients for Christmas.

CENTENARY SUNDAY SCHOOL

On Wednesday evening, December 12th., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Edmondson, the annual meeting of Centenary Sunday School was held with a fair teachers in attendance.

On suggestion from the pastor Rev. Mr. McCallum and as a unanimous opinion the officers and teachers were returned en bloc to serve for the coming year. In addition the personnel was increased slightly to strengthen some of the departments.

Some of the younger numbers who had attended the Retreat at Stirling, gave helpful and enthusiastic reports of the meetings, and were enjoyed by all.

After the closing of the business portion of the meeting by the Superintendent Mr. Edgar Ray, a pleasant social hour was enjoyed and dainty refreshments served by the hostess.

Have You A Problem Head

THEN HERE IS WHAT WE DO:

First carefully analyze the hair. For it may be too oily, too dry, too soft, too hard and brittle—it may be spongy and porous—the cuticle may be damaged. When the root of the problem is known it is a more simple matter to put the hair once more in good condition. THEN you can be assured of a really successful PERMANENT.

Why we can't say MERRY CHRISTMAS with ORIENT* NYLONS

Santa's sorry... we're all sorry... but there just won't be any Canadian-made nylons for Christmas. However, the mills are humming and we're getting on with the job as fast as we can. And the new Orient* Beauti-Skin* nylon creations will be the loveliest sheers you have ever seen.

To avoid panic buying which has resulted elsewhere, arrangements are being made to release initial offerings of all mills at the same time, in a manner to ensure fair distribution to everyone. This should occur sometime in February.

Meanwhile, we wish you as Merry a Christmas as you can have without Orient* nylons, and a New Year made happier by them.

COUNCIL TURNS

Commission. Formerly being the boundary line between the City and the Township it was nobody's baby and was constantly flooded during the spring breakup and was at times impassable. It is now a first-class surface and has been well drained, the ditch going under the C.N.R. track having been all cleaned out and widened. This road needed practically no maintenance this year.

One tank car of asphalt primer was used on the road running westerly from Belleville 5A on south side of C.N.R. track. From the railway north 1½ miles, which comes under out jurisdiction, used calcium chloride treatment. This road needs grading and ditching badly, but will have to be widened first by setting back the fences. Where the road runs along the track there has been a lot of trouble by reason of the dwellings on the south side of the road having water in their basements. Last year we used some few hundred feet of perforated metal drain pipe there, which remedied the trouble as far as this could possibly be done. We ordered 730' more of this pipe, to continue this drain easterly but delivery was not received until late September and the weather since has not been suitable.

The road running from C. N. R. station easterly on south side of the tracks was filled and graded last year. Part of this road in the vicinity of the C.N.R. water tank crossing was too low and some filling and grading was done this year with the idea of paving this particular road in 1946. 1700 cu. yds. of earth fill was placed there and also a small amount of fill near the junction of Herchimer Ave. Crushed rock was used to resurface these two sections and two new metal pipe culverts were installed.

The usual maintenance including snow fencing and snow clearing was carried out as far as could be done with the amount of labor available.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Yours very truly,
Jamieson Bone.
Hastings - Belleville Suburban Roads Committee.

Committee Named.

A committee of Aldermen Hyde, Thompson and Wilbur was appointed to investigate the proposed sale of a lot on East Moira Street to the Whalen Dairy. Mayor Follwell, the Chief of Police and the Comptroller were again appointed to constitute the Traffic Committee. The City Solicitor was authorized to prepare the necessary by-law for the collection of garbage on special assessment basis as provided for in the Municipal Act and recommended in committee report and adopted by the council particulars and details to be completed by Solicitor and Comptroller. A letter was received from the Mines and Forest Department that the suggestion of having a MacKenzie Bowell monument in Belleville was being considered by that department. H. J. McFarland Construction Company was ordered paid $2,800 for backfilling a local improvement project.

Many Inquiries.

Under the heading of inquiries Ald. Hyde suggested that instead of spending a large sum for outdoor rinks each year that some arrangement be made with the management of the Hume Arena to place an artificial ice plant in and draw up an agreement for the use of the rink by city for the children. Ald. Follwell was opposed and the Mayor stated that Belleville should have a permanent recreation centre and one with artificial ice. Ald. Clarke read from the letter in the local paper condemning the council for selling lots for a trifling sum and which also stated that the houses that were built on the lots were not worth anything. The Alderman said "I think it is smart. In the six years I have been chairman of the Special Property Committee 300 to 400 lots have been sold at from $25 to $600 and nearly 300 homes have been built with an assessment of over one million dollars, which gives to the city $35,000 a year more in taxes. There have been houses built on these lots worth up to $10,000."

Work Praised.

Ald. Butler: "The statements made in the letter were about as accurate as other statements that have been made from time to time." Mr. Clarke and his committee were praised for the work that has been done.

Ald. Thompson inquired as to when there would be ice on the public skating rinks and he was answered by Ald. Clapp, who stated that the City Engineer had been given full instructions and if the work was not done it was somebody's fault. Ald. Follwell asked why the B.C.I. could not get water for the rink at that school and requested the Mayor to take it up with the Public Utilities Commission.

Mayor Answers Question.

Ald. Chamberlain wanted to know upon whose authority the fire department went to the fire at Mr. Leeman's home in Thurlow Township and the Mayor said "I take the responsibility." Ald. Thompson stated that the brigade could not go out of the city and Mayor Follwell stated "that only applies to Sidney Township but otherwise the Mayor or the Chairman of Fire has the right to send the brigade to Thurlow Township under the by-law.

Vote of Thanks.

A vote of thanks to the Mayor for the conduct of the council during the past year was ably moved by Ald. Clarke and seconded by Ald. Thompson. Mayor Follwell thanked the members for the kind words and congratulated the council for their loyal support. "Probably we have made mistakes but we have made them honestly," said His Worship. He regretted that the money by-law for the construction of a sewage disposal plant had been turned down but he stated "It was the will of the people and that will must prevail. He expressed his regrets that Aldermen Clapp and Allin were leaving the council and praised them for the work they had done while members of the official body.

So heavy was the agenda that the time was extended three times during the evening and the council did not adjourn until the early hours of the morning.

GUNMAN POSES AS PATIENT

London, Ont., Dec. 18 (CP)—A lone gunman posing as a patient held up Dr. I. D. Wilson at his office on Queens Avenue yesterday and escaped with $50 in cash. The man entered Dr. Wilson's office as he was about to close for the day, whipped out a revolver and demanded the money.

Red Cross Report

The monthly meeting of the executive of the Bellevile Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society was held on Dec 13, with Mr. M. P. Duff presiding.

It was reported that articles left from the Blood Donor Clinic had been sent to outpost hospitals at Bancroft, Apsley and Whitney, where they are much appreciated. Some sixty other sample articles are also to be sent.

The president read communications dealing with:

Mr. John Marsh as new commissioner for Ontario.

The Peace Time Program for Red Cross.

A donation of $50 from Picton Branch towards the Reception Centre at C.N.R. Station, Belleville.

An American Red Cross film, "Pride of the Marines", which will appear in Belleville, Jan. 30, to Feb. 1.

In the absence of the treasurer the bills were authorized to be paid after proper certification.

Sincere regret was expressed at the illness of Mr. J. G. Hornsby, liaison officer for Red Cross.

Rev. A. Smith, Liaison Officer

Rev. F. A. Smith, rector of St. Thomas Church, was appointed liaison officer.

Miss J. Tiskell reported on a divisional executive meeting attended in November.

A Nominating Committee for 1946 officers was appointed.

Reporting for the Committee on Awards, Mrs. Kinnear stated that it had been decided to ask for no awards from the Belleville branch, as it was felt it was quite impossible to distinguish between many faithful workers in both rural and urban units. A request was made for workers' pins however.

Committee Report

The report of the Women's Work Committee presented by the Chairman, Mrs. W. C. Mikel, follows:

A special quota of 150 hospital sheets was made and shipped during November. Hospital supplies numbering 166 were sent to Red Cross Hospitals at Bancroft, Whitney and Ansley.

The work of the Red Cross was somewhat disrupted this fall on account of moving to the new quarters. The present ones are very satisfactory and comfortable though the distance from the centre of the city has caused many of our friends and workers to find the situation not as convenient as the Campbell St. quarters.

We are hoping that after Christmas they will find their way to us again as we need their assistance to finish work on hand which must be shipped by March 31st.

The Branch has received an urgent request from the Ontario Division to accept a quota for layettes, each containing 23 articles. Thousands of such are needed. As the Belleville branch is considered one of the largest branches, it is felt that we should do our share in this work. The goods have been received to make 60 layettes.

Trains Committee Report

The "Trains Comimttee" of the Ontario Division of the Red Cross Society issues the following in its report for Jan. 1, 1945 to Oct. 31, 1945:

21 hospital trains with 3,150 all ranks have been conducted from Montreal to destination by the Red Cross Conducting Officer; 54 troop trains with approximately 26,050 other ranks for Military District No. 2; 18 troop trains with approximately 5,400 other ranks to Military District No. 1, i.e. London; Air Force trains with 2,200 other ranks; 5 troop trains to M.D. 1 and 2 from the Queen Mary via Niagara Falls; Troop trains western personnel from the Queen Mary serviced in Toronto and conducted to Winnipeg.

On these trains the Red Cross distributed local newspapers, cigarettes, matches, pipe tobacco, pipes, gum, candies and fruit in season.

With possibly one exception, Red Cross has been represented on every Troop Train coming into Ontario.

Returning British prisoners of war have been serviced in Port Arthur and Fort William, Sudbury, North Bay and Windsor and in one instance in Toronto some 375 British P.O.W. were each given a sweater, socks, woollen gloves, safety razor, toilet articles, cigarettes, pipes, pipe tobacco, matches, hard candy, chocolate bars, newspapers, coffee and doughnuts and all this in 45 minutes flat.

Civilian Repats.

In the early spring a train of some 250 British men, women and children repats from Japan, en route to England, handled under security, were given in Toronto a supply of medical articles, candies, chocolates, cigarettes, milk, tea, etc. This group had previously been completely clothed and outfitted by the American Red Cross.

Almost every other morning on the regular Vancouver trains on the C. P. R. and C. N. R., individual P.O.W.s are arriving in Toronto. Their needs are looked after exclusively by the Red Cross.

Dependents

During these ten months the following dependents were looked after: Toronto brides, 869, children 481; Ontario brides, 983, children 476.

Red Cross switchboard in Union Station, Toronto, operates six phones in normal periods, ten to twelve when troops are arriving That prompt accurate information is given is attested by the fact that when a D.O.C. was expecting his two sons from the Queen Mary in New York enroute to Regina it was Red Cross Train Enquiry be called or information and it was accurate.

The amount spent up to June 30, including paid staff on these services was only $11,997.76.

Stalin Returns As Ministers Confer in Moscow

By EDDY GILMORE

Moscow, Dec. 18 —(AP)— Premier Stalin, rested by a long vacation, was back at his desk today as the foreign ministers of Russia, Britain and the United States prepared for their third formal session on world problems with a feeling of reserved optimism.

Stalin returned from his 68-day holiday yesterday, just four days before his 66th birthday, and plunged immediately into his duties as President of the Council of People's Commissars.

His long absence from the Kremlin had given rise to rumors abroad that he was ill, but these reports had been denied both by Soviet officials and by the United States ambassador, W. Averell Harriman, who visited him at his Black Sea retreat near Sochi.

Harriman reported on his return that he had found Stalin in excellent health and enjoying his holiday. Similar assurances as to the Premier's health were given two days ago to State Secretary Byrnes and Foreign Secretary Bevin by high Soviet officials.

Stalin's return was announced by a brief statement published in all Moscow newspapers.

The announcement came as the "Big Three" foreign ministers, meeting here since Sunday, finished their preliminary talks and prepared to get down to discussion of some of the basic issues of world peace and prosperity which were believed to be on their agenda.

The ministers were scheduled to meet for their third regular session at 4 p.m. (9 a.m., E.S.T.)

Both Mr. Byrnes and Mr. Bevin were said by diplomatic observers to have emerged from yesterday's meeting with a feeling of reserved optimism, looking not so much for concrete agreement in the future sessions as for a free exchange of ideas on such problems as control of atomic energy and a better understanding between the great powers.

Yesterday's meeting, presided over by Foreign Commissar Molotov as permanent chairman, lasted two hours and 15 minutes. There was no announcement of the progress made, but an observer said the ministers met in an atmosphere of "serious, business-like discussion." The three conferees left the meeting in what appeared to be good humor.

Ford Strikers Taking Second Settlement Ballot

Windsor, Dec. 18 — (CP) — The longest strike in the history of Canada's automotive industry moved into a new and more hopeful phase today as Ford Motor Company workers opened a two-day ballot which may return 10,000 employees to jobs they left Sept. 12 in a union security strike called by Local 200 of the United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.).

Voters were to answer "yes" or "no" to the question: "Do you favor the government plan to end the strike?"

Balloting was to take place from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. today and Wednesday in four separate places. Booths were located so as to eliminate complaints which arose from a previous ballot at Windsor Arena Nov. 29 in which workers rejected the government's negotiation-plus-arbitration formula, with 52 per cent voting against the plan and 48 per cent in favor.

Some union leaders who subsequently favored a second ballot said the first vote was not fully representative of union membership since only about 5,000 participated compared with union membership of 8,500. The second ballot was sanctioned at a meeting here Sunday.

In addition to the 8,500 Ford local employees, an estimated 1,500 Ford workers have been idle in the 98-day strike which hinges on demands for union shop and dues check-off. Some 8,000 other Windsor area automobile workers who left work in sympathy strikes since have returned to their jobs.

Umpire of Labor

The government plan — submitted after a lengthy series of proposals, rejections and counter-proposals by company and union —calls for a return to work followed by negotiation and arbitration on all points in dispute.

An umpire of labor relations would be appointed under the plan to ensure strikers returned to work without discrimination. The formula also calls for appointment of an arbitrator whose decision would be final on disputed points not settled by negotiation. If possible the arbitrator's decision would be given within five days after start of arbitration.

On relatively minor points of dispute, such as hospital insurance, two weeks' vacation with pay, increased rates of pay for overtime, creation of various plant committees, injury allowance, promotion or demotion and grievance procedure, agreement would be reached by negotiation in some cases and by arbitration in others.

The arbitrator would be chosen from the Supreme Court of Canada.

The present strike is the longest and most serious of four major work stoppages which have marked four years of troubled relations between the company and Local 200 since they first signed a collective bargaining agreement Jan. 15, 1942.

The first occurred Nov. 24-30, 1942, over the issue of equal pay for equal work. In April, 1943, plant No. 1 was closed four days over speed-up charges - and in 1944, from April 20-May 10, the Ford works closed again in a dispute over interpretation of grievance procedure in the bargaining contract.

CRIMINAL NEGLIGENCE CHARGED

Montreal, Dec. 18 (CP)—Zotique Chaput, 52, was arraigned before Judge Maurice Tetreau here yesterday on a charge of criminal negligence in connection with the death of his wife Friday. He was ordered for preliminary inquiry Friday, and was allowed his freedom on two bails of $950 each, or a deposit of $1,000.

HANK BOROWY LEADING HURLER NATIONAL LOOP

Has Best Earned-Run Average and Best Won and Lost Rating

By JOE REICHLER

New York, Dec. 18—(AP)—Hank Borowy, whose mid-season purchase from New York Yankees helped Chicago Cubs gain their first pennant in seven years, led all national league pitchers in earned-run and won-and-lost ratings for 1945, official baseball figures disclosed today.

Waived out of the American league by Yankees president Larry MacPhail because of his "inability to go the route after July 4," Borowy not only completed 11 of his 14 starting assignments for the Cubs, but became the first senior circuit hurler since Cincinnati's Elmer Riddle in 1941 to capture both the earned-run and won-and-lost honors.

In winning 11 and losing two for an .846 percentage, Borowy allowed only 2.14 earned runs a game, a fraction of a run better than teammate Claude Passeau's 2.46, with five others bettering the 3.00 par for the nine-inning course.

St. Louis' Harry Brecheen, runner-up to Borowy in the won and lost department, ranked next in earned runs with 2.52 followed by Bucky Walters of Cincinnati (2.68) and Hank Wyse of the Cubs (2.69). Pittsburgh's Preacher Roe was sixth at 2.87 and Ken Burkhart, another Redbird, ranked seventh at 2.90.

Charlie (Red) Barrett, another two-team hurler, won the most victories. His 23 triumphs for Boston Braves and Cardinals was one more than the total Wyse, the loop's only other 20-game winner, could muster.

Barrett, who was thrown in as excess baggage by the Braves in the celebrated Mort Cooper deal, also pitched the most complete games, 24, and the most innings, 285, faced the most batsmen, 1,175 and allowed the most hits, 287.

Passeau, whose one-hitter against Detroit tied a world series record last fall, pitched the most shutouts, five and enjoyed the longest winning streak, nine games.

BLACK HAWKS START DRIVE TO TAKE CANADIENS

Can Move Into First Place Tie by Defeating Habitants in Windy City

(By The Canadian Press)

Chicago Black Hawks, buoyed by a record of 21 goals in their last three games and a seasonal scoring average of 4.9 per game, renew their challenge to the leading Montreal Canadiens Wednesday in one of two scheduled National Hockey League games.

The high-scoring Hawks soared to the top in the opening days of the race, stayed there for three weeks and then dropped back to third as Canadiens and Detroit Red Wings took over the pace-making.

But Chicago nosed back into second place last week and can move into a first-place tie by defeating Canadiens in tonight's contest at Chicago Stadium. Canadiens, now holding a two-point lead, have played 18 games compared with 17 for Chicago.

On the other hand if the Hawks lost to Canadiens, the Windy City entry may be forced to share 2nd-place with Boston Bruins. Boston, defeated only once since Nov. 10 and unscathed on home ice against all teams except Detroit, entertain New York Rangers at Boston Garden in Wednesday's second N.H.L. fixture.

Boston now is in third place, two points behind Chicago and a point ahead of fourth-place Detroit. The run-down Rangers are in the cellar, five points behind fifth-place Toronto who trail Detroit by two games.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Dec. 18 — (CP) — It-isn't-official-yet dept.: The Canadian Professional Golfers Association has a bid from Winnipeg interests for a $10,000 Open Golf tournament there next summer, with expenses to be underwritten by W. C. McCallum, Winnipeg businessman. Before any decision can be made U.S.P.G.A. dates will have to be known so the projected Winnipeg tourney, if sanctioned, can be fitted into the summer program . . . there's a report that A. A. Burridge will retire shortly as president of the Ontario Physical Fitness Council ... plans for the International Hockey Hall of Fame at Kingston envisage construction of a vast community memorial centre which would cost the city $100,000, including an estimated $50,000 outlay for the Hall of Fame section.

There must be something about prize fighters. First Jack Dempsey bowled the press over in a whirlwind trip through Ontario and Quebec. Now Ken (Vancouver Province) McConnell says of Joe Louis:

"Louis is one of the nicest guys we have met in more than a decade of beetling around with sports characters . . . He is a world champion and ours, too."

Joe Krakauskas of Hamilton, who pitched for Cleveland Indians and Washington Senators before joining the armed services, still is in England. He says he's eagerly awaiting the day when he can return to Cleveland and pitch for manager Lou Boudreau . . . all but three members on the University of Michigan hockey team are Canadians. The Canucks are Wally Gacek and Sam Steadman of Winnipeg, Dick Starrack and Gordon MacMillan of Moose Jaw, Sask., Bill Jacobson, Saskatoon, Bob Arnot, Regina, Conny Hill of Copper Cliff, Ont., Bob Marshall, North Bay, Ont., and two Toronto players, goalie Jack MacInnes and Ross Smith.

Vancouver race tracks pioneered the electric starting gate and the photo finish and may be credited with a third innovation this season — the totalizator. Johnny Park of the Vancouver Province says the British Columbia Turf Club, that new outfit in which Bing Crosby has an interest, "has the inside track for a tote board, which enables the racing fan to follow the fluctuations in the betting as each wager is recorded."

A FEW DROPS quickly relieve distress

Warning- Watch out for sniffly Head Colds!

Head colds can cause much suffering. To promptly relieve the sniffly, sneezy, stuffy distress—put a little Va-tro-nol up each nostril. Va-tro-nol works right where trouble is to soothe irritation—reduce swelling—make breathing easier. Try it! Also helps prevent many colds from developing if used in time. Follow directions in folder.

HOCKEY HORNS TOOTIN'

With the advent of colder weather, ice-makers of the city and district are rushing operations in the covered arenas where the hoarse shouts of the hockey faithful will soon be heard as the winter pastime gets under way.

Throughout the county hockey organizations are springing into life and reports from the far-flung sections of the district would indicate that the sport is due for an unprecedented boom this winter.

• • •

Nearly sixty hockey enthusiasts met at Marmora the other day and injected some life-giving organization vitamins into the dormant Trent Valley Hockey League. Back in the roaring twenties, or was it thirties, the Trent Valley loop was productive of some good shinny and the fans from all parts of the district took in the games. Bill Shannon, Marmora, was named president, Art Duncan, vice president and W. Hamilton, Marmora High School principal, secretary treasurer. Four teams, Batawa, Campbellford, Tweed and Marmora have entered thus far and it is expected others will join the loop in the near future. These may include Trenton, Norwood and possibly Madoc and Stirling.

• • •

Tweed has the ground work of a smart junior O.H.A. squad and with Glen Brydson, former Montreal Maroon and Chicago Black Hawk as coach, the kids might throw some startling surprises when the curtain goes up on the 1945-46 hockey drama.

• • •

Jack Devine, member of the sports staff who attended the game last Sat eve has this to say about what he thinks of the N.H.L. set-up of play. He saw the game between Maple Leafs and Detroit Redwings last Saturday night and here is his opinion:

The question everyone is asking these days is "What's wrong with the Leafs?" That was before the Leafs picked up five out of six possible points in their last three games.

From a casual observer, there's not much wrong with the Leafs that isn't wrong with the other clubs in the National Hockey League—the type of hockey they are forced to play with the new rules in effect.

Saturday night's game was typical apparently. According to this year's standard, it was a dandy. To a Leaf fan of a few years back, it wasn't big league calibre at all.

The precision timing of a few years back is "out the window" when the play is in the centre zone. For the most part, it's nothing but scrambly hockey, the type the kids used to play on the corner lots. The sad part of it is, the players are forced, by the rule changes, to play this slap-bang type of game.

• • •

It's pathetic to see a smooth skating, adept stickhandling star like "Syl" Apps having to resort to such a game. Don't kid yourself that Apps is slipping. He's just as good as he ever was, if not, better. "Sweeny" Schriner is just as smooth as ever although he may have slowed up a little.

The "centre zone" hockey is terrible. Once over the blue line however, things get back to normal and the players can get back to the old smooth passing and "heady" play. The Leaf goals Saturday night were master-pieces, all smooth passing efforts with the exception of Bodnar's which was as pretty a solo effort as has been seen for a long time.

Detroit's counter was the scrambly type. The players were skating around like chorus girls in a theatre fire. McCool didn't have a chance. Everyone on the ice except Lumley in the Detroit net and "Hal" Jackson, former Indianapolis star, who was at the Leaf blue line, was standing in front of him. The puck somehow got out to Jackson who rifled it thru' the maze of players including McCool, to spoil a much deserved shutout.

The teams have the fans who are giving them lots of support. The teams have the players who are capable of playing real hockey. The solution then, for the ailments of the Leafs in particular and the league in general, is, from this spectator's point of view, to revert back to the old centre zone rules. It will make for speedier, smoother, more scientific and more crowd-pleasing hockey.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT

New York, Dec. 18 (AP)—This pillar, as I understand it, generally starts off with some item of lasting interest, such as the fact that Doc Blanchard of Army is expected to prove himself an even better extra-point kicker next season than was his teammate, Dick Walterhouse, who graduates. The point being, of course, that Walterhouse was so good at it that he was called, with a minimum of originality, "automatic Walterhouse."

Deprecating the bad press racing has been getting lately because of an outburst of doping cases, the editor comments (jokingly, of course) that "any minute now, somebody is going to suggest that the brass band for the sake of consistency ought to play 'Limehouse Blues' instead of 'My Old Kentucky Home' when the field comes out for the Derby and the starting gates should fly open to the accompaniment of somebody kicking a gong rather than the usual electric bell."

Sports editor Edwin Pope of the Athiens, Ga., Banner Herald, points out that in 40 games against each other, Georgia has scored 391 points and Georgia Tech 388. "If that isn't the closest scoring series in history, I'll give you the shirt off my back," he says. Don't get reckless Edwin, say we. Have you tried to buy a shirt lately?

Palace Denies Story Princess to Visit U. S. Next Month

London, Dec. 18 — (Reuters)—Buckingham Palace Monday categorically denied a report that Princess Elizabeth would visit the United States next month.

The story arose from a report in an American newspaper that Prime Minister Attlee was urging British tours of the United States to cement Anglo-American understanding, and that Princess Elizabeth would be one of the first visitors.

Alvin (Bo) McMillin, gridiron coach of University of Indiana was honored again yesterday when he was named "coach of the year" on 64 of the 164 ballots in a poll of mentors conducted by the New York World-Telegram. Second in the voting was Col. Earl (Red) Blaik of the Army team who gained the runner-up position last year. Lou Little of Columbia was third and Jimmy Phelan of St. Mary's fourth.

The Football Writers Association of America had named McMillin as "Football's man of the year" last Saturday in another poll.

A group of Winnipeg sportsmen, headed by W. C. MacCallum, will sponsor a $10,000 Open Golf tourney at the Niakwa Country Club commencing July 19, it was announced at the Manitoba capital last night. The competition had already been sanctioned by the Canadian Pro Golfers Association and the P. G. A. of the United States.

A newcomer in Norm Larson of New Haven Eagles displaced Pete Leswick of Indianapolis as the scoring leader of the American Hockey Association in the league statistics released last night. Larson's total was 37 points while tied for second with 36 were Leswick and Courteau of New Haven.

Sudbury Wolves, a legendary name in hockey two decades ago, returned to senior competition this season in the Nickel Belt League after a 15-year absence. It was announced last night the Wolves will form the fourth entry in the league, which also includes Creighton, Copper Cliff and Sudbury Legion. The executive includes such well-known names as Max Silverman, Shorty Green, Bill Duncan, Alex McKinnon, Red Green and Roger Mitchell.

Kenny Stewart, playing coach of the winless Regina Capitals of the Western Canada Senior Hockey League, says he will not shave again until his team marks up a victory. Their best effort in 13 league games so far this season has been a tie. Stewart over the weekend went to Moose Jaw and lured away two of Moose Jaw Canucks' stars of the past two seasons, defenceman Roy Belbin and Al Swain, addition of whom is expected to bring victory in short order and stop the sprouting of the coach's whiskers.

In an elimination bout at Leeds, England, last night for the British and Empire featherweight boxing title, Al Phillips of London scored a sixth-round technical knockout over Jim Brady of Dundee, Scotland, when the referee stopped the fight.

To prevent the use of organized sport as a medium for military training, the Allied Control Commission of Berlin yesterday ordered the abolition of all German pre-war athletic bodies. A program of health hygiene and non-military recreation will be arranged for German youths.

"HORSE SENSE BRIDGE"

LESSON NO. 868
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Where there is bridge there is a difference of opinion. If it is not over a bid or lead or play, it could be over some law. Like when south and north held this pair of hands:

SOUTH
♠A 8 4
♥6 5 2
♦Q 7
♣A Q 10 6 2
NORTH
♠None
♥A K 3
♦9 8 5 4 2
♣K 8 5 4 3

South opened with a bid of one club. West stuck in a defensive bid of one spade. North came in with a one-jump of three clubs. East doubled and north cried: "Wait a moment, partner. Tell me how this bidding went."

Opponents objected, claiming north was not within his right in getting that information at such a time. And in this objection they are upheld by the present laws of contract bridge.

In earlier days, the laws said: During the auction a player may ask to have previous calls restated only when it is his turn to call.

Some of the laws of bridge changed in 1943. The laws now say: Before the auction is closed, a player may ask the opponents to restate previous calls, but only when it is his turn to call.

When east doubled, south was the next player whose turn it was to call; not north. So north was not in a position to demand a review of bidding from anybody. This was so in the old or new laws.

But under the new laws, that was not the only point where north was wrong. Notice that the new laws say a player may ask opponents to restate calls.

Thus, a player may ask for a review of the bids when it is his turn. But his request must not go to his partner. Nor may his partner comply. Only opponents give a review of the bidding these days.

There is good reason for such a law. A premature request for a review of bids may suggest something to a partner. And a restatement by partner may be made suggestive. On the other hand, an opponent is less likely to give you unwarranted information.

High-Scoring Chicago Hawks Leading Field

Montreal, Dec. 18—(CP)—The high-scoring Chicago Black Hawks dominate the leading positions in official National Hockey League statistics released today, placing five men in the first six positions in the individual scoring list. With 81 goals scored in the 17 games to date, Max Bentley, Bill Mosienko, Clint Smith, Doug Bentley and Alex Kaleta have provided more than half of the team's total.

Max Bentley leads the league's scorers with 16 goals and 13 assists for 29 points, giving him a five-point edge on Mosienko who piled up 10 goals and 14 assists. Smith and Doug Bentley are tied with Toe Blake of Montreal, the only non-Chicago player among the first six, with 19 points. Blake has 12 goals and seven assists to his credit, Smith has 10 and nine, and Bentley has nine and 10. Kaleta, the last of the leading Hawks has seven goals and 10 assists for 17 points.

Max Bentley leads the goal getters with his 16, one ahead of Gaye Stewart of Toronto Maple Leafs who has scored 15 times. Bentley's 13 assists is a close second to Mosienko's 14 which qualifies him as the league's leading play maker.

Emile (Butch) Bouchard, Montreal defencemen, tops the league in penalties with 34 minutes in the box, while the Habitants with 131 minutes in penalties, including one misconduct, leads the league in this department.

Harry Lumley continues his jaunt toward the Vezina Trophy—awarded annually to the goal keeper with the lowest goals against record — with 39 goals against in 16 games with Detroit Red Wings. His nearest competitor is Bill Durnan of Montreal, holder of the trophy for the last two seasons, who has 47 goals against in 14 games.

The league announced that the statistics next week will be released Thursday instead of Tuesday, due to the holiday season.

Two Power-Packed Junior Squads in Manitoba That May Go Long Way in Hockey Race

Winnipeg Monarchs and Brandon Elks Appear Best of Six Teams in Loop

Winnipeg, Dec. 18 (CP)—Manitoba, home of six Memorial Cup winners in the last 11 years, this season boasts two power-packed aggregations that may go a long way in the Canadian junior hockey race come next spring.

Lacking senior players the province has re-organized but not without headaches, its pre-war junior league with Winnipeg Monarchs and Brandon Elks taking the honors for quality.

From the start of the season its Junior "A" Division provided the Manitoba Amateur Hockey Association with plenty problems. However things seem to be running smooth again—since yesterday—and the circuit's junior entries that started Dec. 1, include four Winnipeg teams with Brandon and Portage La Prairie Terriers, Canadian title holders in 1942, who returned to the fold after an absence of three years.

The Winnipeg teams are Monarchs, Rangers, St. James Orioles, and Wellingtons, Dominion champions in 1942 and 43.

Since the first meeting was held last July the M.A.H.A. has had a series of headaches. First three teams that operated in a north division of the league last year dropped out. Then Monarchs threatened to quit when some of their players left for the Brandon club.

Last week Brandon was suspended after using two players who were refused transfers from their former clubs—Orioles and Rangers. The club was delivered an ultimatum by the M.A.H.A. and a new executive was appointed. After apologies to the association and promises to obey its rules and rulings, the Elks were re-instated.

Draw New Schedule.

Last night the association met again to draw up a new schedule. The season started Dec. 1 with a 40 game plan, but this was reduced to 30. The four Winnipeg teams were scheduled to play 12 games, while the Brandon and Portage entries played 16 contests. The capital city teams received four points for a win while Elks and Terriers received only three to make up for the greater number of games they played.

With the situation again clear—for the time being at least—hockey enthusiasts are betting on Monarchs or Elks to put up a good fight to enter the junior finals.

In the Thunder Bay area senior hockey is coming back on an inter-city basis for the first time in three years. After a two-year absence Fort William's "Blue Boys" are being sponsored by the Canadian Legion. Coach of the team, consisting of mostly returned servicemen, is Ross Knowles who was with Hershey Bears last season.

Port Arthur Bearcats also are returning after two years' of obscurity when Shipbuilders were the senior representatives. The Cats will operate this year under the same officers with several former players, Coach Hugh O'Leary.

Plans for senior representation from Manitoba still are indefinite. If they materialize the club will play exhibition games during the regular season and then challenge the winner at the lakehead for the right to proceed further in the Allan Cup race.

26 Canadians Killed by Blast In Ostend Harbor

Ottawa, Dec. 18 — (CP)—Naval headquarters Monday disclosed details of a series of explosions and fire among a flotilla of British and Canadian motor torpedo boats at Ostend last February in which 26 Canadians including an officer lost their lives and 19 were injured.

The disaster was announced previously, but no details were given at the time. Monday's announcement also gave the casualty list.

Headquarters said that 12 boats five of which belonged to the 29th Canadian Motor Torpedo Boat flotilla commanded by Lt.-Cmdr. C. A. Law, D.S.C., of Quebec, were destroyed. Others were damaged in the blast and the spreading fire which followed. No cause was given for the explosion.

The boats were moored in a passage inside Ostend Harbor known as the Grique and within two minutes of the explosion, most were afire. It was impossible to move the inside craft to safety and though some men escaped by diving overboard, many were trapped on board in the series of explosions which followed.

NO TREE LIGHTS

Toronto, Dec. 18 (CP)—About 25 per cent of the Christmas tree lights needed to meet the demand in Toronto are available in city stores, retailers report. Dealers blame the shortage on scarcity of materials and skilled labor.

The call sheet for "Duchess of Broadway" listed "Two newspapermen—clothes unpressed." Such slander.

ST. MIKES GRAB 10TH VICTORY IN ELEVEN GAMES

Defeat Oshawa Generals 6-3 With Ted Sloan the Driving Force

Toronto, Dec. 18 — (CP)—St. Michael's College grabbed their 10th victory in 11 games here last night by trimming Oshawa Generals 6-3, the fixture being the only clash of the evening in the junior "A" series of the O.H.A.

The students lengthened their leadership to 20 points in the lively junior race while the Generals maintained third spot in the standing, the second-place club being the up-and-coming Galt Red Wings.

The battle proved a nip-and-tuck struggle for two periods during which the Generals tied it up no less than three times — twice in the first session and again in the middle frame which ended two-all.

The last period was all St. Mikes when Ted Sloan, who had already counted two goals, cracked the Oshawa defence three times in succession for the only scoring of the finale.

With five of the six tallies to his credit Sloan's performance was a brilliant display, outshining all other efforts. McKay accounted for the other score for the Collegians.

Oshawa's three markers were shared by Samis, Curk and Pogue.

Hollywood Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, Dec. 18 (AP)—The Oscar derby is coming down the home stretch and it looks like "the lost weekend and "the Bells of St. Mary's" in the lead.

The academy awards won't be made until March 7, but academy rules state that eligible pictures must have shown in the Los Angeles area before Dec. 31. Thus a number of the studios are rushing to get their contenders into the theatres before the end of the year.

As the race now stands, the leaders are "Week-End" and "Bells." Ray Milland is being highly touted for his dipsomaniac role, and Bing Crosby and Ingrid Bergman will be in the running for their portrayals of a priest and a nun. She may also be cited for "Spellbound;" it appears that "Saratoga Trunk" in which Ingrid also stars, will not be released in time for academy consideration.

A late entry is "Leave Her To Heaven," which 20th-Fox is rushing to the scenes. The studio thinks Gene Tierney will receive a nomination for it. Also high in the running are: Joan Crawford for "Mildred Pierce;" Dorothy McGuire, "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," Greer Garson, "Valley of Decision?" and Bette Davis, "The Corn is Green."

Others in male contention are: Robert Montgomery, "They Were Expendable;" James Dunn, "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn"; Robert Mitchum, "The Story of G. I. Joe;" John Garfield, "Pride of The Marines;" Gregory Peck, "Keys of The Kingdom;" Dick Powell, "Murder, My Sweet."

These are merely the obvious nominees and there may be dark horse contenders. I gave up trying to predict Oscar winners long ago.

Eddie Bracken has applied to enroll his month-old son in Notre Dame ... Marsha Hunt is thinking of doing a New York play ... Lucile Ball swears it's true that she is building a helicopter court on her San Fernando ranch ... Her husband, Desi Armaz, got his release from both the army and M.G.M. and is organizing a band ... Billie Dove appeared at a Hollywood party looking as beautiful as ever .. Betty Hutton and Joan Caulfield have left to spend the holidays in New York .. British star Rex Harrison, now in "Anna And The King of Siam," tells me he would like to spend his time between London, Hollywood and the stage. He isn't saying where he'll light, but likes Hollywood, "very, very much"... Johnny Weissmuller's new moustache makes him resemble Clark Gable, or his friends tell him.

AT THE McCARTHY — General Dwight D. Eisenhower not only speaks a foreword to his picture, "The True Glory," distributed by Columbia Pictures for the Office of War Information through the War Activities Committee—Motion Picture Industry and currently playing at the McCarthy Theatre, but he appears in many scenes. Here he is chatting intimately with airborne troops before they take off for battle. Added feature presents Cary Grant, Constance Bennett in "Topper."

By HYE BOSSIN

In a few years the exterior of theatres will have changed as much as the interior, if not more. Lobbies will be divided from the street by glass doors, so that the setting will seem to reach out to the pavement. Most lobbies will have a country theme — shrubs etc. — where there is room. Larger theatres will have refreshment quarters and some may even have dancing. Push-back seats will be common, heating will be hidden and color and decorations may be projected on the wall through slides rather than painted.

However, most new theatres will not hold more than 1200 patrons. "The keynote of today is definitely not a knockout blow of size and impressiveness," says Jules Wolfe, in charge of theatre engineering for Famous Players. "Rather, it aims at providing a casual atmosphere of intimacy and spaciousness, that of a high-class recreation centre."

• • •

Free Sunday shows for servicemen, carried on in larger cities at the request of the government, are continuing throughout the demobilization period.

Two Canadian theatre companies, Famous Players and Loew's, have between them provided entertainment for about 450,000 service men and women at no cost to the government. The companies pay the staffs themselves for extra work, although the managers contribute their services and the distributors give the film without charge.

The theatres desired to quit recently but military authorities appealed urgently for continuation of the shows, pointing out that 100,000 soldiers would return between now and next April.

• • •

A very interesting development in juvenile programs is the Odeon Movie Clubs for Young Canadians, an organization originating in Britain and now represented in 14 Canadian cities. Special shows are put on exclusively for and by the children and the only adult involved is the manager, who is known to the children as The Chief.

The shows have taught the children obligation and they feel badly when they can't make it, writing explanations and apologies. The Chief, of course, is a pal.

Chief in Galt is Ken Johnston of the Palace Theatre. One Sunday morning an eight-year-old member of the club woke him from a sound sleep with a proposition. If he would go to church the boy was willing to present Mrs. Johnston with one of his prize possessions — a pint jar for grasshoppers. Mr. Johnston didn't have a thing to say about it after the Mrs. agreed.

"I might also mention," Ken said, "that I am now unable, as the chief, to ever have a beer in one of the local pubs. The members frown on that sort of thing."

Managers treasure letters from the children, written to explain their absence. One couldn't come because he was suffering from "hay-fever and information of the eyes,, and another "becauese" of a "coaled."

DISTILLER GETS 21 PERCENT

Ottawa, Dec. 18 (CP)—About 21 cents of every dollar spent on liquor goes to the distiller and the remainder is paid in taxes and provincial revenues, Revenue Minister McCann said yesterday in the Commons in reply to a question by George Black (PC—Yukon).

WOMAN IS REMANDED

Toronto, Dec. 18 (CP)—Charged with converting $1,050 in club funds to her own use, Mrs. Marguerite Sundue, Christmas Club secretary in suburban New Toronto, was remanded in custody by Magistrate W. L. McIlveen.

AT THE CAPITOL — "Come back here," says Marjorie Reynolds to husband Dennis O'Keefe in a merry scene from Edward Small's farce "Up in Mabel's Room," at the Capitol Theatre, through United Artists release. The added first run hit "The Fatal Witness," stars Evelyn Ankers and Richard Fraser.

Butter and Cheese Output Lower

Toronto, Dec. 17—(CP)—Ontario's creamery butter and cheddar cheese production for November was lower than the corresponding month last year, but total output for the first 11 months of 1945 was considerably higher, the Ontario agriculture department said today in its monthly dairy report.

Creamery butter output of 3,833,800 pounds last November was 742,100 pounds less than a year ago but the 11-months total was up 3,155,500 at 74,209,100 pounds. Cheddar cheese, while declining from 6,140,600 to Toronto, Dec. 18 — (CP) —
3,944,500 pounds in November production, showed an increase of 5,517,900 in the 108,533,500 pounds produced during the first 11 months this year.

The report said sales of fluid milk continued to increase, with 38,462,400 quarts sold last October compared with 34,421,000 the same month last year. Fluid cream sales were up four per cent at 1,037,600 quarts for October, 1945.

The World is Like That

CHAPTER 18

"You see?" Mrs. Fordyce asked, spreading her hands, shrugging her shoulders helplessly. "That gives me absolutely no choice. But it means we have Norma to deal with!"

"I just waked up," said Norma, trailing in in peacock-blue and silvery-gray striped chiffon, looking pale and weary, and seating herself on her grandmother's bed. "I wanted Miss Britton; Mattress said she was in here. When I was asleep," she said, with watering eyes, "I thought it was all an awful dream. But now it seems that—that Pon really is dead, and they'll all look at me, they'll think I'm an awful person "

"Read this telegram from your mother," her grandmother said as she paused. "We know you weren't to blame, darling," she added. "We blame ourselves. We never ought to have let our little girl get into such a horrible fix."

Norma took the telegram and read it apathetically; read it a second time. Her pale face flushed. To Jocelyn she looked young and helpless and pitiable—a little girl.

"I'll not go anywhere with Sandy. I loathe her!" she said.

"But darling, you can't go to Janet," Mrs. Verrinder said quickly and lovingly. "Isn't she going to be married to Count Spazzolari?"

"I don't want to see Sandy!" persisted Norma. "And I won't live with Mama and Mario, either! He kisses me and I hate him!"

"Hello, girls," Philip said in the doorway. "Dressed enough for me to come in, Mother?"

"Come in, dear. We're all discussing this thing, and there really doesn't seem to be any way out—there truly doesn't," she went on, with a deprecating smile for Norma, "except to—to make a change, and get our poor dear strict old Sandy back—she's always been so devoted, after all, Phil—"

Philip had taken a chair, and Norma had gone over to get into his lap, and from the stronghold of his arms to look defiance at the court that was sitting in judgment upon her.

"I'll not go to school with Sandy as if I was a baby!" said Norma, in deadly finality.

"We've had a telegram from Janet, Phil," his mother said disconsolately. "I'm sure I don't know what we're going to do! She says it's Sandy or she'll demand Norma back."

"She can't have Norma back. Norma spends nine months a year with me," Philip said, tightening his arms, as he read the telegram.

"Oh, I love you when you're kind to me, Daddy!" Norma, becoming artificial the moment she was made the center of attention, said effusively. He looked down at her thoughtfully, unsmilingly, but did not speak.

"Phil, isn't this awful?" asked Daisy Verrinder.

"Well, we all love this little girl, and we've let her get herself into an awful mess," he said in his kindest tone. "It does seem to me that with so many of us here to look out for her we might manage better than we have. All I want for you, Spotty," he went on, "is to keep you happy and keep you safe and see that you have a reasonably good time until I hand you over to some better man. Now here's your grandmother, and here's Aunt Daisy and Aunt Nita all ready to lend a hand, and here's Miss Britton to help out, and one of the nicest crowds of boys and girls in the world to play with. What's the matter with us all that that isn't enough?"

"That is enough," Mrs. Verrinder said, perhaps really touched by his appeal, or perhaps, as Jocelyn uncharitably thought, just one more of the striking grass widows of the group who would have liked to play the role of the second Mrs. Jhilip Fordyce.

"I've been in town all morning," Philip said. "I've fixed everything as far as I can. I went to all the newspaper offices, made a statement that Norma and Miss Wilson and Norma's governess were all down there together; I've quieted it down as much as was possible. Nokes has put five plain-clothes men on the place, watching the gates; we won't have any photographers here. The main thing is to wait until this all quiets down a little, and then start over."

"Yes, but there's Janet and what she says of Sandy! I cannot have Janet come on here, especially with one of those foreigners!" his mother said. "You know how she upsets the whole place. Do think out something Phil! We can't just go on this way; we've got to wire Janet something that will be completely reassuring. What can we say about Sandy? We could tell her she was dead. That would sort of quiet that down."

"She's very probably in touch with Sandy, Mother."

"I'm sorry about making any change, Miss Britton," Mrs. Fordyce said. "But you see Miss Sanderson was my daughter-in-law's governess before she went to the Griscoms and the Fosters. Mrs. Foster really bribed her to come to her, and Mrs. Girscom didn't forgive her for years, so you can see how valuable she is. And the French and German are important, don't you think so, Phil?"

"I'll act worse than I ever have," Norma promised calmly.

"No, you won't, Spotty," her father said kindly. "You're only a little girl, and you know we're all doing this just to protect you. I have to go to Washington in a few days; no help for it. It's a federal case, and it may keep me there for weeks, and I won't have a happy moment if you aren't being a good girl! Why, Spot, you have everything to make you happy! You're only sixteen—well, nearly seventeen—and that's a beautiful age. You ought to have the happiest years of your life ahead, and marry some nice man, and have some cute little kids, and buy yourself a beautiful place at— say, Tahoe, and another in France, if you liked, or along the Riviera—"

"Pebble Beach," Norma said, smiling sulkily.

"Well, exactly! But we want you to learn a lot more, first, and take things quietly. Leave something for the later years. Your mother's idea was for you to take special courses at Middlefield School, work away there with nice girls, go to simple little parties, and let Miss Britton get some sleep. How about promising that you'll toe the mark for a few months? Then it'll be summer, and we'll talk about Honolulu—"

"I want a place in Honolulu!" Norma said, petulantly, but mollified.

"Well, why not? You can have any damn thing you want in the world if you'll just steer clear of scrapes."

"But I won't do anything if Sandy's around!" stipulated Norma.

"Well, now let me see how we can work that. Miss Britton, what would you suggest?"

"Suppose we telephoned the Middlefield School," Jocelyn said, feeling like Alice as they all looked at her seriously, and conscious of a deep inner impulse toward angry laughter. "It's vacation, and they'd have plenty of room. And suppose Norma and I went quietly down there and boarded for a few days. We could make arrangements for her studies with all her teachers and get her books and get started. Then you could telegraph her mother that she was at Middlefield, and that nobody could get in touch with her for several days."

"I think that's the answer," Philip said, with a quiet triumphant smile of approval.

"But that doesn't solve Sandy, Phil," Daisy Verrinder said, in her gentle regretful way. "Dear, dear!" she added with a light laugh and a glance at the other women that made the remark the merest nonsense, "if it wasn't for the dreadful eight years between us I'd marry you with or without your consent, Phil, and move right in here, and then we'd not have any trouble at all!"

"Phil's still in love with Janet," his mother said.

"Say, listen!" Philip protested. "Cut it out! I'm not asking Sandy to chaperon me, or Miss Britton, either!"

This drew all eyes to Jocelyn, who was infuriated to feel herself flushing. "What—what do you think of the Middlefield School plan?" she asked, stammering a little.

"I'll tell you what I think," said Mrs. Fordyce suddenly. "Send Sandy down there with Norma for three days. Then wire Janet that Sandy and Norma are at Middlefield. She's always thought Norma ought to go to Middlefield."

"If it's a school where every girl has her own horse, and takes care of it, and the head mistress wears hunting coats and things, I won't stay," said Norma.

"You'll not have to stay," said her grandmother. "You'll be home in a few days. Meanwhile we'll tell everyone you're in a rest home, your nerves have been all upset by this terrible accident, and in a week they'll be thinking of something else, and you'll be home again."

"But why Sandy?" the girl protested.

"So we can wire your mother you're with Sandy."

"I don't know why everything's so horrible!" Norma muttered. She had left her father's arms to go curl herself uncomfortably on the foot of her grandmother's bed. Now she turned her back on the company, toppled over, pulled a fat satin puff over her, and apparently returned to sleep.

Jocelyn and Philip went into the hall together. The girl, above a sense of hurt, was trying to smile and speak understandingly. "I'm afraid I've let you down terribly," she said.

"I don't know what gets into them, or how they raise them," Philip said, shaking his head. "A child that age, causing all this fuss and uproar! And the appalling thing is," he added, as he and Jocelyn moved toward the door that opened into the wing where her rooms were, "we're probably going to have six or seven years of this. I don't know how people get them through it. I wish to God the girl was twenty-three!"

"But that seems such a tragedy," said Jocelyn. "A father ought to be getting such joy out of a daughter as pretty and smart as Norma."

"She's pretty enough," he conceded, "but I don't know why you say smart."

"She's smart enough, too, only it's been all twisted sideways, Mr. Fordyce," Jocelyn said, suddenly turning to her own problem. "I think your mother would be happier with Miss Sanderson here; to have me gone. And I do think it would be a good thing to send them down to the school tomorrow. Norma's frightened enough to go now; she doesn't want to go back to—" She hesitated, changed somewhat the phrase she had been going to use. "She doesn't like New York, and she doesn't like Count—what is it?"

"So here we have the question of one of the richest little girls in the world," he said, with a troubled smile and a shake of his head, "with a mother and father and grandmother, with five or six homes, and nowhere to go. Well, we'll pop her and Sandy into school for a week and see where that gets us."

"And I'm slipping away," Jocelyn told him. It gave her an odd little twinge to say it. She didn't want to leave this fascinating tangle. "I've not been much of a success, and it's possible that Miss Sanderson's Victorian methods will work better."

"She'll not stand Sandy long. That's really to pacify her mother. I feel very badly about the whole thing," Philip said.

"I really want to go. I feel as if the tempo had been a little swift for me," Jocelyn said. "I'm going to my aunt, I think. There's going to be a wedding there, and there are two small babies in the house, and I generally straighten out my uncle's bills for him and collect a lot of money he never would. And I feel as if that sort of thing might be good for me, for a while."

"Well, when'll you be back in the office, Miss Britton? For I'll be going away next week, and I want to report first, of course."

"I was thinking perhaps I wouldn't come back. It's been—pretty strenuous for me," Jocelyn explained. "You remember under what circumstances you gave me a lift home from Berkeley? I suppose that took it out of me a little. And then this, and the feeling that I've let Norma get herself into such trouble — I'd like to get away from it all for a while."

"You mean you're still in love with Dunham?" His voice, with its sudden ring of authority, its quality of having the right to question her, thrilled her oddly, and she felt a little shaken as she answered him.

"No, I only feel ashamed about all that. That's over. It seemed so—so easy a thing to get into. But when one sees it from a little distance—however," Jocelyn interrupted herself, smiling, "you've had enough of that affair! But I'll always be grateful to you for what you did, and glad I had this experience here. Perhaps Miss Sanderson wouldn't have lost sight of Norma, even for that minute—"

"No," he said, as she hesitated, "I don't think she would."

"Well, maybe not. Maybe she knows girls better than I do. I'm sorry anyway. And if you'll be here until—say a week from today, I'll come into the office and tell you whether I can come back or not."

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was in his private chair waiting for ma to tell him it was time to go out and play bridge with Mr. and Mrs. Hews, and he said, Yee gods, and they call this a free country.

Well, it's not full of concentration camps and controlled presses, so at least it's comparatively free, ma said, and pop said, Right in front of my eyes is a bookcase full of immortal litterature, and each individual book is humbly begging me to pick it out and improve my mind, and yet I have to go out and play bridge when I could be sitting here comfortably reading my newspaper. Does that sound like a free country? he said.

Well for land sakes aren't you free to put your foot down and absilutely refuse to leave your own house? ma said. If you delivered a final ultimatum not to budge from that chair even though the earth rises and the heavens fall, what could I do? she said, and pop said, You could pull a long face and mentally sue me for divorce. You could make me feel like a heel and a werm, or maybe even like a werm under a heel for Peet sake, he said.

Well, I must say you paint a very unflattering portrait of my carater, ma said. Some women may not reckonize their husbands as master of the house, but as far as I'm concerned, I hope the day never comes, she said, and pop said, How about the night? By gollies I'll except the invitation. I hereby announce my unalterable intention to spend the evening reading peacefilly at home in a cloud of my own smoke. I swear it on a stack of wheats, he said.

All right my dear, we'll stay quietly at home, ma said. Now is this a free country or not? she said, I want to know just one thing, have the Hewses called off that bridge date or haven't they?

Well, yes they have, ma said.

And she laughed like anything and argued pop into taking her to the second show at the Little Grand after he got through his paper.

JAPANESE DIET DISSOLVES

Tokyo, Dec. 18 — (AP) — The Japanese Diet dissolved late today after 22 days of its 89th extraordinary session and legislators started back home to prepare for the first free election in more than a decade.

Obituary

MRS. JOSEPHINE McEVOY

The funeral of the late Mrs. Josephine McEvoy took place from the residence of her sister, Miss Amelia LaPalm, 126 South John Street, this morning. Mass was said in St. Michael's Church at 9 a.m. by the Right Rev. Monsignor J. V. Nicholson. The Rev. Father O'Donnell said the committal service at the graveside in St. James' Cemetery.

The bearers were Messrs. Harry Smith, William Lynch, E. Royle, Stephen Garvin, Maurice Callaghan and Maurice Connell.

LATE MRS. OLIVE DOHERTY

Following an illness of three months, Mrs. Olive Doherty, 42 South Foster Avenue died in the Belleville General Hospital early Monday evening December 17.

Born in Massachusetts, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Boller, the late Mrs. Doherty had resided in this district for many years, coming here from the United States. She was a member of St. Michael's Church.

Surviving are her husband, Mr. Frank Doherty, and three sons, Gilbert, William and George Seames all of Belleville , one daughter, Mrs. Florence Carufel, also of Belleville; one brother William Boller, Flint Michigan and one sister Mrs. Annie Revoir, of Bolton, Michigan. The funeral notice appears elsewhere in this edition.

MRS CHRISTINA MAY BURKE
(Fuller)

Stirling, Dec. 18 (Special) — After an illness extending over a period of fourteen years, Mrs. Christina May Burke, wife of Mr. Herbert R. Burke, died at her home at Fuller on Sunday, Dec. 16th.

The late Mrs. Burke was in her 56th year and was born in Huntingdon Township, her parents being the late James Hollinger and his wife the late Almira Thompson. All her life was passed in the district where she was born and she was highly esteemed. She was a member of the United Church at Fuller and when health permitted she took an active part in church work and filled in a capable manner the position of organist.

Surviving her are her husband; four sisters, Mrs. Harry (Sarah) Dafoe, Corbyville; Mrs. Fred (Martha) Gray, Roslin; Mrs. W. J. (Margaret) Fitchett, Stirling and Miss Bessie Hollinger, Fuller; two brothers, Joseph Hollinger, Foxboro and David Hollinger, Stirling.

The funeral announcement is made in this issue.

JOHN RICHARD WEST
(Stirling)

Stirling — (Special) — Well-known resident of this village and district for a number of years, and widely known in Masonic circles, John Richard West died at 539 St. Clemens Avenue, Toronto, on Monday, December 17. He was in his 75th year.

Born in Tyendinaga Township, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John B. West, the late resident spent nearly all his life in Stirling, Rawdon and Madoc townships. He had been residing in Toronto for the last eighteen months and had been ill but a short time.

The late Mr. West followed the vocation of cheesemaking for thirty-three years in various parts of the county, operating at the Harold factory for twenty-six years with the remaining time being divided between the Brook Valley and Cold Springs plants. He learned the trade with the late Mrs. West, who was a cheesemaker in her own right.

He was a member of St. John's Anglican Church, Stirling, and a life member of Lodge 69 A. F. & A. M. and the Keystone Chapter, R.A.M. of Stirling. His wife predeceased him in 1939.

Surviving are two sons, Reeve William West, Stirling; Elliott West, Stirling, and one daughter, Mrs. F. A. Osterhout, 539 St. Clemens Avenue, Toronto. Another son, John, died in 1943. The funeral notice appears elsewhere in this edition.

MRS SARAH C. SNARR
(Harold)

Stirling, Dec. 18 (Special) — Mrs. Sarah Celestine Snarr, widow of George Snarr, and late residence at Harold, died in the Peters Convalescent Home, Campbellford, on Sunday, Dec. 16th, after an illness extending over a period of five years.

Born in Rawdon Township the late Mrs. Snarr was in her 86th year and was a daughter of the late Samuel Bailey and his wife Caroline Tucker. The greater part of her life was passed at Harold and she was highly esteemed in the community. In religion she was a member of the Wellman's United Church.

Surviving her are one son, George Snarr of Hoard's Station; one daughter, Mrs. Carl (Erma) Clancy of Harold; two sisters, Mrs. Urban Heath of Harold, and Mrs. German Sine of Belleville. Her husband died two years ago, and twins, son and daughter, died some years ago.

LATE ROBERT CAMERON MOORE
(Trenton - Wallbridge)

The funeral of Robert Cameron Moore, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Moore, Trenton, took place on Monday afternoon from the home of the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Moore, at Wallbridge. The service was conducted by the Rev. H. H. Hillis and interment was in Belleville Cemetery.

LATE OWRINE IVAN CAIN
(Thurlow Township)

On Monday afternoon the funeral of Owrine Ivan Cain took place from his late residence in the second concession of Thurlow Township. The service there and at Melrose Cemetery where entombment took place was conducted by the Rev. A. W. Lougheed of Shannonville United Church.

The bearers were Messrs. Harry Sine, William Conley, Dayton Milligan, Thomas McGraw, Eric Chapelle and T. Mullins.

MRS. SARAH J. R. DULMADGE BRIGHTON

Brighton, Dec. 18. (CP)— Mrs. Sarah Jane Rogers Dulmadge, 99, died at her home here yesterday. Born in this district, Mrs. Dulmadge came to Brighton in 1877. She was married twice and her second husband, Dr. D. W. Dulmadge, predeceased her several years ago. She is survived by two sons, W. R. Freeman, of Brighton, and J. R. Freeman, of Moncton, N.B.

'The True Glory' Fine Action Film On Nazis' Defeat

A true and authentic record of the Nazis' defeat on the Western Front, the thrilling action picture "The True Glory" which opens today at the McCarthy Theatre is a stirring tribute to the fighting men of Allied Nations who made victory possible. It reveals the teamwork among nations, services and men, and is a picture which every Canadian—man, woman and child—should see.

Telling the complete and official story of the conquest of Germany from D-Day through to the final capitulation of the German forces, "The True Glory" was filmed in its entirety in the European war theatre by British, Canadian and American cameramen. Four Canadian public relations officers and men were killed in action during the filming of the picture while eleven others were wounded.

The picture shows Canadian fighting units such as Belleville's own 34th Field Battery, R.C.A., which took part in the invasion of Normandy. It shows preparations for the invasion, the invasion, the battle across France and the Battle of Germany. It was filmed by cameramen who went everywhere and saw everything.

In this record of the war, audiences will not only see the soldiers of the Western Allies in action from D-Day through the battles of St. Lo, Paris, Bastogne and the Rhine, but hear them talk. Film from the cameras of 1,400 cameramen was edited into some 5,500,000 with each foot containing the excitement and tenseness of a dozen fictionized stories.

Besides the soldiers in the ranks, one of whom may possibly be a Belleville husband, son or sweetheart, there are enough stars to outdo the biggest array ever seen in Hollywood. General Dwight D. Eisenhower delivers the introduction and is seen in several sequences during the film while Field Marshal Montgomery and other British officers are also seen frequently.

NOTICE

Several Sheet Metal Tanks, measuring about three feet in height and eleven inches in diameter, three openings, one at the centre of oval top, one on side near top, one at side near bevelled bottom.

The above were taken from Lot 64, First Concession of Thurlow, north of Point Anne Lane. Anyone giving information leading to the arrest and conviction of the party in possession of same will be liberally rewarded. Phone 90 Belleville or 2123J. Belleville.

Howe who arrived home from overseas the former serving over 5 years, the latter 2 years.

Mr. A. Greatrix acted as chairman for the program which had been prepared for the boys. Humorous readings were given by Mrs. J. Craig, Mrs. F. Doxtator, Mr. A. Mitchell. Comic duet by Messrs. Fred and A. Mitchell caused lots of laughter. Duet Mrs. E. Vivian, Mrs. H. Grills, Instrumental, Miss Lorena Haight. Solo, Mrs. F. Haight.

Mr. Fred Mitchell read an appropriate address expressing gratitude and honor for their gallantry and bravery in serving their King and Country. Reg, "as he was usually called," expressed the appreciation of himself and Jack for all the lovely letters, cards, parcels, and kindness shown them. And to Mr. and Mrs. A. Mitchell and Mrs. R. Mitchell and all who helped with the program. He was so pleased to be home he could hardly realize it was true, even yet. Jack also expressed his thanks and appreciation along with Reg. and invited all to come and see them. On being asked to say a few words, Mrs. Howe Jr. on behalf of herself and Jack's mother said all she could say was they were overjoyed at having Jack home. Mrs. Boulstridge spoke a few words and as Reg had married Mr. Boulstridge niece, was pleased to welcome him into the family. Owing to certain restrictions Reg's wife was unable to come to Canada but expects to come in the spring. On request Mr. Boulstridge sang, "The Little Shirt Me Mother Made for Me." God Save the King concluded the evening's entertainment Refreshments were served and a social time spent by all.

Records for Child Passengers Flying Across Atlantic

Montreal, Dec. 18 (CP)—Following an announcement last Thursday that baby Robin Everard, 15 months old, was the youngest passenger ever to fly the Atlantic from North America to Europe, east-to-west Trans-Atlantic record was claimed here yesterday for Pamela Elizabeth Dodd by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Dodd, who said the little lady flew from Ireland to the West Indies on a non-stop flight of 24 hours, 22 minutes, three years ago, at the age of a year.

Redmen Rally Strongly To Overcome Three-Goal Lead And Tie Queen's U. 4-4

Students Outplay Locals in First Two Periods but Redmen Count Three in Final Stanza—Remain in Triple Tie for Loop Lead

The Belleville "Redmen" showed what a fighting spirit can do last night in Kingston by coming from behind to score three goals in the last ten minutes of play to earn a tie with Queen's and thus remain in a triple-tie for the league leadership as Locos and Barriefield split the points in the curtain-raiser.

For the first two periods, the Collegians skated the locals off their feet, backchecking like fiends and taking advantage of every opportunity. As a result, the locals were trailing 4-1 when they took the ice for the final set-to.

The game was fast and furious throughout but was very clean hockey, neither team serving a penalty.

The locals sported a new player last night, Bruce Ward, former McGill captain. Bruce was a little shaky last night as it was his first time on the blades this year but should prove a real asset to the team when he gets going.

The fast-skating students dominated the play in the first period and after ten minutes of play, Ohlke took a pass from Peate to beat Crandall from close in. Ohkle repeated the performance four minutes later on a pass from Elliott and the period ended with the locals dazzled with Queen's speed and wondering how they happened to be two goals down. The Queen's team were nothing short of spectacular on the defence this period and seemed to have the Belleville players stopped before they got a play started.

Redmen Score in 2nd.

Shortly after the second period got under way, "Leo" Goyer opened the scoring for Belleville by taking a neat pass from Wardhaugh and rifling the rubber past Dunn in the Queen's rigging. Then, the fluke of the game occurred. The "Redmen" were hemmed in around their own net. Hood, who was in the scramble batted the puck out to Kent who let it fly from the blue line. The shot would have been over the net but, one of the locals decided not to let it get that far. He took a swipe at it with his hand and the disc nestled behind Crandall in the Belleville rigging to make the score 3-1. The locals were outplayed for the rest of the period, Crandall being called upon to make some difficult saves. Ohlke got his third goal of the evening on a pass from Peate just before the period ended.

Even up in 3rd.

It was a determined bunch of "Redmen" that took the ice in the third period. Their persistence "paid off" shortly after the period got under way and "Vern" Goyer put new life in the locals by taking Don Barrett's pass and making the score 4-2. "Clare" Williamson combined with "Leo" Goyer to further the cause two minutes later. The play continued at a breath-taking clip with the "Collegians" trying desperately to hold the fort. They almost succeeded as there were only two minutes to play when "Leo" Goyer took "Al" Meagher's pass for the "pay-off" counter. The locals continued to dominate the play but couldn't notch the winning counter before the final gong sounded.

"Leo" Goyer, with two goals and an assist, was the pick of the locals. "Don" Barrett, "Gene" LaBonne and the Meaghers looked good on the attack while "Clare" Williamson played a standout game both offensively and defensively.

"Bud" Ohlke was the pick of the Queen's team with Hood, Peate and Elliott helping to "carry the mail."

Belleville: Goal, Crandall, defence, V. Goyer, C. Williamson; centre, Barrett; wings, A. Meagher, B. Meagher; alternates, J. Williamson, Williams, L. Goyer, St. Louis, LaBonne, Ward, Moher, Day and Wardhaugh.

Queen's: Goal, Dunn; defence, Kent, Elliott; centre, Davidson; wings, Hood, Morrow; alternates, Ohlke, Morrissette, MacKay, Peate, Hamilton, Stevens.

Referees: "Mike" Rodden and "Bill" Watts.

FINDS RADIUM NEEDLE IN SNOW-FILLED GUTTER

Detroit, Dec. 18 (AP) — Dr. Kenneth Corrigan went hunting for a needle in a snowdrift yesterday and found it. A radium needle, about the size of a phonograph needle and valued at $125, was lost Saturday. Dr. Corrigan and his home-made radium detector were called in. The needle was located in a snow-filled gutter.

Annual Staff Dinner Held By Bata Shoe Co.

Frankford—(Special)—With the passing of each year, progress of the Bata Shoe of Canada and their industrial community of Batawa is reviewed at the annual staff dinner and dance given as a Christmas party to the employees in the Company. Mr. Thomas Bata, president of Bata Ltd., was the main speaker, having returned from an extended business trip in Europe where he visited many countries, he told of conditions there. There was an excellent party spirit among those present. The food was good, there was fine music and interesting address.

Vernon Ott, Chairman

Mr. Vernon Ott very ably presided as chairman and introduced each number in a novel and interesting fashion. In his opening address he briefly outlined the war record which had come to a climax early this year and said, "We will be able to point with justified pride to our making of such articles as aircraft parts, precision instruments for technical war use, gun-mountings, sound detectors, torpedo gyroscopes, depth recorders, and shell parts all made in quantity that gave us the reputation of reliability. Now we have turned our attention to things of peace. Our main industry of course, will be shoes and their accessories. Our engineering division will gain more in the making of shoe machines and we will depart a little into the making of grinder heads, fishing reels, wooden toys and other items for which there seems to be a ready market."

Well Arranged

Much credit is due to the various committees in charge of the arrangements. Headed by Dave McDonald, personnel manager, they forgot nothing and contributed much to the success of the event by their thoroughness. The accommodation for the 500 guests was made possible through the co-operation of Mr. Bert High of the St. James Hotel and Frankford Council who lent tables and chairs for the occasion.

The cafeteria was gaily decorated with everything to give it a Christmas party effect. In the recreation hall across the street where the dance was held later in the evening the same Christmas decorations were carried out. Those on the committee deserving mention were James Whytock, Vernon Ott, Jack Frame, Dave McDonald, Frank McGrath, Judd Mallory, Ken Peacock and Art. Duncan. To all these and other volunteers who helped in the last minute rush all present were grateful.

Good Music and Fun

In addition to the lively community singing under the leadership of Art. Duncan was added the fine contributions made to the evening by Miss Dotty Porter and Mr. Douglas Elliott both of the R.C.A.F. This talented pair of young people are widely known throughout the district for the excellence of their work. Fun was added by a few impersonations given by the songleader in story and song.

It was Mr. John Svoboda and Miss Doris Blakely who engaged in a battle of wit and humor as they proposed and responded to the toast to the ladies. To their fun and merriment was added sincere thoughts of their association with the men and women with whom they worked. The toast to the company was presented by Wilbur Blair and Cecil Mackenzie spoke on behalf of the employees as they were toasted at the climax of his speech by Thomas J. Bata.

Full Time Employment

Returning from six months in Europe, Mr. Thomas J. Bata expressed his gratitude to all fellow workers of the company who had helped through the war years and also through the conversion and re-establishment period. Said he: "Since coming to Canada it has been the aim of the Company to so arrange production and markets that we would have all your employment for every worker with us. The shoe industry has been considered one of Canada's seasonal occupations for many years and the workers have always suffered at least a two-month period of idleness. The only way to avoid this is securing and holding markets in all parts of the world. This calls for quality and volume. How we stack up in peacetime competitive business depends upon ourselves as a group and as individuals. Travelling through Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg, Germany, France and Czechoslovak I was able to see all the havoc created by war which will take years to replace. While in Prague I was able to see how the U.N.N.R.A. was reducing the threat of inflation. Black market suffered a ready body blow with the material sent in from the Americas and administered by Canadian officials in co-operation with the Russians and the U.N. N.R.A. shoes such as those made here in Batawa are serving a great need covering thousands of bare feet in all parts of Europe and Asia.

Raw Materials Needed.

The people of Europe are not helpless but they are picking themselves up from terrific blows that have struck them down. They have the courage and skills to carry-on but they need our help to get going. They need the essential raw materials that only we on the American continent can supply. With our efforts of today we can establish world markets for tomorrow. We must have those export markets to gain the all-year employment we so desire. Quality and dependability of service is the answer if we put these elements into our work in the days to come we will all be able to gather here five years from now and celebrate similar growth that we observed in the past five years. The matter is entirely in our own hands how we deal with it is up to each one of us assembled here."

The response toast was made by Cecil Mackenzie who said, "the keystone to our success was the very community spirit displayed by those present." "Batawa is a good place to live in and good place to work in."

Art Duncan added a bit more fun to this part of the program which climaxed with the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

Dancing in the Recreation Hall

The final gesture by the company as a Christmas gift to their workers was a free dance in the Recreation Hall which was filled to capacity. Music was provided by Frank Bogart and his band of Toronto featuring the well-known blue singer Betty Davis.

Heard of Shootings Three Days Later, Meyer Testifies

Says Canadians Executed Without His Knowledge

(By ROSS MUNRO)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aurich, Germany, Dec. 19—(CP Cable)—S. S. Maj.-Gen. Kurt Meyer admitted under cross-examination today that he "possibly" had told some of his officers in Belgium in 1943 that he had to shoot prisoners in another theatre of war.

Meyer is on trial before a Canadian Military Court, charged with responsibility for the murder of 48 Canadian prisoners of war during the early stages of the invasion of Normandy in June, 1944.

His admission was the only one he made during cross-examination by Lt.-Col. Bruce MacDonald of Windsor, Ont., chief prosecutor, at today's session. The cross-examination lasted all afternoon and followed lengthy testimony given by the 33-year-old German military leader.

While on the witness stand, Meyer said Canadian prisoners had been shot at his headquarters at Ardenne Abbey, Normandy, without his knowledge.

SaysHe Was Incensed

He said he had been "incensed" when he learned of the shootings three days after they had occurred. He said he strongly reprimanded his adjutant for not informing him of this sooner and as punishment he had ordered the adjutant sent to command a frontline platoon as soon as he had broken in his successor.

Meyer said he personally reported the shootings to the commander of his division, a General Witt, who was excited about the matter and said the shootings must be stopped. Meyer said Witt told him to determine who had been responsible and make a full report.

Meyer claimed that a rumor 1944, that Canadians had shot current in his regiment June 7, German prisoners "unfortunately was found to be true: South of Rots (a village west of Authie, Normandy) German soldiers were found lying in a file, shot through the head."

The former commander of the 25th Panzer Grenadier Regiment of the 12th Division who is charged with responsibility for the murder of 48 Canadian prisoners of war during the early stages of the invasion of Normandy in June, 1944 — said the shootings at his headquarters were first reported to him by two medical officers on the morning of June 12, 1944, whereupon he went to the little garden of the abbey and saw the Canadian bodies lying there.

Polish Soldier's Testimony.

Earlier in the trial, a Polish soldier who had served at Meyer's headquarters, testified that he saw several Canadian prisoners shot by the Germans at the abbey.

The murdered prisoners were all members of the Canadian 3rd Division and came from the North Nova Scotia Highlanders of Amherst and Truro, the Cameron Highlanders of Ottawa, the Sherbrooke Fusiliers of Sherbrooke, Que., and the Queen's Own Rifles of Toronto.

The German commander started today's testimony with further details of the struggle between the 3rd Canadian Division and the 12th S. S. Division northwest of Caen, Normandy, shortly after D-Day.

Barks Out 'Nein'

He gave further denials of the evidence of Jan Jesionek, the Polish soldier who served at his headquarters, regarding events taking place at that time at the Abbey. Once when asked if certain phrases in the Jesionek account were correct, Meyer flushed deeply and barked "Nein."

Meyer described how he nearly lost his life in an unsuccessful attack on Bretteville, held by the Regina Rifles, the Royal Winnipeg Rifles and the Canadian Scottish Regiment of Victoria. The 7th Canadian Infantry Brigade, containing these units, was at that time commanded by Maj.-Gen. Harry W. Foster of Picton, Ont., and Halifax, who is president of the court trying Meyer.

Meyer said his tank driver was fatally wounded and "my clothing became impregnated with leaking petrol and ignited. The fire was put out, however."

The S. S. general said that in the evacuation of wounded "your wounded were taken back with my wounded and those who died were buried alongside my own soldiers." He claimed the German field hospital at Caron, eight miles southwest of Caen, was "bombed by the R.A.F. while your own wounded were lying on the operating table."

ONTARIO GOVT. CRACKS DOWN ON RAFFLES, BINGOS

Must be Stopped Says Attorney General Except in Special Cases

Toronto, Dec. 19 —(CP)—Prosecution of persons staging lotteries, raffles and bingo games, banned by the Ontario Attorney-General's Department, will be left to discretion of local authorities until the start of the new year, after which the government will invoke the new ruling, it was announced today.

Announcement of the ban was made by Attorney-General Leslie Blackwell last night and the Department pointed out today that any local enquiries should be directed to local crown attorneys.

The order was designed to prevent promoters and racketeers making illicit gains through lotteries, raffles and bingos. Only exceptions will be "occasional" bingo games and raffles for religious or charitable purposes. Lotteries will be prohibited without exception.

"Regular bingo games, such as those every-Tuesday-night affairs, will be banned," a Department spokesman said in expanding on last night's announcement. "But an occasional bingo may be held by religious or charitable organizations if the benefits go to religious or charitable organizations.

Schemes in which residents of Ontario paid a small sum of money and took a chance mushroomed during the war from tiny neighborhood affairs to big business proportions.

Once a flourishing racket in the province, the lotteries had been stamped out when the war started. Then the schemes were revived for war charity purposes and were mostly conducted by organizations registered under the War Charities Act (Dominion).

When the war ended, many enterprises involving raffles, lotteries and bingo games were still in existence. The need for money for war charities had disappeared, and what to do with the new crop of games of chance stood out as one of the first post-war problems for law enforcement officials.

The answer came last night when Mr. Blackwell's announcement rang down the curtain on monster bingos, sales of tickets on cars and houses, and raffles on which cash prizes or war bonds were offered to holders of "lucky tickets."

$2,022,473,800 TOTAL FIGURE OF 9TH VICTORY LOAN

Largest Subscription In Country's History Says Mr. Ilsley In Announcing Total

Ottawa, Dec. 19 —(CP)—Final total sales in Canada's Ninth Victory Loan stands at $2,022,473,800, Finance Minister Ilsley announced today. Largest loan subscription in the country's history, the total compares with the $1,568,927,350 worth of bonds bought in the eighth loan.

"These figures speak for themselves at home and abroad," Mr. Ilsley said. "They reflect clearly the extent of Canada's gratitude for victory and of Canada's faith in the future."

Canada's Ninth Victory Loan launched last October had a minimum objective of $1,500,000,000, the biggest ever. Of that total individual Canadians were asked to subscribe a minimum of $800,000,000. Thus the total objective was oversubscribed by approximately 35 per cent and the individual objective by approximately 50 per cent.

Investment by individuals in the ninth loan amounted to $1,221,341,350, an increase of $385,000,000 over the amount of sales to individuals in the last loan.

The average purchase of all individuals was $415.20 compared to an average purchase of $263.61 in the previous campaign. The number of applications stood at 2,947,636, a reduction of 230,639 from the total number of applications received in the eighth loan.

The amount purchased by large investors, including corporations, amounted to $801,132,150.

A spectacular increase took place in sales on the monthly savings and deferred payment plans exclusive of payroll and assigned pay applications. These purchases out of income in the general canvass totalled $140,133,750, or an increase of approximately $78,000,000.

Gen. Wainwright Principal Witness

Manila, Dec. 19 — (AP)—Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright, by deposition, will be one of the principal witnesses at the war crimes trial of Lt.-Gen. Masa Haru Homma, to whom he was forced to surrender.

The deposition of the United States commander at the fall of Corregidor, will be one of the principal documents submitted to the military commission which will try Homma Jan. 3 on charges including responsibility for the cruel Bataan death march, a prosecution official said today.

A fidgety Homma was returned in disgrace today to the palatial residence from which in 1942 he had watched Corregidor captives forced to march in humiliation. There, where he once lived as a conqueror, he pleaded innocent at his arraignment on charges of responsibility for the death march and for 67,000 deaths among American and Filipino prisoners of war, internees and civilians.

Butter Replaces Gold as Currency In Topsy-Turvy Economy of France

By MAURICE DESJARDINS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Paris, Dec 19—(CP)—Butter has replaced gold as currency in the topsy-turvy economy of France. Here they have a "butter standard" just as there is a "cigaret standard" in Amsterdam and Berlin.

Butter has become the aristocrat of the French black market, which still flourishes on a huge scale.

Butter has practically disappeared from the legal market. Once one of France's most important exports, it has become a luxury available only to those who can afford to pay between $6 and $8 a pound.

Most farmers of Normandy and Brittany, assured of selling their milk at good prices, do not even bother to churn it into butter. A small quantity goes into warehouses where it spoils while waiting to be picked up by clandestine dealers.

Not only butter but meat, sugar, textiles, shoes, tea, coffee, cheese, chocolate and building materials remain in the grip of black marketeers.

During the occupation, black market activity was considered a form of patriotic resistance, with the saying, "what goes to the black market does not go to the Germans." The Germans are gone but the black market remains, despite the efforts of all government authorities.

However, there is much bribery and dealers who have black market permission to drive their food-laden trucks to Paris think nothing of slipping 100,000 francs to a food inspector as the price of silence. Their profits often run into millions of francs a month

Tentacles of the black market reach everywhere. Repatriated prisoners-of-war sell their clothing coupons at fancy prices and miners in the northern provinces sell their extra soap rations to buy meat for their families.

On a larger scale, rural municipalities sell their shoe allowance in order to buy badly-needed fertilizers. Black market activity also has been reported in penicillin, thermometers and surgical instruments.

Paris papers agreed the only way to end the black market is to smother it with supplies which could sell at regular prices. Meanwhile the black market patron still has to spend $500 for a suit, $10 for a pound of cheese, $2 for a package of American cigarets and $8 for a gallon of gasoline.

Last Element of Canadians, Other Than Occupation Forces, To Leave Continent by Jan. 31

By BILL BOSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Amsterdam, Dec. 19 (CP Cable)—A schedule released today for the clean up of all Canadian troops in Holland and Germany except the occupational force, shows that the last elements of headquarters, Canadian forces in The Netherlands, will leave Holland for the United Kingdom Jan. 31, the final repatriation draft.

The bulk of headquarters forces will break up Jan. 2 when No. 51 Company, C.W.A.C., and No. 1 Canadian base post office also move.

The full time table follows:

Dec. 29—Headquarters army troops area.

Dec. 30—Miscellaneous drafts from No. 1 Canadian Ordnance demobilization depot.

Dec. 31—No. 1 Company catering pool.

Jan. 1—Canadian sections of the 1st and 2nd Echelons, General Headquarters, other than parts required for the occupation force.

Jan. 2—Headquarters Canadian forces in The Netherlands, less elements required to supervise the remainder of the repatriation: Canadian Base Reinforcement Battalion; 51 Company C.W.A.C.; No. 1 Canadian Base Post Office.

Jan. 3—Nos. 35 and 36 Canadian Army Troops Composite Company.

Jan. 4—No. 7 Canadian Provost Company; 1st Canadian Army Signals.

Jan. 5—Part of No. 4 Canadian Reinforcement Battalion; part of 1st Canadian Army leave centre, Amsterdam.

Jan. 8—No. 2 Canadian base reinforcement group.

Jan. 13—No. 1 Canadian General Hospital, Nijmegen.

Jan. 15—The remainder of No. 1 Canadian Ordnance demobilization depot.

Jan. 20—The remainder of No. 4 Canadian Base Reinforcement Battalion through which all Canadian repats go en route home.

Jan. 31—Final shutdown of headquarters Canadian forces in The Netherlands with personnel proceedings direct to the United Kingdom.

'USELESS TO GUESS' WHEN RATIONING OF LIQUOR TO END

Webster Says it May Cease "Sometime in 1946, Probably Early in Year"

Toronto, Dec. 19 (CP)—Commissioner William G. Webster of the Ontario Liquor Control Board said last night that although it would be "useless to hazard a guess" as to when provincial liquor rationing would end, there was possibility it would cease "sometime in 1946 and possibly early in the year."

Just returned from a Pacific Coast visit, Mr. Webster was commenting on a report from Victoria Monday night which quoted a "reliable source" as saying liquor rationing would end in Ontario Dec. 31.

He said that until the holiday rush is over the commission could not begin to canvass its position as to supplies and decide on a date for lifting of rationing.

"With liquor rations already quadrupled and 1,500,000 permits out, we might wake up on Jan. 1 to find our stocks sadly depleted," he added.

Abandonment of beer rationing was "another matter," he said, since Ontario was getting more beer now than ever before in its history.

"The big relief will come when needed commodities which the public wants but can't buy are available again. Then the demand for non-essentials will go down."

Liquor rationing in Ontario at present is divided into half-monthly periods. In each period permit holders may purchase two bottles of domestic rye or Canadian-type Scotch, or rum or gin. Only one bottle of imported Scotch is allowed a permit holder in each month but along with it the purchaser may buy a bottle of domestic spirits. The beer ration is 24 pints a month.

Receiving Large Shipments

"We are receiving large shipments from all the distilleries but with recent increases in the ration and number of permits we have a new condition that makes all our figures on past performances of very little value," Mr. Webster said in a statement which noted that lifting of the rationing in the New year "is undoubtedly a possibility."

"We have made extensive preparations to take care of the holiday demand and as soon as sales figures are available to enable us to estimate our January position a further statement will be made."

Chiang Kai-Shek Returns to Nanking

Shanghai, Dec. 19 — (AP) — President Chiang Kai-Shek returned triumphantly to Nanking yesterday — back to the pre-war capital from which he and his government were driven by the Japanese in 1937.

Accompanied by Madame Chiang, he flew there in a Chinese-manned aircraft from Peiping.

Meanwhile, this city prepared to welcome tomorrow Gen. Geo. G. Marshall, United States Ambassador who probably will fly on to Nanking the following day. Plans for a Chiang-Marshall meeting have not been made yet, but in Chungking the World Daily News said Gen. Marshall would meet the Chinese leader in Nanking and then accompany him to Chungking.

AMERY HANGED FOR HIGH TREASON IN LONDON JAIL

Son of Former Secretary of State for India for Broadcasting Nazi Propaganda

London, Dec. 19 —(CP)— John Amery, 33-year-old son of a former British cabinet minister, was hanged at Wandsworth Prison today for high treason to his King and Country.

The one-time playboy, convicted of broadcasting Nazi propaganda from Europe during the war, went to the gallows at 9 a.m. (4 a.m. E.S.T.)

Led from a cell next to that of William (Lord Haw Haw) Joyce, awaiting death for the same offence, the traitor scion of a prominent family was executed under a clear sky after a night of drizzling rain.

Famed Hangman Officiated.

The trap was sprung by Albert Pierrepont, famed British hangman who last week executed Josef Kramer and 10 other members of the Belsen gang in Germany. At 9:08 official notification was posted outside the prison that "judgment of death this day was executed on John Amery."

He was the fifth British civilian to die for treason committed during the Second Great War.

Witnesses testified at the trial of Amery, son of L. S. Amery, former Secretary of State for India and one-time First Lord of the Admiralty, that he had been selected by the Germans to be the British Quisling.

Amery's actress wife, Una Wing, and his brother left the prison about an hour before the hanging. His parents visited the prison last night.

Amery was living on the Riviera when the war started and, although he had shown no previous interest in Nazism or politics, soon was heard broadcasting from France, Germany, Italy and other countries

He said in his broadcasts that the German army was defending European civilization, and urged Britain to surrender.

Federal Officers Pick Up Suspect

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Dec. 19 —(CP) — United States Federal officers have picked up a suspect for whom they have been searching for more than a week in connection with the round-up of the white slave ring which has been luring young Canadian girls to resorts here, R. Norman Kirchgraber, Assistant U. S. Attorney announced yesterday.

Mr. Kirchgraber said the man is held on a charge of harboring a Canadian girl. Fourteen Canadian girls and 14 defendants were now in custody in Buffalo.

MEAT RATIONING TO CONTINUE

Ottawa, Dec. 19. (CP)—No thought is being given at the moment to the discontinuance of meat rationing in Canada, Finance Minister Ilsley said yesterday in the Commons.

He was replying to John Bracken, Progressive Conservative leader, who also asked why the government had not reinstituted meat rationing prior to September last.

20TH PARLIAMENT PROROGUED AFTER LENGTHY SESSION

Efforts to Establish An Enduring Peace Must be First Concern Says Throne Speech

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Dec. 19—(CP)—Canada's 20th parliament, called to its first session in September, was prorogued yesterday after three months of debate and study devoted mainly to international measures and domestic legislation aimed at aiding the transition from war to peace.

A review of the work accomplished was contained in a 1,200-word Speech from the Throne, read in the senate to a small representation of members from the 245-seat commons and of the 96-seat senate.

Many members from both Houses had already left for their homes when the commons wound up its work and moved to the upper House for the prorogation ceremony.

The speech, read by Hon. Thibaudeau Rinfret, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court and deputy to the Governor-General, recalled how parliament had approved the United Nations charter and the Bretton Woods international monetary agreement.

"Efforts to establish an enduring peace must be the first concern of all nations," said the speech. "An essential step towards world peace is the relief of human suffering occasioned by the war and restoration of countries physically damaged by war.

"To the end, the further appropriations you have made for international relief and rehabilitation will be of the utmost service."

6 British Admirals Given Knighthoods

London, Dec. 19. (Reuters)—Knighthoods for six British admirals, and the retirement of a top figure in the Royal Air Force were announced in the London Gazette last night.

Admirals knighted were: Vice Admiral W. G. Tennant, who handled the organizing of preparing, towing and placing the mulberry harbors and blockships for the Normany invasion;

Rear Admiral T. H. Troubridge, fifth sea lord of the Admiralty responsible for co-ordination of Naval Air policy;

Rear Admiral Cecil H. J. Harcourt, commander-in-chief at Hong Kong;

Admiral Sir Algernon U. Willis, lord commissioner of the Admiralty and chief of Naval personnel;

Vice Admiral Sir Edward N. Syfret, commander-in-chief of the Home fleet;

Rear Admiral John A. V. Morse, chief naval officers of Malaya.

The first three named received the Order of Knight Commander of the Bath and the others Knight Commander of the Order of the British Empire.

Wild Animals Have Run of Rural Scotland Since Keepers Went to War

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Inverness, Scotland, Dec. 19 —(CP)— The gamekeepers have been away to the wars and throughout rural Scotland farmers are wailing that foxes, rabbits, squirrels, jays, pigeons and enormous numbers of crows are causing livestock and crop losses unheard of for generations.

The Agriculture Department is supporting landowners and farmers in their appeals to have gamekeepers and trappers — the experts who know how to deal with vermin effectively—released from the forces more rapidly.

Experiences in Saskatchewan and Ontario, where wolves have been reported farther south in recent years than since the pioneers arrived, have their counterpart in Scotland although the pests are other than wolves.

Foxes, usually bowled over by watchful gamekeepers before they can do much harm, have been seen in new areas. In Perthshire, Fifeshire and other regions where sheep graze in the hills, foxes have caused heavy losses to lambs. In one fox den, the remains of seven lambs were found and in one hill area more than 2,000 foxes have been killed during the last two years.

Wild cats, almost extinct before the war, are appearing in larger numbers, but even without their deadly assistance, weasels, foxes and their allies are causing what farmers call "appalling" losses among poultry.

As in Canada, shortages of manpower, ammunition and time for hunting have given predatory animals a chance to prosper. Farmers in the past often complained that their crops were damaged by the grouse, a protected game bird shot only by the owners or lessees of moors during a restricted hunting season beginning Aug. 12 each year. But in 1945 the grouse have almost disappeared, victims of foxes, hawks, weasels and other beasts and birds of prey, or of disease. The gamekeepers are needed to restore these game resources, a process which may take years.

Truman Calls For Merger Air, Navy Army Departments

Single Cabinet Member Will Head New Set-up in Govt.

Washington, Dec. 19 — (AP)—President Truman called today for merger of the United States Army and Navy into a single department of National Defence with the air forces fully equal to the land and sea arms.

Stepping into the middle of a long and bitter struggle between the army and navy top commands, Mr. Truman followed in almost every detail the official War Department plan for unification.

And he dashed one prime navy hope by declaring in a special message to Congress:

"Further studies of the general problem would serve no useful purpose."

Navy witnesses appearing at Senate military committee hearings on the merger proposal have pleaded against hasty action and urged additional studies of all phases of unification.

Declaring that "I urge this as the best means of keeping the peace," Mr. Truman proposed that the new defence department be headed by a single cabinet member operating with one under-secretary and several assistant secretaries, all civilians. There would be a departmental Chief of Staff, with a commander for each of the three component branches — army, navy and air.

Either the president or the Secretary of Defence could take up directly with the separate commanders matters of basic military strategy and policy and the division of the department's budget.

No Domination.

Key staff positions in department, Mr. Truman said, should be filled with officers drawn from all the services "so that the thinking of the department would not be dominated by any one or two of the services."

"As an additional precaution," he added, "it would be wise if the post of chief of staff were rotated among the several services, whenever practicable and advisable. . . ."

Taking note of strong opposition from Secretary Forrestal and other high-ranking navy officials, the President said:

"However strong the opposition that has been expressed by some of our outstanding senior officers and civilians, I can assure the Congress that once unification has been determined upon as the policy of this nation, there is no officer or civilian in any service who will not contribute his utmost to make the unification a success."

In his 5,500-word message, Mr. Truman called again for Congressional approval of universal military training, saying it has met "with the overwhelming approval of the people of the United States."

The President termed unification legislation another essential step — along with universal training — in the development of a comprehensive and continuous program for our future safety and for the peace and security of the world.

5 FREIGHT CARS OF C.N.R. DITCHED NEAR KINGSTON

Caboose Burned in Rear-end Collision — No One is Injured

Kingston, Dec. 19. (CP)—Five freight cars were ditched, a caboose burned, and a heavy 6100-type locomotive left the tracks when two Canadian National Railways freight trains were involved in a rear end collision at 8.40 p.m. last night one mile west of the outer station.

The collision did not interrupt traffic on the double-track Montreal-Toronto route, as trains were re-routed over sidings in the Kingston yard.

Railway officials reported that extra E6142 collided with the rear of extra E3500 which was standing in the Kingston yard. No one was injured. The caboose of E3500 burst into flames and the Kingston fire department was called to fight the fire.

The Perth Road, one of the main highways leading out of Kingston, was blocked by the mishap.

A shunting engine raced from Kingston to fight the fire, and Auxiliary trains sped from Kingston and Belleville to clear the lines.

Official to be Hanged Close to Crematorium

London, Dec. 19 (Reuters) — Paul Hoffman, who was in charge of the crematorium at the German concentration camp at Maidanek in Poland and who was sentenced to death by a Lublin court, will be publicly hanged close to the crematorium by order of the Polish justice minister, Warsaw radio reported.

CFMN. E. J. FLIELER HOME FROM OVERSEAS

Cfmn. E. J. Flieler returned from overseas last Saturday on the Queen Elizabeth after three and one-half years' service. He was met at Kingston by his sister, Pte. G. I. Flieler, C.W.A.C.

Enlisting on October 2nd, 1941, he went overseas in July of the next year. Going to France soon after D-Day, he served in Belgium, Holland and Germany with the 4th Canadian Armoured Division, S. Alberta Regiment. During his period overseas he was fortunate in meeting many relatives and friends from home. He is now enjoying a 30-day leave at the home of his sister, Mrs. C. W. MacAllister, Rednersville.

CHEESE PRODUCERS TO HOLD MEETING

Attention of district cheese producers is drawn to the fact that the 13th annual convention of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association will be held in Toronto at the Royal York Hotel on the 3rd and 4th of January when prominent government and agricultural men are scheduled to address the meeting.

Among those scheduled to address the convention are H. H. Hannam, President, Canadian Federation of Agriculture, and Dr. H. Barton, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, Ottawa. The last day of the convention will be open for resolutions and discussion, while following a meeting of provincial directors in the afternoon, the election of officers for 1946 will take place.

MURNEY HILL GRADE MADE GOING TOUGH

With automobiles and trucks commonly used for trucking purposes, the sight of a man carrying a heavy bag of grain along West Bridge Street on Tuesday afternoon aroused suspicion of other pedestrians with result that police officers determined the bag had been stolen.

Claimed by police to have been in an intoxicated condition, the man had picked the bag of grain off a bumper of a parked auto and had carried it a couple of blocks before the grade on Murney Hill made the going a bit too tough. The man was apprehended and charged under the Liquor Control Act.

CHIMNEY FIRE

Overheated stovepipes which set fire to the ceiling brought the fire reels to 23 West Bridge St. Wednesday morning with small damage resulting before the blaze was extinguished. Firemen reported there was little damage other than the scorched ceiling.

PROPERTY DAMAGE ESTIMATED AT $100

Property damage estimated at well over $100 resulted Wednesday morning at the corner of Coleman and West Dundas streets when two autos came into collision as they were turning the corner.

Harry Brason, Picton, was driving east along Dundas Street when in turning north onto Coleman he apparently cut the corner too sharply with result that his vehicle came into collision with another coming in the opposite direction and driven by Torkel McHold of Rednersville.

POLICE BLOTTER

Despite the fact that there is no apparent shortage of Christmas trees in the city, a certain Charles Street resident Tuesday night complained to police the tree which he had brought home for setting up in the family living room had been stolen. After bringing it home he had placed it temporarily on the verandah but later on in the evening the tree was missing.

Following complaints of a disturbance being created at a local restaurant police apprehended a local young man on a charge under the L.C.A. Found in his possession were three beer books and two liquor permits.

A "Stoney Lonesome" resident was arrested by police on a charge of assault causing bodily harm, and will appear in local police court.

STORM UNABATED

London, Dec. 19 — (Reuters)—A two-day gale lashing Britain's coast continued unabated today as 60 to 70-mile-an-hour winds brought Channel shipping to a virtual halt.

The coastal town of Sandgate was heavily damaged and at other Channel towns piers were torn up and wrenched from their moorings.

Coastal roads were closed to traffic and vehicles were diverted to inland highways.

(Stoco-Flint, Mich.)

John C. Courneyea, formerly of Stoco, Hastings County, died at Flint, Mich., on Dec. 8th. He was born eighty-nine years ago at Sorel, Quebec. The early years of his life were passed at Stoco and later he moved with his family to Standish, Mich., where he resided for forty-six years. After his wife died he lived for seven years with his daughter in Flint, Mich.

Surviving him are seven daughters, Mrs. Ben Rashotte, Belleville; Mrs. Casey Duffy, Bay City, Mich.; Mrs. George Caldwell, Standish, Mich.; Mrs. Charles Webber, Mrs. Joe Perrior, Mrs. George McDonald and Mrs. John Mardment, all of Flint, Mich.; six sons, Bruno and William of Detroit, Mich.; Paul of Flint, Mich.; Louis and Harry of Bay City, Mich., and Ernest of Gladwin, Mich. Also thirty grandchildren and twelve great grandchildren.

GEORGE HAROLD WHEELER
(Formerly of Belleville)

George Harold Wheeler, formerly of this city, died on Dec. 12, at his home 694 Egan Avenue, Verdun, Quebec.

The late Mr. Wheeler was born in Belleville fifty-two years ago and was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wheeler. His father died some years ago and his mother now resides in Kitchener. Old friends here will regret to learn of his death.

Surviving him besides his mother, are his wife, the former Elizabeth Peoples, formerly of Belleville; two sons and one daughter, all in Montreal; one sister, Mrs. Violet Anderson, Kitchener; two brothers, Gene Wheeler of Belleville, and Harvey Wheeler of Trenton.

The funeral was held on Saturday, Dec. 15th., at Verdun, and interment took place in Mount Royal Cemetery.

LATE JAMES MOYER
(Marmora)

Marmora, Dec. 19 (Special) — The funeral of James Moyer was held on Monday morning at ten o'clock from the home of Mr. Alex Quinn, Marmora Township, to Sacred Heart Church where Requiem Mass was celebrated by Rev. H. J. Farrell.

The funeral was held under auspices of Canadian Legion No. 237. The pall bearers were Burton Johnston, Roy Jones, Martin Burke, Breen O'Connor, Frank Lloyd and Clayton Bedore. Last Post and Reveille were sounded by Comrade G. Brooks. Interment took place in Sacred Heart cemetery.

LATE MRS. OLIVE DOHERTY

The funeral of Mrs. Olive Doherty, wife of Mr. Frank Doherty, 42 South Foster Avenue, was held this morning from the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, to St. Michael's Church where Requiem Mass was celebrated by the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Nicholson, V.G.

Interment took place at St. James' cemetery and the committal prayers were said by the Rev. Father A. L. O'Donnell.

The bearers were Gilbert Seames, William Seames, Albert Seames, George Seames, Joseph Seames and John Sword.

JAMES SEELEY

James Seeley, the one-day-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie B. Seeley, R.R. 5, Belleville, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Tuesday, Dec. 18th. The funeral took place this afternoon from the Martin Funeral Home and interment was at Victoria cemetery.

Moon's Eclipse Viewed by Many In the District

Resembling a huge orange-colored ball, a totally eclipsed moon looked down on curious earth humans from an almost cloudless sky Tuesday night.

Visibility in the city and district was practically perfect and many residents braved the wintry weather to view the phenomenon.

The earth's shadow started to cloud the outer tip of the moon shortly after seven thirty, and gradually crept across the brilliant surface until at nine thirty the eclipse was complete.

The moon achieved a dull orange glow during the totality and in the dark velvet of the sky bright stars winked as the coppery color faded and brightened during the earth's passage across the lunar path. At approximately 11:05 p.m. the shadow had disappeared.

Astronomers stated today that the satellite's copper hue during the total phase of eclipse seemed brighter than in the last eclipse which occurred on August 26, 1942.

STRANDED THREE DAYS

Gibraltar, Dec. 19 — (Reuters) — Homebound British troops aboard the Canadian Pacific liner Duchess of Richmond spent their third day stranded at sea today.

The southwesterly gale which forced the Duchess to turn back after she had started for Britain was still blowing at full strength. The ship, unable to re-enter Gibraltar after hitting a breakwater yesterday, has taken shelter on the east side of the Rock.

Geo. Glover Retires After 23 Years Service with Royal Bank in City

A familiar figure in banking and business circles for the past twenty-three years, Mr. George Glover, 37 Sinclair Street, is retiring from his position as messenger for the Belleville branch of the Royal Bank of Canada at the end of the year.

Mr. Glover has attained his 70th year and is being superannuated from the service. He is being succeeded by Mr. George Shaw of this city who recently returned from overseas after five years service with the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps.

During his daily trips to business and other places in the city over his long tenure of service, Mr. Glover estimated that he has walked nearly the equivalent of once around the world.

He experimented with a pedometer, a gadget which if attached to a leg will record the mileage covered by the wearer, and discovered that his daily routine averaged six miles per day. This represents in turn a yearly average of 1,872 miles and a total of 23,336.

Admires Local Merchants

"That meant lots of pairs of shoes," Mr. Glover smiled. Throughout his long service he has never had any accidents and has a high esteem of the integrity of Belleville merchants and business men.

"A bank messenger is generally classed as an undesirable citizen" Mr. Glover sallied with a twinkle in his eye, "but I was always received with courtesy and kindness. Never in my career as a messenger did I come across a business man or any other bank customer who deliberately tried to confuse or cheat me."

Mr. I. G. Hefkey, manager of the Royal Bank here paid a sincere tribute to the ability of Mr. Glover. "His amiable personality made Mr. Glover a favorite with all. Not once in my ten years here as manager of this branch have I received a complaint regarding Mr. Glover," he said.

Started With Lock Company

Mr. Glover was born in East Whitby seventy years ago and came to Belleville in 1911 where he was employed as a moulder with the Springer Lock Company, now the Corbin Lock Company. He enlisted with the 59th Canadian infantry battalion in 1915 and went overseas in April of the following year. He went to France in September of the same year and later was invalided back to England.

He returned to Canada in September 1918 and resumed his job at the lock plant.

In May, 1923, he became associated with the Royal Bank branch here as messenger, a position he has held since. Mr. Glover is married and has one son Lawrence, and a grandson Winslow Beamish, both of whom are veterans of the Second Great War.

He has seen a lot of changes in the business and industrial life of the city, and, he says, the younger merchants possess the same business acumen and ability as did those of two decades ago.

Mr. Glover served under four managers during his term of service. These include Mr. G. Moffatt; J. R. Dyer; W. A. Parker and I. G. Hefkey. He has witnessed the passing panorama of staff changes down the years and holds all with whom he came in contact in the highest regard.

Veteran's Son Squared Accounts With Hun for Injuries Done to Father

Way back in 1916 when he lay severely wounded after the bloody battle for Cambrai, France, the then Private Cecil Reid, who later became a double amputation, took a vow that he would "square the debt with the Germans if it took a lifetime."

Private Reid, who was a member of the famous Princess Patricia Canadian Light Infantry, later recovered and returned to Canada and Belleville where he now resides at 12 Green Street.

On Tuesday of this week twenty-nine years after he vowed retribution on the Germans, he learned that the debt had been paid, with interest.

For on that day he heard his stalwart son, Rifleman George W. Reid, who returned from overseas last week with the Queen's Own Rifles, say, "Dad, your debt to the Germans has been paid."

"I squared your accounts with those Nazi so-and-so's and at least a dozen of them will do no more harm," the twenty-three-year-old infantryman told his father.

The young soldier enlisted in 1941 with the Royal Canadian Engineers and trained at Orillia, Toronto, Debert and Halifax. Going overseas in March, 1943, he was attached to the Winnipeg Grenadiers later transferring to the Canadian Scottish with which he saw heavy fighting. He was transferred to the Queen's Own for repatriation purposes shortly before he returned home.

Saw Considerable Fighting.

Rifleman Reid fought with the "Scotties" in France, Belgium, Germany and Holland. He was in the hell of Caen and the bloody gap of Falaise.

Born in Point Anne he received his early education there later becoming a student at Belleville Collegiate Institute. Prior to enlistment he was employed at the Malton, Ont., airport in the capacity of electrician. A brother, Norman, 18, sailed on the Great Lakes during the past season, and a sister, Olive, resides at home.

An uncle of the young soldier the late George Fitzgerald, was killed in the First Great War while serving with the Dorset Regiment. He was one of Britain's outstanding solo euphonium players and was studying at Kneller Hall, England, to become a bandmaster when the war broke out.

Mrs. Cecil Reid, is a member of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Army and Navy Veterans here. His father is steward of the Belleville branch of that organization.

British Military Police Battle Armed Gang of German Youths

Duesseldorf, Germany, Dec. 19 (Reuters) — British military police fought a pitched street battle with revolvers and Sten guns when rounding up an armed gang of German youths who had terrorized the district, raiding farms and staging holdups.

There were no police casualties but several of the gangsters were wounded. About 20 arrests were made.

The battle started when 14 gangsters, firing pistols, emerged from a hideout in a house after it had been surrounded by a force of 350 military police and German civilian police recruits.

One, who broke through the police cordon, was chased four miles across country by a British military policeman firing a Sten gun.

During the chase the policeman mounted the foot plate of the engine of a passing train and continued firing from there.

The gangster was eventually wounded and arrested.

Average age of the youths rounded up was 17.

Hitler Once Planned to Wage War on Turkey

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

Nuernberg, Dec. 19 — (AP) — Adolf Hitler's top secret war orders showed today that the Fuehrer once planned to invade the Middle East, to wage war on Turkey if necessary and made ready in 1940 to occupy the whole of France.

When Col.-Gen. Gustav Jodl, German army Chief of Staff, was captured last May he reluctantly surrendered a leather brief case which he seemed to cherish more than any other possession. The case contained more than 50 of Hitler's original war orders.

"I want them preserved for posterity," Jodl suggested.

Some of the orders have been submitted in evidence in the war crimes trial, in which Jodl is a defendant. The remainder, kept in a bomb-proof safe, were made available to the Associated Press.

War order No. 9, dated Nov. 29, 1939, indicated that Hitler considered Great Britain his most formidable enemy and that the "prerequisite for final victory is to beat England." To do this, once the Germans had disposed of the "British - French Expeditionary Force," Hitler planned that his navy and air force should bomb and blockade Britain into submission.

Apparently realizing that he had underestimated British tenacity, Hitler issued order No. 30 on May 23, 1941, announcing his intention of supporting Iraq against Britain as the first step of a Middle East offensive designed to weaken Britain.

..ot putting all his eggs in the Iraqian basket, however, Hitler also ordered a "co-ordination of the fight against the British position in the Mediterranean and the Near and Middle East by a concentric attack which is planned from Libya through Egypt, from Bulgaria through Turkey and possibly also from Transcaucasia through Iran."

Six months after France surrendered to Germany in the early stages of the war, Hitler became restive over possible "subversive resistance movements . . . in those parts of the French Colonial Empire (North Africa) which are now commanded by Gen. (Maxine) Weygand."

Order No. 19, dated Dec. 10, 1940, but later cancelled, stated that if such resistance appeared, "the quick occupation of sections of the French Motherland now still unoccupied is to be prepared."

Capt. G. Scott Visits Relatives And Friends Here

Former well-known newspaperman of this city and district, Captain Godfrey Scott, Toronto Scottish Regiment, a son of Mrs. J. Scott, Moira Street, recently returned from lengthy overseas service and at the present is spending a few days of his furlough in this city with friends and relatives.

"Scotty" as he is more familiarly known in this city, enlisted with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in 1940 and was given the rank of second lieutenant. He was posted to the Peterborough Training Centre where he spent eight months as an instructor.

Later he took a qualifying course at the Brockville Officers' Training School, graduating with the rank of first lieutenant. He was sent to Camp Borden where he took a "support" course.

In July, 1944, "Scotty" went overseas and was attached to the Toronto Scottish Regiment with which unit he saw considerable service in France, Holland and Belgium. He has had lengthy experience in an administrative capacity serving as adjutant for various units. During his tenure of service overseas he was stationed in Ghent, Belgium, as a permanent member of a courts martial board.

Mrs. Scott is with her husband here while their two sons, Danny and Gavin, are with Mrs. Scott's parents in Guelph.

Capt. Ruth Peck Receives Royal Red Cross Award

Captain (Matron) Ruth F. Peck, R.C.A.M.C., daughter of Mrs. Harry Dempsey, Carrying Place, Ont., has been awarded the Royal Red Cross for distinguished service in the field, it was announced today.

Outstanding work in caring for 600 emaciated prisoners of war released from a German concentration camp assisted in bringing the coveted award to Captain Peck. In her opinion, "no punishment could be too severe for those responsible for these atrocities".

"The Germans were arrogant and cruel looking. They turned Canadian nurses when they were offered treatment."

Captain Peck is a graduate of the 1935 class of Kingston General Hospital and joined the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps with the rank of second lieutenant in 1940. She was posted to Petawawa and later Kingston, then going to Cobourg where she joined a hospital unit then in the process of mobilization.

Going overseas in 1943 she was attached to the nursing staff of a 119 bed hospital at Bramshot, England, and was promoted to the rank of captain (matron). Later she was posted to Colchester where she remained until May, 1945 when she flew to Brussels from London where she assisted in the treatment of the prisoners of war.

On May 8 she was sent to a large German naval hospital at Wilhelmshaven in Northern Germany where she served until September of last year, then returning to her former post at Bramshot.

Captain Peck expects to return to Canada at the beginning of the coming year.

HEAT WAVE IN AUSTRALIA

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 19 (CP) —While Canadians were shivering bare-legged Australian women today were wearing sleeveless, "midriff" dresses and men discarded coats to gain relief from the fierce heat wave which beset the continent.

Temperatures rose to 120 degrees in the shade at some inland points, and in New South Wales the mercury has topped the 100-mark daily for nine days. It was 101 here Monday, but southerly winds today reduced temperatures to the 70s.

Eleven death have been attributed to the heat wave.

Germans Lost 3.5 Million Killed, Missing

By DANIEL DELUCE

Nurnberg, Dec. 19—(AP)—The German Army High Command admitted secretly just before its last great gamble, the Ardennes counter-attack, that Germany had lost 3,544,284 men killed or missing in action—65 per cent of them on the Soviet front—in more than five years of war, it was learned today from a Nazi document.

Prepared for the Fuehrer's headquarters, this casualty report by the intelligence branch of the German Army indicated that Hitler publicly told the truth about the low price in Teutonic lives he paid for conquering Poland, but was an inveterate liar thereafter.

The report did not include wounded, as Allied Army tabulations do, but an attached note stated there were 729,031 Wehrmacht wounded and sick in hospital in Germany at the time.

2,300,000 in Russia

Soviet officials have said that German casualties in the East, including dead, wounded, captured and missing, reached 12,000,000. The Wehrmacht report covering Eastern operations up to Nov. 30, 1944, listed 1,410,728 deaed and 907,050 missing.

Military men estimate that the wounded usually number four times as many as the dead. Applied to the Wehrmacht report, this formula would mean adding more than 5,500,000 to the dead and missing figure of nearly 2,500,000 for a grand total of approximately 8,000,000 in the East.

Hitler's last public remarks on Wehrmacht losses were made Aug. 11, 1942, when he said 350,000 Germans had been killed in the war up to that time. He gave no figures on wounded or missing.

However, the Wehrmacht statistics listed 701,734 army, navy and air force dead for the same period — double what Hitler had reported.

The formerly highly confidential document is among thousands now at the Nuernberg Palace of Justice but none of the four prosecuting powers has chosen to present it to the International Military Tribunal trying 21 defendants on war crimes charges.

Figures Broken Down.

A special chart accompanied the tabulation to show the Fuehrer graphically how much German army manhood had been expended on the series of fronts from 1939 to the winter of 1944-45.

It listed:

Polish campaign—16,843 dead, 320 missing. Hitler himself had announced total casualties of 44,303, including wounded, at the conclusion of this 27-day campaign.

Africa—10,013 dead (this figure is blurred on the photostatic copy which is available), 90,052 missing. British sources have estimated German casualties in Africa and the Middle East at 150,000, a total nearly reached if wounded are added to the German figures at the rate of four to each man killed.

The Western front up to June 1, 1944, six days before D-Day—65,106 dead, 3,218 missing. This included the "phoney" war of the winter of 1939-40, the seizure of Denmark, Norway, Holland and Belgium and the collapse of France, the Dieppe operation and all other ground activity during this period.

Western front from June to Dec. 1, 1944—54,764 dead, 338,033 missing. Immediately afterward came the battle of the bulge, in which American forces estimated they killed possibly 50,000 Germans.

South front (Italy and Sicily)—47,873 dead, 97,154 missing.

Southeast front (the Balkans and Greek Islands)—24,207 dead, 12,060 missing. This included the conquest of Yugoslavia, Greece and Crete and subsequent operations against guerilla armies. Hitler had asserted that he won the Balkans with 6,056 casualties.

DEATHS

WEST — At 539 St. Clemens Avenue, Toronto, on Monday, December 17, John Richard West, formerly of Stirling and Madoc, in his 75th year.

The funeral will take place from the residence of his son, Mr. W. C. West, Stirling, on Thursday afternoon, December 20th., at 2.30 o'clock. Interment Stirling Cemetery. D18-2t

IN MEMORIAM

HAGERMAN — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Minnie Hagerman, who passed away December 21, 1935.

She has gone across the river
To the shores of ever green,
And we long to see her dear face
But the river flows between.
Some day, some time, our eyes shall see
The face we loved so well;
Some day we'll clasp her loving hand
And never say farewell.

—Ever remembered by Husband and Family.

FRY — In loving memory of a dear son and brother, Harry Fry, who passed away December 19, 1928 — also his infant son, William Leonard, born July 4, 1928, passed away August 3, 1929.

Love's greatest gift—remembrance.

—Never forgotten by his Mother, Father, Sisters and Brothers.

Snow and Rain Dampen U.S.

New York, Dec. 19 — (AP) — Snow and rain, sleet and subzero temperatures dampened and chilled a large part of the United States today and the immediate outlook for better weather was not promising. The prolonged cold wave was directly responsible for at least 34 deaths.

Fresh falls of snow moved into the Atlantic seaboard from the midwest and southwest and falls to a depth of from eight to 12 inches were forecast. Rain and sleet pelted down across many southern states after falls of snow were reported as far south as Macon, Pa.

There was only a mild tempering of the country's cold belt from Eastern Montana westward to Indiana and Illinois and the mercury again today was far below zero in several sections.

New falls of snow hit Northern Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, Southeastern Pennsylvania and Southeastern New York. Heavy winds accompanied the sudden fall in New York City and streets were blanketed under two inches.

Kiwanis Club Hears of Steps Required To Develop Moira R. Valley Project

"If the Hastings County Conservancy Committee accept and carry out the suggestions made by the Provincial Government on the Moira River and river valley following the survey, we can prepare for a program which will make these plans tangible." This was the opinion of Mr. Alex Lucas of the Ontario Department of Planning and Development expressed to the Belleville Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon on Tuesday.

Mr. Lucas told of the steps necessary in making a survey such as the Moira River survey. "First of all, aerial photographs have to be taken of the whole area." The speaker reported that such photographs had been taken in this district. "Over one hundred men are needed for this survey and they will be divided into four main groups. Their work will be to make a complete soil analysis, charting every acre of land as to slope, erosion, etc."

Study Reforestation

"A second group will study the very vital reforestation problem. The pioneers cut down the forests, drained the swamps and ploughed a straight furrow. Unfortunately, they cleared land that was not suitable for agriculture and as a result, reforestation is very badly needed." "Waste land can and should be reclaimed," continued the speaker, "to help keep water control."

"A third group will study the wild life in the district. They will endeavor to ascertain if and why fish and other game life are scarce and if so, make recommendations as to how the problems may be alleviated."

"A group of hydraulic engineers will comprise the fourth group. Their job will be to survey the river and make suggestions as to the most suitable locations for any necessary dams.

"After this work has been completed, the survey will be written up and made available to the public." Mr. Lucas emphasized that it was then up to the various "Conservancy" committees to see that the suggestions contained in the survey are carried out. "The government only suggests the rest is up to the municipality."

Four Planning Divisions

Mr. Lucas stated that there were four separate divisions in rural planning: reforestation, flood control, wild life conservation and contour cultivation.

The speaker illustrated his address with coloured slides showing several waste-land areas that had been reclaimed by careful planning. He urged reforestation and stated that it was the key to 95 per cent of the conservation problem. As a further aid, he suggested that diameter limits should be set and that the smaller trees should not be cut down under any consideration.

"The forest plays a very important part in flood control," he stated, "and should be protected."

"The conservation of wild life is not alone the responsibility of the government," he continued. "The wild life of the district can only be protected if every sportsman plays his part."

"Contour cultivation is a comparatively recent idea, but it will virtually stop erosion and increase the crop 20 per cent. The idea of it is to plow around the contour of the land. The water has to seep into the ground and cannot wash away valuable top soil leaving the land barren. "Strip-cropping" is also very important and although it takes on a "crazy quilt" appearance, it is very modern and a means to the end of saving top-soil."

Can Assist Farmers

Mr. Lucas stated that the provincial government would send soil experts to any part of the province to assist the farmers in these matters.

Mr. Lucas concluded his address by expressing the hope that the Kiwanis would get behind the Moira River survey.

Kiwanian Bob Pringle introduced the speaker and Garn Dobbs expressed the thanks of the club to Mr. Lucas.

At the beginning of the meeting, the club members stood in silent tribute to two of the club members, the late J. O. Herity and Fred Deacon who passed away recently.

The President, Lorne McDougall announced that next week's meeting would be held on Thursday and that annual "Ladies Night" on Friday, January 4th.

THEY BROUGHT HER BACK ALIVE

Tonya Jones, blonde Honolulu poetess, at San Diego, Calif., bids goodbye to the crew of the U.S.S. LST 996 which brought her safely to the mainland after her ill-starred attempt to sail from Hawaii to the U. S. Miss Jones, 32-year-old school teacher, attempted the dangerous crossing of the Pacific alone, in a 30-foot ketch, "The Audacious". Four hundred miles out of Honolulu a storm disabled her craft and she drifted for 30 days until sighted and picked up by the LST.

PICTON

County Hard Hit By Snow Storm Over Weekend

Picton, Dec. 18—Prince Edward County experienced a severe snow storm over the weekend. About two feet of snow fell, with a high wind filling up huge drifts. Travellers state that this county had twice as much snow as in Belleville. Saturday evening the storm assumed blizzard proportions and traffic was small. Snow plows were able to keep single tracks open on main roads, but most side-roads were blocked. Drifting continued yesterday with several light snow falls during the day.

Flood of Mail

Picton post office expects a record volume of mail this year. The rush of cards began Friday and is continuing steadily. Three veterans have been added to the staff and so far they have been able to handle the rush. The volume of parcels is also larger than usual.

Home From Overseas

W. O. John Losee was among those returning to Canada on the hospital ship Nelson. He arrived in Kingston early today. He was awarded the British Empire Medal in January 1945. He enlisted with Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in September 1939 and went overseas three months later. He held the record of service the longest with this unit overseas. He was taken ill in England, just before the Hasty P's returned as a unit.

Four of the Losee family served in the army, the father, Warren, enlisted at the same time as his son and was overseas for a year. Leonard and J. A. also served in the army.

Nursing Sister Home

First Lieut. Lillian G. Caughey of the U. S. Army Nursing Corps, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Simon Caughey, and her brother, Dr. Gordon Caughey, formerly a Squadron Leader in the RCAF. She is on terminal leave, awaiting discharge. Lieut. Caughey is a native of Prince Edward County and served overseas with the U. S. army for two and a half years, in England and France. She was awaiting transfer to the Pacific theatre when VJ-day cancelled these arrangements, and she returned to the United States instead.

Autopsy Reveals Woman Died of Natural Causes

Toronto, Dec. 19 — (CP)—Provincial Police said an autopsy performed on the body of Mrs. Angus McDougall, 55, found in a field near her home on the outskirts of Kincardine last Sunday, revealed the woam ndied of natural causes.

"There is no mystery," an officer said. "The woman apparently suffered a hemorrhage, had rushed outside her home for aid and had collapsed and died."

The autopsy was conducted yesterday by Dr. V. H. Fisher of London, provincial pathologist, who reported the findings to Provincial Police here today.

The body, blood-smeared and frozen, was found by Bill Small, 15-year-old grandson of Mrs. McDougall, as he was on his way to visit her at her home.

Police found bloodstains on the floor of the house and some pieces of broken china.

The woman's husband, a railway section man, has not lived in Kincardine, 45 miles southwest of Owen Sound, for several years. A son, Vernon, recently returned from overseas but was not at home last weekend.

VOTING ENDS TONIGHT

Windsor, Dec. 19 — (CP)—The second back-to-work vote by Local 200, United Automobile Workers of America (C.I.O.), ends tonight at seven o'clock and may lead to a speedy conclusion of the 14-week-old union security strike involving 10,000 workers at the plant of the Ford Motor Company of Canada.

More than 3,500 union members marked ballots yesterday at union headquarters and at sub-offices in the vicinity of the strike-bound automotive plant, and approximately 5,000 others are entitled to vote today.

OLDFIELDS TO RE-WED

Barney Oldfield, 67, one time king of the auto speedway, has announced that he will remarry his first wife, "Bessie," within the next few days. They are shown as they were photographed in Los Angeles, Calif. His last wife, Mrs. Hulda Rae Brader Oldfield, disclosed that he had divorced her in Reno.

Annual Meeting Of Anglers Held; Directors Named

The annual meeting of the Belleville and District Fish and Game Protective Association was held in the Y.M.C.A. Monday evening. The program consisted of officers' reports, passing of resolutions, election of directors and the viewing of sound movies depicting the life of African and South American game.

The following directors were elected for 1946: Arthur W. Bishop, Dr. Van Blakslee, Capt. Wm. Bottum, Fred Croft, Lieut. Col. Wm. Davern, Irvine G. Hefkey, J. H. Legate, "Sandy" Lummis, Stan Palmateer, E. Sandercock, J. E. Shortt and Geo. Wallbridge.

The chairman and officers will be elected at the initial meeting of the 1946 Directors.

The President J. E. Shortt presided and reported on the work of the Ontario Federation, relationships with the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries and the outstanding features of the local Association, the rapid growth in membership and the splendid work done in the matter of restocking and of making surveys.

Captain Wm. Bottum reported a membership of 576 in the local association.

Dr. Blakslee reported that 156 applications for game fish of various types had been filed by the Department and told of the young fish planted in the lakes and streams of this district.

Erle Denyes reported on the recent "Motorcade" and on the plans worked out in connection with flood control and reforestation on the Moira River watershed.

Fred Croft reported on the fishing contests and presented the prizes to the 1945 winners as follows: Speckled Trout, T. Y. Wills; Maskinonge, M. J. Callaghan, Hazen Stairs, Russell Smith; Pickerel, Lionel White, W. R. Juby; Pike, Roy Jose.

A number of recommendations were passed and are to be forwarded to the Ontario Federation and the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries.

Of Traffic

Christmas Day is only a few days away and with it come the joys of the Yuletide season. There is a tendency for people to become a little careless in their traffic habits during this season. Perhaps this is easily understood when it is considered that a person has so many other things on his mind. Will the children like their gifts? Will the sweater fit Uncle George? Has anyone been left off the gift or Christmas card list?

The motorist as well as the pedestrian has these things on his mind. This all adds up to a very dangerous traffic problem.

Every Christmas there are traffic accidents which could be avoided. Many a home's Christmas Day is marred by a traffic accident in some part of the country.

What's to do about it? When one is in traffic, it is well to expel all other thoughts than that of driving from one's mind. A serious accident can happen in a split second and it may mean a lifetime. There is the thought to keep in mind.

Then motorists alone are not to blame for accidents. Pedestrians cause many, no doubt, so whether one is walking or driving it is well to realize that a little care may save a lifetime of mental anguish.

A word to the motorist. If he must have Christmas spirits as well as spirit, let him leave the car in the garage. Besides keeping possibly out of an accident, the walking and the fresh air will do him good.

It is to be hoped that all will co-operate and help to keep the record clear of accidents over the Christmas and New Year's holidays.

Brave Men

The five-ton bomb, variously named "Herman" and "Satan" has been rendered harmless after threatening South Croydon folk for five years. This weapon of war was dropped by Germans and fell in a lumberyard without exploding. For about two hundred days the operation of removing the threat in the bomb has proceeded. Extreme caution had to be observed and even with that the Royal Engineers who worked on it took risk but in precision and carefulness, it was destined to lost its sting. Those who worked on it are brave men and have won recognition by the people of South Croydon and of all Britons for their performance in removal of the menace at so great risk to themselves. Their achievement is the proof of the great care, foresight and precision with which they work.

Whims of Nature

Whims of the weather keep the people in doubt of what is to be. The residents of Lackawanna and Buffalo could never have expected almost six feet of snow to fall and blockade the entire area under millions of tons of "the beautiful." But that is what happened. Something like it happened in Toronto last December and Toronto folk and those who know Toronto well remember the fall of snow which set a record for many years. Buffalo has had the worst of blizzards and can well claim the championship in storms. No city or town will want to have occasion to make any claim to rival or take away Buffalo's record.

Agreement in the Levant

London commentators observe that the Anglo-French agreement on the Levant extracts an irritating thorn from the flesh of Anglo-French relations. It further provides a working basis for close Anglo-French co-operation in the Middle East for the economic advantage of the Middle East peoples.

In the wording of the Anglo-French commnuqiue issued 14th December "the two Governments have recognized that it is to their joint interest to encourage within the frame-work of international collaboration the economic well-being and security of the peoples of the Middle East."

Stress is laid on security, for without peace there can be no prosperity.

By their emphasis on international collaboration the two Governments indicate that their point policies will not be exclusive and that they look forward to the approaching time when security in the Middle East, as elsewhere, will be in charge of the United Nations Organization.

The communique states that both the United Kingdom and French Governments are "equally desirous of assuring to Syria and Lebanon the full exercise of the independence proclaimed by France in 1941, and consecrated by the admission of these states into the United Nations."

This is not the least important of the connotations of the agreement signed 14th December, and it will assuredly be noted accordingly in the Levant States in particular, and in all countries of the Arab league in general.

The communique further expresses the desire of the British and French Governments "to eliminate in a lasting manner all the differences of policy capable of prejudicing their respective interests and damaging the good understanding which they propose to make even closer."

This phrase contains two important statements of policy.

Firstly, both Governments recognize that each has its own interests in the Middle East and agree that these interests shall be mutually respected.

Secondly, both Governments are resolved to make the present agreement a springboard for wider agreements ("even closer understanding"). This is evidently a discreet reference to the cherished project of an Anglo-French alliance.

The Old, Old Topic

(High River Times)

People who live in the heart of cities, pretty well removed from the violences of nature, noting the changes only from the confines of tunnelled streets, are inclined to scoff at weather as a sustaining and inexhaustible topic of conversation. They are too far removed from the grass roots to be aware that the well being or undoing of the whole world stems out from tempest and sunshine, from rain and snow and wind, from heat and cold, all in their season. They have the strange idea that absorption in weather is proof of poverty of thought on other subjects. Nothing could be less true. Out in the country we can (and occasionally do) talk about war and tumult, centres and sources of conflict, crime and violence, deliberation of world parliaments, all the weal and woe of the human race. But such talk brings with it only confusion. It is a sphere in which we have responsibility, but with only vague signposts to guide us. Take the weather now. It doesn't depend on us and we don't need to do anything about it. It is one thing at least which doesn't lie heavily on our conscience. In a sense it is perhaps our way of escape, but it is also in our opinion at least, a topic of first importance.

Penetrating Steel

A remarkable British X-ray unit which can penetrate two inches of solid steel or eight inches of aluminum was on view in London recently. The unit is used for the detection of errors in assembly and general industrial research and control.

Newspaper Facts

Advertising of motion pictures and other entertainment is among the best read in daily newspapers and during a recent newspaper strike in St. Louis, 69 per cent of telephone calls received at the newspaper office were inquiries about "what shows are on tonight."

THE CALENDAR MAN

Everyone's friend! He is jack-of-all trades,
Banker, mechanic and maker of blades;
Sells us insurance and printing and pills,
Hardware and lumber for doorways and sills;
Shipments and movements by truck and by van,
You know the fellow — the calendar man!

Now comes his greetings by mail and by hand,
Beautiful pictures of ocean and land;
Scenes for the kitchen, the office and desk,
Indian temples and bits arabesque;
Glamorous damsels, man's ardor to fan,
All of them gifts of the calendar man!

Here's to him now as he taps at the door
With pictures and dates of the new year once more.
Here's to his own health to the close of the year;
May smiles be his portion, and never a tear.
May long he live on, a true friend of the clan,
The dashing, art-loving calendar man!

50 YEARS AGO

DEC. 19TH, 1895

A number of the students at Albert College enjoyed an oyster supper at the Hub Restaurant last evening.

Mr. W. B. Northrup is a candidate for alderman in Ketcheson Ward.

The Sunday School scholars will lead in the singing at the service in Bridge Street Church on Sunday morning.

The local merchants express themselves as being well satisfied with the holiday trade so far; business in all lines was brisk today.

Dr. J. V. Reid, V.S., of Decatur, Ill., has arrived home on a visit. He is a son of Mr. James Reid, Deputy Postmaster here.

The Hon. Mackenzie Bowell will entertain the surviving volunteers who were on duty at Amherstburg in 1864, at a banquet at Philip Hambly's restaurant on the evening of the 26th inst.

London Letter

By STUART UNDERHILL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 19. (CP)—Londoners are working hard to make this a merry Christmas, but they are finding that the cost of trimmings comes high.

It's an extra-special Christmas—the last six have been under wartime conditions— and for weeks shoppers have been swarming through the stores like locusts. Only, unlike locusts many of them can afford to do little more than look and sigh.

At first glance counters seem reasonably well-laden but there is much that is shoddy and poor quality doesn't mean a correspondingly low price. Example A cheaply constructed wooden pencil-box, worth perhaps 1s 6d (30 cents) before the war now is priced at 7s 6d ($1.65). Fabric school-bags that once cost 3s 6d now are apt to be found at 17s 6d.

Toy departments are jammed with customers, but most of the toys are of flimsy wood. The government has placed a ceiling of 24s 5d on all toys, and most of the articles for sale are near that price. Push toys that would be dear at 50 cents in Canada command seven or eight times that price here.

A few well-made articles like metal children's tricycles find their way into the stores but are snapped up as soon as they are placed on the floor. A lucky parent can display his unwrapped purchase with pride when he leaves the store, but chances are he'll be stopped a dozen times in one block by those anxious to learn where he found it.

The food and drink problem is as difficult. Christmas in Canada doesn't seem like Christmas without a turkey, but here it's estimated not more than one in 30 civilians will enjoy a festive fowl, and those, at controlled prices, will cost at from 3s to 4s 4d a pound.

The Ministry of Food has askincrease supplies to retailers over the Yule season but the answer they got was a sardonic counter-question: "What supplies?"

Whisky, when available, retails at approximately £5 a bottle.

It doesn't add up to a very cheerful picture but Britons after six years of war are accustomed to "make do". But they're hoping that this will be the last of their "make do" Christmases.

Mackenzie's Column

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

Dublin, Dec. 19 (AP)—Now we come to that vexatious question of why the Eire government maintained neutrality during the war and refused requests of the United States and Britain for badly needed naval bases.

That's a hot potato, but it has to be handled, and the sooner the better. The best way to approach it is to tell you of an extraordinary incident that has happened to me here in the capital of Eire.

I went with my camera to get a picture of the fine old parliament building. Having secured permission of the sentry on duty by the big iron gates to the courtyard, I proceeded to make four shots. I had much difficulty because a huge statue of Queen Victoria stood right in front of the building and there was no way of outflanking it. As I was manoeuvring for a fresh position, a minor government employee intervened and said I wouldn't be permitted to publish such a photo.

Die-Hards Still Around

"We can't have a picture of the parliament building taken with the Queen in front of it," he said with such finality that I promptly removed my film roll and handed it to him.

"Well," I remarked, as I eyed the likeness of the famous Queen who has been dead these 45 years, "I knew the feeling here against England was bitter, but I didn't suppose it was this bad."

He half turned away, and ducked his head, by way of humorous acknowledgment that I had got my remark home. But he carried my pictures off, and I went to my hotel, not at all annoyed but much interested. By the time I arrived at my hotel I received profuse apologies by telephone from the head of one of the government departments, and he himself brought the film back to me. He said the seizure had been absurd.

The affair was settled with such good-will that I repeat the story here only because it gives us the real key to our question of neutrality.

Bitter Hatred

The cold fact is that the people of Southern Ireland as a whole are so bitter towards Britain that political circles here will tell you quietly there would have been open revolt in some quarters if the government had granted bases and thus joined in the war on the side of Britain.

The government of Eire and the majority of the public regard Britain as an invader because of the partition of Ireland into two sections. I don't propose to debate this fiery question here, but merely state the fact that this is the way Eire feels. We can go a bit farther and say that had the two sections been united when the war began, the probabilities are that the emerald isle would have come in on the side of the Allies. Also it wasn't because of any unfriendliness towards the United States that Eire did not come into the war—for I find nothing but the most cordial feeling here. It wasn't because Eire wanted the Germans to win, either. As a matter of fact; many thousands of southern Irishmen served with the British fighting forces as volunteers.

Of course, other considerations entered into neutrality. For one thing Eire was not equipped to defend herself against the Germans, and was in no mood to secure protection through the expedient of throwing Eire open to British military occupation. I dare say one could dig up further reasons for neutrality, but to my mind we always get back to the great feud between the southern Irish and the British—a bloody quarrel which runs through the centuries to the early Irish kings who finally succumbed to the invaders.

ONTARIO GOVT.

"The practice of conducting lotteries, raffles and bingos has proved to be a comparatively easy method of raising money with the result that these practices have assumed immense proportions," the statement continued. "Lotteries are no longer confined to one municipality but have become in many instances province-wide and even nation-wide.

"With the ending of the war, it now has become apparent that, unless checked, the conduct of lotteries, raffles and bingos will fall again into the hands of the professional promoter and will again degenerate into a racket.

"Funds so raised from the public will line the pockets of the promoter with relatively small benefit to the organization which allows its name to be used for such a scheme."

Strictly Enforced

To be strictly enforced are the provisions of the criminal code which prohibit the disposition of property, goods, wares and merchandise by lotteries, raffles and bingos, and which forbid anyone to conduct or manage a lottery scheme or advertise or publicize one. It is also an individual offence for anyone to buy, take or receive a lottery ticket.

Exceptions are that items of goods, wares or merchandise may be raffled for charitable or religious purposes where the consent of the municipality is first obtained, the items raffled are not valued at more than $50, and are first offered for sale. Occasional bingos may be held by charitable and religious groups if the proceeds are to be used for the benefit of a charitable or religious object.

20TH PARLIAMENT

Stimulate External Trade

Reference was made to the recent Washington declaration in which Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Prime Minister Attlee and President Truman offered to share with any nation that would reciprocate developments in the peaceful use of atomic energy.

Efforts to stimulate the expansion of external trade and the restoration of world economy had been intensified. Legislation had been passed to increase from $100,000,000 to $750,000,000 the amount which may be loaned under the Export Credits Insurance Act.

The speech referred to repatriation and demobilization, to legislation passed for the benefit of veterans and to steps taken for the establishment of an interim force until a decision is made with respect to the size of a permanent force.

Efforts to promote the building of homes were mentioned in the speech, which said that wartime controls were being lifted as rapidly as was possible without causing inflation or other economic disturbances.

The customary prorogation until Jan. 28 was made, but it was believed that a new session would not begin until late February or early March. The co-ordinating committee of the Dominion-Provincial conference reconvenes Jan. 28 and it is not expected a session will start until these meetings are concluded.

No Definite Plan

Until the outcome of that conference, the government can present no definite plan for future budgeting.

That was the statement Finance Minister Isley made as active debate in the Commons ended with the opposition calling for a curtailment of public expenditure and with the government promising to present budgets that would balance over a cycle.

Replying to J. M. Macdonnell (PC—Muskoka—Ontario), chief financial critic for the Progressive Conservative party, Mr. Isley said the provinces had made it clear they expect government subsidies and expenditures to be much greater than those outlined in the federal proposals to the Dominion-Provincial conference.

The difference between what the provinces wanted and what the federal government had offered might range between $100,000,000 and $300,000,000. Mr. Isley said it was difficult to explain the difference.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

IODINE AND PYORRHEA

A good dentist is worthy of his hire. That is, I think so. I'd much rather pay the dentist $200 to fill a tooth, even if it was last only a year or two, than pay him $10 to extract it. I have a high regard for the value of teeth. At the very minimum a sound tooth or a tooth in a good state of repair is worth $1000, in my opinion. So, I say, the good dentist is worthy of his hire.

Eugene Talbot, M.D., D.D.S., still recognized as an authority on oral pathology by the dentists, advocated careful applications of iodine-iodide medicaments to the gums by the dentist in the treatment of pyorrhea. The same excellent authority advocated the application of a similar solution to the gums and other surfaces in the mouth of the child, at monthly intervals, to prevent tooth decay, or such an application a few minutes before any tonsil or mouth operation. The formula Talbot published (JAMA Apr. 2, '10) is too strong for any one other than physician or dentist to attempt to use. But Diluted Talbot's Solution, glycerite of iodine and zinc iodide, as in the National Formulary, is suitable for the patient to use as instructed by physician or dentist. Speaking merely as a bull in the ch— I mean as a doctor, I believe the use of Talbot's solution or some modification of it, iodine in one form or another, is a valuable aid in the treatment of most cases of pyorrhea. But only an aid, or shall we say incidental treatment. Correction of nutritional deficiencies and restoration of function—normal mastication — are the essential features in the treatment of pyorrhea.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Her First at Forty

I am 40, have never been really strong but . . . my husband is anxious to have a child, family doctor said it would be the finest thing that could happen, but I fear that at my age. (Mrs. A.R.M.)

Answer—Records of childbirth in a large number of cases show that the healthy woman who bears her first child at forty may expect a normal delivery. Better read the chapter, "Her First at Forty" in the booklet "Preparing for Maternity" mailed on written request if you inclose ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope. Women whose education has been so sadly neglected may learn something to their advantage by reading Dr. Grantly Dick Read's "Childbirth Without Fear" published by Harpers, '44. A woman who can still roll a half dozen somersaults and come up on her feet smiling and unruffled, do a running jump over a barrel or run around the block at her own pace is young enough to have a baby. Too many women whose education has been sadly neglected are too old at thirty to bear a child without kicking up all possible complications. It is physiological, not chronological age that matters.

Massive Doses of Vitamin D

One friend says 50,000 units of vitamin D in capsule, four times a day is beneficial for rheumatism or almost any chronic sickness. Other friend says such massive doses are injurious to liver and kidneys. (Mrs. L. J.)

Answer—I doubt that 200,000 units a day over a period of three to six months, ever does any harm. On the other hand, I have come to believe that merely an optimal nutritional amount of vitamin D daily, of course combined with calcium, will give as much relief in various complaints called chronic rheumatism as massive doses of vitamin D alone can give. For pamphlet "Calcium and Rheumatiz" send stamped self addressed envelope. Ask for it in writing. A flying visit will do.

Poliomyelitis and Marriage

Intend to marry girl who had infantile paralysis in childhood. She is strong and healthy today and has no apparent physical weakness or defect. I am eight years older than she—she is 24. What do you advise? (M. H. E.)

Answer—The difference in age is immaterial. Any physical weakness or defect left by infantile paralysis would have no bearing on the question of fitness for marriage and parenthood.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Kangaroo skin is soft, tough and fine-grained and makes an excellent leather for shoes and gloves.

Before this fact was discovered kangaroos in Australia were increasing so rapidly that they threatened to become a serious pest.

But after it was learned that the skins had great commercial possibilities animals of this family were so widely hunted in Australia for their pelts that it was feared that some species would be exterminated.

Before the outbreak of the Second World War hundreds of thousands of kangaroo skins were imported into the United States for use in the manufacture of shoes and gloves.

Of course, whether particular shoes and gloves branded "kangaroo" are actually made of that leather depends on the reliability of the manufacturers who make them and the merchants who sell them.

Undoubtedly in the past much of the so-called kangaroo shoe leather was not genuine.

Kangaroos are hardy animals that live long and breed freely in captivity.

Their fur is not especially good and has often been dyed to imitate better furs.

EUROPE FACES GRAVE DANGER IN NEW YEAR

Continent Ends 1945 in Terrible Plight, Dreads Threat of Winter's Depth

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Frankfurt, Germany (CP) — Most of Europe ends this year of Germany's defeat in terrible plight, dreading the depth of winter with its threat of grave privations and sweeping epidemics.

The picture of Europe today has few bright spots. It is a picture of a continent raked by war practically from one end to the other—of hundreds of ruined cities, ill-fed people, wandering millions, cold depression and gloom.

On the reverse side are thousways, re-built bridges and roads. ways, re-build bridges and roads. Many fundamental services such as light and gas are operating again, and despite the immense problems confronting them, most countries are confident the worst will be over if they survive the winter and get a good harvest next summer.

Politically much of Europe is in ferment as the re-established political freedoms shake down to workable systems of democratic government. In free elections which have been held the general trend has been to wide gains for left-wing parties, with deterioration of the old right-wing groups.

Disaster Feared

Here, in Germany, conditions are as bad as anywhere. There are so many homeless people, so many shattered communities, so little food and fuel that Allied Control Commission authorities fear a major disaster that would have sharp repercussions throughout the continent. Berlin and Ruhr are the two great danger spots of Germany.

In Poland, conditions are reported to be not much better. In Austria, Italy, Czechoslovakia and the Balkans the grave economic consequences of the war are underlined by the grim circumstances in which most of the people will endure the winter.

Western Europe is much better off, but even there, by Canadian standards, most countries now are only beginning really to gain ground in their recovery.

France still has slim rations. There is not nearly sufficient coal for domestic purposes. The people need clothing and shoes. Life is far from gay in the Fourth Republic.

Belgium has made the best over-all recovery in Europe but when people talk blithely of the country being "right back to normal" they are exaggerating. More coal is needed, more food, raw materials, rolling stock and replacements for industrial equipment.

Holland Recovers

In the brief period since the liberation last May by the 1st Canadian Army, Holland has made remarkable strides but there also is the desperate need for coal, food and clothing.

Denmark and Sweden came out of the war with comparatively little suffering and have not the worries of other nations but Norway is desperately short of many foodstuffs.
